31 PLANES MISSING

By ALAN RANDAL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Aug. 1 — (CP Cable) —The R. A. F. and R. C. A. F. dropped a heavy load of bombs in an hour-long hammering at the Rhineland steel centre of Duesseldorf in an overnight raid.

At least two Canadian squadrons were engaged. Other Canadians took part as members of R. A. F. squadrons, flying Lancasters loaded with incendiaries and Britain's devastating bombs.

There was no suggestion that this was another 1,000-plane operation but an official R.C.A.F. statement said "A very strong force" was employed.

On the basis of average losses and the Air Ministry announcement that thirty bombers are missing, it was indicated that 600 planes were involved.

They streamed across the channel through the bright light of the moon's last quarter for better than an hour—then streamed back to their home dromes.

One fighter also was lost during the night in which operations included attacks on targets in northern France and the low countries.

Claimed a Probable

One Hampden R.C.A.F. bomber squadron commanded by Wing Cmdr. J. D. Twigg, Ottawa, brushed with a Nazi night fighter and claimed a "probable" in the belief the enemy craft was destroyed. The kill could not be confirmed, however.

Sgt. Bob Berry of Hamilton, Ont., said he and the plane's other gunner, an Australian, were able to get in a burst at 200 yards and the next time the Nazi wheeled they fired point-blank at 150 yards.

"I think the pilot was killed, because the aircraft went into a dive clearly visible in the moonlight," said Berry. "The fight was at 10,000 feet and the plane was still diving when it went out of sight at 1,000."

PO. William Sanderson of Duff, Sask., reported as many as 30 searchlights going at one time in the target area and got several flak holes in his craft.

Just Nicely Started

Flt. Sgt. Ken Metheral, former Edmonton newspaperman, was blase about the whole thing. Returning from his 28th trip, he said "the fire was nicely started when we made our bombing run."

Aircraft of Wing Cmdr. D. A. R. Bradshaw's squadron also took part, personnel including Sgt. William Jones, Winnipeg, Sgt. W. B. Councill, Montreal, Sgt. C. P. Lundeen, Priesville, Sask., Sgt. Jack Hudson, Victoria, Sgt. H. J. T. Gray, Montreal, Sgt. Lloyd White, Saskatoon, Sgt. Lloyd Mann, Truro, N.S., Sgt. William Crawford, High River, Alta., PO. T. R McDougall North Bay, Ont., PO. P. J. McDougall, North Bay, Ont., P. J. Sullivan, Sudbury, Ont.

The raids were carried out in good weather, a communique said, and apparently were highly successful.

A "very strong force" of bombers was reported to have participated in the attack upon Duesseldorf—the 47th assault upon that city but the first since Sept. 27, 1941. The raid represented a round trip of more than 600 miles.

Among the industrial plants situated at Duesseldorf are the Rhein metal iron and steel works, which compare in size and importance to the Kupp armament works, and the Vereinigte Stahlwerke (United steel works). The latter is one of the four biggest plants of its kind in Germany.

Duesseldorf also is the site of large silk paper and patent food factories and warehouses. It is Germany's third largest inland port and an important railway centre, with one of the Rhine's largest railway bridges.

Railway Yards Attacked

Targets attacked by British bombers and fighters last night in occupied territory included airdromes in the lowlands and railway yards at Caens and elsewhere in Northern France. Six freight trains were reported shot up with cannonfire from low-flying raiders.

The night's plane losses included 30 bombers and one fighter.

While the R.A.F. was engaged over Germany, Nazi night raiders lashed at scattered points on the British east and northeast coasts, but preliminary reports indicated the attacks were not heavy. Berlin broadcasts said the attacks were centred upon Hull.

One enemy plane was reported downed.

There was no activity over London, which was disturbed by early morning alerts on Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

The R.A.F. assault on Germany last night was the fourth of the week and followed a day of intense aerial activity over the occupied French coast in which hundreds of British, including many Canadians, and German fighter planes fought bitter duels that continued until dusk.

The air ministry reported 11 Nazi planes—including three of the powerful new Focke-Wulfe 190's—were shot out of the sky in these combats. British losses were eight aircraft.

Boston bombers which accompanied the R.A.F. fighters on their cross-channel sweeps yesterday attacked the airdrome at Abbeville, the docks at St. Malo and targets in Brittany.

Acceptable To Britain.

Talk of the possibility of an allied attempt to establish a second front in Western Europe was kept alive, meanwhile, by the assertion of informed British sources that appointment of a United States general as commander-in-chief of an allied invasion force would be acceptable to Britain.

These sources, who could not be quoted directly, said the British people realized the part which American men and equipment must play in such an operation and were keenly alive to the necessity of placing the best possible man in charge, regardless of nationality.

Informed quarters mentioned Gen. George C. Marshall, U.S. army chief of staff, in their discussion of the subject, which also has been touched upon in the press. Marshall's prestige is extremely high among British staff officers.

Both American and British official quarters declined to comment.

TWO 500-POUND SAFES TAKEN FROM THEATRE, ARE FOUND IN WOODS

St. John's, Nfld., July 31 (C.P. Cable)—Two 500-pound safes, removed from the Star Theatre, were found today in woods outside the city. The strong boxes had been opened and their contents removed but theatre officials gave no indication of how much money had been stolen beyond saying it was a "considerable sum."

Auxiliary Services Praised for Work 'In Keeping up Fighting Spirit of Men'

Debert Camp, N.S., Aug. 1 (CP).—Maj.-Gen. F. F. Worthington, officer commanding the 4th Canadian (Armored) Division here, believes the auxiliary services supervisors recently attached to his unit will be "important assets to the fighting success of this division" Calling the men to his headquarters, "Worthy" told them their's was a "big job, a good job, and a worthwhile one."

Representing the Young Men's Christian Association, the Knights of Columbus, the Canadian Legion and the Salvation Army, the men were introduced by Major William Askey, senior Protestant chaplain with the division and former rector of All Saints' Church, Winnipeg.

"You perform a real service in keeping up the fighting spirit of the men," Gen. Worthington declared. "We do our part by training 'em and making 'em tough and hard—you fellows do most of the rest".

The general suggested the supervisors work together as a team, passing on to each other hints, ideas and information as to "what makes a hit with the men".

"I also want you to work closely with the chaplains," he said. "When you see a man's obviously unhappy, it means he's losing his morale and not giving the army 100 per cent value.

"You and the chaplains are my trouble shooters and it's up to you to find out what's biting him and suggest a solution. Now, I'm not saying this because I'm a sentimentalist, I'm a hard realist. I've got to get that 100 per cent value of my men. You have to help."

The supervisors include A. B. Clark of Winnipeg and Peterborough, Ont., of the Y.M.C.A.; Alex McNay of Port Colborne, Ont., of the Canadian Legion.

ESTIMATE 10,000 JAPANESE NOW ON THE ALEUTIANS

Aerial Reconnaissance Fails to Disclose Any Japs on the Pribilofs Islands

8 JAP SHIPS SUNK

Washington, Aug. 1—(AP)—Harassed Japanese forces on three western islands of the Aleutians and in nearby waters have been estimated at 10,000 men by an American naval official who indicated reports of enemy landings on the Pribilof Islands were unfounded.

About 5,000 Japs have landed on the islands of Attu, Kiska and Agattu of the Aleutian group, north Pacific tip of American territory and gateway to Alaska, the navy spokesman declared. An equal enemy force probably is aboard warships and transports in the area, he said.

The navy spokesman, who declined to be quoted by name, said last night that aerial reconnaissance so far had failed to disclose any enemy landings on the undefended Pribilofs, 250 miles northwest of Dutch Harbor.

"We aren't in a position to say that they aren't there, but have no evidence that they are," he said, adding that American naval fliers had "seen no Japs" during observation trips over the Pribilof Islands.

Delegate Anthony Dimond, of Alaska, had reported receiving "slight circumstantial evidence" of Japanese activity in the Pribilof Islands, the world's richest sealing grounds.

Bomb Installations

Army and navy aircraft have bombed Japanese land installations on the three occupied islands repeatedly, the naval spokesman said, but results have not been determined. American planes and submarines have sunk eight Jap ships and damaged 10, one of them so badly it probably went to the bottom.

Kiska, object of the most intensive American bombing in the Aleutian area, and Attu were seized by the Japs early in June. Agattu was occupied early last month.

The main Japanese force at Kiska is 585 miles west of Dutch Harbor, which the enemy bombed June 3 and 4. A move by the Japs into the Pribilofs, reported here for some time, not only would bring the enemy closer to the Alaskan mainland but would put them in a strategic position for a flanking attack on Dutch Harbor.

FOUR HAVE NO HARBORS

Navy officials questioned, however, whether the Pribilofs could be used for very extensive sea and air operations. The four rugged Bering Sea islands—St. Paul, St. George, Otter and Walrus—have no harbors. Navigation experts at the navy department said the Bering Sea waters afforded anchorage only when the wind is blowing from the land.

Several hundred inhabitants of the two main islands, St. Paul and St. George, were removed several weeks ago.

Hitler Fears Day When Full Power of United Nations is Felt

Russian Government Newspaper Izvestia Says Main Burden of War Borne by Soviet Alone for 13 Months.

Moscow, Aug. 1 (AP)—The government newspaper Izvestia said today "all freedom-loving people of the world are joined against the Hitlerite Germans, but the main burden of the war has been borne by the Soviet Union alone for thirteen months."

"On the Soviet-German front," it said, "all the forces of Adolf Hitler are operating together with his vassals and allies. The Red army fights against the whole German war machine.

"The enemy suffers great losses but the danger is greater than ever before. Hitler fears the day when other peoples and powers actively join the struggle."

JAPANESE EXTEND THEIR HOLD ON SOLOMON ISLANDS

Suitable Site for Air Base Established on Guadalcanal Island.

DAMAGE CARGO SHIP

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Aug. 1 (CP).—The Japanese have extended their hold on the Solomon Islands east of New Guinea by establishing themselves on Guadalcanal island, a suitable site for air bases, allied headquarters reported today.

The disclosure was made in a communique relating that Japanese installations at Kukum on the north shore of the island were attacked yesterday by allied planes which also damaged a large enemy cargo ship offshore.

Other bombers operating far to the northwest attacked and "probably hit" a Japanese cruiser in the Banda Sea south of Amboina in the Dutch East Indies, the bulletin said.

The Japanese began moving into Guadalcanal about six weeks ago, apparently with the intention of establishing air bases there, a spokesman said. The island is one of the southernmost of the group, which extends in a chain for about 500 miles to the southeast of New Britain. Bougainville, northernmost of the group, was occupied by the enemy some time ago.

Described as Static.

On the Papuan Peninsula of New Guinea, where Allied and Japanese patrols have clashed recently within sixty miles of Port Moresby, advance allied base, the land situation was described as "static", but allied bombers raided the Japanese-occupied village of Buna in the Gona Mission area and started two large fires.

The Japanese units which have been probing the approaches to Port Moresby were landed in the Buna-Gona region July 22. Advance units have reached the region of Kokoda, about half way to Port Moresby, but there they face the towering, almost impassable Owen Stanley range.

A single Japanese plane dropped one bomb yesterday a few miles from the village of Mossman on the northeastern Australian coast north of Townsville, but damage was minor, the communique said.

Grafton Priest Dies Suddenly

Cobourg, Ont., Aug. 1. (CP)—Rev. Father P. J. Galvin of St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church died suddenly yesterday at the Parish House at nearby Grafton. He was 64.

A native of Ennismore township, he was educated at Ottawa College and the Grand Seminary at Montreal. He had been stationed at Peterborough, Douro, Kinmount, Downeyville and Grafton.

He is survived by three sisters, Mrs. Frank Hurley, Peterborough; Mrs. W. Hurley, Norwood; Clara, Toronto; three brothers, Joseph, Peterborough; Peter, Ennismore Township and Ronald, who lives in the United States.

HOUSE DISPOSES OF INCOME TAX BILL, ESTIMATES

Adjournment Until January 27 Confidently Expected by the Members.

URGE CONCESSIONS

By JAMES McCOOK

Ottawa, Aug. 1—(CP)—Legislation for increased income tax for Canadians approved and behind it, the House of Commons today is hustling along the home stretch towards the end of the present sitting which started last January.

Adjournment until Jan. 27 was confidently expected today, after good progress yesterday when the members in a long session discussed Communists and Indians, judges and prospectors, wheat acreage reduction and the responsibilities of future generations.

Justice, Royal Canadian Mounted Police, National Revenue and Mines and Resources departmental estimates were approved and the income war tax bill was given third reading.

When the House rose just after midnight, Resources Minister Crerar said it was hoped the order paper would be cleared this afternoon.

Sitting Extended

The sitting was extended past the usual hour of adjournment at 11 p.m. as members debated the care of Indians and soldier settler problems under the Mines and Resources department estimated.

C.C.F. and new democracy members from the west urged that concessions should be made to soldier settlers now on the land to permit them to be rid of their debt burden and obtain title to their land.

Mr. Crerar said it was wrong to give the impression the settlers were being harried for payment of sums due. Of the settlers, 550 had benefited to the extent of $155,000 last year under the War Veterans Allowance Act.

Dowager Grand Duchess Marie of Luxembourg Dies in New York

New York, Aug. 1.—(AP)—The Dowager Grand Duchess Marie Anne of Luxembourg, 81, who fled her tiny land between Germany and France as Nazi armored forces swarmed over it in May, 1940, died at Doctors Hospital last night.

She had been seriously ill for five weeks after an abdominal operation.

Two of her five living daughters the Grand Duchess Charlotte and the Princess of Scharzenberg, were with her when she died. The Grand Duchess Charlotte is the present ruler of the Duchy, an area of 999 square miles with a population of about 300,000, and heads the government in London.

The daughter of King Don Miguel of Portugal, she married the Grand Duke William IV of Luxembourg in 1893. The Grand Duke died in 1912 and since that time, she had led a retiring life in Luxembourg, devoting herself to her daughters.

One of her daughters, Marie-Adelaide, abdicated as Grand Duchess of Luxembourg in 1919 and the Grand Duchess Charlotte succeeded her. Marie-Adelaide died in 1924.

EFFORTS TO ROUND OUT OCCUPATION OF BEND THWARTED

Divisions Routed And Chased Back Several Times in Kletskaya Sector

RED AIRMEN ACTIVE

By EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press Staff Writer

MOSCOW, Aug. 1 — (AP)—German divisions fanned out against Red Army defences below the Lower Don today, reaching toward the Azov Sea coast and pressing ever deeper into the West Caucasus, but Soviet soldiers defending the river bend before Stalingrad were reported holding their own and counter-attacking.

Bloody hand-to-hand engagements marked some of the battles southwest, south and southeast of Bataisk — itself 15 miles from Rostov — and Nazi pressure forced further Russian withdrawals.

Russian shore batteries and marines were reported in action southwest of Bataisk, indicating the invaders were within striking distance of the southern beaches on the Gulf of Taganrog if not the Azov shores.

Nazi Strength Depleted

Soviet observers insisted that German armored strength had been so depleted as to force another revision of Nazi offensive strategy and the newspaper Red Star declared editorially that "The Red Army has no right to retreat any longer."

"The people will never forgive the army for a further retreat," the newspaper said, and pictured the nation's defences as a great chain with no link weakening.

Flank attacks and the use of small tanks to protect river landings have supplanted frontal assaults by massed tanks in the German bid for Caucasian oil, the newspaper Red Star said.

This shift in a campaign in which Nazi Field Marshal Fedor Von Bock has mixed power drives and encirclement attempts, the flying wedge and the psychological attack, was attributed by Red Star to the vast losses the invaders had suffered in machines as well as manpower.

Efforts Thwarted

German efforts to round out the occupation of the Don River bend were reported thwarted repeatedly and the 113th German infantry division was declared routed and

Anti-Sub Ships Relentlessly Watch Against U-Boats in St. Lawrence Area

By HAROLD FREEMAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Aboard a Canadian warship, Aug. 1 — (CP) — A heavy concentration of anti-submarine ships is operating in the St. Lawrence area, waging relentless warfare against U-boats trying to cut the river supply line to the sea.

Corvettes and little fairmiles combine with the hitherto "hush-hush" Bangor-class vessels to make submarine attacks highly dangerous propositions.

Naval men aboard these ships are confident that they can maintain the upper hand in the "Battle of the St. Lawrence," but they are quick to warn that further sinkings this summer are quite possible, even probable, although the price the enemy will pay for such sinkings is likely to be a high one.

The five merchant ships definitely torpedoed so far this summer in the river and gulf areas represent less than three-quarters of one per cent of the ships that have reached their destinations in safety, and the protective force now in operation gives a pretty good indication that a decrease in this "casualty rate" is more likely than an increase.

Nevertheless, a complete elimination of losses is considered an improbability.

Advent of the bangor-class ships has increased the odds against the submarines, for the bangors are anti-sub ships of the highest order, filled with the latest equipment designed specially for such work.

Sleek, Speedy Craft.

The Fairmiles are the little fellows of the convoy job, sleek, speedy river craft usually in command of eager young officers whose enthusiasm combines with the experience of the men on the senior ships—the corvettes and bangors—to make an effective combination.

There's just one trouble with the fairmiles — their startling resemblance to submarines in certain light conditions. Many a reported submarine location turned in by airplane pilots or shore watchers has been traced back to a fairmile half-buried by rough seas.

Every once in a while a ship gets a chance to go out on an offensive patrol. Then she operates alone, sweeping the water for a "contact", always hunting.

During my stay aboard this vessel we took part in two convoy jobs and did one offensive sweep. There was no doubt as to which the crew preferred.

"Attack, attack, attack," is the slogan of the captain and it is the doctrine his officers and crew like best. He was a Royal Navy commander in the First Great War who gave up a $22,000-a-year shipping executive's job in New York and accepted a lieutenant's rank to get back to sea.

35-Mile Radius Set to Conserve Truck Equipment

Farmers Who Use Trucks or Trailers For Farm Produce Exempt From Order

OTHER EXEMPTIONS

OTTAWA, Aug. 1 — (CP) — In a move to conserve available trucking equipment, the Wartime Prices and Trade Board ruled today that no private truck or trailer may operate more than 35 miles from its registered address without a special permit after Nov. 1.

After Aug. 1, Services Administrator James Stewart said, every vehicle affected by the order must have "attached, or painted on both sides of the body," letters and figures of not less than one inch in height indicating the name of the owner and the registered address of the machine.

Summing up the provisions of the order and its exemptions, Services Administrator James Stewart said:

"Generally speaking, permits to operate beyond the 35-mile limit will not be issued where it appears that there are public transportation facilities available which are capable of handling the movement and the private vehicle owner is unable to satisfy us that capacity or near-capacity load will be carried both ways."

Exempted Trucks or Trailers

Exempt from the order are trucks or trailers registered or licensed by any province as a public vehicle operating for hire Aug. 1; vehicles owned or operated by the Dominion government, any province or municipality; and such "essential services" as ambulances, trucks used for repairing disabled motor vehicles, fire fighting services, vehicles used for sanitation and health purposes, civilian defence, police services and transportation of tools and equipment for repairing farm implements, boilers, boring machinery, threshing machinery, grain elevators or manufacturing plants.

The exemption also applies to vehicles whose primary carrying capacity is occupied by mounted machinery or by mounted tanks designated to carry bulk liquids, and to vehicles owned and operated by a public utility used exclusively in services essential to its construction and maintenance.

Farmers using trucks or trailers for transporting agriculture commodities from or to a farm are not subject to the 35-mile restriction. Vehicles used only in work necessary for highway construction or maintenance, transportation of pulp wood and other lumber and lumbering equipment to the site of logging operations are not restricted, although this exemption does not apply to transport or finished or semi-finished lumber in a private commercial vehicle.

Requests for permits to operate more than 35 miles must be filed before Sept. 30.

CAIRO AREA BOMBED FIVE PERSONS KILLED DAMAGE IS SLIGHT

Cairo, Aug. 1 (CP)—The Cairo area was bombed last night, the second time this week, and five persons were killed and 12 injured, it was announced today.

The several bombs that fell, however, caused only slight damage.

Warnings also were sounded in Alexandria and the Suez Canal area and several provinces of upper and lower Egypt.

Dust Storms Reduce Activity On Land, in Air

Cairo, Aug. 1 (AP).—Dust storms reduced land activity on the El Alamein front to a minimum yesterday but British patrols were active in all sectors the preceding night and there were occasional artillery duels in some areas, British headquarters reported today.

The storms also hindered aerial activity although British fighter bombers attacked an enemy headquarters and blasted at transport vehicles, the bulletin said.

Three axis planes were shot down last night during light raids on the Alexandria and Cairo areas. Another was shot down over Malta, the communique declared.

THREEFOLD ANSWER

Eureka, Calif., Aug. 1 — (AP) — County Grand Jurors said the Ferndale city jail was in deplorable condition but the Ferndale Chamber of Commerce replied: There were only two prisoners in the past year; and the jail was "more comfortable than the gutters from which the men were removed." Anyway, said the Chamber of Commerce, the jail door was left open and when the prisoners found out about it they skipped town.

SUSTAINS BROKEN SHOULDER IN FALL

When the ladder which he was using to repair the roof of a Boswell Street residence slipped on the slippery shingles and slid to the ground, Mr. James Hinds, Toronto, sustained a broken shoulder bone as he landed with considerable force on his shoulders in the hard driveway. Dr. R. A. Flynn was called to attend the injured man and immediately ordered him to the hospital, where an x-ray disclosed the broken shoulder. After having the fracture reduced Mr. Hinds was removed to the residence of his brother on William Street, where he is recuperating.

Undismayed by the threatening weather which turned their garden party into a garage party, two little girls, Barbara Arnott, 7, and Lois Galbraith, 10, both of Charles Street succeeded in raising the sum of ten dollars for the Red Cross, yesterday. Their party was well patronized and the patriotic efforts of the little girls well rewarded by the gratifying proceeds.

POLICE SAY MAN RANSACKED HOUSE

Arrested on a charge of intoxication Friday night Woodrow Maracle, of Deseronto, was remanded to the custody of the county jail before Miss Mary Butler, local Justice of the Peace, on Saturday. Provincial Constable A. Kellogg alleged that while intoxicated Maracle had broke and entered the home of Addie Maracle in Tyendinaga Township.

Police say that the accused man ransacked Mr. Maracle's house and literally tossed furniture about with reckless abandon before being apprehended. No reason for such actions were offered by the accused, when he was arraigned without bail on Saturday.

Three Injured in Car Crash

When the motor car in which they were riding rolled over into the ditch along Highway No. 7 three miles east of Marmora after midnight Friday, Roy Gordinier, of Marmora, the driver of the vehicle was knocked unconscious and rushed to the Belleville General Hospital in an ambulance. Harry Black, a passenger, sustained a deep scalp laceration, while Edward Lummis, also of Marmora, escaped with minor lacerations. Dr. Crawford, of Marmora, attended the injured at the scene of the accident.

Provincial Constable R. S. Patterson, of Madoc, and Chief Lavender, of Marmora, investigated the accident and were informed by occupants that the motor car, driven by Gordinier, left the highway and rolled over several times into the ditch. There was no other car involved and the vehicle concerned was badly wrecked. At the hospital at noon Saturday Mr. Gordinier had regained consciousness and was not considered badly injured.

Building Records Show Decline

Building records in the city during the month of July showed a considerable decline over the previous month with only 11 permits being issued at the City Hall representing a total construction value of $10,150.

Six of the permits issued were for dwellings with the balance for additions and garages, while one small factory office addition was included in the month's list.

Mr. Charles Kidd, Bleecker Ave., took out a permit for the construction of a frame dwelling on Bleecker Ave., costing $3,000, while Victor Hannah took out a permit for a small cottage on South George Street, costing $500. Verdun Witmarsh will build a small cottage on Wallbridge Road at a cost of $1,000, and O. MacKenzie a dwelling on Sinclair Street, at $1,800. Other dwellings to be constructed, are one for J. Raycroft at 20 Parker Street, costing $1,000 and one by James Doyle on Reid Street, at $1,000.

George Elliott will construct a double garage at 28 Meyers Street, while Burton McGowan contemplates a one-storey addition at 15 Jones Street, costing $300. Mr. Flagler, corner Pine and Bleecker, took out a permit for a verandah at $100, and St. Michael's Sunday School for a one-storey addition at 261 John Street, at $800.

It is a Mite Compared To Their Sacrifice

Next week the Red Cross Blood Donor Clinic will hold a campaign to secure much-needed donors to give blood for the Empire's casualties.

Let us state plain facts.

Every day members of the armed services of the Empire, her men, women and children are falling victims to the enemy.

They are dying that you and I might continue to live in a country like Canada.

But a lot of precious British lives can be saved by just a little extra effort on your part and mine.

The slight prick of a needle; a few minutes at the Blood Donor Clinic is all that is asked. A little of your blood will save the life of a soldier, sailor or airman, or a plucky Britisher who are defying the enemy and death daily.

WHAT IS ASKED OF YOU IS A MITE COMPARED TO THEIR SACRIFICE.

BLOOD OF FIVE NEEDED

It takes the blood of five donors to supply enough of this tremendously vital fluid for a wounded man.

This will give an idea of how urgent is the need, NOW, for the blood plasma.

But the need now, is nothing compared to what may be needed in the future. Britain MUST have a steady supply of blood for her sons, and Canada has given her pledged word to maintain a consistent amount.

She cannot do it unless you and I see our duty in this respect—and do it.

Stories are being circulated that donors suffer ill effects—that they suffer physical pain, and do not recover for some time.

THESE RUMORS ARE ABSOLUTELY WITHOUT FOUNDATION.

The procedure is painless. It takes but a few minutes. Clinic surroundings are ideal. There is a social atmosphere that removes any suggestion of pain, suffering or sickness.

Cheerful nurses and volunteer workers are in attendance. Smiling doctors are present. The Clinic is the weekly scene of a big happy family, proud and smiling in the fact that they have contributed to the Empire's war effort.

BUT, MORE DONORS ARE NEEDED—AND NEEDED IMMEDIATELY.

The Kiwanis Centre, home of the Clinic here, has given its word to forward a number of donations weekly. We cannot and must not fail the boys in the front line.

Again, we say, the procedure is painless. ASK ANY DONOR.

But that is beside the point. Blood donations are vitally important to the saving of a life. It may be that of your son, brother or husband, the boy next door, or who went to school with you.

Call 1,000 and register as a donor. Do your duty and do it now.

Ship Cheese Boxes From Quebec To Relieve Shortage in This Area

1,500 Will be Shipped Each Week at the Ceiling Price of 35 Cents.

The timber controller of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board at Ottawa has arranged to send a carload of boxes a week for the next three or four weeks into Belleville to relieve the shortage there. The price is to be 35 cents a box, the Ottawa Farm Journal stated in a story yesterday.

This will mean about 1,500 boxes a week for the next month and by that time the Timber Controller expects to have arranged for veneer supplies for box making in and around Belleville. That is if local veneer is not available by them.

This action results from a near ultimatum given the Belleville Cheese Board last Thursday by box and veneer makers who claimed they would make no more boxes for 35 cents. There was a shortage of boxes and some cheese could not be boarded as a result.

S. L. Joss, secretary, Ontario Cheese Producers' Association, has agreed to assume responsibility for the shipments being arranged by the Timber Controller. He will also look after distribution. Individual cheesemakers will have to look after their own deliveries from the car at Belleville and will pay the Producers' Association for the boxes.

Looking Into Supply.

It is also understood the Timber Controller is looking into the veneer supply and plans to make other arrangements if supplies now stored in Belleville district are not released to the box makers at a price which will enable them to sell boxes at the fixed price of 35 cents. Last week veneer and box makers were talking 45 and even 50 cents.

It is further understood every effort is to be made to keep the box price at 35 cents for this season.

In Quebec districts boxes are selling at from 28 to 32 cents.

From Eastern Ontario points comes word that there is an adequate supply of boxes at the 35 cent price. Some are coming from Megantic, Que., and others being made locally from veneer discarded by the airplane manufacturers. In most cheese factories in the eastern section makers are allowed so much per pound of cheese made and must furnish everything. Thus any change in box prices would be a real hardship on makers.

Some eastern factories making for the domestic trade are known to be using second-hand boxes returned by processors.

Maker Remains Adamant.

Dalton Clarke, Hungerford veneer and cheese box manufacturer, commenting today on the move of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board timber controller to bring in cheese boxes for this district, stated that it was "a bluff to try to scare box-makers of this district."

"Let them bring in 4,500 if they want to," he said. "That is all well and good, but they won't be able to get the 15,000 extra which will be needed at the price of 35 cents."

"They are not procurable in Quebec or any other province," he said. "As it is, somebody is going to pay for them. This move is going to cost somebody money. Not the cheese producer, but someone will pay."

"As far as I am concerned I am not interested. I am going into production of war material. I am making a few boxes, and will make all that I can providing I get a decent price. I do not intend to go on losing $80 per 1,000 boxes."

Want Fair Price.

A representative of the W.P.T.B. Timber Controller called on him yesterday. "The point is if we get paid enough for the boxes we will make them," is what Mr. Clarke told the government representative.

"Outside of that, if the W.T.P.B. wants to bring cheese boxes in from outside points at the 35c price, let 'em do it. It suits me fine. I cannot afford to make them at that price with the present cost of material and scarcity of material here, and furthermore I do not intend to."

Some Alleviation.

Some alleviation of the box shortage in this immediate district came when W. R. McCreary, cheese buyer here, procured some 3,000 used boxes from various sources and made them available to factories.

The majority of these boxes were said by cheese graders to be in sufficiently good condition to be acceptable for export. This alleviation, however, is only temporary, as there are no more of this type of box available.

Peaches Offered On Local Mart For First Time

Peaches appeared on the local market this morning for the first time this season with vendors asking straight $1 per six quart basket for No. 1 variety. Two varieties of plums were also offered at 60 cents the basket and Montmorency cherries brought $1 the basket with only a few lots being offered.

Raspberries still held at their former price of 30 cents the box, with black currants bringing 25 cents, and red varieties two boxes for 25 cents. Gooseberries sold at 10c the box and huckleberries at 30 cents the quart.

Grade "A" eggs brought 35 cents per dozen on the inside market, with mediums being quoted at 33 cents. Butter sold generally at 40 cents the pound, with a few vendors quoting 85 cents per two pound roll. The chicken offering was large with top prices quoted being $2 per bird for large, well-finished fowl. Prices generally were from $1 to $1.40 each with broilers bringing from $1.15 to $1.30 per pair.

Seasonal vegetables brought the usual nickel the bunch with cabbages selling at five cents and cauliflower up to 25 cents each. Corn on the cob was quoted at 35 cents for the best varieties, while other vendors quoted theirs as low as 25 cents per dozen ears. Transparent and Astrachan apples were quite freely offered at 40 cents the basket or at 10 cents the berry box. Beans were two boxes for 15 cents and cucumbers a nickel apiece. Gherkins brought up to 65 cents the six quart basket, and potatoes declined to straight 50 cents the peck.

Lovely bouquets of Gladioli brightened the market considerably with several vendors asking 25 cents the bunch.

VEHICLES COLLIDE IN HEAVY RAIN

During the height of Friday's heavy rain storm in the afternoon, an automobile driven by J. A. Ethier, 85 Pinnacle Street, was in collision with the Picton-Belleville bus at the intersection of Albion and Station Streets.

Mr. Ethier was making a left-hand turn off Albion Street to proceed southerly on Station Street when the impact occurred. Considerable damage resulted to the lighter vehicle, but no personal injuries resulted to any concerned, police learned upon investigation.

chased back several miles by Soviet tank crews in the District of Kletskaya, 80 miles northwest of Stalingrad.

The Soviet Information Bureau said Soviet armored detachments had destroyed the headquarters of two Nazi forces and slain at least 1,500 invaders in the battle of the Don River bend northwest of Stalingrad.

Soviet pilots fought German aircraft and strafed Nazi ground forces in the see-saw battle of the steppes.

Red Star said that in a number of places the Germans were resorting to defensive use of artillery and mortars against Russian tanks which attacked beneath a cover of bombers and fighters.

Again Forced to Withdraw

Despite official demands for an end to the withdrawals which have yielded at least 40,000 square miles of Soviet soil to the invaders in the last five weeks, a communique disclosed that the Russians had been forced into a new retreat "south and southeast of Bataisk" itself 15 miles below Rostov.

"After bloody battles, our units fell back to new positions," it was announced. "The Germans lost 13 tanks, 18 guns and more than 600 men killed."

(Combat positions were not clearly delineated.

(The Germans, however, claimed they had crossed the Lower Don on a 150-mile front; captured Kushchevka, 30 miles south of Bataisk; cut the Stalingrad-Novorossisk railway near Proletqrskaya, 100 miles to the east; and crossed the canalized Manych River in force despite demolition of Russian dams which flooded the countryside.)

The Russians' Friday midnight communique said more than 1,000 Germans had been killed and nine Nazi tanks and 15 field guns destroyed in the Tsimlyansk theatre 120 miles up the Don from Rostov, where Red army men fought on against enemy groups which had crossed the south bank.

The bulletin told of two Nazi counterattacks south of Voronezh in a battle of the Upper Don, where the Russians have recently held the initiative. The Germans were reported "repelled by artillery and mortar fire, suffering grave losses."

Vain attacks on Soviet positions on the Leningrad front were reported.

BODY DISCOVERED FLOATING IN BAY

Firemen Greatrix and Carter Help Local Boys Bring in Body

Discovered floating in the bay near the base of the old lighthouse the body of Evans Maracle, Shannonville Indian drowned last Tuesday was recovered shortly after 7.30 last night.

Maracle was the remaining victim of a double drowning tragedy that took the life of 29-year-old Mrs. Gordon Maracle, Shannonville, Indian mother of six children. Albert Maracle, who gave his address as Belleville, was rescued from the upturned boat which, he stated, had capsized when the occupants were changing seats for rowing purposes.

The body was first sighted by two airmen strolling in Victoria Park. It was seen at a point between the park and the base of the old light house floating towards the deeper water of the bay.

The men notified police and Vernon Goyer, 91 South John Street; Don Taylor, 51 South George Street, and Douglas Rosebush, 81 South John Street, brought the body ashore in a boat. Acting Sergeant Williams Evans and Police Constable Peter Thompson took charge of the body at this point. Firemen Greatrix and Carter assisted in recovery of the body.

Dr. J. J. Robertson, chief coroner immediately released the body for burial and stated that no inquest will be held.

Members of the Belleville Fire Department dragged and grappled the bay for over 36 hours following the accident, but the search was abandoned due to Albert Maracle's undetermined ideas of where the accident occurred.

According to his statement the boat capsized at a point in the bay" where the Schuster Coal Company's sign could be seen." If such is the case, the body of the dead Evans Maracle was recovered from a spot in the immediate vicinity of where the boat turned over.

Y.M.C.A. War Services

BELLEVILLE

Saturday night's big dance for servicemen in the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium will be held as usual about 8.30 p.m. with partners being provided.

Sunday's open house activities at the Red Triangle Club will be somewhat curtailed due to seasonal closing of the bowling alleys, but the building will be open all day for those who wish to read, write, swim or make use of the various small games, table tennis, etc.

Monday night's dancing class in the "Y" gym will be continued through August from 8 until 9 p.m. For the following hour the gym will be used for a small dance to which members of the forces are welcomed.

Tuesday evening's regular servicemen's dance at the Quinte Golf Club will have the St. Michael's Hospitality Club as host.

Wednesday evening's dance in the "Y" gym is well attended by Belleville young ladies and we hope to see more members of the adjoining stations present next week.

Thursday night the members of both Belleville and St. Michael's Hospitality Club will be welcomed at Mountain View Station for their regular monthly dance.

Magazines continue to be turned over by local citizens to the Red Triangle Club for use here and surrounding stations and this interest is very much appreciated.

The eagerly looked for outing provided by Dr. and Mrs. Locke, for thirteen airmen, in the nature of a fine yacht trip and island picnic, last Sunday, more than realised the expectations of all and the boys were most appreciative.

The Contact Club sponsored by the Y.W.C.A. for wives of servicemen, will hold next Thursday afternoon's meeting in the Y.M.C.A. gym and a program of games is being planned. Last week's meeting was very encouraging, there being 23 wives and 10 children present. A warm invitation is extended to wives of airmen to join these friendly gatherings.

Trenton News — Social

On Tuesday evening of this week, the Belleville Hospitality Club in co-operation with the Y. M. C. A. held a very successful dance for the Airmen of the district at the Quinte Golf and Country Club. Thoughtful arrangements by the ladies made it possible for a number of the W.A.A.F. from Mountain View to attend also. The RCAF Band supplied the music. Refreshments were served at intermission.

Again this week the Y.M.C.A. was able to send men to Niagara Falls, Ont. for "48 hr." leaves. Also the ladies of the I.O.D.E. of Campbellford, Ont, made it possible for a number of the chaps to spend the weekend in their community. The information bureau set up by the "Y" for assisting men to plan their furloughs and leaves is ever popular with the Airmen. Each day numerous requests are received, and helpful assistance rendered.

Music Appreciation Hours on Sunday and Wednesday evenings have been well attended this week. Plans are underway whereby a discussion group or informal chats on "How to appreciate fine music" are to be inaugurated into our program in the very near future. The responses made by the men in all of this has been very gratifying indeed.

Trenton News—Sports.

On Monday night a softball game was played between No. 5 I.T.S. and Trenton, and what a game it was with Trenton taking the lead in the first inning and after a game complete with sparkling plays and few errors, along with an argument which almost disrupted the game, Trenton came out on the long end of an 8-7 score.

This win tied up the round-robin series and forced a sudden-death series commencing Monday night with No. 6 R.D. playing Trenton and the winner meeting No. 5 I.T.S. on Tuesday night for the right to represent this district in the garrison play-downs scheduled for Toronto on August 8.

On Thursday night, teams from Vimy Barracks at Kingston journeyed to this station to engage Trenton teams in hardball and soccer.

In the baseball game Trenton got to the Vimy pitcher for three runs in the first inning to take a commanding lead, but when the game was called on account of darkness at the end of the sixth inning the score was tied 6-6. A great game it was with both teams battling all the way.

Likewise in the soccer game the Trenton team got away fast with two quick goals, but in the latter half Vimy came strong to make the score read 3-2 in their favor at the final whistle.

The lads were entertained at the Station dance following the game, and they were loud in their praise of the hospitality extended to them by Trenton. It was a good evening of sport and the games were well played before a large number of spectators. Trenton teams look forward to their return visit to Vimy in two weeks' time.

HOUSE DISPOSES

The resources minister said development of fur-bearing resources for the Indians in areas set apart for the purpose promised growing success in providing incomes for the tribesmen.

The Senate gave second and third readings to a bill providing $22,360,000 for capital expenditures and indebtedness of the Canadian National Railways. Senator Louis Cote urged that capital expenditures of the C.N.R. be kept to a minimum to reduce the burden of debt.

The Upper House also gave second reading and third readings to a bill amending the previous metals marking act.

Several Amendments

In Commons several amendments to the income tax measure were approved including a section dealing with the taxation of women commissioned officers in the forces. Commissioned officers are safeguarded against having their incomes reduced below $1,600 by taxation, to remove the possibility of commissioned officers income being made lower than that of a senior warrant officer.

Mr. Ilsley said the amendment was necessary because women in the forces were paid on the basis of two-thirds of the pay of men and it was desired to retain this system in respect to the taxation concessions under the amendment the Governor-in-Council may fix an amount below which a woman officer's income may not be lowered by taxation.

Taxation concessions will be allowed in respect to serial as well as lump payments by companies into superannuation or pension funds. Under the existing law companies are allowed to deduct 1-10th annually on that lump sum for the following year from their income for taxation purposes.

Concessions Made

On the section providing for tax concessions for persons bearing heavy medical bills in a year, the Minister said the amount claimed might include the salary of wages paid a full-time attendant caring for a person throughout the whole of an illness confining that person to a bed or wheelchair, and also in case of care of a person totally blind during the taxation period and requiring an attendant's aid.

Members had protested taxation concessions for assistance to prospecting being limited to payments to registered syndicates, and Mr. Ilsley said the concessions would be granted for contributions up to $500 to associations, syndicates or mining partnerships registered or otherwise recognized by law.

When debate on the income tax bill opened Conservative House Leader Hanson said he believed the public did not realize the implications of the increased taxation provided for in the measure. Prosperity should bear part of the load and the cost should be passed on to a greater degree.

Hanson Critical.

The supplementary estimates contained an item for $22,950,000 for wheat acreage reduction payments which was announced when a Liberal government in Saskatchewan was about to appeal for re-election.

"We are still playing politics with the people's money, that is the point I am making," said Mr. Hanson. "We are still trying to bribe the people of Saskatchewan with the taxpayers' money, taken from them under a staggering tax burden.

"The announcement of that supplementary estimate at this time undoubtedly is to influence the decision of the voters of Saskatchewan."

Mr. Ilsley said it was impossible to shift the burden of taxation from one generation to another.

Increased borrowing to finance the war was not shifting the burden but simply effecting a different distribution of wealth.

Mr. Ilsley added: "I just wanted to puncture this balloon about easing this hardship, which is being floated now by the leader of the opposition and his associates. I would ask them not to do it because it is fallacious, dangerous and mistaken."

Reserve Units Home Sunday

Reserve Army units of this district the 34th Battery, R.C.A.; the Argyll Light Infantry Regiment (Tank) and the 2nd Battalion the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment will arrive in the city from Connaught Ranges Military Camp at 6.15 on Sunday evening, according to information received in the city today.

The troops will arrive at the north station, and in all likelihood be brought down the Pinnacle Street tracks to the Armouries.

According to other reports, the boys are in splendid condition and are showing many beneficial results of the two weeks training in camp. The highlight of the "vacation" was the experience of Sunday, July 19th when a severe storm played havoc with the tents of the camp causing injury to the cook of the Argylls and Lieut.-Col. A. B. Gribble.

Lieut.-Colonel B. C. Donnan, injured when a "jeep" in which he was riding overturned, is recovering satisfactorily.

Four Tons of Onions, 36 Pigs, One Puppy, Simple Problem for Canada's Navy

Canada's extensive participation in the Battle of the Atlantic led, some time ago, to the establishment of her own naval base in the United Kingdom. The base operates under the name of "H.M.C.S. Niobe". The following article, written by a naval officer, tells how the base was set up and the work it does.

By LIEUT. E. H. BARTLETT, R.C.N.V.R.

When it comes to tackling problems, Canada's navy leads the way.

Even when the problems have nothing to do with the sea or with ships, but four tons of onions (worth their weight in gold), 29 pigs and a small black puppy—sole survivor of a bombed English house.

With so many of her ships operating in British ports, Canada decided to establish a permanent base in the United Kingdom.

Suitable quarters were soon found. In peace-time they gave comfortable housing to orphaned children and the aged indigent. Large dormitories and well-planned kitchens existed for the housing and feeding of Canadian seamen who, as they were needed, would pass through the base. There was a hospital, easily converted to care for 70 patients at a time. There were rooms for recreation, for instruction and for administration.

But . . . there were snags.

The institution had operated its own farm, and the farm went with the property. Furthermore, with the Old Country making every acre of soil a productive acre, the farm, if taken over, would have to be kept in full operation.

Navy Goes Farming.

The navy blinked, but quickly recovered.

"Right," it said. "Let's get on with it."

The head farmer stayed to superintend. The 29 pigs the farm boasted stayed also. So did the farmer's three horses, which the navy bought. And so did the potatoes in the ground and the onions in storage.

If the navy had to farm, it was going to farm properly. The farmer was a little doubtful, but his fears as to the ability of his new helpers were soon set at rest. . . . Not really surprising, in a navy which has recruited much of its wartime strength from prairie farms. Stokers, although they have never handled a shovel in this day of oil-burning ships, demonstrated they could spade up potatoes in most skilful fashion. There has been no lack of workers. "Getting back to the farm" is an interlude of joy to men who have had long spells of duty at sea.

Into their messes, come gold dividends in vegetables grown in their own "ship".

Named For First Ship.

"Ship" because, in true naval fashion, the base, including the farm, is carried on the navy's books as H.M.C.S. Niobe"—the name borne by the first ship in Canada's navy back in 1910. Over the main doorway of the main building there flies the White Ensign. Before it is the "Quarterdeck", which is given the same formal salute by all officers and ratings as accorded the quarterdecks of all the Empire's fighting ships. The routine is shipboard routine, and "H.M.C.S. Niobe", permanently aground, is pulling her weight in the war at sea as effectively as any of her sisters on the navy list.

To her come the new drafts from Canada, who will serve as replacements in the ships on duty on England's side of the Atlantic. To her come the sick and the injured from those ships for treatment and convalescence. Officers and ratings on special duties make "Niobe" their base. Those starting on the short spells of leave they get while on active service overseas find that transportation and an important item, their ration cards, have been arranged for as part of the smoothly-operating routine of Canada's naval base. "H.M.C.S. Niobe" shoulders all the problems of ships and men far from their home ports.

Tackled Any Job.

With the same matter-of-factness with which they "went farming" the men of Canada's navy embarked upon extra duties as firemen, air raid wardens, rescue-workers . . . all the tasks which confront fighting men in a country under constant threat of attack from the air. These protective measures were not only for their own barracks. The navy was ready to go to the help of the civilian population of the town where it had made its base, complete with fire-fighting equipment which includes an emergency pumper and hose-wagon, ladder reels and escape apparatus.

Each Has Part To Play.

Every man at the base has his part to play if the emergency should arise: stokers and ship's writers practice side by side, gas-masked and oil-skin clad, as members of decontamination squads. Seamen and stewards are equally handy in the fire-fighting squads. Sick berth attendants are reinforced by men of other skills to give swift care to the injured.

Such work is not new to the men of Canada's navy. Before the present base was instituted they were stationed in a city which came under the full horror of night after night of air attack. The training they had taken at that centre proved its value to the full. There are no records of how many civilians were rescued from the debris of their homes ;how many injured persons were cared for by the naval medical staff; how many hundreds were fed and comforted. Records are not necessary as reminders to the citizens of that centre.

For the men of the navy there is a long list of mentions in despatches and commendations written into the records. And, there is "Truck". Truck is a black Labrador puppy, whose young master, and young master's entire family, were killed by a bomb. Truck, in some inconceivable manner, escaped, to be adopted by one of Niobe's officers, and the entire ship's company! Nerve-broken, at the slightest noise and flinching from any who approached him, Truck was a problem in himself. The navy solved the problem and Truck, today, is almost a normal dog once more.

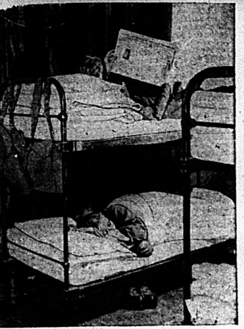
Tribute From Admiral.

But preparations for possible air raids are but minor side-lights in the work of the base.

Primarily it is the headquarters of Canada's navy overseas, the direct link with home. Survivors of a ship lost in action know that in Niobe their problems will be solved . . . their leave will be arranged, their new kits issued, their pay given them. Through "Niobe" are made the arrangements for the extra courses which specialist rating must take to maintain the efficiency of Canada's navy. Through "Niobe" pass the drafts for Canadian naval ratings; the picked volunteers who are training secretly in co-operation with the army and air force for the offensive days ahead.

It was a rear admiral in the Royal Navy, the flag officer-in-charge of the district in which the base is situated, who epitomized the hopes and aspirations of the men of the base following his first official inspection.

"During my many years in the Royal Navy," said the admiral, "I hae inspected many bodies of men. Truthfully I can say that you impress me beyond words. I know that you are itching to get into action. I have no doubt that before too long you will be called upon to do the work for which you have trained and prepared yourselves And, I have no doubt that, you will acquit yourselves according to the fine traditions which the men of the great Dominion of Canada have already established."



Ashore or afloat, Canada's fighting seamen are a versatile crew. Even on the farm, a city-bred sailor finds he can perform many tasks and enjoy them. In the UPPER photograph, taken at the Canadian naval base in England, "H.M.C.S. NIOBE", the lads are shown doing the chores on the farm which is connected with the base. The double-decked bunks in the LOWER photo make comfortable sleeping, especially after a sea-going hammock. The man in the top bunk is catching up on home-town news with a newspaper.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was starting to do the bridge problem and pop said, It was sheer vanity on my part. Horse blanket to blases, I ought to get halled over the coals for that, you might think I was about 17 years old, he said.

What in the world are you talking about? ma said, and pop said, About that expensive golf sweater I was weak enough to buy, although I dont play golf but once in a blue moon.

Well of course I see what you mean, ma said. An expensive sweater languishing away in a dark wardrobe draw is hardly paying for its own upkeep, is it? she said, and pop said, Here I've been preaching to you that it's silly and unpatriotic to pay out a single penny for luxuries, and yet I go and lay out 20 dollars for a Skotch golf sweater that I need about as much as a bird needs roller skates. You're quite right in giving me a blast, hit me again, he said.

Well now William, I'm not exactly giving you a blast, I'm just agreeing with you in principal, ma said. The gentle irony of it is, there's no more yarn available for the ladies who have been doing war knitting down at the Willing Wool, so we're reduced to making over children's clothes and things like that. And while we happen to be on the subject, there's a Belgian lady working with us named Mrs. something or other, and she's a passed expert in unravelling the wool from woolen garments, ma said, and pop said, Nothing doing. That genuine Skotch sweater is no garment and I'm not going to have it blitzed just so you can brag about producing an armfull of wool out of a frozen market. You can kick a horse to water but you cant make him give up his new 20 dollar Skotch sweater. Nothing doing, I'm going to take up golf again in a serious way and that imported sweater is going to be my inspiration, so please drop the whole destructive idea, he said.

Ma claiming she never really had it.

CANADIAN PARATROOPS

Canada's first paratroops will have their first training at Camp Fort Benning, Georgia. Some days ago it was announced that Canadian instructors were leaving for the United States to receive training in this branch. Ultimately there will be full training in Canada. It is expected the Canadian system of training will resemble that of the United States parachute troops.

The paratroop soldier is a product of this war though there was considerable attention paid to training of these in Europe before the war broke out.

It is expected that many young Canadians will manifest keen eagerness towards this branch of the service. The Canadian is known to have initiative and to relish experience which carries keen responsibility, opportunity for which he will find in the paratroop battalions, the first of which has been authorized.

MORE ARRIVALS OVERSEAS

Another large Canadian troop convoy has arrived in Britain, among them a large number of men forming tank crews.

So goes on the steady flow from Canada of fighting men as well as machines, of course.

Many American servicemen have landed in the British Isles since America has been in the war.

More and more near comes inevitably the day when Hitlerism will feel the shock of the United Nations' strength against his Nazi empire.

What these stories of the landings tell is significant but they tell only a part. Nothing of the strength of the arriving armed forces and of the amount of the tremendous flow of munitions and other material is revealed in the nature of things. But the stories of the landings of servicemen tell enough to create grave anxiety in the Nazis and their leaders. Hitler knows that the time is coming when the full peak and force of the Allies wil descend upon the Axis.

PLEASURE DRIVING ENDS IN BRITAIN

When Canadian civilians are using their motorcars they will realize that their friends in Britain are not riding in machines propelled by gasoline and borne on rubber tires. The time has at last come when only the strictest necessity will secure the privilege of using petrol and rubber.

On the highways of Britain there will move only essential automotive vehicles, necessary to the state in time of war.

The privilege of using the roads is another that the people of the British Isles have willingly waived in the interest of the war effort. As compared with winning the war what does such an interruption or restriction as that of the prohibition of driving amount to? Every citizen, will since it has been found necessary, accept without murmur the duty of conservation of the two precious products, gasoline and rubber.

The British people have done marvellously and are the admiration of the world in what they have done for the sake of freedom and justice.

A TITANIC BATTLE

The Russians are engaged in a titanic struggle with the Germans and have in the Stalingrad and Voronezh areas hurled back the enemy at the point of the bayonet inflicting great losses upon the Huns.

The Red troops have been inspired by the call of Joseph Stalin, after whom the great town on the Volga is renamed. Stalin appealed to his army to take inspiration from Russia's great military heroes throughout their history, such men as Nevsky, Donsky, Minin, Suvorov and Kutizov, names which are familiar to the Russians. He appealed to the spirit of the descendants of the men who turned back Napoleon.

Pravda has pointed out that "we cannot retreat."

Hitler is wasting his reserves of manpower in the heavy slaughter into which he has thrown his force, is the claim of the Russians.

Courage is grace under pressure. —Ernest Hemingway.

INHERITORS

We are inheritors—we!
We have not fashioned or built,
Wrested new pathways out of the sea,
Founded a city on silt!

We have not wakened the waste,
Bidden the wilderness bloom,
Impelled the reluctant East to haste,
Roused the cold North from its tomb!

We are inheritors—we!
Little of Empire we know,
But the inherent right to be free,
Strength to ensure it be so.

We are the Sons of the Breed
That feared neither loss nor pain . . .
How then shall our own, or others', need
Call to our courage in vain?

Rejecting an old belief
In an Empire ruled by might,
Acknowledging that, from God in fief,
We hold but by tenant-right . . .

We are inheritors—we!
Joining the years with a span,
Linked by two Charters of Liberty
For the brotherhood of Man!

THE LATEST ARMY STORY GOING THE ROUNDS concerns the drill sergeant who addressed his rookie proteges in the following manner:—

"When I was a little boy I had a set of wooden soldiers. There was a poor boy in the neighborhood and after I had been in Sunday school one day and listened to a stirring talk on the beauties of charity I was soft enough to give them to him. Then I wanted them back, and cried.

"Mother said, 'Don't cry, Bertie, some day you'll get your wooden soldiers back again. AND BELIEVE ME, YOU LOP-SIDED, MUTTON-HEADED, GOOFUS-BRAINED SET OF ROLLING PINS, THAT DAY HAS COME."

THEY SAID:

Abraham Lincoln:—"If you intend to go to work, there is no better place than right where you are . . . If you do not intend to go to work, you cannot get along anywhere . . . Squirming and crawling about from place to place can do you no good."

Rudyard Kipling:—"Savings represent much more than mere money value. They are the proof that the saver is worth something in himself. Any fool can spend; any fool can waste and meddle; but it takes a man to save, and the more he saves the more of a man he makes himself. Waste and extravagance unsettle a man's mind for every crisis; thrift which means some form of self-restraint, steadies it."

THE LADY SPEAKS:

"So you think the noble male of the species doesn't get excited at wrestling matches, and the women go wild?" exclaimed a sweet feminine voice over the telephone this morning.

"Yes and no, madam," cautiously replied the small voice at this end of the wire.

"Well," retorted the S.F.V. in dulcet tones, "the next time I go to the Hume Arena, I'll make it a point to point out to you several of your noble males who throw everything from pop bottles to apopleptic fits, the rafters and the guy next door at the ring when their big plug-ugly gets his tonsils bent or a little polish knocked off his nails."

"I sat next to one of these 'quiet he-men' the other night. And what he didn't do short of mayhem and murder is not worth mentioning. Why that little parlor-worm tore his hat and mine. He caught his upper plate on the fly with a running catch on at least four occasions; ruined the hats of two ladies in the row in front; broke the specs of an elderly fan who sat two seats away on his right; strained all the muscles in his back and them tempers of those in the vicinity; dashed down to the ringside to take a smack at the Wackie Wolf and broke all records getting back when that worthy snarled at him, and in general made life just one hold after another for all concerned.

"And you talk about the women going out of their minds at a wrestling match. I'm single but I would advise all potential brides to take their intended to a wrestling brawl. It brings out the man in them—or the mouse."

Don't Worry if Your Grandparents Did Not Have a Long Life Span

One of the sayings of even recent years was, "If you want to live to an old age, choose grandparents who lived to an old age". This saying has been used for so many years that there have been few of us that did not believe it.

It comes as a surprise, then, to learn that one does not have to have long lived grandparents in order to live to a good old age.

One of the great advantages enjoyed by the statisticians of any of our large insurance companies is that he has thousands, millions in fact, of life histories from which to gather facts. Perhaps the best known of these statisticians is Dr. Louis I. Dublin of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company.

Together with Herbert H. Marks, Dr. Dublin examined the records of seventy thousand persons insured with their company for whom complete and accurate information of length of life was available concerning them and their ancestors.

Their study showed that there was a direct or positive relationship between the life span of the individual and his ancestors. In most cases if his ancestors had lived to a good age he had lived to a good age also. But this was found to be true only if his parents were still living when he was accepted for his life insurance. When his parents were dead when he took his insurance, he himself did not live to such an old age as his grand or great grandparents.

Why then did he not live to such an old age as his grand and great grandparents?

"Death of the parents and consequent breaking up of the home create a risk of early death that seems to be more than offset any inherited factor". An unbroken home life thus means a longer life for the children of that home.

I have spoken before of examining 300 boys in a reformatory school of which one-half came from broken up homes, due to death or other causes. These children did not have wholesome home surroundings.

To show that heredity is not as important as environment or surroundings, it is known that the greatest difference in expectation of life at the age of 20 due to heredity is only three years, while there has been an average gain of about five years among men aged 20 since 1900.

So don't worry about not being able to pick your ancestors.

Capital Closeups

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Aug. 1 — (CP) —Last-minute oddments from Parliament Hill:—

Hopes of speedy adjournment tumbled momentarily when T. L. (Tommy) Church (Con. Toronto Broadview) said: "There's no quorum, Mr. Chairman" ... if a count had proved him right the House would have had to adjourn to next day ... but Conservative House Leader Hanson interjected "Couldn't we call it one o'clock?" ... the regular luncheon adjournment was only a minute or so away and Deputy Speaker Thomas Vien jumped at the suggestion ... no count was made and the House resumed at 3 ... PS—there actually wasn't a quorum, either.

Things got pretty confused sometimes with the House on the last lap, and one day Mr. Hanson got worried ... "Does anybody in the committee know just what he's doing?" he wanted to know. "Does the chairman know?" ... and Mr. Vien came right back with: "I do not."

Agriculture Minister Gardiner mentioned a narrow field which women have still to conquer ... his department employs some artists who go into the fields and forests and among animals to make their drawings ... "It was thought advisable," said Mr. Gardiner, "to have them male."

Miscellaneous Intelligence

One of our operatives brings back a report on a visit to the East Block, headquarters of Prime Minister Mackenzie King and the external affairs department ... one of the officials was explaining how the heavy felt-covered doors made things quite soundproof so the most confidential meetings could be held in absolute secrecy ... our operative looked into one of the rooms where a meeting had just been held and noticed a window open, over a sidewalk ... the official blushed a trifle but had a comeback ... "The Mounties would grab anybody listening outside," said he.

Senator J. A. Calder, (Con. Saskatchewan) is Parliament Hill's leading stamp collector ... he has one of the finest collections of Canadian stamps in the Dominion, is a member of the Royal Philatelic Society in London which boasts Royalty among its members, and has at least one noted philatelic publication to his credit.

Gordon Ross (Lib. Moose Jaw) and John R. MacNicol (Con. Toronto Davenport) got into a bit of an argument over who knew most about farming ... "I wager," said Mr. MacNicol, "that I can shock two sheaves to my Honorable friend's one" ..... the discussion ended there ... after all the House was discussing post office estimates.

CUFFNOTES

Few men have been in elective office longer than A. W. Neill (Ind. Comox-Alberni) who mentioned in the House that 40 years ago he was a member of the British Columbia legislature.

One of Jean Francois Pouliot's favorite subjects is the difference between gin and compound gin and he was going great guns one recent day ... "Perhaps," said J. H. Leclerc (Lib. Shefford), "It would be more interesting if we had a sample"

Call of the North — John MacNicol telling the House he was going back to the Northwest this summer for a trip; and J. H. Sissons (Lib. Peace River) half-complaining because the war expenditures committee was going to sit after adjournment and he wouldn't be able to get home where "such a lot of big things are going on these days."

There must be some new girls on the government switchboard ...... we asked the other day for "The Hansard Office" and a sweet voice said: "You want to speak to Mr. Hansard?" ... not only did the namesakes of the official record of House proceedings live in England but the Hansard brothers have been dead these many, many years.

WAR COMMENTARY
By Sir Charles Gwynn

Written for The Canadian Press
By Maj.-Gen. Sir Charles Gwynn

LONDON, Aug. 1 — (CP Cable)— In the recent fighting in North Africa, Field Marshal Erwin Rommel has shown a disinclination to rely on Italian troops even to hold ground and his German forces have been used for static defence as well as for counter-attacks.

This fact, with the labor he is expending consolidating his positions, seems to indicate he has no immediate intention of resuming his offensive. For such a move he would husband his German troops.

The comparatively short width of the El Alamein bottleneck gives little scope for armed manoeuvre. Whichever side attempts a major offensive almost certainly will require absolute superiority in numerical strength as well as in armor.

A superiority in total strength would be necessary to maintain the momentum of an attack. The defences would not be dispersed sufficiently along the front to allow the attackers to exploit fully their usual advantage of being able to concentrate superior forces at selected points.

The problem of ensuring reserves for defences being available at the point of attack hardly arises when the front is short and deliberate methods are necessary for any offensive action on such a line. There would seem, therefore, to be every prospect of a stalemate as far as the question of major operations is concerned.

Gen. Auchinleck's Policy

Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck's attacks along his entire front which started the night of July 21 and continued with fierce fighting during the two following days gained a little ground and some points captured were lost to Axis counter-attacks.

As far as is known, the operations had only limited objectives and were designed to obtain tactical points for which Rommel would be obliged to fight, thus disturbing the recuperation of the German troops and entailing the expenditure of reinforcements of men and material which Rommel presumably was trying to accumulate for a renewed offensive.

The strategical object of the attacks would seem to be attrition and the tactical object the improvement of the British position for still further attacks.

A lull of four days followed while Rommel worked hard improving his defences. Then Gen Auchinleck moved forward again in the northern sector though the attack seems to have been in the nature of a large-scale raid. It was directed against small but dominating features which often are much less difficult to capture than to hold.

Such points, if left undisturbed, are a great help for observation purposes but unless they can be well supported from the surrounding ground are apt to be weak, rather than strong, points for they invite great concentrations of artillery fire covering infantry attacks.

If captured, they offer some facilities for recapture by counter-attacks, unless the attack can be pushed and consolidated well beyond them.

CRISIS IN RUSSIA

The Russian situation is more acutely disturbing than that in Egypt and much depends upon the degree of exhaustion of the German effort.

Fighting in the Donets Basin and Rostov evidently has been heavy and the German success is undeniable. Still, if that were the only danger point the distances from it to further objectives of vital importance would be so great that there would be a good chance that German momentum would be lost before they could be attained.

The chief fear is that Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's armies on his left flank must have been badly mauled in their struggles. Reinforcement is difficult. The naval base of Novorossisk is threatened, if not by land at least by air attack.

At Tsymlyansk there seems to be no doubt but that the Germans have gained a substantial footing across the river although many attempts to widen the front have failed and have been very costly. The bridgehead that has been established may, however, be of sufficient extent to provide a base for a drive on the Stalingrad-Novorossisk railway which passes nearby and which is of vital importance as a line of communcation for Timoshenko's forces south of the Don.

The bridgehead, moreover, will engage so large a proportion of Timoshenko's men that it is bound to facilitate further crossings. Here the situation is especially critical.

At the Don Elbow near Stalingrad the fighting apparently is still on the right bank of the Don. No German claim to have crossed the river has been made. It seems probable that the Russians at this point have been strongly reinforced and it is possible that the Germans on this flank of their great drive may be experiencing difficulties in maintaining a communications system adequate for the needs of such a powerful force.

It is evident, however, that Stalingrad and the traffic on the Volga must now be subject to air attacks. On the whole, however, the situation at this point doesn't appear as critical as at Tsimlyansk.

The sum total of the German effort on all these points must be immense but only in the Rostov area is there any indication that the Russian power of resistance is approaching the breaking point.

Glancing Back 25 Years

The whole weight of the British forces under command of Sir Douglas Haig was thrown against the German legions in Belgium July 31, 1917. Known as the third battle of Yyres, this drive lasted until mid-November when it was climaxed by the Canadians in the costly but triumphant battle for Paschendaele.

Scapegoats

Anyone blamed or punished for the shortcomings of another is called a scapegoat.

In modern democracies it is customary to choose as a scapegoat a cabinet member, military commander or other high public official.

Both the term and the idea are borrowed from the Bible.

It is believed that "scapegoat" was coined by William Tyndale, who in translating the Bible into English used the term to render the Hebrew "Azazel," which has variously been supposed to refer to the goat itself, to the place to which it was sent, or to an evil spirit that inhabited the desert.

Release of a scapegoat was part of the solemn ritual prescribed by the Mosaic law for the Day of Atonement, observed by the Hebrews each year on the 10th day of the seventh month.

In Leviticus 16 it is related that the Lord, through Moses, commanded Aaron as high priest to "take of the congregation of the Children of Israel two kids of the goats for a sin offering."

Aaron was then commanded to take the two goats and present them before the Lord at the door of the tabernacle.

"And Aaron," continues the command, "shall cast lots upon the two goats; one for the Lord, and the other lot for the scapegoat (Azazel)."

The goat on which the Lord's lot fell was to be offered for a sin offering. "But the goat, on which the lot fell to be the scapegoat (Azazel), shall be presented alive before the Lord, to make atonement with him, and to let him go for a scapegoat (Azazel) into the wilderness."

And again: "And when he hath made an end of reconciling the holy place, and the tabernacle of the congregation, and the altar, he shall bring the live goat: And Aaron shall lay both his hands upon the head of the live goat, and confess over him all the iniquities of the children of Israel, and all their transgressions in all their sins, putting them upon the head of the goat, and shall send him away by the hand of a fit man into the wilderness... And he that let go the goat for the scapegoat (Azazel) shall wash his clothes, and bathe his flesh in water, and afterward come into the camp."

This ritual was not peculiar to the Hebrews. Similar ceremonies with similar significance have been practiced by many different peoples in different parts of the world.

Among some the "scapegoat" was an animal, among others a person, and among still others a material object. For instance, the scapegoat of the ancient Athenians was a young man, that of the Arabs a camel, and that of the Borneo natives a canoe. In each case the scapegoat was laden with the sins, crimes or misfortunes of the people and sent or driven away laden symbolically with these evils.

Franco Pledged To Join Axis If Rommel Reaches Suez—Such a Move Would Increase Axis Pressure On France — Spain Has Far-Reaching Ambitions In French Moroco Britain Aware Of Danger and Determined Hold Egypt

By PERTINAX
North American Newspaper Alliance

Washington, Aug. 1.—On the strength of new diplomatic information, the foreign policy of nationalist Spain can how he defined with greater accuracy. General Francisco Franco's settled plan is actively to join the Axis whenever the Suez Canal Falls to Marshal Rommel's forces, but not before.

As long as the conquest of Egypt by the Nazis has not materialized, the Madrid government will stick to neutrality and do its best to maintain, if not to enlarge, its economic relationship with the United States and Great Britain. As a qualified observer on the spot lately put it to the British terms, Spain's relatively favorable attitude could not be guaranteed to continue if the land of the Nile passed under Axis control.

That warning deserves to be taken all the more seriously as it must be linked with trustworthy reports, received last year, that General Franco, either at the time he met Adolf Hitler (December, 1940, or shortly afterwards, had to commit himself, under pressure, to entering formally the Nazi " new order" if the central British position crumbled in the near east.

In the light of such data, the tremendous importance of the stakes for which General Sir Claude Auchinleck fights his great battle in western Egypt can be adequately appreciated. Those stakes are not inferior to what is in the balance along the Don river, from Rostov to Stalingrad, although the number of men engaged in the North African warfare, on both sides, is merely a fraction of the forces at grips in eastern Europe.

All the evidence is that, once Rommel had won Alexandria and Cairo, Hitler would set himself to shape Europe on the pattern of a Nazi-controlled federation. Then would strike for him the hour which, he believed, was near at hand last summer.

Franco's policy gives a clue to the inner significance and implications of Pierre Laval's manoeuvering. Laval, even if he wanted to keep clear from the Nazis' embrace (and we know that he always strove to collaborate to the limit) could not afford to play for time if Spain started to move with the Axis.

Far-reaching are the ambitions of the Spanish government as regards French Morocco. Indeed, the Spanish government always felt it had been cheated of its due share of influence and expansion when the French Foreign Minister of 1904, Delcasse, secured British French protectorate over the major part of the Sherifian Empire. Laval, of course, would be able to argue with reluctant Frenchmen that Hitler cannot be expected to keep Spanish demands within bounds unless the French people agree to fall in with the German scheme om continental reconstruction.

About two months ago, Generals Nogues and Orgaz, respectively French and Spanish High Commissioners in Morocco, discussed the existing state of affairs. The retort of Nogues was that the whole issue had better be postponed. But delay would be brooked the moment that General Franco, perhaps against his own wishes, had to dance attendance on the Fuehrer.

Prime Minister Churchill, when he discussed the Libyan reverse in the House of Commons early in July, referred to the serious consequences which might ensue in Spain, North Africa and Vichy-France. What he had in mind then, is today fairly clear.

Fortunately, General Auchinleck holds his own. His is a very heavy task. The lay of the ground favors Rommel. Were the German military leader to force the passage east of El Alamein, he would find before him open country in which to deploy his troops, an advantage for which Auchinleck, in any advance westward, could not have any equivalent. Nevertheless the British army, with the help of American air detachments, harasses the enemy. With every day that goes by, Auchinleck makes good the losses in heavy armaments suffered in Libya on June 18.

Meanwhile, General Franco still adheres to his delicately poised policy. When he received the new American Ambassador, Dr. Carlton J. Hayes, six weeks ago, he repudicated economic autarchy in the speech he delivered for the occasion and insisted that Spain laid great store on exchanging goods with the new world. Moreover, the press was allowed to publish comments favorable to the United States. Subsequently, a public pronouncement of the dictator in relation to the newly created cortes sounded a different note. But, until further notice, Spanish policy remains the same, dictated in the main by a deep sense of econoic urgency. And Foreign Minister Ramon Serrano Sunner's journey to totalitarian capitals was probably hardly more than some brass polishing on the front door.

Parcels From Home Bring Unlimited Joy to Men of Canada's Navy

In thousands of Canadian homes, the sending of parcels to those on active service is now part of the family ritual. The accompanying article tells how such parcels are received by officers and ratings serving at Canada's naval base in the United Kingdom.

By LIEUT. E. H. BARTLETT
R.C.N.V.R.

The parcels from home had arrived, and there was jubilation at Canada's naval base "H.M.C.S. Niobe" in the United Kingdom.

The parcels, in the main, contained food and cigarettes with, occasionally, articles of clothing. It was the food and cigarettes which brought most joy.

Lest there be any chance of a misunderstanding, there is no shortage of food at this naval base, even as there is no shortage throughout Great Britain. There is a certain monotony and some restriction in the day-by-day menus, which luxuries from Canada relieves.

The parcels arrived on a day which had produced an unattractive series of meals. Breakfast had consisted of cereal and baked beans and bacon, with bread and butter and tea. Dinner (at mid-day), had been vegetable soup, haddock, peas and potatoes and tapioca pudding; tea; the inevitable bread, butter and jam; and tea; and supper had produced corned-beef hash, bread and jam.

The "treats' 'arrived at a most opportune time.

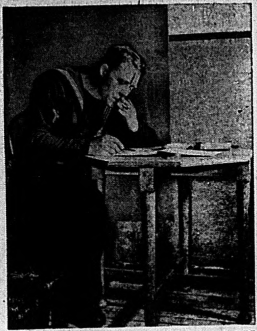
There's a good rule which the men overseas have laid down for their friends at home as guidance as to what is best to send. "Anything which can be spread on bread," for in Great Britain there is no shortage of bread and "bread and spread" makes a good meal. The "spreads" run from meat pastes to jams, honey to peanut butter as well as tins of real butter.

But, to return to the parcels from home.

Tins of fruit made their appearance at most of the messes when the parcels were opened. There's a system to the issue of these "extra rations", a co-operative system whereby the majority of the food is shared at mess, and the donor of a tin of peaches one day is the sharer of a tin of pineapple the next.

It's a system bred of good fellowship; a naval trait.

For between meal snacks, chocolate bars are always welcome, especially the sugar-laden, delightfully sweet bars which Canada produces. Chocolate bars in the Old Country, at twopence halfpenny each, are not really satisfying to the sweet-tooths of Canadians. As for chewing-gum, a country which regarded its advent in the last war with rather horrified eyes is certainly not going to produce it in quantity in wartime, so the chewing gum in the parcels from Canada is treasured.



It's a Great Day Aboard "H.M.C.S. Noibe" When Parcels Arrive From Home

A place to relax between periods at sea, to write letters home, take a hot bath or any of the scores of things a man likes to do, that's H.M.C.S. Niobe, Canada's naval base in the United Kingdom. The comfortably furnished well kept building becomes more than a haven of rest, however, when the mail brings a pile of parcels from home for the men of Canada's fighting ships. Then the plain, healthy diet prescribed by regulations is supplemented by a feast of soups, jams, puddings and other home-cooked delights. There are cigarettes in boexs, too, an item always in heavy demand. The above photographs show a couple of typical scenes aboard the Niobe. The seaman (LLEFT) is taking advantage of a quiet corner to write to the folks at home. The two relaxing in the other picture are survivors of H.W.C.S. Spikehead, who find that the Niobe takes all their problems from their shoulders.

R.C.N. Photos.

High-light of "parcel day" was a party given by one officer in his cabin. It was a brother officer's birthday . . . and the host's parcel from home had included two cans of corn on the cob. The menu was simple. Corn, with creamery butter from Ontario, bread and potted meat, and coffee made from the combined coffee-milk-sugar syrup which has come into its own again in this war.

The luxuries which the folks back home send over well repay the trouble of their sending.

But, again it must be repeated, Canada's naval men overseas live well on their rations. They get their roast beef and their bacon, their steak and kidney pies and roast pork, and all the other meats to which they are accustomed. There is no shortage of vegetables and certainly none of bread. Apple pie is no stranger, and milk puddings are frequent. Tea and cocoa seem unlimited, although it is better not to talk about the coffee which sometimes appears. Four meals a day are still in order, with cocoa on tap for the men on night duty.

And, of course, there are "snacks" ashore.

The Canadian seamen early in their sojourn overseas discovered the best restaurants to fit their appetites and their pockets. A typical snack in one of these restaurants costs one and threepence (less than 30 cents) and includes a choice of fish, pork pie, sausage or scrambled eggs (made from powder) each with chipped potatoes, with cakes and tea or coffee. A good meal at a reasonable price.

For high days and holidays, or for a celebration, it is still comparatively easy to get a chicken dinner . . . but not for one and threepence.

Cigarettes are costly, hence the delight with which the cartons of cigarettes from home are received. To buy them ashore takes a shilling for a small package of ten, and a seaman's pay does not really permit a great deal of smoking at that price. Especially when he is allotting part of this pay for the purchase of War Savings Certificates. Soft drinks, because of the sugar rationing, are almost unobtainable. Beer, for those who want it, is costly . . . one and fourpence (about 30 cents) for a pint of draught ale the taste of which is not appreciated by the Canadian palate. Cinema shows cost the same as a pint of beer, and are more frequently patronized than are the public houses.

There is no need, however, for Canadian seamen to spend a great deal on entertainment. They have been taken, whole-heartedly, into the families of the centre in which their base is situated. The entertainment may not be riotous, but there is much to be said for a quiet evening spent in an Old Country home, before a cheery fire with a cup of tea and some home-baking (the hospitable Islanders insist on sharing their rations) for refreshments. And, in addition, the sewing on of buttons and the mending of socks for these boys from across the ocean.

Naval Men Popular.

And, of course, if the family has a daughter . . . well, how better can a seaman show his appreciation than by taking her to a show or a dance occasionally!

There is no doubt that Canada's naval men are popular. "The finest bunch of laddies we have ever had here," a city magistrate told the writer.

"Eh, but they're grand," said a bus conductress, "and it's a fair treat to see their politeness."

The feeling of goodwill is reciprocated.

"Since we've been here we haven't run into anyone who hasn't wanted to do everything for us," declared one of the lads whose tour of duty overseas has not been short. "They are a people worth fighting beside."

Russian Forces Standing Firm Against Nazis

By KIRKE SIMPSON

Spurred by Stalin's no-retreat appeal, Russian forces along the Don from Voronezh to the southern elbow of the Don bend appear standing firm against their Nazi foes. West of the Don elbow, however, Moscow admits a further Red retreat and Berlin pictures a huge Nazi bulge across the lower Don into the Caucasus, 150 miles wide and 112 miles deep at its central apex.

The Germans speak of a disorderly Russian rout. This boast is backed up by a Berlin claim of the capture of Kushchevka, thirty miles south of Bataisk on the Rostov-Baku rail and pipe lines, and the investment of Salsk, rail junction on the Krasnodar-Stalingrad system.

Both Salsk Junction and Kushchevka are important. The loss of Kushchevka, if it has fallen, seems the greater immediate threat, however, it also is a junction point giving rail and road access westward to Yeisk on the Azov seacoast of the Caucasus.

With Nazi forces between Rostov and Kushchevka outflanking them to the east and probably also pushing westward from Kushchevka toward Yeisk behind them, any Russian troops still in the Rostov-Kushchevka-Yeisk triangle are in deadly peril. The region has been well guarded up to now because it offered short routes for Nazi flanking invasions across the upper arm of the Sea of Azov from Taganrog. Its evacuation would throw those sea routes into the Caucasus wide open for German use, thus adding immeasurably to the peril of the Russian left flank.

The voice of German propaganda from Vichy, never reliable, says such an invasion of Taman Isthmus, on the Caucasus side of Kerch Strait, has already been accomplished from the Crimea. There is no confirmation. It seems obvious, however, that the Nazis are trying to sweep the Russians back down the Rostov-Baku railroad below Kushchevka to free the whole Azov seacoast to and beyond Kerch Strait. Nor is there a discernible strong east-west natural defensive line above the Kuban River on which Marshal Timoshenko may hope to stand.

Nevertheless, the Nazi bulge below the Don with its apex presumably near Salsk is narrowing and will be confined to the long central route, north of the Caucasus range, if Red forces succeed in holding on or above the Kuban in the west and the Don bend and the Caucasus marshes below it in the east. is only in the centre that good terrain for blitzkrieg operations is available.

Definite Need For More Women To be Trained

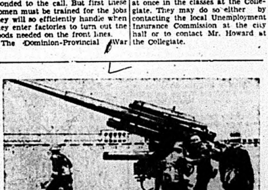
With each succeeding call-up of Canada's manpower taking thousands of industrial and other workers from their regular jobs and absorbing them in the armed forces, Canadian women are being asked to assume greater responsibilities as they take over production jobs on the industrial front.

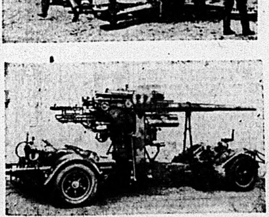
And Canadian women have shown their ability to assume these wartime jobs and have won unlimited praise from production officials by the manner in which they have responded to the call. But first these women must be trained for the jobs they will so efficiently handle when they enter factories to turn out the goods needed on the front lines.

The Dominion-Provincial War Training Program in 33 centres has trained over 60,000 men and women for wartime jobs, while in the local classes held at the Belleville Collegiate under the direction of Instructor H. H. Howard over 1,000 persons have been trained in machine shop practice, in motor mechanics and in welding.

The demand for women to take places in industry, however, is ever becoming greater and a campaign to induce additional women to take training in machine shop practice at the Belleville school is now under way. Fourteen girls and married women are now taking instruction at the Collegiate in machine shop practice, fitting and assembling but there is a definite need for more women to be trained for local and district requirements.

A woman can do no more patriotic work than to enter wartime industry and her assistance is urgently needed. Girls and women in the Belleville area are invited to enroll at once in the classes at the Collegiate. They may do so either by contacting the local Unemployment Insurance Commission at the city hall or to contact Mr. Howard at the Collegiate.





HERE'S THAT PESKY NAZI 88MM. GUN

Here are two views of the famous 88-millimetre dual purpose gun used so effectively by Rommel's armies in North Africa. British and U.S. experts say the gun is good, but not unbeatable and that this gun or Allied anti-tank guns can stop tanks—if the tanks let themselves get into position to become targets. This gun is best known as an anti-tank weapon, but is equally effective as an anti-aircraft piece. At TOP a German gun crew is seen handling the weapon, and BELOW, the 88mm. gun is pictured on wheels for rapid movement.

Charm Friends by Telling Fortunes

Exciting Meaning in Every Card

The oracle speaks! That's you, foretelling the three main events of your beau's life for the year — and maybe weaving yourself in!

Three fateful cards hold the secret of his future, if you tell it the gipsy way, "Fortunes by Nines!" Seven of Diamonds? Lucky! He'll get money—where he least expects it! Two of Spades? Bad luck—a separation, maybe from you; but all's well, for the Seven of Hearts promises success in love!

Choosing these three fateful cards is part of the excitement and mystery. "Fortunes by Nines," like all card fortunes, has its special way to shuffle and cut.

You easily learn such tricks and the meanings of the cards, too. Most hearts are happy cards, telling of love; diamonds are the cards of worldly affairs, clubs of business. Spades are gloomy! Prize card to get is the Ten of Hearts—romance AND wealth!

In tea leaves and in the "crystal" you also can find fortune thrills!

Our 32-page booklet explains 85 tea-leaf meanings, has the meaning of every card in the deck, and some thrilling gipsy card-reading methods. Also has a horoscope for each month, fortunes in dice, the "magic crystal."

Combination Duck and Fruit Farm Managed by Wife of British Officer

Pte. P. VanDusen Celebrates Dominion Day in England by Visiting Unique Farm.

Private P. VanDusen of the Hygiene Section of the R.C.A.M.C. Canadian army overseas has written to the Ontario Intelligencer a very fine description of a farm in England. He thanks the local Army and Navy League branch, and also the Kinsmen for fags. "They certainly help out," he says. Tobacco is quoted at 55 cents an ounce.

The letter follows:

England, July 1, 42.

Editor Ontario Intelligencer,
Belleville, Ont.

Dear Sir:

Like most of the Canadian soldiers over here; everything we see is new to us, and I assure you it is most interesting to all of us.

Today being the 1st of July, a holiday was proclaimed for all Canadian troops, so we find our comrades doing many different things to pass the day as best they know how. Many have gone to look over towns and villages that they have not previously visited; others have gone to help the nearby farmers bring in a bumper hay crop; others have a softball game in full swing; for myself I had a new experience. I will as best I can outline one of the oddest farms I have ever worked on.

It is a combination duck and fruit farm lying out on this rolling part of England where small hedge-sided roadways wind here and there to different farms, estates and army camps. With at least six per cent of the shrubbery bearing flowers; holly hedges making the cross fences in the fields; small groups of cattle grazing in long green grass; birds singing all around, with the English skylark doing a grand solo somewhere up near the clouds. On the brow of a hill you find an eight-room bungalow nearly smothered with climbing roses, a spacious lawn rolling away from the front door dotted here and there with clusters of the grandest roses and carnations man's eyes have ever beheld, every color of the rainbow being represented, one would wonder why an ordinary farmer would go to so much trouble with all the other necessary work around the average farm.

The amount of land back of this beautiful home would not exceed eight acres, but in all my life I have never seen so much being done by five women. The owner of this small farm is, as usual, a member of His Majesty's Forces serving as a Captain in North Africa, leaving behind him a young wife to carry on this vast undertaking. Six acres of this land is planted in young apple trees, they stand about eight or nine feet high. The apples on these trees at this date are quite plentiful and as large as an egg. I should judge each small tree would produce a bushel and a half at least when the fruit is matured. Between the rows of trees which are twenty feet apart is all cultivated land where fruit of all kinds is growing such as: strawberries, raspberries, currants, gooseberries etc., all in neat rows and covered with a brown net from end to end so as to keep the biggest thief in England from devouring the crop. This thief being one of the most colorful birds in England can and will, steal three times its own weight every hour of daylight. It is called the black and white Magpie and walks along the ground with the air of a Canadian 2nd Lieutenant with a grudge.

The women I have already mentioned spend eight hours a day hoeing, weeding and picking fruit which sells at a price per pound that would stop the average Canadian woman using sugar in her tea until fruit goes down. The other three hours of work done by this gallant little farmerette, and her four land army assistants is to attend three hundred and fifty ducks gathered on one square acre of land. These ducks are housed in groups of twelve laying ducks and two drakes in a little wire enclosure fifteen feet square, with a small shed three feet high in one corner of the pen. This acre is covered with little pens such as the one just mentioned. To keep the ducks from wandering out of bounds the acre is enclosed with a wire fence four feet high. Every day a certain number of these birds are let out to eat green grass or green feed thrown into the duck yard; they exercise by walking around the inside of this outer fence. The diet which keeps these ducks producing, what I consider a wonderful average of eggs for a three-year period, which is 288 eggs per duck per year, an average that chickens in this country do not reach. I am informed that this breed of ducks will do this for three years, they are then replaced by young stock.

In one corner of this acre is a shed with a blackboard on the wall and an old fashioned desk, there in black and white can be found the number of eggs gathered from each pen per day, week, month and year; the cost of feeding each pen per month, and the wholesale price received from the sale of eggs from each pen.

This duck farm is run on a strict daily routine, each person has her job to do. Each night a fire is lit under a large kettle, in this kettle are two hundred weight of small potatoes like marbles, one hundred weight of whole grain; a certain amount of fuel is placed under the kettle, and in the morning enough feed for that day is ready for serving these copper colored, egg laying ducks, which produce an egg a day worth three pennies or approximately 6 cents a piece. The only time these birds stop laying is between 15 September and 15 February, the reason for this I cannot tell you; this strain of ducks are a military secret as far as I could gather from their conversation.

The job I was asked to do on my holiday was to sharpen four foot stakes, drive them into the ground between the rows of raspberries so as to hang nets over the fruit, these nets are three hundred feet long, six feet wide, they are kept six inches above the fruit. Every fruit vine, bush or small tree is covered with these nets as well. I ask where all these nets come from, and this was the answer: In the Winter evenings they are woven by these women who in my mind are doing a grand job for their King and Country as well as supplying the much needed food stuff to their countrymen. They have no holidays, no pleasure, but hopes, hopes of the freedom they have enjoyed in the past, hopes which each and every Canadian will do his best to fulfil for such wonderful people.

Dehydrated Food New War Industry

By JAMES MONTAGNES

There will be more room for munitions and equipment in the ships going to the war zones because agricultural scientists have found out how to cut a ton of potatoes to 300 pounds, have learned how to reduce a hundred pounds of cabbage to six pounds, and to reduce the weight of pork and beef by nearly three-quarters. The food which goes to the soldiers on the front line will be less bulky to transport, will be more varied in content than heretofore, and will be as palatable and nutritious as the fresh food from which it came.

The process of taking the moisture from foods of all kinds and thus cutting the bulk and weight of the food has been the subject of experiment in agricultural laboratories everywhere for some years. Powdered and dried milk are well-known examples of dehydration processes, among the first to have proven successful. The war has pushed the need for new methods of ridding fresh food of moisture so as to be able to send more fresh food to Britain, for the armed forces on the battlefields and to overcome the shortage of tin cans which resulted with the conquest of Malaya.

In Canada most of the work on dehydration has been on vegetables while in the United States agricultural scientists have worked on dehydration of meats, and in New Zealand work is being conducted on dehydration of butter because of shortage of refrigerator space for shipping Butter to Britain.

In the last war the dried vegetables served out with army rations were not favorably received because at that time dried vegetables were just vegetables that had been dried. They were tough and tasteless; their vitamin value was probably nil, and if the vegetables had been kept for a year they were only used as a last resort. Developments of recent months have changed all that.

In this two-pound tin of dehydrated carrots is enough to feed 160 men.

Taste Fresh

Recently a demonstration was given in Ottawa of dehydrated vegetables processed in Canadian factories for and under the direction of the Agricultural Supplies board. Carrots, turnips, cabbage and potatoes (mashed, French fried, pan fried and riced) were served and the consensus was that they tasted the same as and could not be distinguished from fresh-cooked vegetables. Some of the persons who tasted them maintained that the dehydrated products were even better than home-cooked vegetables. In the process of dehydration the vegetables had lost but little of their original vitamin content and nutritive value.

In the United States a similar demonstration was given recently on meat which had been dehydrated. Secretary of Agriculture, Claude Wickard was served with pork and beef croquettes and stew from which 90 per cent of the water had been processed so as to keep the meat still pleasantly edible. The meal was so tasty that the secretary told the scientists to go ahead and see if they could do the same work on lamb and mutton.

Before the dehydrated meat was served agricultural scientists had fed it to rats who grew fat on it. They had tried it out for weeks at a time to heat such as it would receive in the tropics or on the desert, had inoculated it with deadly organisms which had either died or been unable to feed on it. They had tested it in many ways and found it satisfactory.

The dehydration process has been worked out by government scientists and those of private business. At present, besides department of agriculture experimental plants, there are in Canada five companies supplying dehydrated vegetables and fruits to the armed forces and for civilian consumption in outlying settlements and camps. Soups have also been placed on the market in dehydrated form in paper packages to save tin cans, and dog food is another important food which this year is coming out of cans and into paper and cardboard containers in a dehydrated form.

Selected for Fitness

When vegetables are dehydrated they are first selected for varietal suitability and maturity fitness. Then they are washed, trimmed and cut into the form in which they are best processed. They are first cooked for an exact time in steam or water at an exact temperature. This cooking preserves the characteristics of the vegetables. They are then spread on trrays which are stacked on trucks and rolled into the dehydrator, where they are subjected to a blast of hot air until they have been dried to an exact moisture content, the velocity of the airflow, the temperature, and the humidity being carefully controlled. Each species of vegetable requires a different treatment.

Chest Caviety Infection
A Pneumonia Aftermath

One of the common complications feared after a pneumonia attack is empyema, an infection of the chest cavity. The infection which produces this condition may be brought about by a number of different germs as, for example, the pneumococcus, the streptococcus or the colon bacillus. In the latter case the infection in the chest cavity may develop following a ruptured appendix, a ruptured ulcer of the stomach, or a liver abscess. In the majortiy of cases, however, the empyema develops following pneumonia. Empyema may also occur during scarlet fever, meningitis and influenza.

When it occurs it produces fever and some shortness of breath. The patient may become hoarse or lose his voice entirely. He is usually sleepless and restless. Since there is fluid in the chest cavity, X-ray is helpful in making a diagnosis. The fluid will show in the X-ray plate. Physical examination by the physician also is helpful in showing when fluid is present in the chest cavity. Once the diagnosis has been made treatment should be started at once.

In the treatment it is necessary to drain the infected material from the chest cavity. Just when this should be done, however, will depend on the type of germ which has caused the infection. Furthermore, the method used to produce the drainage also varies. In some cases all that is necessary is to put a small tube into the chest cavity between the ribs to allow for the drainage.

In cases which have continued for a long time it may also be helpful in some instances to wash out the affected part of the chest cavity with some antiseptic solution. The type of solution will of course, be determine4 by the physician. In other instances, this type of treatment will not be satisfactory. In such cases an operation is performed in which part of several ribs is removed. This allows for drainage of the infected area and for the use of antiseptic solutions to overcome the infection. One of the antiseptic solutions used to a great extent is known as Dakin's solution, which contains chlorine.

Of course, other methods should be employed to help in overcoming the infection that is present. The patient should be kept at rest, given plenty of fluids and the proper diet. The use of the sulfonamide drugs may be of value in some cases but just how helpful these drugs may be in empyema has not yet been definitely determined. It is possible that the infection may be held in check as long as the sulfonamide drugs are administered, but as soon as their use is stopped the infection may again become active. In any event, the physicians will decide when these preparations are needed.

Whenever, following apparent recovery from pneumonia, the fever returns and shortness of breath and other symptoms develop, the possibility of empyema must be borne in mind and the patient should return to the doctor at once to determine if this disorder has occurred.

Beauty Lesson On Walking

Delores Del Rio has a graceful walk

By HELEN FOLLETT

TODAY WE offer a few words of warning to the hip swingers. Hip swinging isn't pretty. It is particularly unpretty if the swinger happens to be overweight. It is possible that some cute dollies do it to attract attention. We dunno But we have our suspicions.

Incipient waddlers—and that's what the hip swingers are—appear to push along their bodies instead of stepping lightly. The girl who doesn't keep her feet fairly close together when walking, whose shoulders sway from side to side, is on her waddling way.

For the Short Girl

The short girl who has taken on weight must be particularly mindful of movement. Short legs, of course, mean short steps and that's all right, just so she doesn't seem to toddle.

When babies first learn to walk, they waddle because the feet are placed far apart. As the body becomes stronger and muscles tighten and develop the feet are placed closer together. The child gets a stride.

Keep Body Tall

One sees all kinds of walkers among adults. Some lope, some hustle, some meander. The first class walker moves with spirit.

Here is what you should do, lady, when you travel along the boulevards:

Keep the body as tall as ever you can. If you do that your chest will be lifted, the abdominal muscles will be fairly sticking to your back bone. Let the shoulders have an easy pose. Swing your arms, don't walk in a huddle. Some girls look as if they were trying to crawl up into their coat collars, humping shoulders and throwing the arms forward, thus contracting the chest.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Soldier Guest

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I have a very difficult problem facing me, and since I value very highly your fine advice to others, I am turning to your for help.

Mother and I live together since my husband died, and we have a friend, a young man of my age, who has been such a close and helpful friend for several years that we regard him really as a member of our family.

This young man has been in the Army ever since the War started. He has written me that he has asked for a furlough so that he may come to visit Mother and me. He will stay at our home, of course, and we want his visit to be as perfect a one as possible.

Mother and I are completely uninformed about entertaining Service Men, and do not know what to do or how to do it. I do want to do the right thing, and not appear as green about everything as I really am. Do I, as his hostess, pay for anything and if so, what? Or is it proper for me to assume that he will buy the tickets for any entertainment, or pay the checks at night clubs?

What has me especially puzzled is that I hear so many girls talking about treating boys in the Service.

Virginia.

You and your mother have a grand start on giving this young Army man a wonderful time on his furlough. First, you have a fine ideal of friendship and hospitality, and second, you have a home in which you can make your guest happy and comfortable.

You didn't tell me about your entertainment-budget, but if it is fairly elastic, you can apportion it so that it will yield grand results. For example, whenever possible, make the tickets your "treat." And treating the Service men whenever possible is in the best of taste, gracious, generous. For instance, you can (and I am taking it for granted you are financially able to) buy the theatre tickets ahead of time, the number depending on your budget.

That leaves only the night club checks to pay. I suggest you go easy on this night-club visiting, for since his is his first visit to your city, he may be a bit dismayed by this expense. Give him a taste or two, and then let his budget conscience be his guide.

"Valjean" Returns

Clarence Arters, 53-year-old "Jean Valjean" who spent the past twenty years as a good Philadelphia citizen after escaping from an Iowa State prison farm, kisses his wife, Grace, goodby as he prepares to leave to finish his sentence. Arters waived extradition after a five-month battle to keep him from being returned. He walked away from the Iowa State prison farm at Madison in 1921 after serving 13 months of a one-to-five-year sentence for stealing an automobile. He returned to Philadelphia, his native city, settled down and was married two years later. He has six children.

"EAGLE SQUADRONS"

A grand holiday show is scheduled to open at the McCarthy Theatre on Monday following the special preview showing of the outstanding picture "Eagle Squadron" on Sunday Midnight.

Universal's gay comedy, "Lady in a Jam," starring Irene Dunne and with Patric Knowles, Ralph Bellamy, Eugene Pallette and Queenie Vassar heading the supporting cast, holds up the comedy end of the programe.

Miss Dunne plays the role of a delightfully irresponsible Manhattan heiress who goes bankrupt and travels West to Arizona to recoup her fortune working an abandoned gold mine.

Knowles is a sober psychiatrist striving to straighten the pleasant kinks out of the lovely lady's mind. Bellamy is a showoff cowboy quite as daffy in his way as Miss Dunne is in hers.

Gregory La Cava produced and directed "Lady in a Jam," a comedy much after the manner of his memorable "My Man Godfrey."

MAN WHO RETURNED TO LIFE

Tortured by the memory of his horror-haunted past . . . his brain reeled with phantoms of the woman they said he killed . . . the woman whose heart he broke . . . and the man about to hang for his "murder!" In a strange and powerfully exciting drama . . . this man whom the law declared "legally dead" returned from the "grave" . . . to save a man's life and break a woman's heart! Smoldering from the frightening primal urge to love . . . to possess . . . to kill . . . life caught up with him in a second's flash!

Widely acclaimed as drama that makes your breath come in quick fierce gasps . . . your hear pound with wild mad beats . . . Columbia's "The Man Who Returned to Life" looks after the thrills on this balanced programe, John Howard who was most recently seen in "Three Girls About Town," plays the leading role, while featured performers include Lucile Fairbanks, Marcella Martin and Ruth Ford.

Tonight is the last time to see the comedy - action programe consisting of "Blondie's Blessed Event" and "Missouri Outlaw."

AT THE CAPITOL

"EAST SIDE KIDS"

(First Belleville Showing)

Thrilling events in the underworld of a great city form the basis of "Mr. Wise Guy," the Monogram drama which comes to the Capitol Theatre Sunday midnight with the East Side Kids starred at the head of an exceptional cast.

In the story a pair of bandits hold up a store and kill the owner, and in making their getaway force an entirely innocent young man, brother of one the East Side Kids, to drive them from the scene in his car. While the murderers escape, their unwitting accomplice is arrested, convicted and sentenced to be hanged. This situation brings the Kids to the rescue of the wrongly accused man, and they become the center of an exciting series of events which culminate in an action-filled climax.

Important roles in the story are played by many well-known Hollywood players, including Billy Gilbert, Guinn Williams, Douglas Fowley, Joan Barclay, Warren Hymer, Ann Doran and Benny Rubin. Leo Gorcey heads the irrepressible East Side Kids, and other members of the youthful gang are Bobby Jordan, Huntz Hall, Gabriel Dell, "Sunshine" Sammy Morrison, Bobby Stone and David Gorcey.

"THE COWBODY AND THE LADY"

The high, wide and handsome adventures of a streamlined social registrite who causes considerable eyebrow-lifting in Washington's upper crust when she "middle-aisles it" with a roving cowboy from the western plains is both humorously and dramatically unfolded in Samuel Goldwyn's "The Cowboy and the Lady," co-starring Gary Cooper and Merle Oberon, which is scheduled for its initial showing at the Capitol Theatre Sunday midnight.

Supporting Cooper as the bronzed he-man from the sage-dotted hills and Miss Oberon as the madcap modern who takes her romance neat, is a hand-picked cast headed by Patsy Kelly, Walter Brennan, Mabel Todd and Fuzzy Knight. Miss Kelly, who is now trim and sylph-like as a result of her recent diet cure, is romantically paired with Walter Brennan, while Mabel Todd, blonde comedienne, is the "heart-interest" of Fuzzy Knight. In fact, it is these two honest-to-goodness romances which inspired the whirlwind courtship of Cooper and Miss Oberon and cause a sizeable dither in the scandal columns.

A special matinee will be held Monday Civic holiday at 2.15 p.m.

AT THE BELLE

"TAKE A LETTER DARLING"

Office romance is said to reach a new high in Paramount's latest turn about comedy, Mitchell Leisen's "Take a Letter Darling", co-starring Rosalind Russell and Fred MacMurray, now on the Belle Theatre screen. Reversing the usual procedure in this film, it is Miss Russell who dictates, MacMurray who crosses his legs and takes it.

As the successful business woman who tries, unsuccessfully to give love the business, the beautiful Rosalind Russell, head of a million-dollar advertising agency, hires MacMurray to placate jealous wives while she goes after their husband's accounts. It must be told, to MacMurray's credit, that he doesn't like the job. But, having acquired the quaint habit of eating, and reluctant to break himself of it, he swallows his pride and does as he's told.

The situation is made to order for hilarity and from all accounts "Take a Letter Darling" delivers the fun expected of it.

MacDonald Carey, erstwhile leading man to Gertrude Lawrence in "Lady In the Dark", appears as a tobacco magnate who hates women, but who succumbs to the lovely Rosalind's charms, just as her secretary does. With Robert Benchley in another funny characterization as Rosalind's silent partner, Constance Moore as the girl who makes Rosalind see green, and Cecil Kellaway as a genial drunk, "Take a Letter Darling" promises to be one of the gayest Hollywood offerings to come out of the west in recent months.

"Tulips Shall Grow" is the title of the latest of popular Madcap Molels screen novelties to be presented on the same program with the Belle News Digest and popular science in color. Today and Monday matinee the "Sea Raiders" chapter play will be exhibited.

Members Approve Annuity for Widow

Ottawa, Aug. 1 (CP)—The House of Commons Friday approved an annuity of $1,800 for the widow of the late Justice Minister Lapointe, after Hon. Grote Stirling, Conservative-Yale, and M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, had suggested a precedent was being created.

Mr. Coldwell said that if payments were to be made all the dependants of those who had performed valuable service to the state—not just a few—should have the same benefit.

There should be a social security plan applicable to all the people.

Sqdn.-Ldr. Chevrier Distinguished Self Overseas Many Times

Montreal, Aug. 1 — Squadron-Leader Jacques Chevier, of the R.C.A.F., has been killed on duty while carrying out a dangerous mission. He lost his life when his plane plunged into the St. Lawrence near Mont Joli. Air Commodore R. E. Little, officer commanding an aerial base in Eastern Canada, declared that the plane was on reconnaissance duty at the time of the accident.

Chevrier, a French - Canadian from St. Lambert, near Montreal, left for overseas in 1940 with the 110th Canadian Squadron, the first to cross the ocean to join the R.A.F. He took part in the Battle of Britain and distinguished himself also on many other occasions.

Returned to Canada, he was appointed Squadron - Leader charged with the defence of the eastern coasts, after having been attached to a training centre.

JOCKEY TURNBULL BOOTS HOME SEVEN WINNERS IN DAY

Just Missed Establishing a Record by Camera Finish in Eighth Race.

APPRENTICE RIDER

Salem, N.H., Aug. 1 (AP).—A 90-pound youngster, who learned part of his riding tricks from his Indian ancestors, is the newest sensation in United States riding circles.

Little William Jackson Turnbull—he's only five foot two inches tall—yesterday rode seven winners on a nine-race program at Rockingham Park and was foiled in his attempt to become the first rider to pilot eight in a single day by a camera decision in the seventh.

The apprentice, a native of Texline, Tex., but who now makes his home at Hot Springs, Ark., was out of the money in only the first race in which Career Girl finished fourth.

He came back on Rough Biscuit ($5.80) in the second and followed with Manipulate ($10 for $2), Ample Reward ($3.40); Lou O'Neill ($15.20) and Two Kick ($14.20) before being placed second on Mad Crusader behind Waddy in the seventh.

Turnbull then ran out his day's string on Valdina Joe ($4.20) and Siganar ($4.60).

Racing records show that it has been almost 12 years since a jockey in the United States had ridden seven winners in a single day, J. Sylvester making that many trips to the judges' stand at Ravenna Park, O., on Oct. 18, 1930. Sylvester had eight chances.

W. Thomas had all seven winners at Townsville, Australia, on July 29, 1929, and Albert Whittaker was up on all seven victors at Huntley, New Zealand on Feb. 19, 1910.

Cannifton

Cannifton — The Community Club card party was held at the Orange Hall, 5 tables playing. Visitors from Belleville were sincerely welcome. Mrs. Farquharson, Corbybille, donated all prizes. It is interesting to note that only once since last September 1941 have prizes came out of the Club funds, having all been donated by good friends of the boys serving overseas. Prizes were won by Ladies 1st, Mrs. Lywood, Alice Urch, Mrs. Thrasher, Gents 1st, Able Seaman Spence, Mr. Urch, Mrs. Dafoe. Lone hands Ken Sharpe. The draw on the ham donated by Mr. Lywood and Mrs. Spence, was won by Mr. Curlette, Corbyville. The Club is richer by 39 dollars from the draw which was drawn by Able Seaman Spence. Twenty-seven packages of cigarets were sent overseas.

Friends of G. C. Ross of Manning Pool, Toronto, learned he has now been poster to St. Thomas.

Mrs. Johnson and Jean of Tweed were overnight guests of Mrs. Peacock.

SYRACUSE CHIEFS DOWN LEAFS 13-2

Winners Boast of One of the Best Hurling Staffs in the Loop.

(By The Associated Press)

It's strange how some clubs in the International League have the same qualities of their major league operators.

For instance, Syracuse Chiefs. The majority of fans say the Chiefs have the best pitching staff in the league in Ewell Blackwell, Red Barrett, Nate Andrew and Tom Delacruz.

That is exactly what major league fans claim about Cincinnati Reds, who have a working agreement with Syracuse. Both the Red Legs and the Chiefs have a weak attack.

Last night proved an exception as the Chiefs came up with 14 hits and 13 runs to allow Delacruz to coast to his 12th victory. Delacruz scattered nine Toronto hit in notching a 13-2 triumph. Hank Sauer homered in the fifth inning with the bases loaded.

Rochester Red Wings split a doubleheader with Baltimore Orioles, winning the opener behind the four-hit pitching of Ira Hutchinson, 9-1, and dropping the nightcap, 8-6. Hutchinson's triumph was his 10th for the last place Wings. A great relief job by Pete Center on the aftermath for the Orioles. Center relieved starter Joe Krakauskas in the fourth and was touched for only one hit in the last 5 1-3 innings.

In the only other game, the Bears defeated Buffalo Bisons 5-2, behind the four-hit tossing of southpaw Tommy Byrne, his 13th victory. Hank Majeski led the offence with four hits.

Time Not Necessarily On Side of Allies

Aberystwyth, Wales, Aug. 1—(CP Cable) — Lord Davis yesterday said time is not necessarily on the side of the United Nations and warned, "We cannot afford to wait until we're ready to the last button before giving effective aid to our Russian allies.

"Surely," he told the Welsh National Memorial Association, "Our duty is to go all-out now, not next year, to relieve the strain upon our gallant and courageous ally and exert maximum pressure upon our common enemy.

"Let's remember," he added, "that in 1914 the Russian armies, although not fully prepared, came to our assistance when they invaded Germany and that the victory of the Marne was made possible by the defeat of Tannenburg. I plead for simultaneous, not haphazard, action for the achievement of our common victory."

To Visit Picton

The training ship "Magedoma" of the R.C.N.V.R. at Kingston, will arrive in Picton early Sunday morning and remain until Tuesday. The visitors will parade to Picton United Church, Sunday morning, and Monday night will be guests at the Navy League dance in the Armories.

Writer Allan McGibbon, R.C.N.V.R., has been transferred from Kingston headquarters to Esquimalt, B.C., He leaves for his new post on Saturday and is spending this week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. McGibbon, here.

Mr. C. H. J. Snider and party from Toronto, spent several days here with their sailing yacht "Kingarvie". While here they were guests of Philip Dodds. They left Thursday for Trenton, Belleville and Brighton, en route home.

Heavy shipments of canned goods are being made from Picton. On Tuesday, the freighter Beaverton loaded and left for the east. Today (Friday), the Lethbridge is taking on a cargo and another freighter will call Monday. Factories are rushing canned goods for shipment as soon as they are ready.

4 1-2 lb., Bass Landed

While fishing off Waupoos this week, Thomas Rowe of Toronto, landed a black bass weighing four and one-half pounds and measuring nineteen inches in length. This was near the spot where the 35-pound was taken a few days ago. Fishing is good in Smith's Bay, as well as in East and West Lakes.

Despite gasoline restrictions, many fine yachts and sailing craft are visiting here from both Canadian and United States ports, though the sailing craft are in the majority.

Personals

Rev. J. Cantrell is spending this week in Ottawa.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Daubney are enjoying a cruise through the Thousand Islands on his yacht the Blue Bird, this week.

Mrs. Etta Ostrom of New Westminster, B.C., is a guest of Mrs. J. W. Reid.

Miss Hettie Unger has returned from a holiday spent with Mrs. Albert Embury at their cottage at St. Ola.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Walden and Mrs. Wilfred Scott are spending a vacation in Mrs. Bryon Bongard's cottage at Cherry Valley.

Miss Jeanne Leavitt will return this week end after a vacation spent with her sister, Mrs. Mitchell and F/O. Mitchell Goderich.

Friendliness Shown

The friendliness shown by H.R.H. the Duke of Kent, while visiting an R.C.A.F. station overoverseas, is described in a letter from Pilot Officer Homer Walters, to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Walters here. H.R.H. paid a visit to the camp, and the officers, including P/O Walters were presented to the distinguished visitor by their commanding officer and enjoyed a friendly chat during which the Duke spoke of his visit to Canada. Later H.R.H. was entertained at tea in the Officers' Mess.

Pilot Officer Walters, a former school teacher in Prince Edward, will celebrate his 22nd birthday overseas on Saturday.

'Twi-Night' Doubleheaders May Help Major Club Owners But Pain in Neck to Yankees

Blow Five-Run Lead to the Browns but Chandler Evens the Count.

REDS TIGHTEN GRIP

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR
Associated Press Sports Writer

"Twi-night" doubleheaders, baseball's wartime contribution to the working man, may mean a boost at the boxoffice for most of the teams, but they're a pain in the neck to the New York Yankees.

Even when they win, which is most of the time, the champions of the world still are old fashioned enough to believe that doubleheaders are for Sundays and holidays and that night baseball is for the minor leagues.

But this unnatural distortion of the national pastime is particularly displeasng to the Yankees for the simple reason that they find themselves now and then on the short end of the scores.

In their own park, equipped with all the modern conveniences except a set of lights, the Yankees do about as they please. But in recent westward journeys, the champs have bumped into bargain bills that start before supper.

After they took the field at St. Louis yesterday to play the Browns in one game at 5 p.m. and a second at 8.30, they blew a five-run lead as the Browns handed them their third straight loss, 9-8, in the opener. They had to call on Spurgeon Chandler to put an end to such foolishness by blanking the Browns on three hits in the afterpiece, winning 8-0 and running his consecutive shutout innings to 25.

Two Players Help

Charlie Keller and Joe Gordon helped Chandler hang up his 12th win against two defeats. Keller walloped his 16th homer with a man on base in the second frame. Gordon added a two-run homer in the seventh.

In the opener, the Browns came from behind with a 17-hit attack which routed Hank Borowy and brought Johnny Murphy to the mound just in time to save Borowy's record of 10 victories and one defeat and absorb the loss himself, his fifth in a row.

A six-run rally in the sixth inning, in which George McQuinn homered with a man aboard and Mike Chartak clouted a four-bagger with two on base, put the Browns ahead to stay.

The Boston Red Sox cut the Yankees' American League lead to a dozen games by nipping the Detroit Tigers, 7-6, in an afternoon game and the Cleveland Indians dropped a full game behind the second-place Red Sox when they bowed to the Philadelphia Athletics, 6-4 in a night affair.

Gehringer Hit Homer

In the Boston - Detroit game Charley Gehringer hit a pinch home run with a mate on base for the losers and Ted Williams smacked his 23rd homer of the year for the Red Sox. Tony Lupien also hit a homer, for the winners.

Bob Johnson's three-run circuit smash provided what proved to be the winning runs for the Athletics.

Seven-hit pitching by Johnny Humphries carried the Chicago White Sox to a 7-2 triumph over the Washington Senators in another night contest, with Myril Hoag hitting a triple and double and Taft Wright a triple and single.

In the recent game played in the National League, the Cincinnati Reds tightened their grip on third place by bumping the Boston Braves, 5-2, on a three-hit pitching job by Gene Thompson.

SURVIVOR OF HOOD

London—(CP)—When Britain's battle-cruiser Hood blew up May 24, 1941, only three survivors were listed. Now it turns out there were four. Stoker J. C. R. Silk now charged with desertion said he drifted on a raft for three days, was picked up by a trawler and landed at Liverpool.

Whirlaway Looks Like a Cinch In Arlington

Chicago, Aug. 1 (CP)—This was the race in which Whirlaway expected to match noses at the finish with Alsab. But the game little Alsab was on the sidelines until Monday's opener at Washington Park and today's $25,000 handicap, closing event on a 36-day program at Arlington, was between the long-tailed Whirly and "eight other horses."

A total bankroll of $31,600 was in the offing, if all nine horses start. Whirlaway's all-time earnings of $454,336 had a chance to be swelled by additional $24,000 should Warren Wright's perennial champion come through today.

By admission of trainer Ben Jones, Whirlaway is in tip-top shape for the Arlington windup. But anxious to test this declaration were Rounders, which finished second to Whirly in the Massachusetts handicap; Sirocco, 1940 Arlington classic winner; Louis B. Mayer's Reading II, No Competition, Staretor, Pumpgun, Best Seller and Equitable.

Call up to provide the timing for Whirlaway's usual late rush to the front was Eddie Arcaro, who brought Shut Out home to win the Arlington classic last Saturday. Arcaro flew here from Saratoga Springs for today's assignment.

Whirlaway himself goes to Saratoga Springs tomorrow for a series of eastern engagements which may include the Whitney, the Wilson and the Saratoga Cup races. His handlers expect Whirly to boost his earnings to $500,000 in short order.

Urged to Stand By Agreement With NHL

Ottawa, Aug. 1. (CP)— Cecil Duncan, secretary of the Ottawa and District Hockey Association, said last night he had received a letter from Frank Sargent, President of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, urging C.A.H.A. branches to stand by an agreement with the National Hockey League which requires a reinstated professional to obtain N.H.L. permission before returning to amateur hockey.

Duncan said the National League has made representations to the O.A.H.A. special committee in this respect. If the agreement is adhered to, it would prevent any N.H.L. player now in the armed forces from playing with a civilian club without first obtaining permission from the professional club.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Aug. 1 (AP).—Connie Mack comes up with the idea that the major leagues will have to reduce their player limits next season "for the simple reason that there won't be enough players". . . . Connie figures that such a reduction, particularly in pitching staffs, will improve the game. . . . Pacific Coast League tried cutting the limit this year and about the only result was a phony "suspension" every time a player was hurt so another guy could be put on the active list. . . . Our idea is that enough minor leagues will fold up before next summer that there will still be a plentiful supply of players still out of the army but that the clubs will have to take a few that wouldn't ordinarily be major leaguers.

MANY ATHLETES SERVING UNDER CONNY SMYTHE

Men Have Given up Games for Guns to Protect West Coast.

REEVE IS HAPPY

By STUART UNDERHILL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere on the Canadian West Coast, Aug. 1 (CP).—Stars of Canada's athletic world who have given up games for guns now stand on guard on the west coast under one of the outstanding sports figures of them all—Maj. Conny Smythe, former manager of the Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League.

In their ranks is a man who chronicled many of their doings—Gnr. Ted Reeve, former sports columnist of the Toronto Telegram. Reeve claims that his experience as a sports writer has stood him in good stead as a soldier, particularly when he's on sentry duty.

"I learned to stay awake during wrestling matches, so now I can stay awake during just about anything," he said.

Maj. Smythe said his men are living within earshot of the pounding Pacific swells. Among those who were prominent in Ontario hockey, box lacrosse and softball circles prior to their enlistment are Bdr. Jack Williams of Mimico, and Gnrs. Archie Dixon, Jessie James, Doug Gillespie, and Nossy Attanasoff of Toronto.

There is also Bdr. Don MacKenzie, who formerly played for Toronto Argonauts, and Gnr. Clair Chenery and Capt. Jim Boeck, well-known golfers. Gnrs. Johnny Krycia and Gordie Gill were prominent in Toronto baseball circles and Sgt. Fred Brown and Gnr. "Spoke" Wychnenkatky were well-known athletes.

It's a democratic encampment. Most of the officers and men knew one another prior to the war, and many of those in the ranks gave up highly-paid jobs to join the army.

A cheery bunch, the unit is working hard and training constantly in defence tactics. Gnr. Reeve says he's found the perfect camouflage for himself and his companions after a spell of west coast rain—they just have to step off the boardwalk into the mud and nobody can see them.

Canada's Athletes at War

By SCOTT YOUNG
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Toronto, Aug. 1 (CP)—Lieut. Robert H. Talling now serving with the Royal Navy in the Suez Canal area was among the first of a group of Vancouver athletes who joined the R.C.N.V.R. in September, 1939. Bob was an ardent fisherman, hunter, skier, oarsman and for several years prior to going overseas in April, 1940, was on the famous three-quarter line of the Vancouver Rowing Club rugger team that included such stars as Steve Covernton, Tangye Moran and Rod Bell. All are serving in the Royal Canadian Navy now.

Friends of Roger McMahon of Montreal will be pleased to learn that he has been promoted major in the dental corps in England. Rog. was a well known golfer and a former hockey player with McGill and Knights of Columbus.

An Halifax correspondent writes in with news of some well known athletes in the services there. He mentions Al Korman, 24-year-old Toronto wrestler who joined the navy as a stoker and Lieut. Hugh Little of the Canadian (Active) Army. Little was a hockey and tennis star in the maritimes. Boston Bruins were interested in him at one time.

Bill (Regina Leader-Post) Good drops us a line with news of Moose Jaw athletes in the services. One he mentions is Orv McGowan, who held the Moose Jaw city golf championship last year. McGowan is training for air crew in the R.C.A.F.

Lindsay Guild, Shrome, Alta., lightheavyweight boxer, is a corporal with R.C.A.S.C. He is a boxing instructor at Aldershot.

Milt (Stratford Beacon Herald) Dunnell gives in a letter the names of some of the best-known Stratford athletes in the services. He mentions Bruce (Buzz) Given, who played on three O.B.A. championship baseball clubs in Stratford. Given is in the R.C.A.F. and his home is in Ailsa Craig; Chuck Males, a member of the Nationals, and last season's batting champion in the Intercountry Baseball Association, who is in the Ordnance Corps. Males played for London before coming to Stratford; Willard Snider (basketball and baseball), who is a member of the Royal Canadian Navy. His home is in Stratford. Lloyd (Dutch) Davey, a member of Stratford's O.R.F.U. intermediate champions in 1940, who is chasing subs aboard a corvette in the Royal Canadian Navy; and Hal Shade, a member of last year's Stratford Nationals, who is in the Navy. He played goal for Seaforth Beavers, winners of the O.H.A. intermediate title in '40-41.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SCOTT YOUNG

TORONTO, Aug. 1 — (CP) — Feuds between athletes and fans or sportswriters crop up once or twice a year in most Canadian cities. Sometimes the general public doesn't hear about an athlete-writer feud because it's usually over something that can be settled without fisticuffs or acid verbosity.

But the public has a ringside seat in the latest and hottest feud in these parts — one between the Toronto Star sports page and Bob Bowman, right-handed pitcher with Toronto Maple Leafs. It started when Bowman felt comment on one of his pitching jobs a few days ago was not up to the literary standard of other items in his scrapbook. He beefed, and the battle was on.

The Star replied with mild innuendo about Bowman's aspirations to become a sports page censor, but the more interesting angle of the feud is how it will turn out. Last time a professional athlete playing in Toronto fell afoul of the press, life became exceptionally bitter for him. Gordon Drillon was the unfortunate. He was benched in the Stanley Cup final with Detroit while the papers rang with statements that he wouldn't play for Leafs again.

It seemed for a while that he wouldn't, but he probably will. He changed his mind about going home to Moncton for keeps, and is to be seen almost any afternoon at St. Andrew's golf club here. Bowman's case isn't quite the same, because Drillon is a far better hockey player than Bowman is a pitcher. But unless the argument stops soon, the Toronto club will have to decide whether it will back Bowman against the papers, or otherwise. The decision probably will depend on how well Bowman pitches in the next few weeks.

Incidentally

Art Rice-Jones, goalkeeper for Calgary Stampeders for the last three seasons after 10 years of roaming the hockey world, has enlisted in the R.C.O.C. and surprise, surprise, he'll be posted to Edmonton, not Ottawa ... Rosy Ryan, former Giants and Dodgers pitcher, told Eddie (Winnipeg Free Press) Armstrong some background on the famous New York—Brooklyn series of 1934 after Bill Terry's famous crack: "Is Brooklyn still in the league?" ... as even the women and children know, Dodgers swept a series, did Giants out of the pennant ... Ryan's story: A week before the series manager Casey Stengel called his players together, told his four best pitchers they would be rested until the series with Giants and told all other regulars that if they wanted to take a few days off, they could ... he said he didn't care what happened for a week as long as everyone was fit and ready for the New York series ... the strategy worked. Giants lost the pennant, and one of the greatest stories in baseball's history had been made.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

By The Associated Press

Mike Chartak and George McQuinn, Browns, and Spud Chandler, Yankees:—

Chartak and McQuinn sparked winning rally with homers good for five runs in first game, and Chandler won three-hit shutout in second.

Bob Johnson, Athletics:—

His three-run homer provided margin of victory for Indians.

Tony Lupien, Red Sox—

Hit homer, double and single in triumph over Tigers.

Gene Thompson, Reds—

Stopped Braves on three hits, although he had to have help in ninth.

Johnny Humphries, White Sox—

Beat Senators on seven hits.

SAMMY ANGOTT LOSES DECISION TO RAY ROBINSON

Fans Want Harlem Hammer to Meet Cochrane for the Title.

COMES FROM BEHIND

By SID FEDER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Aug. 1 (AP)—Without taking a thing away from Sammy Angott and his "good old college try" at Ray Robinson, it occurs to us fans today that it's about time Freddie-the-Red Cochrane took his welterweight championship out of cold storage so Ray could at least get a shot at it.

Ray may not be the greatest fighter ever to come down the pike, but the Harlem hammer came from far back last night, after losing the first three rounds, to punch Angott around for a 10-round decision last night in the Garden—in spite of the best performance Sammy ever gave in these parts. And with that victory, witnessed by 12,073, Ray has just about cleaned up the entire lightweight and welterweight divisions.

The win was his 33rd in a row as a professional, his 122nd straight in an unbeaten career including his amateir days.

He is slated to take a shot at Cochrane on Sept. 10, after disposing of Reuben Shank, the Denver performer, on Aug. 20. The only hitch there is that Freddie, now a sailor boy, will leave his welterweight title safely in port when he goes to the post.

No Room For Argument

And since Ray not only has swept up everything in sight under 147 pounds—he scaled 144 1-4 to Sammy's 139 3-4 last night—but has done it in a manner that leaves no room for argument, you figure it's about time Cochrane put his title on the line. After all, titles are won—and lost—in the ring, and the best man is supposed to be boss.

Red won the bauble from Fritzie Zivic exactly a year ago last Wednesday. One of Robinson's handlers said last night Red had turned down an offer for 60 per cent of the gate for a title brawl—in which case Robinson would fight for nothing—and wanted $50,000 on the barrelhead to defend the bit of bric-a-bric. When the welterweight crown can be traded in for that kind of sugar, you'll probably see Jimmy McLarnin and Mickey Walker running over each other trying for a comeback.

Seagram Gold Cup at Stake In Canadian Open

Toronto, Aug. 1.—The presentation of trophies for athletic symremacy goes back to caveman days and perhaps beyond. Early Grecian history tells us that Hercules was presented with a golden calf when he tossed Milo in one of the first wrestling matches. The custom has continued and there is probably no competition in the present day field of sports that does not have some memento to offer the victor.

Yachting has its famous American cup; tennis, the Davis cup—and many more, the winning of which has entailed almost unbelievable sums of money. The late Sir Thomas Lipton spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in fruitless efforts to win the American cup. The Stanley cup, emblematic of professional hockey championship, has attracted thousands of dollars from generous bank-rolls in an effort to possess it. As an ambassador of international goodwill the Stanley Cup has held a unique place in sporting annals for many years. Fifty dollars worth of battered old silver has played an important role in fostering the good neighbor policy with Uncle Sam.

The Canadian Open Golf championship will take place at Mississauga in Toronto next week and, in addition to the large cash prize, many famous golfers from both sides of the line will tee off for possession of the coveted Seagram Gold cup. This beautiful trophy was first offered for competition seven years ago, with each of its winners having received a miniature of the cup for permanent possession. So far, no Canadian has won the cup, although last year Bob Gray of Scarboro was nosed out by a whisker by Slamming Sammy Snead.

COOLING OUT A VERY HOT PITCHER

Deacon Bill McKechnie, Cincinnati Red manager, takes a sponge and water bucket to cool out this crack hurler Johnny Vandermeer, after the pitching star had completed a two-hit job against the Phillies. Only safe blows off the fireball tosser were a home run in the first inning and a single with two down in the ninth. Reds won the game 8-1, in the Phillies' home park.

DID YOU KNOW—With so much publicity being handed around regarding possibilities of negroes being given major league (don't you believe it) trials, tall stories of the mound prowess of one Satchel Paige, ace pitcher for the Kansas City (colored) Monarchs, are on the loose . . . Paige recently bested Dizzy Dean and his all-stars before 30,000 at Chicago and what's more Satchel has registered wins over teams with Bob Feller, Lefty Grove and other ace major leaguers pitching on more than one occasion . . . Satchel, so called because of his over-sized feet, is 34 years of age and has been pitching baseball for 18 years at least . . . Despite his advanced age Paige would be one of the first colored players accepted into organized ball, if such a thing ever came to pass. . . . No less a diamond personage than Joe Di Maggio claims that Paige, who thinks nothing of pitching two and three games a week, is one of the greatest pitchers he ever faced . . . Paige and his Kansas City Monarchs have won the "negro world series" for the past three years . . . A major league umpire claimed recently that he counted 41 spitballs the other night . . . Jimmy Foxx, of the Chicago Cubs, wears pitchers' shoes (reinforced toes) while playing first base. . . . Incidentally, Foxx in his lengthy baseball career has covered every position, even to pitching, with the exception, however, of second base. As one who knows, Foxx claims that Lefty Grove at his best was 30 per cent faster than Bob Feller. . . He made no comparison to Walter Johnson, whose better pitching days were over when Foxx hit the big time. . . The Santa Anita, California, racing plant has been stripped of 20,000 pounds of rubber, all of which was given into United States rubber salvage recently . . . . When Joe Gordon was thumbed out of a game on July 12th it marked the first time a Yankee player had been given the heave-to by umpires this season. . . George Pipgrass, a former Yankee now umpiring in the junior circuit, chased Gordon following a protest on Gordon's 12-inning attempt to steal home.

OLD JUPITER PLUVIS puts the damper on the second scheduled Army and Navy - Mountain View softball play-off last night with wet grounds and now Prexy Harry Knott's City League saw-offs are no further advanced than a week ago. Some of the league clubs raised objections as to the allotted play-off dates, but today it makes no difference to any concerned, except the league executive, which is faced with the problem of concluding the City League finals and declaring a winner for the O.A.S.A. playdowns prior to Aug. 22nd, at the very latest. Monday sees the Reliance and No. 5 ITS. "Flyers" in their first saw-off meeting, after the clubs had split even during the regular schedule. Over in Trenton the Simmons drug store "cowboys," with an exhibition game win over the Vets., are beginning to worry about the personnel of their club. Seems Jim Stacey, their ace moundsman, Barney, McColl, the Trenton Babe Ruth and Carl Austin, another Trenton star, are all eligible for military service, which has given the mushball heads in Harry Moore's town a bad case of the jitters.

Remember when Percy Williams was eliminated from the 100-metre dash in a semi-final at the Los Angeles Olympics Games ten years ago today. Eddie Tolan, United States negro, won the heat, equaling the Vancouver star's world record time of 10.3 seconds set in 1930. Williams finished a bad fourth.

Don't fight the umpires," is the advice of Johnny Evers, famous infielder of the first two decades of the present century, to the young players of the age. Evers, known in his playing days as the "Human Crab," was Cub second baseman of the famous Chicago double-play combination — Tinker - to - Evers-to-Chance, captain of the miracle Boston Brave world's champions of 1914, and manager of the Cubs and White Sox. "Fighting umpires doesn't play," Johnny continued, "I know, for I fought them plenty. I've made many mistakes in my life and fighting umpires is one of them." Evers now numbers Bill Klem and other umpires among his best friends. At present, he is superintendent of Albany's Bleecker Stadium, and still is up to the minute on all diamond happenings.

Frank Tunney that maestro of the wrestling business, called in today to say he was matching Jerry Monnahan and Billie Watson. "Monnahan contends he was really given the business by Jack Sharkey in Belleville and wants another shot at Billie with a Commission wrestling official," howled Tunney over the phone today.

"Fine, says we, but how about some prelims, that will satisfy "

"How about Martinex, the Mexican champ, and maybe Lou Plummer? queried Mister Tunney over the phone.

"Oh, Frank, but what's about this referee business?" we asked.

"Well," came back Tunney's phone reply, "I'll ask the Commission to send Dunlop to Belleville to try and tame Monnahan." and that ended a reverse charge call phone bill.

Old man rain stepped in and cancelled the second tile of the Bomber-Vets softball playoffs scheduled for last evening—the boys will resume their battle on Monday—And speaking of baseball, Van Mungo, ex-Brooklynite hurler now hurling for the Giants will face his old teammates Monday Toronto lost their second straight game to Syracuse last evening and are still lodged on the third slot. . . .We always thought rugby gridirons were hard enough but along comes the army and navy asking groundkeepers at Penn's field to toughen up the grounds for this Fall's classic. . . . And in the horseracing column the experts are figuring Whirlaway a 5-2 cinch in the Arlington handicap today.

Boo Hooey of the Ohio State Journal tells one about a feminine baseball fan who protested that his story of a game had credited the Columbus pitcher with too many strikeouts. . . . Bob looked up his score book and verified that Preacher Roe had whiffed 11 rival batsmen that particular night. . . . "Yes, he did," admitted the fan, "but at the same time he struck out twice himself. So doesn't two from 11 leave nine?" . . . Maybe she had something there.

A MAN'S WOMAN

by JANE DIXON

CHAPTER 23
PRALINES WITH MUSIC

Ronnie had been in New York a week. Such a week! Orchids, exotic foods, subtle music, perfumes and flowers. Strange cubby-holes. Sophisticated places. The motley of New York. All things to all people.

Monday morning. Kay picked up the telephone receiver on her desk. She called Ronnie's hotel. "A message for Mr. Ronald Farnsworth," she said. "Please don't disturb him. Take the message please—Miss Kay Kenyon will not keep the dinner engagement. She has an assignment from her office. She will be busy indefinitely."

Kay hung up the receiver. Ronnie would call back, of course. Around noon, when he felt up to starting over again. Such a Sunday. First, there was a hunt breakfast in a fashionable club. Then polo on Long Island. Dinner in a garden overlooking a bay, subdued lights, music to stir the sense. A smooth ride back from a country that was not country, but a fevered dream of a countryside.

City lights. City streets. Night spots. Doormen dressed like comic opera nabobs. The silken sound of money slipping into itching palms. "Yes, sir. This way, sir. Your table, sir." A few bottles for special guests. You'll find it excellent, and very rare these days. An extra bottle iced? Thank you sir."

Kay shook off the memory, too close to be a memory. The reality still throbbed in her head, ran a staccato course through her veins. There must be an end to carnival. This was the end.

Concentrate now, Kay ordered herself. There was a clean sheet of paper on her writing pad. The cabin in the cotton, the cotton field, Nu-Novelties can do them. But the little black people. Nu is not so good on character figurines. Their make-believe people are wooden. We'll have to find a firm that makes little people live. Ed Ellis might know.

Live. The word danced. It danced, and beside it another word took on the rhythm of the dance—MUSIC.

"Music," Kay murmured. "Of course. Music's the answer. The tunes of the South .. Old Folks at Home, My Old Kentucky Home, Susanna, Darling Nellie Gray, Old Black Joe, Carry Me Back to Old Virginny. A musical background. Not blatant. Not on the street. Inside the shops, soft music, far away music. Sweets to sweet music. The music everyone knows and loves. "A pound of pralines, please." Oh, Susanna, don't you cry for me. "Two pounds of pralines, please." "That's where the cotton, corn and sweet potatoes grow."

Kay did not wait for official channels. She went straight to the man who could blight an inspiration, or burgeon it.

"Mr. Burge," she said, breathlessly, "it just occurred to me, on the pralines, give them a background of music. Topical music."

Burge finished the letter he was reading. A matter of two seconds. To Kay it was that many centuries.

"What was it you wanted?" Burge's austerity would singe the wings of any except the soul so eager it was impervious to fire.

"Music," Kay said, too wrapt to beg pardon. "Music for the 'Louisiana Belles.' The songs of the South."

Burge cleared his throat so obviously that even Kay's enthusiasm felt the impact.

"You're not suggesting juke boxes, are you Miss Kenyon?" he asked. "You seem to have missed the metier of our trade. We're not a juke box product."

Kay bristled. Mr. Burge could be intolerable. How dared he demean her idea without a hearing? She hadn't thought of juke. She'd thought of music.

"I havent' considered the medium of music," she said, quashing an impulse to be stiff. "The medium should be left to the client. It might be a piano, an accordion, a twenty-piece orchestra. It might be a —juke-box. I've heard some very fine music come out of the nickle-in-the-slot machines. My idea was to synchronize three senses, sight, the plantation shown in the window; taste, the pralines; hearing, the music that ties the two together into a triology."

Burge removed his glasses, deposited them atop the papers on his desk. Kay remembered Ed Ellis's trip, "when he takes off his glasses, you've got him, cold turkey." Burge lit a cigarettes, another departure from routine.

"I'll consider your suggestion, Miss Kenyon," he said, shortly. "It's daring, to say the least. National is conservative. We don't go in for hair-raising. We like to think we're refined."

"I'm sure you are," Kay said, sweetening her temper with a smile. "That's why I felt you'd like music. Not any music, but real songs .. the songs that are in people's hearts, the songs that will be in hearts as long as there are souls left to sing them."

Burge put on his glasses so hastily they were askew.

"Very well. Miss Kenyon," he blustered. "Make a note of the music you have in mind and send it to my desk. It's radical, but .. we're living in a radical world. Anything can happen."

When Kay returned to her dask she found a slip: "Mr. Farnsworth called." She tore the slip into tiny pieces, dropped them into the wastebasket.

On Ronnie's third call, Kay knew she must do something more than sit tight. He was making a nuisance of himself. He could carry on indefinitely. There was no law against calling a person as often as one pleased. She would have to be a law unto herself, and make Ronnie understand that law.

She said, into the mouthpiece, "Hello. This is Miss Kenyon."

"Hello Red." Ronnie was untouched by her chill. "Where you been? Siberia?"

"No, I've been busy. I left a message for you. Did you receive it?"

"Oh, that! No reada da Inglish. Don't tell me Clark Gable's in town. I warned that guy to keep off the lot."

"Very funny," Kay said, flatly. "But not to me. I'm busy, Ron. I'm not dining. I'm coming back to the office this evening to finish a prospectus. Ever hear of a prospectus?"

"No, can't say I have. But I know an octopus or two. Jolly fellows. Did I understand you to say you're coming back to your office? Coming back from where?"

"From a bowl of soup at the corner drug store."

"Swell. Make it two bowls of soup and I'll share 'em with you. Only I have a better plan. Ever been to Chinatown? No? Look out a window, on the downtown side. You'll see a cloud of chop suey floating over the housetops. I promised my friend Ching Wung I'd be down this evening and see what could be done about it. You've got to help me out, Red. Ching Wung velly fine China boy. Ally."

"Ronnie, please. Can't you understand?"

"Maybe I don't want to understand. "This was not banter. This was a man. "Maybe I'm not convinced you understand .. yourself."

"But Ronnie."

"But maybe I'll wake up tomorrow, or the next day, or the next. Maybe you'll wake up and find—" Ronnie switched the banter again. "What will you find? Oh, yes, you'll find me waiting at the stage door of the National Candy theatre at 6 o'clock, or do you prefer an earlier hour?"

Something in Ronnie's mood, in his voice, tugged at Kay's heart. He had need for her. A hunger.

"The main entrance, on Lafayette Street, at six o'clock," she said. "On hour. I must be back at seven."

CHAPTER 24
LONG DISTANCE

Chinatown was fun.

Ronnie knew a place that was authentic as the Orient could be in a western world. Joy Garden. And no garden at all. Up a flight of steps into a cramped room with the pungent smell of food cooking over charcoal and a low murmur of what seemed to be monosyllables strung together without pause or period.

Slant-eyed men with parchment faces—pale, dark and medium parchment, wielded chop sticks as dexterously as a featured juggler plys his art. No slant-eyed women to keep their lords company. Didn't Chinese women dine out? Apparently not.

Kay ate quantities of strange and savory dishes. She tasted rice wine. Tea, in the thick little cups had a special flavor. A delicious stimulating tang.

"Thanks for the trip," Kay said. She had insisted on walking back to National. "I feel like a stuffed goose, only stuffier. I like China. We'll be landing in a minute. Work seems pretty prosaic after that glimpse into the far away."

"Why not cut and run?" Ronnie urged. "I know some other foreign parts. Just stay aboard and we'll up anchor."

"Can't do it," Kay said. She must steel her will against Ronnie's plea. "The gangplanks down and I have a date with an illustrator from the art department. He's going to make pictures of little bees that have been buzzing around in my bonnet. At least I hope they're bees. They may turn out to be butterflies—even bats."

Ronnie reluctantly said, "good night" and watched Kay enter the building.

When she returned to her hotel shortly before eleven that night she was completely done in. It had been a long difficult day, exhausting mind and body. Strange how work takes so much heavier toll of energy than does play. How often she had danced at college hops, at the Country Club until two, three, even four o'clock in the morning . . . danced the night through. Danced until dawn. Without feeling in the least tired. Wishing the party might go on and on.

Gay irresponsibility, that was the answer. When one accepts responsibility for the conduct of living, one automatically becomes a burden bearer. Burdens become wearisome, even to the stoutest heart.

Kay asked herself, "would I go back to the old nonchalance, the careless acceptance of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness as an inalienable right to which I was born?"

Kay knew she would not go back if she could. Even with the burdens it imposed. Responsibility enriched, endlessly, the design for living. This Kay, weary though she was and uncertain of tomorrow would not exchange places with that other Kay whose sole purpose was the pursuit of pleasure.

"Long distance has been trying to get you, Miss Kenyon," the clerk at the desk told Kay. "The call came in after seven, so I didn't know where to reach you."

Kay's heart stood still, then raced wildly.

"Long distance! You have the number?"

Her mother. Who except mother would be calling her long distance. Mother would not permit herself the extravagance of such a call unless — sickness! An accident! Oh, God, don't let anything be wrong with mother. She's all I have. I shouldn't have left her. Never, never, never.

The clerk handed Kay a slip, "call long distance operator 617."

Kay called. "Somerset has been trying to reach you," the operator said. "Will you take the call please?"

Somerset! Then her first paralyzing fear was justified. Her mother! What if—if— she dared not think what might lie beyond the "if."

"Yes, yes. I'll take the call," she said, "and please hurry. It's so important. Will it take very long?"

"One minute, please." Then faintly. "Six one seven calling Somerset. Somerset, 617 calling."

Kay's hands were so numb with fright now she could scarcely hold the receiver. Hot waves, cold waves, engulfed her. One minute? One century?

She heard a distant, "Go ahead, New York." Then a deep resonance that thrilled her.

"Hello—hello, Kay. I didn't mean to disturb you at this hour. But now that I have . . ."

"Gary!" That stinging fear again. "What's wrong? Is it — mother?"

"Wrong?" Gary said. "Nothing's wrong, as far as I know. I saw your mother at noon today. Took her to lunch in your old success stand, the Sweet Shop. She was feeling topside when I delivered her at the Kenyon house around 1.30 this afternoon. Why? Has something happened?"

The fright in Kay's voice communicated itself to Gary.

"Thank God." Kay could breathe again. "No, Gary, nothing's happened, at least I don't know that it has. I've been working at the office tonight. Just came back to my hotel. I'm sort of tired, and edgy. When I heard there was a long distance call, and from Somerset, I guess I went overboard. Oh, Gary, you angel, for telling me mother is all right."

"I'm a pretty poor excuse for an angel, calling you in the middle of the night and scaring you silly. If I had the sense of a gnat I'd know you're first thought would be of your mother. What does a girl as sweet as you do with a dub as dumb as I?"

"She crosses her fingers and hopes he'll change his mind . . . about her being sweet."

"Not a chance. . . . I mean of the dub changing his mind. In fact he called you up to hear the sound of your voice and to complain about his lonely state now that you've gone city folks. How do you like the Big Town, lady?"

"Well, enough . . . it's a little lonely . . ."

"What, New York? Millions of people, millions of things to do . . . millions of everything."

"Yes, but not for a stranger."

"No, I suppose not. Come to think of it, I could be lonesome there myself nowadays . . . if you were somewhere else."

"Gary . . . you mean you do miss me "

A pause and then, "What do you think, lovely lady? I'll be hopping off at Grand Central Station in a couple of weeks. Then, if you'll let me, 'I'll tell you about it. Until then . . . Kay."

"Good night, Gary. Until then."

Leaving her room for the office in the morning Kay was stopped by the telephone. Ronnie. He was imperative.

"You've got to help me out, Red. I collided with a couple of college pals in the Yale Club last night. They got the notion they have to show me the new high spots. They're bringing their dates and they insisted on fixing me up blind. I said nix; I've been off campus for years. I told 'em I'd bring my own and show 'em what a belle really looks like. They think all we grow in Somerset are buttercups and daisies. So you see pal, I've got to make good."

"But Ronnie, I can't possibly." Kay was firm. "I'm working until seven."

"Then I'll pick you up at nine. Come on Kay; be a sister to me."

"You know my rule. In my hotel by midnight."

"Sure. I'll have you there if it breaks my heart—and my neck too. You'll come? Honestly, I need you. And I'll be so proud you won't mind putting up with your prize pest."

The moment she hung up the receiver Kay was sorry she had listened to Ronnie's wheedling.

WHEN BOMBERS GOT AUSIE TRANSPORT AT PORT MORESBY

For two days Japanese bombers hammered at Port Moresby in New Guinea and this is what they accomplished. An Australian transport hit by bombs drifted onto a reef where it is shown afire. A small rescue launch is seeking survivors in the foreground. The lifeboat hanging from the ship's side was damaged by an oil explosion before it could be launched.

KEEPING THEIR EYE IN JUST IN CASE

Pilots of the United States ferry command sharpen their sighting eyes with some pistol shooting between flights somewhere in the British Isles. LEFT to RIGHT are, Capt. Clyde Pangborn, famous ocean flier, of Wenatchee, Wash.; Capt. Robert Pilsbury of Vancouver, British Columbia; and Capt. John Lambert of New York city. The ferry command flies a daily mail service between the U.S. and England, delivers bombers to the battlefields of Europe and carries key men to important Allied Nations' conferences.

Definite Need For More Women To be Trained

With each succeeding call-up of Canada's manpower taking thousands of industrial and other workers from their regular jobs and absorbing them in the armed forces, Canadian women are being asked to assume greater responsibilities as they take over production jobs on the industrial front.

And Canadian women have shown their ability to assume these wartime jobs and have won unlimited praise from production officials by the manner in which they have responded to the call. But first these women must be trained for the jobs they will so efficiently handle when they enter factories to turn out the goods needed on the front lines.

The Dominion-Provincial War Training Program in 33 centres has trained over 60,000 men and women for wartime jobs, while in the local classes held at the Belleville Collegiate under the direction of Instructor H. H. Howard over 1,000 persons have been trained in machine shop practice, in motor mechanics and in welding.

The demand for women to take places in industry, however, is ever becoming greater and a campaign to induce additional women to take training in machine shop practice at the Belleville school is now under way. Fourteen girls and married women are now taking instruction at the Collegiate in machine shop practice, fitting and assembling but there is a definite need for more women to be trained for local and district requirements.

Prices Unchanged, Supplies Steady

Toronto, Aug. 1—Prices in eggs were unchanged on the Toronto open produce market Friday, but all this week until yesterday prices on top-grade eggs have been going up due to the light supplies on the market. Wholesale and retail prices reacted accordingly. Grade A medium have been in good demand. Out of town movement was fair, but not quite so brisk as in the previous week. Small shipments went forward to Eastern points and Newfoundland. One car of grade A large and A medium was offered from the Western Provinces at 34 1-2 cents a dozen for grade A large, and 33½ cents for grade A medium, but buyers showed no interest in these prices.

The butter market was steady to firm with only a few sales reported. Buyers appeared to have sufficient supplies for the holiday and not much trading was done. Ontario No. 1 creamery solids were reported sold at the previous price of 34 cents a pound.

The cheese market continued dull with only the odd sales reported. The current white make was offered at 20 cents a pound.

The dressed poultry market continued steady with quotations unchanged. Spring chickens arrived in good volume, with more heavy birds (5 ls. and over) cdearing well under local demand. Supplies of broilers are plentiful, for which there is a fairly good demand. Generally the demand for poultry was fairly good, with summer resort trading showing an increase, and local demand slightly better.

Montreal Produce

Montreal, Aug., 1 (CP)—Produce prices here Friday as reported by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, follow:

Eggs: Graded shipments selling A-large 35½c to 36c; A-medium, 33c to 34½c; A-pullets, 29c to 30c; B, 28½c to 29c; C, 25 1-2c to 26c. Receipts, 1,414 cases.

Butter: First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 35½c to 36c; first grade solids, jobbing price, 35c to 35½c.

THE WAR TODAY

By De WITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

The amazing efficiency of the German military supply system, which permits of the blitz tempo in such far-reaching operations as the present great offensive deep in Russia, has brought me requests for an explanation of the Nazi secret.

Well, there really isn't much secret about it. First off, the thoroughness on which efficiency must be based is a racial characteristic of the Germans. Then the Prussians are a militaristic people who from the time they can walk are trained in the art of making war. Last but not least, barring the brief life of the republic after the last war, the Germans long have been under dictatorial rule, and it has been demonstrated that absolutism often can produce efficiency, because there's only one cook to spoil the broth.

Hitler spent years of intensive preparation for this war. He did little else from the time he came to power in 1933 until he lashed out at Poland in 1939. Every ounce of national effort was directed to this end. To illustrate:

My colleague, Alvin Steinkopf, who has just returned home from internment in Germany after many years in Europe as Associated Press correspondent, tells me that the Nazis showed him some of their army food reserves when the Polish campaign began. Colossal supplies had been amassed. In Berlin, for example, great halls and even half a dozen skating rinks were filled with wheat. There were similar sights throughout the Reich.

EVERY CAN FULL OF GAS

As to gasoline, Steinkopf was informed that every can in Germany was full, and there were instances of trains of tank-cars being held up for lack of storage facilities.

Examples of the meticulous care with which the Germans prepared every move would fill a library. For instance, not only were their troops given fiercely rigorous physical training to make them hard as nails for campaigning, but they even rehearsed difficult military operations which they were to undertake against the enemy. Thus fortifications in Czecho-Slovakia's Sudetenland served to represent the French Maginot line for Nazi storm troops to experiment on.

The supply system has been a marvel of perfection, though it has deteriorated because of lack of gasoline for highway and air transport. But at the beginning of the war it was as near perfect as things come.

The fuehrer has pursued the scheme of living off the invaded countries so far as possible. He has bled them white, and forced countless thousands to die of starvation.

But efficiency can't continually pull rabbits out of an empty hat. Hitler has been sowing dragon's teeth, and tomorrow armed men will spring up to destroy him.

Predicts Wide Use Of Powdered Eggs

Pittsburg, August 1.—Dried eggs in powdered form have been so successful that general use of the comparatively new product is expected, according to Harry Atkins of Davenport, Iowa, who came here to attend the annual convention of the American Poultry Association.

Mr. Atkins, who is secretary of the association and superintendent of the poultry department of the Iowa State Fair, said that plants for the drying of eggs are "springing up all over the country".

"Four new plants have been built in Iowa in the past year", he said. "The dried-egg plants are producing millions of pounds of powder which is being shipped to our allies. According to our reports, the dried eggs have proven very successful in England."

Mr. Atkins said the great advantage of dried eggs in the present war was that an ordinary fifty-two-pound case of eggs could be reduced so that it weighed less than eight pounds.

"The dried eggs have the same food and nutritional value of fresh eggs" he said. "In addition, they won't spoil and can be kept in their powdered form indefinitely".

Eggs are died in three forms, the poultry association official declared, saying these are with the yolk or whites separate or together.

"The powder from the whites of the eggs provides very fine icing for cakes", Mr. Atkins said. "In fact, that comes from personal experience and I believe housewives will find I'm right when the egg powder goes on the market on a nation-wide basis".

Mr. Atkins said the powdered form of eggs was such that it was possible to have scrambled eggs from them.

"Of course", he added, "you can't have them like 'sunny-side up'. But to offset this, think of how easy it is to carry around your eggs. You won't have to worry about dropping them".

3 Members of Family, Victims of Drowning, Buried at Woodlawn

Woodlawn, Ont., Aug. 1 (CP)—Funeral services were held at the tiny church cemetery of St. Thomas the Apostle in this village 26 miles west of Ottawa yesterday for three members of the Dolan family of nearby Dunrobin, who drowned last Tuesday in the Ottawa River near here.

Hundreds of Carleton County residents attended the service for Douglas Dolan, 22, and his sister, Ruth, 24, and Elsie, 14. Their parents are Mr. and Mrs. Allan Dolan of Dunrobin.

They were drowned during a swimming party at Sweeney's Bay when Elsie stepped off a ledge into deep water and her brother and sister followed in an attempt to save her.

CHICAGO RAIL CENTRE IS WORLD'S GREATEST

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 1.—This city is credited with being the world's greatest railway centre. It is served by twenty-one Class 1 railroads, including the Canadian National Railways, and fourteen switching and terminal companies which operate 8,000 miles of trackage in the Chicago terminal district. More than 3,000 passenger and freight trains enter or leave the city daily. Canadian rail interests have been established in Chicago for more than sixty years and every day fast freight and passenger trains of the Canadian National Railways move in and out in local and international service. The "International Limited", of the National System has been in continuous daily operation between Chicago, Toronto and Montreal for 42 years.

6-Barreled Mortar Used by Germans Found Damaged

Moscow, Aug. 1. (AP) — A six-barrelled German mortar was reported today to have made its debut on te Bryansk front.

The Soviet Information Bureau said one of these mortars, presumably intended to lay down a pattern of six mines where the standard would hurl but one at a time, was among damaged and destroyed Nazi equipment found by Red Army men after a four-day battle southwest of Moscow in which they killed about 300 Germans.

SAYS WAR PRISONERS REACH PARIS

Berlin, (from German broadcasts), Aug. 1—(AP)—A group of 300 French war prisoners, released from German prison camps, arrived in Paris yesterday and 200 other prisoners passed through the French metropolis on their way to unoccupied France, the Berlin radio reported today. One thousand French workers, men and women, were reported to have left Paris in the past several days to work in Germany.

FATALITY'S CAUSE IS EXPLAINED TO COMMONS

Accident at Pickering Plant Caused by Explosion of Loaded Defective Shell Casing, Being Buffed Down.

Ottawa, Aug. 1 (AP)—Munitions Minister Howe told the House of Commons on Friday that a fatality in a shell-filling plant at Pickering, Ont., last month was caused by explosion of a loaded, defective shell casing which was being buffed down to fit a breech gauge for a two-pounder gun.

Mr. Howe made his statement in compliance with a request made last Saturday by Conservative House Leader Hanson for replies to questions raised in newspaper editorials based upon the inquest verdict.

The Minister said the accident resulted from the presence of some defective shell casings received at the filling plant from a Montreal factory. It was an inspection slip but he said these were so rare that he did not believe the whole inspection service should be condemned.

With Canada carrying on a great explosives industry there had been only two fatalities in explosives plants; and in the first instance the victim, in a deathbed statement, said it was his own fault because he had broken a safety rule, Mr. Howe said.

Up to and including last June 8 the Montreal casing maker, Robert Mitchell Co., had delivered 1,555,000 casings and some 850,000 had been filled up to that date.

Breech Gauge Test

Many of these failed to pass the breech gauge test because of a slight over-thickness of one or two thousandths of an inch.

Some of the defective shells had been filled and it was a question whether to break them down or buff off the extra thickness.

Both processes were equally dangerous but the latter would result in complete salvage of the shell, the Minister said, and it was adopted.

Some 10,000 cases were successfully buffed down to size by use of a six-inch emery wheel.

On June 25 some 700 shell casings delivered prior to June 9 got into the filling assembly line by error and about 100 of these got filled before the error was discovered.

When these failed to pass the breech gauge test they were taken to the emery to be buffed down but a 12-inch shell had been installed and had not been tested for this work.

While being buffed on this wheel a shell exploded, killing one and seriously injuring three workers. A coroner's jury had recommended safer methods in Defence Industries Ltd., the government-owned plant where the explosion occurred.

Mr. Howe said there was no doubt the mishap was due to faulty inspection in the Montreal plant where the casings had been passed by an inexperienced inspector.

Inspection

Inspection was carried out in Canada by a staff of 15,000 men and women, working jointly for the Canadian and British governments. Mr. Howe said they had done 'splendid" work and had a high record of efficiency.

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F., House Leader, asked the Minister if recreation facilities were provided to discourage workers from visiting bars in their off hours.

Mr. Howe said he did not believe workers left the plants during their shifts in any large numbers. Cafeterias were usually provided on the premises.

Safety in explosives plants rested upon the care exercised by every individual and the knowledge of each worker of what he was doing.

With some 2,250,000 shells being produced every month the safety record was "most remarkable," he said.

138,000 Players To Cease Making 'Canned Music'

New York, July 31 (AP) — The manufacture of "canned music" by 138,000 union players ceases at midnight tonight by order of President James C. Petrillo of the American Federation of Musicians (A.F.L.)

On the eve of his ban on making recordings for radio and other public use—which he says comprises 95 per cent of the music heard in the United States and Canada—Petrillo broke a long silence last night to defend his action.

"Our order is not changed," he told newsmen in making public a letter to Chairman James Lawrence Fly of the Federal Communications Commission, who said he would look into the recording matter.

In explaining the recording ban, Petrillo charged in his letter to Fly that the Federal Government was "protecting" radio station advertising agencies and record makers in a "combination" against his union.

"In so far as I am personally concerned," he wrote, "and as long as I am president of the A.F.M., I shall encourage such action (the recording ban) on the canned music situation until such time as these people who are getting rich on our services while our people get no money, see fit to employ members of the American Federation of Musicians."

Petrillo told newsmen that 500,000 juke boxes in the United States and Canada had thrown about 8,000 musicians out of work and that several thousand more had no jobs because of 500 radio stations "which do not employ a single live musician."

Keeps Telescope Lined With Star

EDMONTON, July 31 — (CP) — August will see completion of a $2,500 building to house a 12 1-2-inch telescope weighing 700 pounds, constructed and donated to the University of Alberta by Cyril G. Wates, an official of the Edmonton city telephone department.

The building, being erected on the university campus is about 30 feet long and 18 feet wide. It will be a one-storey structure and will have a dome 16-feet in diameter, which will be covered with a flexible material made from wood fibre.

Made by Mr. Wates as a hobby, the telescope weighs nearly 700 pounds, exclusive of the supports. The main tube is about 10 feet long and has a reflector, or curved mirror, instead of the familiar lens, possessing a power at least 1,000 times as great as the naked eye.

It took Mr. Wates five years "and a lot of patience" to build the telescope. Materials cost him approximately $100 but a similar one made by a firm would be worth about $1,000, he said.

The telescope will be mounted on two pillars connected by a bar, Mr. Wates explained: "You set your telescope on the star you wish to observe and then let out a sort of clutch on the machine with starts a motor. This motor keeps the instrument set on the star which otherwise would soon be moved out of line by the rotation of the earth. The whole thing works much like the clutch of an automobile."

Much of the research work to be done with the telescope is expected to be on variable stars because, Mr. Wates said, 'work of this kind can't be done in large observatories because the large telescopes can't be spared and most of them are photographic."

Four Plead Guilty To Tire Charges

Toronto, July 31.—(CP) — Four Toronto men in police court here yesterday pleaded guilty to charges of accepting sale and delivery of tire casings from Earl Holmes or agent without a permit and were remanded to Aug. 17 for sentence.

They were E. G. Fesenden, A. W. Mitchell, A. F. Jarmen and J. A. McNeil. The four were charged under the department of Munitions and Supplies Act.

Crown counsel said he would proceed against Earl Holmes, of Toronto, on charges of selling and delivering casings without a permit.

The Experts Say . . . .

By MARGARET ECKER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, July 31—(CP)—Strategy for the wartime home front, drawn up by folk who should know:—

KITCHEN FATS: Laura Pepper of the Agriculture Department's consumer service says Canadian housewives can help beat Hitler with fats. . .Salvage edible fats for cooking and send the surplus to salvage depots so the glycerine can be extracted for use in high explosives. . .The consumer kitchen has proved that chicken and pork fats are excellent cooking agents. . .Don't use lamb fat for baking because it has a too-distinct flavor, but it's useful for meat dishes. . .Smoked pork fats are good for pastry in meat pies and sausage rolls. . .One cup of butter can be replaced by three-quarters of a cup of chicken fat clarified (double the amount of salt in the recipe), seven-eighths of a cup of beef fat clarified, or one-half cup of suet plus one-quarter cup of liquid.

QUALITY: Byrne Hope Sanders—"Mrs. Consumer" of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board—wants Canadian women to keep an eagle eye on the things they buy; not only on the price but also on the quality. . .If a dress remains at the same price but is reduced in quality the price ceiling has been broken just as if the price went up. . .The prices board is anxious to hear of any violations of the quality rule.

FLOUR: Apartment dwellers who have small storage space are finding the prices board regulations eliminating two-pound bags a bit of a headache. . . Flour is only to be sold in seven-pound parcels. . .The prices board recommends that neighbors co-operate and split one of the big bags among several families.

COTTON: Even the supply of cotton isn't unlimited in wartime and Cotton Administrator J. G. Dodd urges careful laundering to conserve garments now being used . . .Soaking cottons overnight loosens dirt, saves time and lessens wear. . .Cover garments with water and use a good, mild soap . . .After washing rinse well—As often as three times—with the last rinse in cool water. . .Squeeze dry. . .A small amount of starch will keep the material clean longer, and save washtub deterioration.

COOLNESS: Marion Harlow of the Pensions and Health Department's nutrition services gives these hints for eating to keep cool: For appetizers use celery carrots, thin slivers of green beans, turnips or parsnips which keep your temperature down and add to your mineral and vitamin quota . . .Jellied salads also are good summer foods. . .Remember that heat destroys Vitamin C, and heat only a small part of the tomato juice to dissolve the gelatin, then add the rest cold. . . The salad jellies quicker too.

TOOLS: More hints for making your kitchen utensils last longer, now that they're harder to replace under wartime manufacturing regulations: Never allow enamelware to boil dry don't pour cold water into a hot pan. Don't scrape pots with anything sharper than a wooden clothespin. . . Soapy water boiled in pans will loosen obstinate burns without cracking or chipping the surface . . .Dry iron cooking utensils carefully to avoid rust. . .Never scour tin utensils or the top thin coating of tin will wear off . . . After removing burned food by soaking, stand your pans in a warm place to remove all trace of moisture before putting them away.

Plan For Development New Secret Weapon And Training in Use

Washington, August 1—(AP)—A bill authorizing $974,634,000 worth of naval shore construction to keep pace with the great fleet expansion and providing for a new, secret weapon was passed by the senate and sent to the White House Thursday.

Hidden somewhere in the program, probably in a $60,000,000 appropriation for "fleet facilities," is the plan to use $30,000,000 for the development of the mysterious weapon and the training of men in its use. So closely guarded is the navy's secret that only the naval affairs committees of the house of representatives and Senate have heard about it.

REDS WITHDRAW TO POSITIONS IN SALSK AREA

Chinese Troops Encircle Linchuan, Aided by U.S. Raid

RAIDS PIN DOWN 27 P.C. OF GERMAN MANPOWER

Cossacks Battle Against Tanks, Fight in Trenches

2,000 Enemy Killed West of Stalingrad As Reds' Resistance Stoutly Stiffens

RED AIR FORCE ACTIVE

Moscow, August 4.—(AP)— A great weight of German tanks and reserve troops, actively supported by clouds of dive-bombers, pressed heavily on the entire Soviet southern front today, and a Russian communique acknowledged that Red Army forces had fallen back to new positions in the Salsk region 100 miles southeast of Rostov "after repulsing fierce enemy attacks".

(The Germans claimed they had capured the town of Voroshilovsk, 100 miles south of Salsk and had reached the Kuban River at several points in that Caucasus area.)

The Salsk withdrawal came after wild-riding Cossacks volunteering to try to stem the German drive, had ridden into battle in an effort to save their villages

West of Stalingrad, in the Kletskaya sector, the stiffening Russian troops threw back several attacks by Italian infantry supported by tanks and killed 2,000 enemy soldiers, the mid-day communique said. Red Star dispatches told of counter-attacks in that region in which the Germans had been driven from some of their strategic positions and cut off from communications.

An ominous note was sounded in a dispatch to the newspaper Izvestia which said that Germans 'in superior numbers' had broken through Russian lines and were attempting to cross the Don at Kletskaya, 80 miles northwest of Stalingrad.

Foil Nazi Attempts For Bridgeheads

All German attempts to establish bridgeheads were frustrated, however, the dispatch said. Russian units were reported to have moved around the flanks of the Germans and cut off their communications. The Russians now are attempting to wipe out the advanced German units before they can re-establish contact, the newspaper reported.

The Germans are striving to fly fuel and ammunition to the trapped units, but the Red air force is fighting off the supply plane, Izvestia said.

One scout unit cut in several places the main road over which the Germans were moving munitions and reserves, Red Star said.

Increased Resistance by Russians

In the Kushchevka fighting zone, the Germans were reported encountering increased resistance and the communique told how the enemy "several times attempted unsuccessfully to force crossings over the river."

"DID ME DIRT" GAMBLER SHOOTS 2 IN CARD GAME

Old - Fashioned Justice Revived in Broadway Killing

New York, Aug. 4—(AP)—Old-fashioned gamblers' justice — revenge with bullets for a double-cross in dollars—was the motive given by a Broadway bookmaker who admittedly slew two former associates as they sat playing cards.

Not since the notorious Arnold Rothstein paid with his life fourteen years ago, apparently for welching on a bet, has New York had such a vengeful killing as that which yesterday left Robert B. Greene, 40 and Morris (Dimples) Wolenski, 54, dead, and Max Fox, 48-year-old ex-convict, behind bars.

"They did me dirt," Fox was quoted by Assistant District Attorney Louis A. Pagnucco as saying in confession he was the masked gunman who shot the pair in a midtown bridge club Monday morning.

As Fox was booked on homicide charges, Pagnucco said the former bookmaker poured out a tale of how Greene and Wolenski had reduced him from a big-time bookie to a virtually destitute gambler with an office "in my hat."

It was on $350,000 of election wagers in the 1940 presidential campaign that Fox claimed Greene and Wolenski "double-crossed" him, their partner, by "hedging" bets without informing him and leaving him holding the bag.

Civilian Pilot Killed Near London

London, Ont., Aug. 4 —(CP)— Donald H. Jones, civilian pilot at No. 4 Air Observers' School here, was killed instantly this morning while three members of the Royal Canadian Air Force parachuted to safety when their Avro Anson bombing plane crashed on a farm near Kintore, about 18 miles northeast of London.

Names of the air force members, two navigators and a radio operator, were not available immediately.

Jones, member of a well known London industrial family, was a son of Norval G. Jones, with the firm of H. J. Jones and Sons Ltd., lithographers.

The office of Leavens Bros., operators of No. 4 School, said that cause of the crash had not been determined.

AMERICAN PILOTS MACHINE-GUN 2 JAP TRANSPORTS

550-Pound Bomb Lands Squarely on Jap Headquarters in Kiangsi Province

DOCKS SET AFIRE

Chungking, Aug. 4th —(AP)— While United States Army Air Force planes hurled 550-pound bombs into Linchuan (Fuchow), an important centre of Kiangsi Province, Chinese forces recaptured Huwan, 12 miles to the southeast, the Chinese High Command announced tonight.

Chinese dispatches said their troops had surrounded the Japanese base of Linchuan where one of the quarter-ton bombs exploded squarely on the invaders' army headquarters.

Heavy casualties were inflicted in the recauture of Human last night, the High Command said.

The Japanese entered Sungyang in Chekiang Province Sunday, the communique said. Sungyang was a Japanese objective of troops thrusting westward from Lishui.

The announcement of a direct hit on Japanese headquarters at Linchuan by a United States air bomb was made by Lt.-Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters.

The communique said American fighter pilots also had machine-gunned two Japanese transports on the Fu river.

Both demolition and incendiary bombs were used by the bombers.

The waterfront also was blasted and direct hits on two docks left several large fires burning, the communique said.

As the fighter-escorted American bombers made their run over the enemy base, returning pilots reported, they saw Chinese ground forces attacking the invaders.

Quarter-ton bombs struck Japanese barracks and 12 hits were counted on Japanese positions, the war bulletin reported. One of these was the direct hit on the headquarters.

An army spokesman said Chinese troops have encircled Linchuan and reached the city's west and south gates. These forces were handicapped by lack of heavy equipment for an assault on the town and the spokesman said yesterday's air raid was of great aid to them.

In North China, the spokesman said the Japanese were seizing wheat and other crops, kidnapping women and holding them for ransom of a specific number of bushels a head.

The Japanese sent some of their best airmen in another unsuccessful raid against Hengyang yesterday. The action was described officially as "favorable to the Americans."

Wartime Prosperity Hits B.C. District Through Boom of Road Construction

Herbert Jones, Canadian Press staff writer, has just returned from a tour of Northern British Columbia. In this story, one of a series, he describes how new construction on the Alaska highway has brought prosperity to northern districts.

By HERBERT JONES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Somewhere in the British Columbia Interior, Aug. 4—(CP)—A tornado of wartime prosperity is roaring across a section of British Columbia's interior.

The war has brought soldiers and construction workers by the thousands in a giddy whirl of ringing cash registers, quadrupled populations, a rush for supplies—a prosperity boom such as the area has never known.

There have been other booms in this rugged mountain country, like the land rush of the early 1900's when high-powered real estate men sold lots for $6,000 apiece. But old-timers will tell you there never has been anything to equal the present wave of business, with accommodation unavailable and cafes hard pressed to meet demands.

Sleepy railroads towns—some the product of another boom era—awoke one morning to find themselves re-living the hectic days of the past. Thousands of construction workers had moved in with tons of heavy equipment to put through roads here and build airports there. Then the army came. Row on row of soldiers' tents up overnight in hurriedly - cleared patches of forest land.

Demand far surpassed supply and transport became a major problem.

Dusty little 20-room hotels which hadn't had more than a half-dozen guests in months, are filled to capacity, with even a chair in the lobby at a premium as a sleeping place. Private homes rent out all available beds and even barns and garages are turned into sleeping quarters at some centres.

Commons Passes Bill to Allow U.S. Army Courts Try Criminal Cases Involving Own Men in Great Britain

London, Aug. 4 — (CP) — The House of Commons held a secret session of almost an hour today to hear a statement by Deputy Prime Minister Clement Attlee.

In later open session the House completed parliamentary action on a bill permitting United States army courts to handle criminal cases involving its own men in Britain, despite some protests.

The secret session was called without previous notice when Sir Stafford Cripps, Lord Privy Seal, announced that Mr. Attlee wished to make a statement which should be given in secret. Its nature was not suggested.

The House of Lords also held a short secret session.

In discussion of the United States Army Court Bill, Rear Admiral Tufton Beamish (Conservative Lewes), declared the measure was "astonishing" and that the American ambassador's letter to Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden requesting it "read like a polite ultimatum."

Samuel Silverman (Labor Nelson and Colne) asked: "Is this the kind of co-operation to which some people look after the war? Are all our affairs to be dictated from Washington?"

Other members asked whether British and American soldiers involved in the same offence would be tried in American or British courts.

Others, noting that the bill did not require jury trial, called it a constitutional innovation and counseled against the speedy passage requested by the Americans.

Capt. J. J. Craik Henderson (Conservative Northeast Leeds) alluded to Hollywood picturization of the "third degree" and inquired, "What would be the effect on a country girl asked to submit to interrogation by American authorities?"

The bill was passed quickly, however, after Home Secretary Herbert Morrison said American authorities had promised to deal out punishment "no less severe" than British courts, adding:

"We anticipate no friction between our authorities and the Americans, who have been exceedingly helpful and co-operative all the way through, and we are perfectly confident this will continue after the bill is passed."

50 Wild and Trained Animals In Ringling Menagerie Burned

Giraffes Break Loose and Are Shot by Police With Riot Guns

Cleveland, Aug. 4—(AP) — Fire today swept the menagerie tent of the Ringling Brothers circus, destroying at least fifty wild and trained animals.

Terrified animals were burned alive in their cages before the eyes of 5,000 persons at the circus grounds on Cleveland's lakefront.

Other animals, including an elephant and several giraffes, tore loose from their manacles. Police used riot guns to destroy the giraffes.

The death toll included:
Ten camels.
Three elephants.
Three giraffes.
Several lions, tigers and leopards.
Many smaller animals.

The entire menagerie tent was destroyed.

The crowd watched the catastrophe with helpless fascination.

Animals Run Aflame

Some of the animals raced at large, aflame. At one point when the fire was at its height, an ostrich with plumes blazing ran from the menagerie tent. The flames were patted out by circus employees and the bird was captured by trainers.

An eye-witness counted thirty carcasses lying amid the embers of the menagerie grounds and twenty others, their pelts charred, lying in their cages.

At that time the fire was under control, although straw in the tent still was smoldering. No official estimate of the damage was immediately available, but the loss was believed to amount to tens of thousands of dollars.

The blaze apparently started on top of one of the animal cages and spread quickly through the rest of the menagerie.

All available squads of police were called to the scene to handle the noon hour crowd of 5,000 persons which was drawn by the heavy smoke and billowing flames.

Eight camels tethered inside the tent were burned to death, and 10 other camels were led from the flames with their hair burned almost entirely from their backs.

A large elephant, terribly burned, was put out of pain by circus attendants, who fired eight revolver shots into the animal's brain.

Numerous monkeys, birds and dogs were among the other animals destroyed.

Gorilla Gargantua Unharmed

The gorilla gargantua, one of the main attractions of the "greatest show on earth," was not harmed.

There were scenes of indescribable animal agony. Lions, still alive, paced helplessly in their flaming cages, the hair burned off. A brace of Bengal tigers were similarly trapped.

A number of zebras created a near-panic among the thousands of spectators when they broke loose their halters and galloped onto the nearby New York Central railroad tracks before they were rounded up.

U. S. coast guardsmen, armed with rifles, and a city detective Lloyd Trunk, shot some of the agonized animals as quickly as the circus veterinary indicated their cases were hopeless

Girl performers in the circus joined men in beating down the flames and doing what they could to quiet the animals. Girls stepped into several of the bucket brigades formed by members of the circus own fire-fignting force.

It was the second major disaster to befall the Ringling Brothers, Barnum and Bailey circus in two years. Last season many of the show's elephants were poisoned.

Roosevelt Godfather Of Infant Son Of Duke of Kent

London, Aug. 4 (CP)—President Roosevelt had a Royal Prince named in part for him today.

The Prince is Michael George Charles Franklin, infant son of the Duke and Duchess of Kent.

Born July 4, the Prince, seventh in line for succession to the throne, is the first member of the Royal family ever to have on American godfather.

The Prince will be called Prince George of Kent. His father, also formerly called Prince George, cabled President Roosevelt a few hours after the baby was born asking him to stand as godfather. The President accepted. The Duke served as proxy for Mr. Roosevelt at the christening.

Other godparents were King Hakon of Norway, Queen Wilhelmina of The Netherlands, the Duke of Gloucester, the Crown Princess of Greece, Lady Patricia Ramsey and the Dowager Marchioness of Milford Haven.

TEA AND COFFEE RATIONING PLAN IN FULL FORCE

One Ounce of Tea, Four of Coffee Per Person Per Week Now Permitted

SALE OF TEA BAGS

Ottawa, Aug. 4.— (CP)— The Wartime Prices and Trade Board explained today how the rationing of tea and coffee works in the sale of tea bags, packages of tea containing fractions of an ounce and coffee concentrates and substitutes containing coffee.

The beverages are being rationed at the rate of one ounce of tea and of four ounces of coffee per person per week—but not both. Children under 12 years of age receive no ration. Rationing became effective on Monday.

The Board said that in selling tea bags, retailers will use the following coupon values: two coupons for a carton of 18 or 20 tea bags; four coupons for a carton of 40 or 45 tea bags; eight coupons for a carton of 80 tea bags; 10 coupons for a carton of 100 tea bags.

Retailers who have on hand packages of tea containing fractional ounces, such as 1 1-4, 1 1-2, 2 1-2 ounce packages, may ignore the fractional quantity so far as the coupons are concerned.

For example, a 1 1-4 or 1 1-2 ounce package may be sold on surrender of one coupon, a 2 1-2 ounce package on surrender of two coupons. However, if a customer buys a number of such packages, the nearest coupon value must be surrendered; such as, five coupons for four 1 1-4 ounce packages.

To buy coffee concentrates or substitutes containing coffee purchasers will surrender one coupon for a quantity of the concentrate or

RAF-RCAF Bomb Raids, Produce Critical Situation in German Ports

TIE UP 6 MILLION MEN

London, Aug. 4 —(CP Cable)— R.A.F.-R.C.A.F. bombing raids have produced a critical situation in Hamburg and other north German ports and pinned down in defence work 27 per cent of the potential manpower available for the Nazi armed forces and war industries, Reuters correspondent on the German frontier reported today.

He wrote that the potential manpower available for war industries and armed services was estimated at 22,000,000 of which 6,000,000 were pinned down by the heavy raids.

He added that the poundings of Hamburg, Bremen, Luebeck, Rostock and other ports have caused a heavy shipping congestion.

Lost 19 Hong Kong Prisoners of War

Ottawa, Aug. 4. (CP)— The names of 19 Canadian prisoners of war at Hong Kong —two of them listed as wounded—were announced last night by the Canadian (Active) Army in its 121st overseas casualty list of the war.

The prisoners included 12 members of the Quebec Royal Rifles, four of the Winnipeg Grenadiers, two nursing sisters of the Royal Canadian Army Medical corps and one man listed under "force headquarters".

The names were understood to have been supplied by persons reaching Portuguese East Africa last week aboard a diplomatic exchange ship.

(After Hong Kong fell Christmas Day, the Japanese announced the capture of 1,689 Canadian troops. On that basis, 296 of the original 1,985 officers and men who reached the Crown Colony were presumed to be missing or killed in action. A few are known to have died in custody since the surrender.)

ALLIED PLANES STRAFE POSITIONS IN KIKODA AREA

In Lae-Salamaua Sector Enemy Cargo Ship in Set Afire

SHIPPING QUESTION

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Aug. —(CP) — The Japanese have sent more ships down the New Guinea coast to the Papuan Peninsula, presumably with reinforcements for the Gona-Buna area, it was reported today.

The ships, which eluded allied bombers, were believed to have carried only a small number of men and supplies. The original force put ashore on the peninsula was estimated at between 1,500 and 2,500 troops.

When the Japanese made their first landing in the Gona - Buna sector on July 22 the invasion armada included two heavy cruisers, three destroyers and five transports, of which one transport was sunk add two others hit.

No Change At Kikoda

A headquarters communique said today that the situation remained unchanged at Kikoda, about halfway across Papua to the allied base at Port Moresby. Allied planes strafed positions held by the Japanese patrols in that sector yesterday, starting numerous fires.

Other allied planes raided the Lae-Salamaua area, some 150 miles above Buna, yesterday and hit an enemy cargo ship which the communique said later was beached and still burning today.

Trawler Escaped Attack

A separate headquarters announcement reported that a small British trawler escaped in an attack by a submarine, the first reported enemy submarine activity in the region since mid-June. Two of the trawler's crewmen were killed and four inured.

The submarine came to the surface off the eastern coast of Australia within point-blank range of the trawler. Members of the submarine's crew could be seen on the deck in the moonlight, smoking cigarets.

Seamen on the trawler tried to get into a lifeboat while the Captain of the vessel shouted the craft was unarmed, and on a fishing cruise.

The Japanese did not hear, or ignored the Captain. The trawler was shelled and machine-gun bullets spattered among men trying to shove off with the lifeboat. Two of the crew were killed, four wounded.

Although hit by 12 shells the trawler remained afloat. The submarine then submerged. In 15 minutes it came up again to fire a few more shells, then vanished.

Houre later another trawler arrived, and with a dinghy ferried the dead and wounded aboard.

Shipping Question

The shipping question was brought to the fore toay by the Melbourne Sun in an editorial which, charged "there is abundant evidence that inconnection with this important aspect of the war effort a state of affairs exists which would be liscreditable even in time of peace."

"Delays in dispatching ships, go-slow methods in handling cargo and wholesale pilfering are three evids which call for dractic remendial action," it added.

New Tea, Coffee Regulations Are Cause of Confusion on Street

Some confusion reigned along the main thoroughfares this morning as tealess housewives endeavored to purchase tea and coffee in conformance with then new WPTB regulations.

The new order states that tea is rationed to one ounce per person per week or four ounces of coffee. The lettered slips in sugar ration cards will be utilized for the rationing of these beverages until the official ration books have been issued.

Retailers at times were "stumped" as to what to do. The tea is packed in eight and sixteen ounce parcels while coffee is bagged or tinned in half-pound and one-pound con-

Some merchants refused to break a package Others demanded the full number of cards for either the 8 ounce of 16 ounce containers.

This however appears to be a situation which must be met until new regulations come into force.

Coming to the aid of the worried retail merchant is a new administrator's order requiring packers of tea to confine the net tea weights of all packaged tea-bags sold to the trade to 2 ounces, 4 ounces, 8 ounces and 16 ounces respectively.

For hotels, restaurants and industry, a special coupon similar to that used for sugar, will be issued.

Retailers who still have on hand packages containing fractional ounces (i.e., 1¼ oz., 2½ oz., etc.,) may ignore the fractional quantity when selling individual packages; i.e., a 1¼ oz. package may be sold on surrender of one coupon, a 2½ oz. package on surrender of two coupons; provided, however, that in the case of a customer buying a number of such packages the nearest coupon value must be surrendered; i.e., 5 coupons for four 1¼ oz. packages.

One coupon shall be surrendered for each quantity of coffee concentrate or substitute containing coffee sufficient to make 12 cups of beverage. Fractions of 12 cups may be ignored; i.e., a package of concentrate sufficient to make 100 cups of coffee may be sold on surrender of 8 coupons.

Mysterious Reptile With Cow's Head And Paws Like Man's Hands Hunted

Huntsville, Ont., Aug. 4—(CP)— A ten-hour search for a mysterious reptile, reported floating in Beaver Lake nearby Kearney, continued today, with Mayor Ralph Bice leading the searching party.

Residents reported seeing the creature at intervals for several years. They described it as having a cow's head and two front paws like the hands of a man.

Said Mayor Bice, leader of the Kearney expedition, "My first inclination was to shoot it, but now . . . I believe that the better judgment would be to leave it alone."

JUVENILES HELD FOR CAR THEFT

Provincial Police here left for Toronto today to recover a motor car reported taken from Frankford on Monday. The vehicle, which belongs to George Sine, of Frankford, was carrying Ontario licence plates number 600 M 4 when taken. Two teen-aged lads, one a Belleville youth who has broken parole from the Bowmanville Boys' Training School, are reported to have been found in possession of the vehicle when it was recovered in Toronto. Provincial Police will escort the boys back to Belleville for trial, Inspector Frank Gardner revealed today.

HILLIER FARMER HAS NOVEL ACCIDENT

Walter Campbell, Hillier farmer, was the victim of an unusual accident on Monday. He had hoisted himself to the peak of the barn in an improvised "bosum's chair" to put back into place a bolt in the mechanism of a stop-block. Swinging high in the air directly underneath the lock he was forced to strike it with a heavy hammer directly above his head.

His aim got a little faulty and he dealt himself a heavy blow on the head with the hammer, temporarily knocking himself "out."

He came to within a few seconds fortunate that the ropes of the "chair" had saved him from crashing to the barn floor.

YOUTH ATTACKED BY VICIOUS DOG

Attacked by a vicious dog, 16-year-old James Storey, of No 6 McAnnany St., sustained a badly lacerated hand that needed medical attention. Young Storey was proceeding along Water St. to his employment when the dog jumped at him and bit the lad's hand. The dogs teeth entered the palm of the hand. Later the canine was destroyed, Thos. Thorne, city dog pound custodian stated.

B.O. Lott Honored By Grand Lodge

Sixty-six years a member of the Masonic order, Mr. Byron O. Lott, Sidney Township, 86-year-old president of the West Hastings Liberal Association, was fittingly honored at the recent meetings of the Masonic Grand Lodge in Toronto, when before 1,200 members from all parts of United States and Canada he was presented with a jewel in token of his long membership.

With the exception of one other member present at Grand Lodge, Mr. Lott had the longest membership with the order and approximately sixty years ago was Worshipful Master of his district lodge at Stirling. The Grand Master of the Masonic Lodge presented Mr. Lott with the jewel in token of his long membership with the order.

Reserve Army Units Arrive Home From Camp

Tanned and looking very fit from their outdoor activities, members of the Reserve Army units of this district arrived home from the annual two-weeks military training at Connaught Ranges Military Camp near Ottawa, on Sunday night.

A large crowd of enthusiastic relatives and friends were on hand to greet the men of the 34th Battery, R.C.A.; the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) and companies of the 2nd Battalion, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment when they detrained near the Armouries from troop trains on the Pinnacle Street tracks shortly after six-thirty.

Upwards of six hundred men of the three units spent the last two weeks in training, and the general consensus of the men was that "it was swell." They enjoyed the change to the rigors of stiff military training; they stated the "food was good" and all in all had a good time.

Picton and Wellington companies of the H. and P .E. Regiment detrained here while other companies proceeded to the nearest point of embarkation.

The regiment was under the command of Lieut. Col. B. C. Donnan; the Argylls, Lieut. Col. A. B. Gribble and the 34th Battery, Lieut. Jack Andrews.

Police Commission Holds Meeting

At a special meeting of the Belleville Police Commission held at the Court House over the weekend it was decided by the Commission to advertise for application for a police constable to supplement the Belleville Police Department. Present were His Honor Judge C. A. Cameron and His Worship Mayor G. E. Thompson. The Commission also named Sergeant Arthur Harman to the post of Acting Chief Constable pro tem following the sudden death of Chief Kidd.

"No decision regarding the filling of the vacant posts of chief and sergeant on the department were approached during the meeting. However, Judge Cameron and myself were of the opinion that an additional constable should be employed as soon as possible and Acting Chief Harman was instructed to advertise for the same," revealed Mayor Thompson today as he added that Judge Cameron had since left on official government business that will keep him from the city for at least two weeks.

W.P.T.B. Suggests Care of Ration Cards

Since it may not be possible to replace lost or stolen sugar ration cards before the permanent cards are issued some weeks hence, all those holding them are cautioned by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board to regard them as exceedingly valuable documents and to take every precautions against them being mislaid or stolen.

The regional office of the Board points out that these cards constitute the sole legal means of householders obtaining supplies of sugar and that with the preparation of the permanent cards now well under way, their replacement becomes a matter of some difficulty. Indeed, there is every likelihood that the consumer who loses his temporary ration card may have to do without sugar until the permanent cards are issued early in September.

The Board suggests, therefore, that sugar cards be guarded as carefully as gasoline ration books or one's wallet, since the alternative may easily be several sugarless weeks.

IN CO-OPERATION WITH GOVERNMENT

San Francisco, Aug. 4 —(AP)— Control of the Columbia Broadcasting System's short-wave listening station, which has recorded hundreds of enemy news propaganda broadcasts since last December, has been transferred to the Federal Communications Commission, CBS announced. The station, one of two on the coast, has been working in close co-operation with government information agencies.

Obituary

MRS. DAVID KNOX
(Marmora)

Marmora (Special)—Her six sons officiated as bearers at the funeral of the late Mrs. David Knox which was held on Friday afternoon. With her sorrowing husband and five daughters also as principal mourners, the full family was present for the last tokens of respect for a beloved wife and mother. The service at her late residence on Hayes Street was conducted by Rev. Dr. W. P. Fletcher of St. Andrew's United Church, assisted by Rev. J. D. P. Knox of Belleville, a relative of the family. Mrs. Percy Gray and Mrs. L. R. Rundle sang "Safe in the Arms of Jesus." Interment took place in Marmora Protestant cemetery.

Out of town relatives present were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Dalgleish, and sons, Carl and Gordon and daughters Wanda and Ruth; Mr. and Mrs. Isaiah Boyd and Mr. and Mrs. R. Emmons and daughter Mary, Campbellford; Mrs. Earl Harper, Bracebridge; Mr. George Knox, Rochester; Mr. Wesley Knox, Consecon; Miss Annie Knox, Reg. N., Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. Clinton McComb and Mrs. W. J. Dalgleish, Campbellford.

LATE JAMES BRADY
(Marmora)

Marmora (Special) — A well-known and highly respected resident of Marmora passed away on Friday, July 31st. in the person of Mr. James Brady. Deceased, who was in his seventy-fifth year, was born in Marmora Township, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Brady and had resided all his life in this district. He worked at the carpenter trade and for many years was in the employ of the Deloro Smelting Refining Company until he retired about three years ago. He was of a very industrious nature, and his friendly disposition made him popular with his fellow workers and with all those with whom he came in contact.

Deceased was a devout member of Sacred Heart Church and an active member of the Holy Name Society. He is survived by his widow, formerly Rose Ann Auger, four sons and one daughter, Eugene, Marmora; John, Sudbury; Charles and Mary, at home, and Hugh, Marmora. The funeral was held at 9.30 on Monday morning to Sacred Heart Church, Marmora, where High Requiem Mass was sung by Rev. H. J. Farrell.

Pall bearers were: Daniel Murphy, Toronto; L. P. Hughes, Joseph Judge, Dan Shannon, Michael O'Connor and P. Murphy. Interment took place in Sacred Heart cemetery.

THOMAS HENRY KETCHESON
(Sidney)

Frankford (Special)—The funeral of the late Thomas Henry Ketcheson took place from his late residence the 5th Concession Sidney Township on Saturday afternoon, Aug. 1st, to Scott's United Church under the auspices of the Masonic Order.

The late Mr. Ketcheson who passed away at his home on Thursday, July 30th after a lengthy illness was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James H. Ketcheson. The deceased who was in his 82nd year was born in the home in which he passed away and had lived his entire life there. His wife Rachel Spear predeceased him about three years ago. Mr. Ketcheson who had been a farmer in this district all his life was a faithful member of Scott's United Church, Sidney, and fraternally a member of Franck Lodge A.F. & A.M., Frankford and the Keystone Chapter of Stirling. Services at the church were conducted by the pastor, Rev. L. W. Scott and at the graveside by the Masonic Order.

Left to mourn the loss of a loving father are one daughter, Mrs. Kenneth Paul (Edna) who resided with him, and six grandchildren Mrs. Harry Patrick (Dorothy), Frankford, and Mildred, Keitha, Clarence, George and Harry Paul at home.

The pallbearers were Messrs. Lorne Badgley, Sam Nicholson, Clefn Ketcheson, G. A. Lott, Earl Bonisteel and Geo. D. Wright. Interment was made in Frankford cemetery.

JAMES HART

James Hart, who died as the result of a motor accident on Sunday evening, was fifty-six years of age and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Hart. He was a hardware moulder by trade and worked at the Belleville-Sargent Company's plant for some years. Recently he was employed at No. 6 Repair Depot, R.C.A.F., Trenton.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Etta Archer; two daughters, Mrs. Daniel Bouder, Thurlow Township and Mrs. Alfred Leland, Toronto; four sons, William, Leslie and Arthur Landry and James Hart; one brother, Joseph Hart, Belleville.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

WILFRED HEBERT
(Formerly of Belleville)

Wilfred Hebert, a former resident of Belleville, died in hospital at Dauphin, Manitoba, on Monday, August 3rd., after a lengthy illness.

The late Mr. Hebert was born in Belleville fifty-five years ago and was a son of Mrs. Julia Hebert and the late Louis Hebert. After living here for some years he went to Western Canada and resided there for about thirty-seven years. Old friends here will regret to learn of his death. When residing here he was a member of St. Michael's Church. He was a veteran of the First Great War.

Mr. Hebert never married and is survived by his mother, Mrs. Julia Hebert, Belleville; four sisters, Mrs. Julia Shortts, Belleville; Mrs. Lena Hoare, Toronto; Mrs. Frank Markle, Toronto, and Mrs. John Diamond, Toronto; one brother, Mr. Louis Hebert, Belleville.

Interment will be made here and the funeral announcement will be made later.

FRANCIS P. CARNEY

Francis Patrick Carney, a former resident of Belleville, died in Hotel Dieu, Kingston, on Saturday morning, August 1st. He was in failing health for some time.

The late Mr. Carney, who was in his 83rd year, was born in Kingston, and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Michael Carney. When a young man he came to reside in Belleville and for twenty-three years he successfully conducted a shoe business from which he retired in 1923. For some years after retirement he continued to make his home in this city and five years ago he went to live in Kingston.

To many old friends in Belleville the death of Mr. Carney will bring much regret. He was a good citizen and during the many years he resided here he was held in high regard. In religion he was a faithful member of St. Michael's Church while residing here and in connection with the parish he was a member of the Holy Name Society, and he was also a leading and highly valued member of the Knights of Columbus, being a charter member of the Local Council, a Past Grand Knight and a fourth degree member of the Order.

Mr. Carney, never married and is survived by two nieces, Mrs. (Dr.) Wickham, California, and Mrs. M. Greenan, Calgary, Alberta; One nephew, Mr. Frank Carney, Toronto.

The funeral took place this Tuesday morning from the Corrigan and O'Brien Funeral Home, Moira Street, to St. Michael's Church where Requiem Mass was celebrated by the Rt. Rev. Monsignor Nicholson, V.G., who also said the committal prayers at the graveside in St James Cemtery.

The bearers were Messrs. William Lynch, Daniel Donoghue, Sr., Frank Barrett, B. J. Black, Hugh Reid and Peter Melchior.

GEORGE H. HADRELL
(Sidney)

There passed away on Thursday, July 30th, a life long resident of Sidney Township in the person of George Henry Hadrell in his 81st. year.

Born on the Front of Sidney the elder son of the late George and Mary Hadrell, the deceased later moved to a farm at Sidney Crossing on which he spent fifty years, on his retirement he resided for five years with his brother in Trenton and for the last two years with his nephew on 1st Concession of Sidney.

Mr. Hadrell is remembered as a quiet unassuming man, a loyal friend, a generous neighbour and a good citizen interested in community and world affairs until the last. He was a member of Aiken's United Church.

He had never married but is survived by a sister, Mrs. Lottie Jackson, Belleville; a brother, William, Trenton; a nephew, Clifton Rush, Sidney, and a niece Louise Rush, Toronto.

The funeral services were conducted on Sunday, August 2nd., at the home and at the grave in White's cemetery by Rev. James Flatt, Belleville. The bearers were: Messrs. William Hamilton, Bruce Hogle, Gerald Brickman, John Fletcher, Clayton Stickle and William Bonisteel.

LATE MRS. ELIZABETH A. RITCHIE

The funeral of Mrs. Elizabeth Anne Ritchie took place from the Martin Funeral Home on Saturday, August 1st. Service in the chapel and at the graveside at Belleville Cemetery was conducted by Rev. H. S. Graham, minister in charge of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

INFANT MOORE

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford T. Moore, 12 Grove Street, will regret to learn of the death of their infant daughter at Belleville General Hospital on Sunday, August 2nd.

The burial took place from the Martin Funeral Home this Tuesday afternoon to Belleville Cemetery.

JOHN WILLIAM DAY

John William Day, residence 27 Purdy Street, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Sunday morning, August 2nd. He was in failing health for several months.

The late Mr. Day was born at Brighthouse, Yorkshire, England, on August 16th., 1677, and was thus in his 66th. year. His parents were the late Mr. and Mrs. William Day. The greater part of his life was passed in Belleville and he was well known and highly respected by many friends and acquaintances to whom his death has brought much regret.

During the First Great War Mr. Day responded to the call of his country and enlisted in 1916 with the 155th Battalion. He went overseas and served until 1918 when he returned home. In religion he was a member of the Church of England and a parishioner of Christ Church. Fraternally he was a member of the Orange Order and a member of the Army and Navy Veterans' Association. For some years Mr. Day conducted a chicken hatchery business on an extensive scale.

Surviving him are his wife, Alice Maude Day, and one daughter, Mrs. Maude Holley, Belleville.

Resting at the Thomas C. Thompson Funeral Home, 38 Everett Street; the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

MRS. ELIZABETH SARA O'HARA MADOC

Mrs. Elizabeth Sara O'Hara, residence, Madoc Village, died in the Belleville General Hospital on on Sunday, August 2nd, after an illness of four weeks duration.

The late Mrs. O'Hara who was in her 79th year, was a resident of Madoc for many years, being highly esteemed in the community. In religion she was a member of St. Peter's Presbyterian Church, Madoc.

Surviving her are one daughter, Mrs. J. J Henderson and one son, Ernest O'Hara, both of Manitoba.

Resting at the Thomas C. Thompson Funeral Home, Everett Street; the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

INFANT MURRAY

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter W. Murray, North James Street, Thurlow Township, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Monday, August 3rd. Friends will regret to learn of their bereavement. The funeral took place this Tuesday afternoon from the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street.

MRS. CATHERINE SANDERSON
(Marmora)

Marmora —(Special)— Following an illness of several months duration, borne with Christian fortitude, Mrs. Catherine Sanderson, beloved wife of William A. Sanderson, passed away at her residence in Marmora about 7 a.m. on Monday at the age of 68. The late Mrs. Sanderson was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Dougald Brown (nee Flora Mackenzie) of Glenarm and came to Marmora as a bride after her marriage on July 9th., 1902. She became a faithful member of the former St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, attaching herself to the Sunday School as a teacher besides being a member of the choir, and also an energetic member of the Women's Association of the church. As the congregation merged with that of Marmora Methodist Church to form what later was to be known as St. Andrew's United Church, the late Mrs. Sanderson continued to serve the same departments of the church's work and enjoyed the high esteem of all co-workers. Kindly and sympathetic in manner she also left herself open to further inspiration and her many friends even took pleasure in discussions with her on the matters near to her heart. She was also a valued member of Marmora Women's Institute for many years.

Though living an industrious life, she found time until recent years, for one especial hobby — painting, and pictures in her home, the work of her own hands, evoked admiration from those who were her guests. Her passing will be widely mourned.

She is survived by her husband and three children, Dougald, Marmora; Magee, Winnipeg, and Flora, of Toronto. She is also survived by one sister, Miss Margaret Brown, Marmora, and one brother, John J. Brown, Glenarm.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday afternoon, service at her late residence being conducted by Rev. Dr. W. P. Fletcher at 2.30 followed by interment in Marmora Protestant Cemetery.

LATE EVANS MARACLE
(Shannonville)

The funeral of the late Evans Maracle, victim of a double drowning accident in the Bay of Quinte last week, was held from All Saints' Church of the Mohawk Reservation on Saturday afternoon with Rev. H. Pringle conducting the service assisted by Rev. C. P. Heaven and Rev. F. C. Beaser. Interment was made in All Saints' cemetery.

The bearers were Messrs. H. Maracle, S. Maracle, M. Maracle, Henry Maracle, R. R. Brant and F. Brant.

WOODEN WATER PIPES

Baltimore, Aug. 4 —(AP)— War priorities are forcing Baltimore to revert to use of wooden pipe, virtually a museum piece in recent decades. City Engineer George Cobb today said octagonal wooden pipes, constructed of small pieces of lumber joined together, would be used in new water system projects. They will be fastened together with wooden dowels.

2 WOMEN, CHILD KILLED IN PANIC OVER SMALL FIRE

Score of Persons Injured as Crowd at Amateur Show in Montreal Blocks Exit

FIRE SHORT-LIVED

Montreal, Aug. 4 —(CP)— Two women and a child were killed last night as a panic-stricken crowd attempted to escape from the Ontario Stadium when a fire broke out during an amateur show. A score of children, men and women, were injured as a pile-up of bodies blocked the exit from the stadium.

Dead are:

Mrs. Mathilda Cote, 65; Denise Wistaff, eight; and a young woman, still unidentified, about 25.

Mrs. Cote was crushed in a scramble for one of the exits following the cry of fire and was dead before she could be extracted from below the mob. The young Wistaff girl was caught in the same jam and died while being taken to hospital. The unidentified woman died soon after being admitted to hospital.

The fire itself was short-lived, and all that remained to indicate there had been a fire was a black smudge on the rear wall of the stadium.

Policeman Relieves Jam

At the sound of the tumult, three policemen stationed at the Montreal Royals ball park across the street, rushed to the rescue. Constable Laurent Lapre, a burly, 275-pound policeman, pushed into the crowd and succeeded in dislodging many of the persons.

Elisee Julien, owner of the stadium, said there were about 1,800 persons present last night, but all were seated.

"I guess some of them got too excited," he said. "They ran right past an open door on the west side of the stadium to jam into the north-end entrance."

Entertainers who were on the stage when the fire broke out, urged the crowd to control themselves, but by this time the panic was too wide-spread.

After the Montreal fire department had succeeded in dousing the flames, calm was soon restored to the stadium, and the crowd was sent home.

Canada Greets Her Majesty On Birthday

Ottawa, Aug. 4 —(CP)— Government House today made public a brief birthday greetings cable sent yesterday to Queen Elizabeth by the Earl of Athlone. The Queen was 42 years old today.

The cable read:—

On behalf of the people of Canada I have the honor to send our warmest greetings on the occasion of Your Majesty's birthday.

In these days of anxiety Your Majesty's constant interest in all phases of our war effort is a source of great inspiration to all of us and strengthens our determination to achieve victory. We trust that Your Majesty will find encouragement in the firm loyalty and deep effection of your subjects in Canada and throughout the Empire.

Harry Coulter Heads Field Crop Contest

Harry Coulter, Foxboro farmer, finished first in the Standing Field Crop competition for barley, sponsored by the Belleville Agricultural Society, according to results released today by Secretary Eric S. Denyes.

C. W. Buchanan, agricultural representative for Lennox and Addington County, Napanee, acted as judge in the competition. The results: 1, Harry Coulter, Foxboro, 87; 2, Lawrence Ketcheson, Foxboro, 82; 3, Fred Campbell, Foxboro, 76; 4, Clem H. Ketcheson, R.R. No. 2, Belleville, 70; 5, D. A. Thrasher, R.R. No. 2, Belleville, 67; 6, Herb Watt, Foxboro, 65.

Post-Holiday Police Court Is Rather Slim

Tuesday's post holiday police court in Belleville was as meagre as it possibly could have been, Magistrate J. L. Lloyd found out when Acting Chief Harman opened the proceedings and informed him that a lone inebriate was the sole person to appear before the court. Inability to pay the usual ten and costs resulted in the accused being given 14 days at hard labor.

Pleas of guilty were entered and fines paid in several cases where motorists had been found guilty of the violation of the city's one hour parking by-law in the downtown areas.

Three other men, charged with intoxication, paid their fines before court opened today, two having been apprehended in a McAnnany St. store late Saturday night when a large gallery of citizens gathered to watch the "pinch."

Why Not Try For The $64 One?

Why local anglers seek their finny beauties in far-off waters is a mystery to Don Evans, son of Acting Sergeant W. T. Evans and Mrs. Evans of Dufferin Ave. Don has proof that some of the best bass fishing reported this season was almost at his front door.

On Sunday Don took time off to go fishing over by the bay bridge and was rewarded for his angling efforts with the largest fish he had ever reeled in, a three pound large mouthed bass. But wait. Don's fishing luck had only commenced. Bitten with the bug that follows catching those battling elusive beauties, Don returned to his secret angling haunts on Monday morning.

You guessed it—he landed a five-pound six-ounce beauty, so can one blame Don Evans for wondering why local anglers leave Belleville waters seeking the gamest of fish, the bass?

AMERICAN PILOTS

Japs Lose 17 Craft at Least

In 36 hours of bitter aerial fighting last Thursday and Friday the Japanese hurled 119 planes against the American air outpost in Hunan Province, losing 17 of their craft and possibly four more.

Discussing the radical change which has come over the war in China since the American air force swung into action a month ago, a government spokesman declared today:—

"Before the American air force appeared, the Japanese could do great damage to us even with a small air force . . . now the situation is changing.

"Japan is getting a headache trying to solve the hitherto non-existent problem of protecting her airfields and strongholds which are widely scattered and great in number."

What Canada must demand of You . . . and why

CANADIANS realize this to be a war for survival that must be won the hard way. It should be as unthinkable for those at home to evade any part of what Canada needs of them, as for our fighting men to desert in face of the enemy. If you have doubt as to what your country needs of you in these critical times, the following facts should dispel it.

Canada must now spend about five times as much per year on war effort as at the peak of the war of 1914-18. This huge effort will absorb in the financial year of 1942-3 nearly 12 million dollars a day—over half the Nation's total income!

Canada must raise this money from her people. She must spread the burden over each according to his or her means. It is as critical a problem as any in history. How does it affect you?

Voluntary Savings MUST Grow

Necessarily severe taxes will provide just over six million dollars a day—only half the money needed! Because part of this money is returnable, with interest, after the war, every taxpayer is making a minimum wartime saving. Many people will have exemptions in the form of insurance premiums, payments on mortgages, pension funds, etc., offsetting the compulsory savings requirements. Whatever the case, compulsory savings cannot replace voluntary effort! The six million dollars a day still needed must be lent by people like you!

This means severe economy in which spending must be cut to bare necessities, with all spare dollars put into War Savings Stamps, Certificates and Bonds. The Government regulation of prices means that you are spared loss through inflated living costs and have more savings to lend. To lend is no longer a matter of sentiment or emotion, but of necessity.

Nevertheless, the harsh dictates of war can be used to help your future. Money spent now can bring you little benefit . . . a backlog of savings in peace will bring much. Canada is depending on you. Look up and take your rightful place!

Tea, Coffee Rationed

Tea, coffee and sugar which were the first articles to be placed on the honor rationing plan are now all three fully rationed. The placing of sugar on rations took place a month ago and coffee and tea have naturally followed for the conditions respecting their transportation and supplies are somewhat similar to those respecting sugar.

Now the people can use the A-B-C-D-E coupons on the top of their ration card issued when sugar was restricted. These emergency coupons are now to be used for the rationing of the beverages which went into effect on Monday.

One ounce of tea per week or four ounces of coffee for the same period is permitted but not both. It is expected that the ration will provide twelve and a half cups of either beverage each week.

The extension of the rationing system to tea and coffee is for the same purpose, conservation of the supplies on hand so that there may be no shortage.

With the honor system in vogue Canadians have had the opportunity to put themselves to the test of limiting their tea consumption to one half and their use of coffee to three quarters of their normal use.

The ration system naturally provides for an equitable division of the supplies of the beverages.

Tea is the beverage harder hit, because it comes from the East where Japanese aggression has so intensified the struggle and this has created a grave menace to shipping. Coffee comes from South America but the shorter distance is still over a hazardous route.

The people of Canada now begin to feel the pinch of war with tea, coffee and sugar on the rationed list and the restrictions on rubber and the rationing of gasoline and various limitations on manufactured goods. They have fared extremely well so far and will gladly accept the restraints put upon the purchase of the beverage articles and sugar.

China's Noble Record

The first nation to be attacked by an Axis aggressor and still fighting after more than ten years against Japan is China. She has been put to the test and has proved her greatness. It is more than ten years since China was attacked in Manchuria by the Nipponese and the ever-hungry Japanese five years later attacked China again.

China is united under one of the greatest figures the eastern world has produced, Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, leader of 450,000,000 Chinese who live on four million square miles of territory. Potentially and actually China therefore is one of the greatest and most powerful of the United Nations. China from the start saw a long war ahead and under her generalissimo, the people have made "Resistance and Reconstruction" their twin objectives.

During the five years of war she has not forgotten to build for peace. Exciting news has been that of colleges and factories which have been picked up and transplanted into Free China, of railroads built and highways blazed, of hand industry co-operatives springing up in numerous provinces and war orphans being cared for and trained to become useful citizens. These and other events are the result of China's conviction that she is fighting not only for the world that is but for a new and better world where security will rest.

In the Chinese struggle against militant Japan a number of facts are presented.

Eight hundred thousand Chinese guerillas carry on a ceaseless war behind the Japanese lines and make the life of the Japs very thorny. Her great capital city of wartime Chungking is said to be the worst bombed city in the world and it still lifts its head as the centre of Chinese authority.

China's great leader who bears a name as one of the truly great of this age is a master leader. Under him the Chinese man-power is mobilized and her men are trained by many thousands in the interior to become soldiers.

China is in a strategic position for the offensive which will materialize against Japan.

Doing good is the only certainly happy action of a man's life.—Sir Philip Sidney.

A VETERAN SPEAKS

My hair is somewhat thinner, but my eye can shoot as straight
As when we drove the Heinies out of France,
My feet are not as nimble, but I can still make the weight,
And all I ask is give me one more chance.

They say this army's mechanized and not so much parade;
So what? I'll keep on rolling 'til I'm hit.
I'm handy with machines although I've never learned a trade;
There never was a job that made me quit.

I'll soon get used to Tommy guns, I still can throw a bomb,
I'm not afraid to meet them hand-to-hand—
I've met their best at Vimy and I've met them on the Somme—
I'm writing this in hopes you'll understand
That while at home I do my bit, I'd like an

Along with those who undertake to serve
Unto the end to finish what we had no wish to start;
When I'm wanted you will find me in Reserve.

THEY'LL DO IT EVERY TIME —

The dawn came up like thunder,
The atmosphere was wild,
Our Papa dear had lost his keys,
His language wasn't mild.
The cat hid under the sofa,
The kids behind the door,
The pup came out of a slumber deep
And made for the upper floor.
Then suddenly there came a calm
(Now who would ever have thought it)
Poor Papa dear had found his keys,
Where he'd put them—in his pocket.

RATS HAUL

A soldier on night duty—at a time and place duly given—saw a rat convey a very fat bone up a steep bank and when he had reached the level lie on his back, holding the bone in his forepaws. One of his coadjutors at once gripped him by the tail and sledged him off to the home hole. I must confess that this last piece of evidence, shared by more than one observer, has finally broken down any tendency to incredulity concerning this most intelligent practice of the rat.

POTATOES

No doubt there are many readers who will insist that the best potatoes in the world are grown in Ireland and have always been. Perhaps there are even some who believe they originated there. Their first experimental cultivation was in Ireland, and it was also in Ireland that they were first grown extensively, the soil being particularly suitable for them except in wet and cold growing seasons. But the early Irish plantings were experimental and it was only after it was generally recognized that potatoes offered a protection against famine that the Royal Society took steps to promote the crop. One of its steps to do so was to plant large quantities of potatoes in Lancashire, which therefore has the honor of having first grown ordinary potatoes as a commercial venture. But even then and for many years thereafter the potato was not regarded as a land crop in the same sense as wheat or even oats. Though it did make its appearance on English tables it was viewed with suspicion and there were people who believed it to be responsible for leprosy and fevers

LETTUCE

For years I've been a gardener for peony and rose.
I've learned petunia's habits and where best the salvia grows.
But I turned to vegetables, as a patriotic man,
And I sowed a pack of lettuce when the present war began.

Down the years I've studied zinnias; I know their habits well,
I'm on friendly terms with fox glove and with Canterbury
Bell.
But this year I thought that turnips were a crop I ought to grow,
And of lettuce for a salad, I set out a double row.

The radishes were puny and the carrots not so much.
It's evident with parsnips I was wholly out of touch.
But the lettuce! Oh, the lettuce!
I have thirty times enough;
There are bales and bushel baskets, yes, and barrels of the stuff.

The corn seems rather sickly, the tomatoes dying out,
But the lettuce crop is something
I can really brag about.
And if lettuce is a weapon which can overthrow the Hun,
With the lettuce I am raising,
then the war's already won.

Niacin, B-Complex Vitamin Eases Neuralgia Pains

Not so long ago, when it was suggested that a very painful type of neuralgia in the face might be relieved by proper nutrition, the idea was ridiculed. However, so rapidly has the progress of nutrition gone forward that niacin, one of the B-complex vitamins, is now reported to be valuable in relieving neuralgia.

Of all the painful disorders neuralgia affecting a nerve in the face, is one of the most severe and discomforting. Just why this type of neuralgia develops is not known. It produces attacks of pain in the face. In many instances the attacks come on at frequent intervals, while in other cases they occur only at rare intervals.

In the opinions of Drs. William E. Adams and William Robinson of Leeds, England, not much is known about the blood supply of the nerves. The trigeminal nerve, however, has been shown to have a rich blood supply. These physicians think that if not sufficient blood is brought to the nerve for its normal requirements, disturbances of the nerve with pain may develop. In view of that they carried out an investigation to determine if this idea might not explain something about the occurrence of trigeminal neuralgia. Their idea was to first give drugs which constrict or contract blood vessels and cut down the blood supply to varlous tissues. Such drugs as epinephrine and amphetamine have this action. These physicians reasoned that if, after giving these drugs and producing pain, another drug which dilates or relaxes were given, and the pain cleared up, it could be presumed that the disturbance of the blood supply was the cause for the trigeminal neuralgia. The substance which they chose for relaxing the blood vessels was niacin.

A number of patients, including both men and women, ranging in age from thirty-nine to sixty-two years, were treated. In these persons the attacks had occurred over a period of one to six years. To relieve the attacks nacin was given twice daily in some cases, and four times daily in others. In every patient treated, improvement occurred and in some instances the improvement amounted to complete relief. Furthermore, the improvement has been maintained by continued use of the niacin.

Another drug which relaxes spasm is amyl nitrate. In two patients who were having an acute attack of trigeminal neuralgia with sever pain, the use of this drug brought relief within a few moments. Just as the niacin relieved the condition, in experiments it was found that epinephrine and amphetamine produced the attacks in some of the patients, possibly by raising the blood pressure. It was found that in one of the patients who was treated with niacin, the epinephrine produced an attack before the treatment with niacin but failed to do so after the niacin treatment.

ELECTION JUST FOR FUN

Emporia, Kas., Aug. 4 — (AP)— Voting for state representative in Lyon County's east side district today probably will be just for fun. Mrs. C. C. Skinner filed on the Democratic ticket and has no opponents. But it was discovered she's not a resident of the district. On the Republican ticket, James Putnam, also unopposed, was inducted into the army, too late to have his name removed from the ballot. He expects to withdraw.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

New York, Aug. 4—A month of observation and contemplation did not contribute to peace of mind, but induced the disposition to look at the sum rather than the details. If one suspends anxiety regarding incidents, realizing that misfortunes are inevitable, one cannot suspend anxiety regarding what appears to be the lack of a cohesive strategy.

Any realistic mind must have known that summer, 1942, would be bad. Hitler would be on the offensive and would advance. That, however, was not the question. The question was the adequacy of our behavior—on all fronts, military, diplomatic, and political.

Now, it seems to me that we have not been adequate on any of these fronts. The British and American people both feel it. One feels this in the talk about a second front. If this talk was designed as a war of nerves against the Axis, then it is richocheting against ourselves. Ordinary people are not military scientists. But the idea of an attack in the West to relieve the Russians having been put into their minds by their own authorities, has become the symbol of aggressive action. Their mood is offensive, and disappointment has a bad effect on morale.

We congratulate ourselves on our production, but are appalled to read that only one-eighth of it has been going to active theatres of war. There are reasons for this, but the ordinary man chooses leadership to accomplish the impossible, knowing that his enemies have been accomplishing the impossible.

One Active Front

Only one front has been really active this summer: The Russian. The setbacks there are understandable, the behavior adequate. Sevastopol fell—but it did not fall the way Tobruk fell. It fell at a tremendous price to the enemy.

And after thirteen months of Russian-German war the Russians are fighting practically alone. We do not minimize the fact that they got some armaments under great shipping difficulties. But while Hitler was actually pressing new armies out of hostile peoples, we could not set up an army, either in Africa or anywhere else, adequate to cause him real concern. Actually there is a second front—in Africa—but it has not given an adequate account of itself. The most that we can claim at the end of July is that the Nazis have not taken Alexandria. We cannot claim anything positive.

The same is true of the air front above Western Europe. It started in a promising way in late spring. It is not, however, accumulated but decreased. It is a menace for the Axis but no pressing danger. We are told it will be, and that time is running short for Hitler, who must accomplish the objectives of his eastern offensive by the middle of October.

Real Enemy in Air

But time is also running short for our air attacks on Western Germany. When winter halts air warfare in the East, we shall have a real enemy in the air. It is absolutely sure that Hitler will take revenge the moment he can dispose his air-fleet to do so.

The symptoms of fumbling and uncertainty are not only confined to the military front. They are present in diplomatic and political fields.

Instead of decisive actions, we take half-way measures. It is as though we were suspended in a Hamlet - like soliloquy with ourselves. Shall we recognise fighting France and de Gaulle? Shall we act against Finland? The material is there for a decision, but we circumvent it by partly recognizing de Gaulle and warning Finland, thus passing diplomatic initiative to Vichy and to Mannerheim and we find ourselves in a position where we argue instead of uttering judgment.

The same incertitude shows in our treatment of the Nazi agents. In the midst of the legal arguments, the people have just one impression: We've caught a bunch of Nazi spies and we don't know what to do with them. No matter how great the attempt to use the case as an example of exquisite justice, the people are right. With years of warning as to how the enemy would conduct this war through fifth columns, we have inadequate legislation and inadequate definitions to enable us to handle reality when it appears.

People Alarmed

Everybody knows the nature of the enemy Everybody knows that in Poland, Serbia, Holland, Norway, France and China men and women are summarily shot for distributing an underground paper or listening to our broadcasts. They know that hostages are massacred. And the spectacle of long drawn out and learned debates on the status of invaders from German submarines does not comfort the people: it fills them with fear.

And again on the political front: During the entire month of July we have been waiting for a decision of synthetic rubber production and for drastic measures against inflation. Day by day we have read articles and listened to broadcasts explaining both matters. Everything is clarified. The public is educated. What we need is decision

What is the condition for a decision. It is the courage of leadership to lead. It is the courage of people who are prepared if necessary to throw down their jobs and appeal to the country rather than endure this horse-dealing atmosphere between pressure groups that falsely calls itself democratic procedure. For these groups do not represent America nor even many of the people for whom they presume to deal.

What conclusions can one draw from these overall observations? Not that we are lacking strength; not that there is fumbling and defeatism amongst the masses of the people; not that we will lose this war—for in the end the people will be heard, and will force action, but that up to now our dealers are conducting this war below the level of challenge and the necessity.

A DEADLY DISEASE

Diphtheria killed more children in Britain last year than did German bombs.

The U. S. Public Health Service says this dreaded contagious disease can be virtually wiped out by intelligent co-operation by sanitary authorities, the general public and the medical profession.

The annual death rate from diphtheria in the United States, it is estimated, was 40 per 100,000 population in 1900; by 1936 the figure had fallen to 2.4.

In New York, one of the original registration states, the annual death rate from diphtheria fell from 15.9 per 100,000 population in 1921 to only 0.1 per 100,000 in 1940.

Diphtheria has been recognized as an acute and highly infectious disease since the days of the ancient Greeks, but the first complete clinical description of the disease was read before the French Academy of Medicine in 1821 by Pierre Bretonneau of Tours.

Bretonneau named the disease "La Diphtherite," from a Greek word meaning skin, leather or membrane and referring to the tough membrane formed on the parts affected.

It was called "diptheritis," in English until about 1857, when "diphtheria" began to be used.

Although dictionaries generally give "diff-THER-i-a" as the correct pronunciation, the term is almost universally pronounced "dipp-THER-i-a."

The prevalent curve for diphtheria begins to rise in August and does not decline until December.

Diphtheria antitoxin, prepared from bacilli grown in artificial cultures outside the human body, is a specific treatment for the disease. It is one of the triumphs of scientific medicine and has robbed diphtheria of much of its former terror.

Whether a child is immune or susceptible to diphtheria can be determined by the Schick test, and inoculation with toxin-antitoxin or toxoid makes susceptible persons immune to the disease.

The U.S. Public Health Service says that if it were possible to immunize all susceptible persons, or even to apply the antitoxin early enough in all cases that develop, the mortality from diphtheria would almost vanish.

Although many adults are susceptible to diphtheria, the disease is most likely to attack children under five or six years of age.

Control and prevention are made difficult by the fact that healthy adult "carriers" often start epidemics among children. The diphtheria bacilli, which poison the blood and injure the heart, nervous system and tissues, may live in the throat and nose of an immune adult, who is a danger to susceptible persons while in no danger himself.

Mussolini Makes Unheralded Speech

Berne, Switzerland, Aug. 4—(AP)—An unheralded speech by Mussolini to warn against "idle dreams" about a second front was disclosed today.

Mussolini flew to Gorizia, in northeastern Italy near the border of Slovenia, July 31 and made one of his balcony speeches from the staff headquarters there after conferences with officers on measures to keep order in the Italian-occupied area of Yugoslavia.

"The law in Italy will be applied in unrelenting manner against those who nourish idle dreams on this or that side of the frontier," dispatches to Switzerland quoted him as declaring.

"There will not be a second front here any more than elsewhere in the world.

"The Axis and the tri-partite powers have in their hands the means for victory."

BEQUEATHES BRONX CHEER

Portland, Ore., Aug. 4 — (AP)— The will of A. C. Forrester, Portland sanitary engineer who died last month, was admitted to probate yesterday. It included this bequest: "I give and bequeath unto the so-called sanitary engineering profession or professors a good healthy Bronx cheer."

TEA AND COFFEE

substitute sufficient to make 12 cups of the beverage. Fractions of 12 cups will be ignored. For instance, a package of concentrate sufficient to make 100 cups of coffee may be sold on surrender of eight coupons.

The Board also announced that orders given by merchants for the purchase of tea and coffee, placed or postmarked on or before Aug. 1, may be filled without surrender of ration coupons.

Canadians now get less tea and sugar than do the people of Britain, where the weekly ration basis per person is two ounces of tea and twelve ounces of sugar, against one and eight ounces, respectively, in Canada. Coffee is not rationed for Britons, who are light coffee-drinkers.

Use of Coupons

The board estimated the ration allotment of tea or coffee for each person would make about twelve and one-half cups a week, but the quantities used by each individual would vary that figure somewhat.

For the next five weeks the ration coupons to be used are the "A-B-C-D-E" coupons on the top of the temporary ration card issued July 1 when coupon rationing of sugar went into effect. The sugar ration tickets, numbered 1 to 5, are at the bottom of the card.

After Sept. 8, the board said, there will be permanent coupon ration books.

"Each one of the lettered coupons entitles the ration card holder to one ounce of tea or four ounces of coffee a week, but not both.

"All five ration coupons may be used immediately.

"Ration cards issued for children under 12 cannot be used for tea and coffee purchases."

Up to now tea and coffee rationing has been on the "honor system," with Canadians instructed to cut their tea consumption to one-half of normal and coffee consumption by one-quarter. The honor system was used for sugar rationing up to July 1, when the shift to coupons was made on an experimental basis.

At that time it was said the coupon plan would be extended to other commodities as the need arose.

The maximum quantity of tea which can be purchased on one ration card up to Sept 8 is 5 ounces, or 5-16th of a pound. Even three ration cards in a family will not permit the purchase of a one-pound package. Twenty ounces of coffee may be purchased on one card—a pound and a quarter.

Fair Share

"The rationing plan is designed to ensure all tea and coffee drinkers getting a fair share and at the same time, to guard against any failure of supply during the next several months, when it is expected further will be obtained from abroad.

"The limited supplies of tea on hand and restricted prospects of new shipments result from the fact that pre-Pearl Harbor sources of supply in the Netherlands East Indies and Malay are cut off by enemy occupation, while Ceylon and India, the major sources of supply, are in a theatre of war more than 8,000 hazardous miles from Canada.

"The difference in the rations of tea and coffee—one ounce of tea as against four ounces of coffee—are attributed to the fact that more coffee by weight is required to make a cup of beverage than is required with tea. Also, there is the fact that the supply problem in the case of tea is more acute than with coffee, which may be obtained from South America over a shorter, but just as hazardous, route."

The board said it was realized the tea and coffee ration "means a considerable sacrifice for a large majority of Canadians," but expressed Canadians "are ready for belt-tightening because they realize the life-and-death nature of the struggle and the seriousness of the shipping situation."

"The alternative would have been to continue at the present rate of consumption, with the possibility of supplies, especially of tea, running short," the statement said.

"In prewar days, Canada imported approximately 42,000,000 pounds of tea a year. Ships made the trip from the Orient in an average of six weeks. Now such a voyage takes three to four months, if the ship is lucky. If not, a cargo goes to the bottom, and if it includes tea it means 1,000,000 pounds lost.

"The last ship bringing tea to Canada from India took four months."

Restaurants, hotels and various institutions will receive their supplies of tea and coffee by special voucher. As in the case of sugar rationing, permanent residents of hotels and institutions will surrender their ration cards to hotel or institution.

COSSACKS BATTLE

It was there in the western Caucasus, about fifty miles south of Rostov, that the Russians were reported making a desperate stand to halt the German drive toward the oil tanks of Malkop in the foothills of the Caucasus Mountains.

Kuschevka is some 80 miles west of Salsk where the Soviet troops moved back to new positions.

The Cossacks had been pictured as offering furious resistance to the Germans in the Salsk area. But Red Star disclosed that the defenders were in difficulty with the somewhat negative statement that they were "succeeding in some places to hold the enemy".

Cossacks Engage Tanks

The Cossacks were even engaging German tanks units and fighting not only from horseback but also in the trenches. Riding in battle with sabres and automatic rifles, they were credited with turning back an advance by two regiments of enemy infantry covered by thirty tanks.

At another point, Rumanian cavalry was sent against the Cossacks, who shouted "ne shagu nazad" (not a step backward) as they galloped into battle and halted the invaders, it was reported.

Unflagging Defence by Russians in North Caucasus

Fom all sectors of the battle front in the North Caucasus, the Russian story was one of unflagging, heroic defence against a shifty German drive backed up with impressive tank and air strength and a seemingly inexhaustible stream of reserves.

The Russians did not deny their inability to stop the Germans from crossing the Don at their Tsimlyansk bridgeheads, 120 miles upstream from Rostov. But the midnight communique told of a bitter struggle south of the river into which the Nazis threw dozens of tanks. It said 650 German officers ar men paid with their lives on the battlefield.

Presumably the Germans were attempting to drive eastward there and separate the Russian forces in the North Caucasus.

The critical fighting in the Kushevka sector was taking place only 138 miles north of the Maikop oil fields.

These fields provide only about seven per cent of Russian oil. They lie north of the mountain chain separating the North Caucasus from the trans-Caucasian fields which provide most of Russia's oil.

CAR-SITTING MOTORISTS

WEDDINGS

CONEY—SILLS

A pretty wedding took place at Bridge Street United Church parsonage on Saturday when Barbara, only daughter of Mrs. M. Sills and the late Robert Sills, became the bride of Earl Coney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Coney, Rev. J. MacLean Fleming officiating.

The bride wore a charming gown of heaven blue with white accessories and corsage of pink roses. She was attended by Miss Cora Browning, in pale pink with white accessories and corsage of red roses. Mr. Allan Browning was groomsman.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's brother, Mr. Jack Sills, where a delicious lunch was served. The rooms were most attractive with pink and white streamers and gladioli Mrs. Sills, mother of the bride, wore airforce blue and Mrs. Coney, mother of the groom, Elizabeth blue.

Later the young couple left on a motor trip to Toronto and Hamilton, the bride travelling in a white ensemble. Upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

ANDERSON—EMBURY

A charming wedding took place at Tabernacle United Church at three o'clock on Saturday afternoon when Grace Jeanette Embury, Reg.N., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Derwin Embury, became the bride of Samuel Anglin Anderson, Kingston, son of Mrs. Anderson and the late John A. Anderson. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Hugh D. McOuaig, Gananoque, uncle of the groom. Mrs. M. P. Duff played wedding music.

White gladioli, pink snapdragons and fern adorned the chancel of the church, making a lovely background for the ceremony. The bride who was given in marriage by her father wore a smart travel suit of Mediterranean blue crepe with matching turban and beige accessories. She wore a corsage of apple blossom, Rubrum lilies and baby's breath. Miss Marie Embury was bridesmaid for her sister and wore white with navy blue accent, navy turban, and corsage of Talisman roses. Mr. Lawrence A. Lloyd, Kingston, cousin of the groom, was groomsman.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, the spacious rooms being very effectively decorated with sweetpeas and snapdragons. Mrs. Embury received wearing Rideau blue and white silk mesh with corsage of Bettertime roses, assisted by Mrs. (Dr.) Knapp, Kingston, aunt of the groom, wearing turquoise sheer, with corsage of Briarcliffe roses and stephanotis. After a boat trip to Montreal, Mr. and Mrs. Anderson will reside in Kingston. The bride has been a member of the staff of Kingston General Hospital.

SNIDER—MERCER

The marriage of Miss Vera Patricia Mercer, to Mr. James Roy Snider, took place in the Tabernacle United Church, Belleville, on August first. The bride's father, Rev. W. E. Mercer of Camborne, Ontario, performed the ceremony. Mrs. Edward Dawson was at the piano and during the signing of the register, Miss Hazel Denike, a close friend of the bride, sang "I Love You Truly". The church was decorated with ferns and gladiolli.

Given in marriage by her brother, Chown, the bride looked lovely in a floor-length gown of shell pink sheer with long full sleeves and shirred fitted bodice. Her hair was adorned with a finger-tip veil held in place with a coronet of the same material as her dress. She carried a bouquet of pink roses and blue cornflowers.

Mrs. Ford Long attended her sister, wearing a floor length gown of blue turquoise sheer. She wore a blue shoulder-length veil falling from a headdress of flowers matching her bouquet which was of sweetpeas and maidenhair fern. Mr. Ford Long was best man.

The bride's mother attended wearing beige crepe with rust redingote and white accessories and a corsage of mixed sweetpeas. The groom's mother also attended and had chosen blue and white flowered crepe with white accesorres and a similar corsage.

The reception was held at the Queens' Hotel, Belleville.

Later the bride changed into her going away costume of powder blue crepe with white accessories. Upon their return from a trip to Toronto and points west, the bride and groom will make their home in Kingston.

PIROTH—WARD

Picton, August 4. (Special.) — "Shangri-la", the summer home of the bride's parents on West Lake, was the scene of an interesting wedding at four o'clock, Monday afternoon, when Rev. J. F. Reycraft of Picton United Church, united in marriage Madelon Rose Ward, daughter of F. L. Ward, K.C., and Mrs. Ward, Picton, and Warrant Officer Albert H. Piroth, R.C.A.F., Ottawa, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Piroth, Whitewood, Sask.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a gown of white embroidered organdy with basque bodice and full skirt and sweetheart neckline. Her shoulder length veil was of white silk net and she carried a shower bouquet of white carnations. She also wore the gift of the groom, a three-strand pearl necklace.

Miss Zilda Cook, Picton, was bridesmaid, wearing a gown of Heaven blue point d'esprit over blue taffeta, made in long torso style with tucked bodice and full skirt. She had blue flowers in her hair and carried a colonial bouquet of sweetpeas, bachelor buttons and roses.

Miss Mary Jane Grothier, in blue flowered organdy with full skirt and blue flowers in her hair, and carrying a nosegay similar to that of the bridesmaid, was the flower girl.

Mrs. C. H. Burr played the wedding music with "Because" during the signing of the register, and Orde B. Ward, Toronto, brother of the bride, was groomsman.

A reception followed at "Shangri-la", Mrs. Ward wearing poudre blue lace with cerise hat and corsage of roses and Mrs. Piroth in flowered silk jersey and corsage of sweetpeas. The assistants are Mrs. Donald Walters, Miss Mary Graydon, Miss Rebecca Hubbs, Miss Margaret Whiteman, Miss Phyllis Ward, Miss Mary Jane Grothier.

For travelling, the bride donned a flowered silk jersey dress with corsage of Talisman roses and an off-the-face hat. Following a trip to Algonquin Park, Warrant Officer and Mrs. Piroth will reside in Ottawa.

BOWERS—DOMENICO

Gladioli in tones of gold and rose made a colorful setting for the wedding in St. Michael's Church at ten o'clock yesterday morning when Frances Mary, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Domenico, became the bride of Edward Joseph Bowers, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bowers. Rt. Rev. J. F Nicholson, V.G., officiated at the ceremony which took place in the presence of a large gathering of guests. Mrs. James Grant presided at the organ for wedding music and Miss Marie Cancilla of Port Hope, was soloist, singing "On This Day", "Panis Angelicus" and "Ave Maria".

The charming young bride, who was given in marriage by her father, made a lovely picture in her gown of traditional white in mousseline de soie over taffeta with basque bodice and full graceful skirt. The gown had a sweetheart neckline and long, fitted sleeves tapering to points over the wrist. Her floor length veil of Swiss net was draped from a heart-shaped headdress and she carried a shower bouquet of Killarney roses, sweetheart roses and bouvardia.

Miss Frances Pardella, Kingston, was maid of honor for her cousin, and her gown was of pale pink double net over taffeta. She wore a pink net cap trimmed with a large rosette of net and carried a bouquet of sweetheart roses, bachelor buttons and scabiosa.

The four bridesmaids, Miss Patricia Domenico, sister of the bride, and Miss Betty Doxtator, cousin of the groom, in peach bloom, and Miss Annis Collins and Miss Edith Harvey in turquoise blue, wore similar gowns of sheer chiffon over taffeta, fashioned on long flowing lines, the soft bodices fitted into trepanto embroidered yokes. Miss Mary Domenico, sister of the bride, was junior bridesmaid, and wore a turquoise taffeta bouffant frock with pink streamers. All wore calots to match their gowns and carried bouquets similar to that of the maid of honor. Little Miss Shirley Domenico, sister of the bride, was flower girl wearing a peach-bloom taffeta gown fashioned in the same style as that worn by the junior bridesmaid, and trimmed with touches of blue ribbon. She wore a poke bonnet of taffeta and carried a nosegay of pink, white and blue bachelor buttons.

Mr. Sam Domenico, brother of the bride, was groomsman and the ushers were Mr. Arnold Ethier, Mr. Willis Jackson, Mr. Dick Barrett and Mr. Walter Kokesh.

Following the ceremony wedding breakfast was served to about one hundred and twenty-five guests in the Oddfellows' Hall. The bride's table was beautifully decorated with roses, while sweetpeas, gladioli, colored streamers and bells, carried out the color scheme of blue, pink and white. Mrs. Domenico, mother of the bride, in pale beige sheer, in Chantilly lace pattern, with navy hat and accessories and corsage of Talisman roses received assisted by Mrs. Bowers, mother of the groom, wearing dusky rose sheer in Chantilly lace pattern with white hat and accessories and corsage of Talisman roses. Misses Dorothy Taylor, Peggy Harvey, Edith Kokesh, June Lynch, Evelyn Mathews and Ethel Crewson, assisted in the serving. Mr. I. E. Shapiro acted as toastmaster for the interesting toast list.

A reception was held at night in the Oddfellows' Hall at which about two hundred guests were entertained.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowers left on a wedding trip to Montreal, the Laurentians and Quebec City, the bride travelling in a redingote ensemble, the dress of printed silk in Wedgewood blue patterned in white, worn with a matching blue wool crepe coat. Upon their return they will reside in Belleville.

Guests were present from Kingston, Hamilton, Shelbourne and Port Hope.

EXTENSIVE ECONOMIES IN COMMONS ADMINISTRATION

Ottawa, Aug. 4—(CP)—Speaker Glen in a statement tabled in the House of Commons Friday reported extensive economies have been put into effect in the administration of the House of Commons.

Despite the length of the present session only $28,000 of an appropriation of $34,000 has been used and $8,000 will be returned to the consolidated revenue fund, he said.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

HE' LIKE TO MEET GIRLS

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 22 years old, fairly good looking, have a nice car, a good job, and have been deferred from the draft because of a slight physical defect. I came to this city several months ago, having been transferred by my employer.

The girl I had been going with at home quit me and is now going with another boy. When I visit the old town, she makes it her business to be away, so I have to make up my mind to forget her. My working hours are from noon until nine in the evening, so it's hard to get acquainted with anyone. Can you suggest some way I can make new friends here, as I've met only one girl since I came and didn't care to see her a second time?

— G. E. B.

Unless you feel sensitive about not appearing in uniform, when the majority have donned the khaki, you might join the Y. They have plenty of social activities, and unless you have personal letters of introduction, it's about the safest way for a young man to become acquainted in a strange city.

Ask about hiking clubs. If you can sing or play any musical instrument, a good way to become acquainted with the right sort is to join a choral or musical club. Meanwhile, as you come to know your business associates better, confide in them that you'd like to know some nice girls.

Poor Type of Husband

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Three months ago, my 19-year-old brother married a girl he had gone with for three years. When he first broke the news to Mother and Dad, they didn't seem to care. But recently they voiced their protests, saying they didn't like the girl because she has no money, and Dad wanted us to marry money.

And now they have separated them, and even I helped too, for which I'm terribly sorry. My brother has been on his own since he was 16 and has supported himself right along. To get him to divorce the girl they've given him money and even bought him a new car. Although he loves the girl very much, he's trying to make my parents happy.

They have no grounds for divorce, but my parents tell him to say she trapped him into this marriage. This isn't true at all. What can I do to right this wrong I have done? I want to help them stay together instead of separating.

— M. P.

I've seldom heard of anything more cold-blooded than the attitude you ascribe to your parents concerning your brother's marriage. Why doesn't he do a little thinking for himself? The girl would have a clear case before the law to sue your parents for alienation of her husband's affections.

Balanced Diet Aid to Beauty

By HELEN FOLLETT

A coarse skin ,dotted with enlarged pores, is a good looks grievance. It is caused by disturbances of the sweat and sebaceous glands. These disturbances are supposed to be produced by sluggish circulation or a diet that is too rich in fats. Nobody can make a definite statement about the matter.

The change from fine-grained to coarse skin may come in the late 'teens. Considering that mothers are aware of the splendid results of the balanced diet, it is possible that future generations will have fewer beauty sorrows.

Diet Important

It is particularly important, for the well-being of the complexion, that the diet should include plenty of fruits and vegetables. Begin the day with orange or tomato juice. Have one vegetable and a green salad for luncheon. There should be two vegetables for dinner. Lemonade and buttermilk are refreshing beverages, both have a favorable effect upon the digestive organs.

Local treatment consists of the free use of cold water and an astringent. After the face is washed at bedtime with soap and warm water, slap on cold water. Dry gently. Then give the flesh a brisk patting. Include the neck. There are large veins there that carry blood to the facial fibers.

Morning Routine

In the morning rinse the face with cold water, dry gently, apply an astringent. Witch hazel will serve. A complexion mask made of the beaten white of an egg is helpful. Spread it on with the fingertips, let it remain until the flesh feels tight and drawn. Remove with cold water.

Creams must be used sparingly. Tap them in lightly, remove in an hour or so.

If the rouge compact shows up tiny red dots in the pores, try a creamy rouge, overing the application with a light film of powder.

Cheerful Glass Garden Provides Own Moisture

Easy To Make, Easy To Care For

The most cheerful kind of decoration for your home—a glistening bowl containing a woodland "garden"!

Evergreens and ferns (from the florist's or from the woods) will flourish beautifully in such a terrarium—without care, without even sunshine. Covered, the terrarium provides its own moisture!

To make one is simple. Use a fishbowl, candy fish or what have you, and move tiny partridge berry, wintergreen and polypody ferns into it, soil and all.

First line the lower part of the bowl with a layer of plush-like moss, green side out, then at the bottom put in pebbles for drainage and add soil.

Over the soil put another layer of moss, green side up. Wet soil, poke holes in it through the moss with your fingers and place your plants in the holes, patting soil firmly about the roots.

Many flowers grow healthily, too, in a glass garden! Our 32-page booklet tells how to raise trailing arbutus, violets, gardenias, other flowering as well as gay foliage plants in terrariums. Also describes making of bottle terrariums, landscaped dish gardens, herb window [illegible]

Send 15c in coins for your copy of "Glass Gardens and Novelty Indoor Gardens" to The Ontario Intelligencer, Home Service, 166 Front Street, Belleville, Ont. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Fashion Flashes

IT DOES SEEM that the adjustable hat is a big favorite. A beauty is in pale pink crocheted chenille in a wide lattice design. Two silver and mother-of-pearl pins permit the wide brim to be adjusted by the wearer.

CITY BLACK in many instances expresses itself in terms of lustrous black satin. A favorite for afternoon into evening wear is the street-length frock of slim silhouette with modified skirt drapery and twisted band treatment for the bodice.

CATCHING ON for autumn promotion is the large felt hat with the brim wide and curved at either side with back and front foreshortened. Elaborate pins provide the trimming and anchorage as well.

NO PATCH POCKET of wool says the government. But ever so many coats and jacket suits are featuring nice big patch pockets of fur, thus trimming the garment and being functional too.

HOLDING OVER for late summer and post Labor Day wear are printed jersey frocks. But instead of the summer white background the color is black, brown, blue, wine or dark red, but the big flower designs still persist, and very nice they are too.

ONCE IN A WHILE these times it is nice to fare forth all dressed up for an exciting evening. A lovely late summer dinner dress is of pale blue crepe with widely spaced print of brilliantly hued flowers, outlined in tiny colorful sequins. Dark cerise faille midriff.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Mrs. Beeckman Tells How to Write Wedding Gift "Thank You" Notes

Wedding gifts are important gifts, planned and chosen with special thoughtfulness by relatives and friends to make the bride and bridegroom happy. They represent the givers' devotion and generosity, a considerable amount of time and effort, and, more than likely, a strain on the budget.

Such special kindness and generosity deserve special words of appreciation, designed for the happiness of the giver.

Here are some 'Do's' and 'Dont's' to guide the bride-to-be in writing her thank-you notes.

Write a thank-you note for every gift you receive. This courtesy is due your relatives and friends who spend thought, time and money on their gifts. Don't seem unappreciative, don't be casual, don't take your wedding presents for granted.

Write a note. Don't send a printed or engraved thank-you card. Telephoning your thanks won't do either, nor is proper appreciation expressed by a verbal, "Thank you for your lovely gift."

Supply yourself with good-looking note paper, a comfortable pen, black or blue-black ink, and stamps. Enter your gifts, as they arrive, in a "Bride's Gift List"—the description of the gift, the giver's name, the store from which it was purchased, the date of arrival, and that important last column—the date of acknowledgement.

Write your thank-you notes promptly. If possible, write each day the notes of appreciation for the gifts that have arrived that day. This is not only more thoughtful of the giver, who will be eagerly anticipating your note of thanks, but it's easier to write an enthusiastic note of thanks if you pen at once. Don't postpone writing your thank-you notes until after the wedding.

Thank the giver for the kind thought that prompted the gift, as well as for the gift itself.

Mention the gift specifically. Don't say, vaguely, "your gift", giving the impression that you can't remember just what it was.

Write friendly, warm-hearted notes. Don't be afraid of being too enthusiastic. Write each note as if you were chatting with the giver, and say the appreciative things about the gift that you know will rejoice the giver.

Include your fiance's thanks and appreciation.

Whenever possible, give your notes a crowning glory by telling how you and the bridegroom are planning to use the gift in your home.

When a present is sent by a married couple, write to the wife to thank both her and her husband.

Don't lazily lean back on excuses of being "too busy", of "not being able to write a good thank-you note" or, "I'll write when I return from my wedding trip." Show your friends you're an appreciative person: don't let them be amazed and disappointed at your delinquency or wonder if their present arrived

Slip Regulations Just Issued Mean End of Use of Ruffles

No more ruffles on petticoats! They've been caught in the war machine.

A Wartime Prices and Trade Board order has simplified women's slips. It rules that ruffles or frills at the bottom of slips are prohibited, and also the use of cloth over cloth, panels, commonly known as shadow-proof panels.

Slips, (like all clothing) are items to be bought with care and treated well in these days of shrunken budgets. In future they may not be elegant and frilly but they always will be important.

In buying a slip that will give good wear both material and tailoring must be watched. For wear with summer sheers the heavy taffetas, broadcloths and other slips of good weight are adequate and do not need the double panels. Rayon and cotton make good slips if the material is closely woven and not full of starchy filler. Cotton to be satisfactory, should be preshrunk and color fast.

One important detail in goo tailoring is generous, firm seam closely stitched. Rayons are stronger with all seams cut on the bias there is no pull on the thread Other details to watch for are material reinforcements where stra are sewed on and pinked or bou edges at hem, top and under t arms. Any shortening should done from the bottom, not by pu ing up the straps.

Rayon needs careful launderin mild soapsuds, no rubbing, lu warm water, and a moderate iro White cotton is easily washed—ho water, mild soapsude. thoroug rinsing and drying in the sunlig Colored cottons may 'run' so shou be washed and dried quickly.

THE WAR TODAY

By De WITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

As things now stand the coming weekend will see untold millions of Indian Nationalists committed to an effort to exact independence from Britain through one of those explosive civil-disobedience campaigns which heretofore have resulted in bloodshed and in the present instance may easily develop into one of the major crises of the war.

Pandit Nehru, who next to Mohandas Gandhi is the most powerful Nationalist leader in India, declared today that the projected movement would be ratified by the All-India Congress which meets in Bombay Friday, and that the campaign probably would start in a fortnight. Nehru says it will be "short, swift and effective" and that the fate of the country will be decided in about three months. Thus Friday is a day to which not only India but the entire world must look forward with deep concern. The Anglo-Indian imbroglio represents one of the great dangers faced by the United Nations, since this vast empire is a strategical base which is vital to the Allied cause.

The beginning of this "non-violent" revolution will be a gift from the gods to the Japanese, who may be expected to take quick advantage of the situation to stage an invasion if things look favorable. Indeed, Gandhi has warned the British authorities that unless they grant independence, a Jap invasion will be welcomed by discontented elements. That probably is an accurate estimate.

An important and intensely interesting development in connec- volves the fate of nearly 400,000,000 people is Gandhi's appeal to the Indian Princes to share their powers with their people and not remain tied to the "Imperial chariot wheel." He warns the Rajahs that if British Imperial rule is wrecked in India, they will disappear—unless they meantime have joined the rest of the country.

This bears the earmarks of being a shrewd effort on the part of Gandhi to institute a war of nerves among these potentates who represent about the last of the world's fairy-tale autocrats of fabulous wealth. Still, he is right in saying that if the Princes cling to Britain, and Imperial rule falls, they will go down with it.

What Gandhi might have added was that, whether Imperial rule falls or not, the Princes are in the unhappy position of being between the deep blue sea and a mountain of grief. Not only are the nationalists making things uncomfortable for them but India's viceroy, Lord Linlithgow, has several times warned the Princes to put their political houses in order. The last time was recently when he urged them to leave nothing undone which would help achieve their survival. That was blunt enough.

In short, out of this situation I believe we see the beginning of a great change in the status of these 562 rulers many of whom have the power of life and death over their people and are so rich they don't know their own possessions. Their jeweled days which for centuries have dazzled the world are drawing to a close.

Police Have Hectic Chase Thru County

Following a hectic three-day chase by police during which he is alleged to have driven a stolen automobile nearly 500 miles throughout the Bay of Quinte district, LAC. Frederick Marsden of the R.C.A.F., at Trenton, was arrested at Stoco by Provincial Police late Monday evening. According to police Marsden is said to have left the detention "brig" at his Air Force base on Saturday and later is alleged to have taken a motorcar at the Bay of Quinte Country Club belonging to Jack Hartwick, of the Quinte Milk Products. In the car was Mr. Hartwick's gas rationing book, which contained authority for the use of ample gasoline. Today Marsden was arraigned before Miss Mary Butler, local Justice of the Peace, and remanded to the county jail on a charge of stealing Mr. Hartwick's motorcar.

Marsden is reported to have led Provincial Police a merry chase throughout the Bay of Quinte area. Slowly the police advanced on the trail until Monday night a police cordon swept down on Marsden as he was about to attend a chicken supper at Stoco. The missing car, an Oldsmobile sedan, bearing Ontario licence plates 86-A-30, was recovered. Provincial Constables Batt and Duncan, under Sergeant H. Storey, recovered the car and made the arrest.

Bell Hurls Four-Hitter As Flyers Down Reliance 6-1 in Softball Playdown

Outfielders Shine in Pitching Duel That Blew Skyhigh With No. 5 I.T.S. Scoring Three in 7th.

BELL'S TRIPLE HELPS

With Al Bell their ace fireball artist in fine fettle firing a four-hitter, the No. 5 ITS "Flyers" drew first blood in the Belleville and District Softball League semi-finals by soundly trouncing the Reliance A. C. six to one on Civic Holiday eventide at the Exhibition Park. It being the only holiday sporting event presented locally, a goodly crowd of some 500 was in the stands.

For six frames the game developed into a torrid pitchers' struggle between Bell on the Flyers' mound, and Bill Anderson serving them up for Archie Major's Reliance squad. Then came the bombshell that exploded in Anderson's face when three runs crossed the plate and not satisfied Green's Flyers added a trio more in the eighth, but it was Bell's strong pitching and his seventh inning triple that stamped him master of all he viewed in the local ball yard last night. However, in the Flyers' outer garden, Perry and Doidge, newcomers to the ITS line-up, literally ran all over the ball lot to make some fine catches and shared the fielding honors with Wilkins and Williams, left and centre fielders respectively with Reliance, and who played fine defensive ball

Wilkins Opens Scoring

Bud Wilkins, the first batter for Reliance, got the first hit of the game and also scored the first run. It so happened it was Reliance's only counter. Bud singled, went to second on a passed ball and scampered home on LaBonne's one-base blow. The only hitting seen by Major's batsmen in the subsequent innings, were Donihee's third inning double, Soden's bunt that went for a single in the fourth and Barriage's ninth inning single.

Came The Fireworks

Up until the fatal seventh the Flyers had counted exactly two safe blows off Anderson, a single by Conley and Conway's bunt. In the third inning Anderson retired the Flyers on three pitched balls, Bell popped to first, Conway did likewise to Barriage at third and Anderson threw out Green. In the fourth Anderson only pitched four balls before the side was retired in order, one of the quartet of pitches being a called ball. Then came the Flyers' uprising, that saw some tall hitting and base running. With one out Perry singled, Conley doubled and Smith bounced a single to score Perry. Doidge forced Smith, but Bell hit a triple to clean the bases, before Conway grounded out. With three runs in the Flyers came to bat with a vengeance in the eighth when Soden started all the trouble by dropping Green's high lofter to open matters, Green pulling up at third on the bobble. Jones singled but Green held third as LaBonne held the ball. Forman hit to Labonne for an out and Jones forced Green off third, during the subsequent run down Green scrambled back to third, and later raced home as the Reliance failed to tag Jones sliding back into second, for a hectic moment. Perry singled scoring Jones and the latter ran from first to score on Smith's second hit of the day. Green tripled and died at third in the ninth, while Barriage hit and Bell retired the side to end the game. Perry Conley and Smith had two hits each for the winners, while Bell and Green hit triples. Donihee's double was the only extra base clout registered by the losers. On Wednesday night the Army and Navy Vets meet the Mountain View Bombers in a league semi-final game.

The box score reveals that Bell allowed four hits, struck out nine and issued the only walk of the game. Anderson was touched for ten hits and whiffed four as he failed to issue a single pass.

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.)
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Aug. 4. (AP)— A lot of fight-minded folks around New Orleans, including several city and state officials, are trying to get up a three-day fistic carnival there Sept. 5-7 to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the great event when championships were settled for the first time by fighters wearing big padded mittens. . .If you can find the records for 1892 you'll see that Jack McAuliff knocked out Billy Myer in 15 rounds for the lightweight title on Sept. 5, 1892, the next day George Dixon kayoed Jack Skelly in eight heats to take the featherweight crown and, as the grand windup on Sept. 7, Jim Corbett knocked out John L. Sullivan to inaugurate a new heavyweight reign. . . The big job facing the New Orleans folks now is to get three champs released from the armed forces to put on a similar show.

No Words Wasted

Southwestern Tech of Weatherford, Okla., quit football this week and here's the reason given by its to-the-point president, G. S. Sanders, who played football himself before the First Great War:—

"We have a parachute that will fit any pair of shoulders; They can learn how to kick hell out of Japs instead of footballs; we can spend that $5,000 for training planes instead of training pants".

(Tech has contracted with the United States army to produce 90 licensed pilots and 660 licensed airplane mechanics this year.)

Santa Anita has asked to have the track's assessed valuation of $1,246,825 wiped out, claiming a loss of $775,000 since the army took over the plant, but the answer so

"HAMMERIN' HANK" WINS IN COMEBACK

San Francisco, Aug. 4 (AP)—Henry Armstrong, former three-ply champion of boxing's lighter weights scored a seven-round technical knockout last night over Aldo Spoldi of New York for his fourth victory in five fights of an attempted comeback.

The Los Angeles negro won every round by a comfortable margin and made a punching bag of Spoldi. The crowd filled the 10,000-seat auditorium.

Armstrong weighed 143 1-2 pounds —Spoldi, 137.

SAM SNEAD NOT TO COMPLETE IN CANADIAN OPEN

Golf Titlist of 1940 and '41 Too Busy in United States Navy

By SCOTT YOUNG
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Aug. 4—(CP)—Note to Canadian open entrants: you can relax, men. The Royal Canadian Golf Association won't ask anyone but caddies to wear numbers.

B. L. Anderson, secretary of the R.C.G.A., had an emphatic answer when queried about the numbers game that started such big winds during the Tam O'Shanter tournament in Chicago last week.

"The caddies will wear numbers on their backs," he said. "In that way, the gallery will be able to identify golfers just as easily as if the golfers wore the numbers."

The men who cut loose with the loudest beefs when Tam O'Shanter officials tried to pin numbers on their backs were Tommy Armour and Joe Kirkwood. Both refused, and quit. Kirkwood is entered in the Canadian open and is expected to arrive with other leading United States professionals today.

Entries Show

The 72-hole event will be played at the Mississauga Club, about 12 miles west of Toronto Aug. 6-8. Entries have been slow coming in for the $3,600 Chase (first prize: $1,000 and the Seagram gold cup) but officials think the drought will end within the next 24 hours.

Sam Snead, winner in 1940 and 1941, won't be around. His duties with the United States navy keep him elsewhere. But Ben Hogan, leading money-winner among the pro golfers this season, is considered an almost certain starter with such other American luminaries as Craig Wood, Jimmy Thomson, Tony Manero, Horton Smith, Lloyd Mangrum, Turnesa, Gene Sarazen, Harry Cooper, Jimmy Demaret, Jug McSpaden and Paul Runyan. Byron Nelson is not expected.

Gordon Brydson is among the most-favored of the Canadian professionals. Mississauga is his home course and its 6543-yard, par 72 layout is built for straight hitters.

Bob Gray, of Toronto Scarborough; Stan Leonard, of Vancouver; and Stan Horne, of Montreal, probably will provide the rest of the strong Canadian competition.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, August 4.—(CP)—Sport shots from Britain: Professional soccer teams will be allowed by the government to travel to matches within a radius of fifty miles by road next season but there's no private petrol allowance for amateur clubs.

The pros, however, are allowed to make the road trip only if they cannot get there by other means, such as rail, and when the supply of vehicles for essential services is not affected. No additional railway or other transport facilities will be made for spectators.

County Football Associations are making direct approach to the transport ministry with a view to obtaining a relaxation of the travelling rule towards amateurs which calls for gasoline travel only by scheduled bus services.

The Associations will ask that permission be given for road travel by private vehicles where there are journeys of comparatively short distances and convenient public transport is not available. They contend the ban is "inimical to the nation's best interests".

Maj. Frank Buckley, Wolverhampton Wanderers' manager, suggested professional football be played Sundays but there seems no possibility of official sanction. Only Sunday soccer allowed by the governing football association is that in which works and service teams are engaged and no "gates" are taken.

BACK AGAIN

Proud of Title Belt

"Whipper Billie" Watson, the current holder of the British Empire heavyweight wrestling championship, proudly displays his title belt here. Watson defeated "Irish Jerry" Monnahan, the former masked man, in Belleville two weeks ago, when Jack Sharkey, former world heavyweight boxing champion, flattened Monnahan with a right cross to the chin. Watson won as the result. Now Monnahan demands a return bout with an official Commission referee. "I was jobbed and given the business by both Sharkey and Watson," Monnahan complained to Promoter Frank Tunney of the Queensbury A.C., so the Commission has named Al Dunlop, of Toronto, as the special referee for a return bout here.

Van Lingle Mungo Fails To Halt Former Teammates As Dodgers Beat Giants

Capacity Crowd at Polo Grounds in Confusion as Game Called With Brooklyn Leading 7-4

TWI-LIGHT GAME OUT

Walker and Camilli Hit Homers' the Latter's Coming With the Bases Loaded; $100,000 for War Charities

By JUDSON BAILEY

The dimout on the East coast blacked out the ninth inning of a bitter battle between the Brooklyn Dodgers and New York Giants last night, leaving 57,305 spectators in confusion, and made continuance of the twi-night form of baseball in New York a matter of doubt.

About all the fans were sure of as they scrambled out of the Polo grounds was that the National League champions had won the ball game 7-4 with Dixie Walker belting a three-run homer in the third inning and Dolph Camilli hitting the jackpot in the seventh inning with a clout against the rightfield roof while the bases were loaded.

These two tremendous blows gave Whitlow Wyatt his 13th victory against three defeats and sprouled Van Lingle Mungo's outing against his former teammates.

Dim Out Regulations

Umpire George Magerkurth signalled the game was over in the ninth because of the dimout rules, which prohibit outdoor floodlights in the New York area for more than one hour after sundown.

No one except the umpires knew exactly when the game would be halted and even the players were confused by the sudden stoppage. The Brooklyn team remained in the field for several minutes while the big crowd that had turned out for the benefit of the army emergency relief fund booed long and loud.

The booing continued even after all lights were extinguished except a spotlight on the American flag and while amplifiers intoned the star sprangled banner and thousands of fans waved lighted matches in what had been intended for a spectacular patriotic ceremony.

No More Twi-Lights

The same teams were scheduled for another part daylight part flood light game at the Polo grounds tonight and the same thing in Brooklyn tomorrow night.

But President Horace Stoneham, of the Giants said there would never be another twi-night game in his ball park after tonight and it was considered likely provisions would be made for Brooklyn games to prevent a recurrence of the trouble there.

The Giant - Dodger contest was the only major league game yesterday, an open date which most of the clubs filled with exhibitions including one in which the St. Louis Cardinals beat the Philadelphia Athletics 5-2 at Copperstown, baseball's birthplace.

Baseball "Hardly Sporting", Is Opinion of Staid Britons

London, Aug. 4. (CP) — Baseball's "complexities", as the Press Association put it, proved a bit too much for many Britons in a crowd of 7,000 which watched a game between the Canadian forces and the United States army.

The Canadian won but the score of 5-3 didn't mean a thing to the nonplussed Londoners in Wembley Stadium yesterday. Flt. Sgt. Jack Lutes of Moncton, N.B., explained the game as it progressed over the stadium's loudspeakers and the official program tried to make plain what baseball is all about but most of the "fans" left with the apparent feeling the game is "hardly sporting".

Mrs. Winston Churchill shook hands with the players of both teams just before game started. She seemed puzzled by the chest protector of Umpire Pte. John J. McNabb, of Wayne, Pa.

McNabb explained to her that "I stand behind the bat". Mrs. Churchill smiled as if she understood and walked to the next soldier in line.

Another Version

Meyer Berger, correspondent for the New York Times, said it "wasn't much of a game" and devoted most of his attention to the crowd. He sent the following description

As you moved through the stands, you discovered that the spectators were bewildered by the pitchers' motions and astonished by the players' arguments with umpires.

"Dad, what was that?" a little blonde boy asked his middle-aged father when a Canadian hit a weak pop fly that was caught in the infield.

"One of their home runs, I fancy", the father replied.

Later, Canadians and Americans buzzed angrily around an umpire, arguing loudly about a called third strike.

"What are they about now, dad?" the blonde lad wodered.

"They seem to have lost their tempers, son", the middle-aged gentleman said. "It's something we don't tolerate in cricket. It isn't proper to argue with the referee, you know. They might report him to the committee, but not during the game".

Somewhere among the 7,000 in the stands were Canadian and Americans rooters. Their boos and hoarse cries for action drew a polite, murmured comment from the British patrons of the game.

"Distracting!" one English lady confided to her companion. "It doesn't seem fair to try to gain the attention of those poor chaps on the field".

LEAFS WIN TWO FROM NEWARK; ROYALS RISE UP

Slick Pitching and Terrific Hitting Sees Toronto Win 6-1 and 3-1 Over Bears

RIPPLE HITS HOMER

Montreal Scores 11 Runs in Fourth to Beat Baltimore 19-9 in Season's Biggest One-Inning Splurge

Canada's two slumbering entries in the International League awakened with a start last night and all but tore down the Shaughnessy circuit's playhouse.

Toronto slashed two full games off Newark Bears' eight-game lead by smacking the Bears twice, 6-1 and 3-1 while Montreal pounded out 11 runs in the fourth inning to subdue Baltimore, 19-9.

The Maple Leafs bested the Bears by combining slick pitching with terrific hitting in the double triumph. In the opener Bill Brandt was touched for only six blows while teammate Johnny Wryostek slapped four hits in four attempts and Jimmy Ripple cracked one out of the lot.

In the nightcap, Dick Conger was even stingier with hits and Newark was able to collect only five. Ripple again came through with a homer.

Hectic Fourth Frame

The evening's biggest bombardment, however, was the hectic fourth frame at Montreal where the Royals combined seven hits with five Oriole errors for the season's biggest one-inning run production. Twice Baltimore outfielders dropped flies and once Pitcher Steve Gromek attempted to cut a runner off at the plate and hurled the ball over the catcher's head.

Although there were 30 hits, 16 by Montreal, only four were for extra bases, Alex Kampouris getting two doubles.

Gib Brack sparked Jersey City to an 11-4 verdict over the tailend Rochester Red Wings. Brack belted five hits in five trips to the plate for a third of the Little Giants' blows. Ed Wissman was nicked for 13 hits in the first seven innings and finally Gene Lillard, who once had a major-league trying as a hurler but now is an infielder, took up the burden.

Exhibition Games

Those were the only games to count in the standings but exhibition games were played at both Syracuse and Buffalo in which all league members will take pride.

The Bisons, seventh in the league race, defeated Cincinnati Reds of the National loop in an exhibition contest, 5-4, with Dutch Meyer blasting two homers. Syracuse stopped Chicago Cubs, 6-5.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

THE VAST DIFFERENCE between the Flyers and Reliance last night, aside from the hit and runs column, was the prolific manner in which Archie Green's Airmen traversed the base paths. For instance in the eighth, Perry, a newcomer who's apparently been around the softball lots before, raced from first to score on Ray Smith's single, that dropped between centre and left behind short. Now that's really getting around those paths over the line of least resistance. When Ken Soden bobbled Skipper Green's lofter in the eighth, Green was perched on third before Soden could pick up the ball. Then in the 7th Conley and Doidge, (another new Green find for the play-offs) showed some unadulterated speed over the base paths. Good base running will win a lot of ball games and although the Flyers did get to Bill Anderson for lusty hits in the seventh and eighth frames, the speed merchant factor still was paramount in their winning of the first softball play-off.

THE STAY-AWAYS MISSED A fine pitchers' duel, that was until the fireworks came in the seventh and eighth. Up until the seventh Anderson, the Reliance pitcher, had allowed only two hits. In the third he retired the side on three pitched balls and in the fourth he nearly repeated this effort by sending the Flyers down in order with exactly four pitches, thus retiring the side in two successive frames on no less than seven pitched balls, while the limit would have been six. Sounds like something of a pitching record for these parts. Then on the other hand Al Bell was in fine pitching fettle, allowing only four hits and only one after the fourth, Barriage's ninth inning bingle. The left and centre fielders for both squads turned in creditable defensive work and accounted for more than the usual number of put outs, Perry and Williams opposing, centre gardeners, being especially effective in shagging hard flies. Both squads were minus their regular hot corner players.

A SPORTS EDIFICE THAT has seen champions shorn of their crowns is to hear the din and the roar of the sports crowd is no more. The Madison Square Garden Bowl, an open air stadium, capable of holding 80,000 spectators, will be dismantled and torn down after the Eighth Avenue organization failed to renew its lease with the Pennsylvania Railway, owners of the cite. The Garden Bowl has not been used as a fight arena since May 31st, 1938, when Barney Ross was stripped of his welterweight crown by the then-great Henry Armstrong. Of more recent years professional wrestling, the type seen at the Hume Arena every other Wednesday night, along with midget car racing has been featured. Incidentally, while speaking on the mat squirmers, Jerry Monnahan, that former villain of the mat, cried so loud to Promoter Frank Tunney regarding the sock in the puss Jack Sharkey handed him here, that Tunney had to give Monnahan another crack at Whipper Watson here Wednesday night. "Big Bully" Monnahan wanted an official commission referee and got his way when the wrestling big-wigs appointed Al Dunlop to be the third man in the ring for the Watson-Monnahan main scrap Wednesday night. Some new faces are included in the prelims, Tunney promised.

BURLEIGH GRIMES, Toronto Maple Leafs, may not be able to win from the cellar-position clubs in the International League, but as Giant killers the Leafian ball corps is tops. Last week they won one of six games with the lowly Syracuse Chiefs, but yesterday against the league-leading Newark Bears the mighty bats of the Grimesmen took their awful toll when the Leafs beat the Bears in a doubleheader before nearly 13,000 patrons. Jimmy Ripple's potent bat spelled defeat for the Bears as he came through with circuit blows in both games. Johnny Wyrostek was far behind Ripple with a homer in the first game when he had a perfect time at bat with four for four. Increased crowds have proven Toronto will support a battling ball club, something Don Ross failed to realize when president.

THIS AND THAT — Don't look now, but Joe DiMaggio is hitting over the .300 mark today and aclimbing. . . . But Ted Williams isn't worrying, he's leading in most runs batted in; most home runs and most runs scored in the American League. . . : Ho, hum! . . A Canadian baseball nine beat a ball club from the American armed forces 5 to 3 the other day at the stately Wembley Stadium. . . Whatta difference it must have been for the staid stadiumites to hear the jockeying of baseball coaches, rather than the "well played" of cricket. . . . See where Art Scarlett, former Belleville outfielder, is playing right field for the Hollinger Mine ball club and still getting his hits. . . . A lad named Horeck, no doubt a relative of Reliance Pete's, is playing second base for Hollinger. . . . Oh, well, the Leafs aren't scheduled with the Chiefs again this season, which makes them happy about the whole thing. . . . 65,000 jammed their way into the Polo Grounds for the Giants' Army Relief game with the Dodgers yesterday. . . . Between the two greater New York National League clubs over $100,000 has been raised for war charities this year . . . and that stuff ain't hay.

Trenton and District

Trenton, Aug. 4 (Special)—Trenton police were asked to be on the lookout for a 1929 grey Studebaker coach, licence 600-M-4, stolen from Frankford on Monday. All roads leading to town were blocked but the car was not located.

Two new members were taken on the strength of the Trenton police force during the past week, Francis E. Barry of Colborne, a World War veteran and Clarke Elco (Barney) McColl of Wooler. Barney is a graduate of High School and a great athlete having played a great deal of hockey.

St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church opened on Sunday after being closed for the month of July, during which time the interior was entirely cleaned and redecorated.

For the month of July St. Andrew's congregation worshipped with Grace Church with Rev. Mr. McKee in charge and during the month of August morning service is to be held only and is to be in St. Andrew's Church with Rev. R. C. MacLean in charge.

Mr. A. D. MacIntyre of Toronto, spent the weekend with Mrs. MacIntyre who is at their summer home at "The Grove."

Mr. Art Till of Toronto spent the weekend at the home of Mrs. H. D. Graham on the Lake Shore. Mrs. Till and daughter Barbara who have been spending some time with Mrs. Graham returned to Toronto with Mr. Till.

Miss Elsie Jackson and Miss Jerine Hendy of Belleville General Hospital spent Sunday with friends in town.

A.C. 2 Russell Wilkins of the R.C.A.F. Manning Pool and A.C. 2 Bill Rupert of Quebec have both been posted to I.T.S. Belleville.

Trenton Market

Apples appeared to be more abundant than any other fruit on the Trenton Market on Saturday, and they still held a very firm price. Yellow transparent, Duchess and Red Astrachans were fairly plentiful and sold from 30 to 45c per basket. Ten cents was asked by the berry box. The berry season is apparently nearing the end and the berries offered were smaller quality and brought 25c with a very few at two for 45c. Few currants and gooseberries were offered and 15c per box, was asked.

Potatoes were 55 and 60c per peck, cucumbers 2 for 5c with some six quart baskets being offered at 35 and 40c. Tomatoes were higher than last week with small boxes being sold at 20c straight. Corn in small quantities was offered and brought 25c per dozen. Cauliflowers scarce 15 to 30c, cabbage 5 and 10c, all the other small vegetables, carrots, onions, radishes, brocolli, swiss chard, etc., 5c per bunch. Green peppers two for five, beans 2 for 15c green or yellow, pickling beets by the basket 25c.

Grade "A" eggs 38, others from 33 up. Butter scarce at 40c, with chickens plentiful selling all the way from broilers at $1.35 per pair to more mature fowl at top price of $1.65.

Flowers of many varieties at 15c per bunch up with gladiolis very plentiful from 25c doz. up. Very fine home cooking at extremely reasonable prices.

Magistrate J. L. Lloyd of Northbrook presided over Trenton police court on Friday afternoon when several cases were disposed of:

Bryce Patrick of Frankford, charged with converting $39.50 of his employer's money to his own use had his case enlarged for one week.

Loraine Drysdale and Gloria Coulter charged with vagrancy, cases enlarged one week.

Edward Black charged with breaking and entering Donald Brick's store on the York Road, pleaded guilty, but because of his good record he was discharged in accordance with section 729 of the Criminal Code. Iverson Harris in the store with Black at the time claimed he didn't know he took any cigarettes and the police stated the cigarettes were in Black's possession. No evidence was offered by the Crown and the charge against Harris was dismissed.

Frank W. MacLean on conviction for stealing a ride on the C.P.R. was fined $5.00 or one week in jail to date from the time of his arrest on July 25th.

One woman for being drunk was assessed $10.00 and costs.

Mrs. Tony Shelfoon, McGill St., is holidaying at Port Stanley.

Flt. McKee and Mrs. McKee, Marmora Street, have left to spend their furlough in Kingston and other eastern points.

Miss Dorothy Gaina and Miss Dorothy Barker are enjoying a boat trip from Toronto to Montreal and return.

Mrs. Murray Dixon accompanied her niece Miss Barbara Beatty to her home at Lindsay on Friday.

Mr. F. Stringer, Spring Street, who has been in Newfoundland for some months has returned to his home here.

Mr. Don McColl of Kingston spent the holiday at his home on Shuter Street.

Chief of Police Everybody's Friend

A policeman gets many calls to lend a helping hand and rightly so but the one which was received by Trenton's chief on Saturday last is really unique.

A farmer some distance in the country had apparently ordered an axe from one of the large departmental stores and not being able to get into town to take delivery, he wrote "Dear Chief, since your job is to be everybody's friend, I guess that my name is "Everybody" and went on to say Monday was the only day he could get into town and that being Civic Holiday the store would not be open so requested the chief, with the enclosed money, to take delivery of the axe and hold it at the police station until he could get it on Monday.

Truly the police are asked to do funny favours, and always most obliging.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SCOTT YOUNG
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Toronto, Aug. 4 (CP)—Dave Castilloux, Canadian lightweight and welterweight champion, and his manager, Raoul Godbout, have managed to confuse the issue to an alarming degree within the last few days.

It started when Castilloux said after his marriage in Montreal last Saturday that he was through with boxing. It struck a note of utter nonsense yesterday when Godbout said in Montreal that Castilloux's statement was not to be considered official.

What can anyone make of that, except that Castilloux wants to retire and Godbout, whose interest in the affair hardly can be misconstrued, wants him to keep on fighting?

From this distance, it appears that if Castilloux wants to leave a business that is uncomfortable at the best and mentally and physically harmful at the worst, it's his own business. His manager undoubtedly has plenty to say in making matches, splitting purses and arranging training routine. But even the widest interpretation of his function doesn't include countermanding Castilloux's decision to retire.

Kinsmen Fag Fund Goes Over Half Million Mark

In the past ten months Belleville boys serving overseas have been sent over a half a million cigarettes, 507,300, to be exact, through the Kinsmen "Fag Fund," at a cost of $1,691.00. The Kinsmen "smokes for Belleville boys fund," has been conducted purely on the contribution plan and at a cost approximately $170. per month, according to statistics released by Chairman Matt Currie on the eve of a "Fag Fund" week campaign.

Inaugurated last fall, the first shipment of cigarettes to Belleville boys overseas was shipped on Oct. 6th. 1941, following which forty-one regular weekly shipments have been made. So popular has the fund become overseas that upwards of five hundred letters of acknowledgment expressing thanks for the much-needed smokes and hopes that the fund will continue to function in all of its glory. With cigarettes rationed and at a premium overseas, such funds as the Kinsmen "Fag Fund" are filling a need for our armed services. This week is to be "Kinsmen Fag Fund Week" in Belleville when citizens are being asked to contribute to a war charity effort that carries absolutely no administration costs, all contributions going directly towards the purchase of smokes for Belleville boys overseas. A window display outlining the operation of the fund can be seen this week at the Metropolitan Store on Front St. and all members of the Kinsmen Club will accept special donations. The Fag Fund week was officially opened today with a contribution of $10 from the St. Michael's Holy Name Society, while previously the Deacon Ladies' Softball team had contributed $19.70 to the cause.

The list of forty Belleville lads shipped cigarettes this week included: A. A. Acerra, Charles W. Anderson, Edwin Aylesworth, M. A. Ayres, Andrew Bennett, Donald Bibby, A. P. Blaney, A. Four Daughters Work Rotter Farm

Jackson, Minn., Aug. 4—(AP)—The wartime farm labor shortage poses no problems for the Rotter girls—they run their own farm.

Except at threshing time and to get the hay in the barn, when a neighbor comes over, a man hasn't worked on the place since old John Rotter, pioneer Southern Minnesota farmer, died in 1926 and left his farm to his widow and four girls.

Ida, Adelaide, Mathilda and Anna, the daughters, raise about 120 hogs and 300 laying hens, milk 15 cows, care for 10 horses, cultivate 45 acres of corn, 24 acres of barley, 60 acres of oats and besides, do all the usual chores of farm women.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Cowboy and The Lady"

With Gary Cooper and Merle Oberon as the stellar attractions in a swiftly-moving modern-day story, combining high comedy and impelling drama, Samuel Goldwyn's "The Cowboy and the Lady" was last night presented on the screen of the Capitol Theatre.

The suspenseful tale of a Washington society girl who gambles position and fortune to marry a sun-browned cowboy of the far west, after a unique meeting at a Florida rodeo, is dramatized with telling effect against beautiful backgrounds. The story maintains a rapid pace throughout, and is highlighted by scenes of rich comedy and sparkling direction.

Cooper and Miss Oberon, as the cowboy and the lady of this title, prove again that they are two of Hollywood's leading players, and their serio-comic portrayals will win them even more fans throughout the world. The cast is rounded out by such notables as Patsy Kelly, Walter Brennan, Mabel Todd, Fuzzy Knight and Henry Kolker. H. C. Potter has directed the picture with vigor and liveliness, making the most of brilliant backgrounds and effective lighting.

"East Side Kids"

For a thrilling drama of the underworld, lightened with just enough comedy to relieve some of its tenseness, this reviewer heartily recommends "Mr. Wise Guy," the Monogram picture which opened an engagement at the Capitol theatre last night.

Stars of the picture are the East Side Kids, that brash group of young "tough muggs" headed by Leo Gorcey, and it has been a long time since they have had a better vehicle for the display of their particular talents. They are the centre of an absorbing succession of events, which culminate in an exciting and action-filled climax.

The supporting cast is excellent throughout, including as it does many such players as Billy Gilbert, Douglas Fowley, Joan Barclay, Guinn Williams, Warren Hymer, Ann Doran and Benny Rubin. The complete roster of the East Side Kids comprises not only Leo Gorcey, but Bobby Jordan, Huntz Hall, Gabriel Dell, "Sunshine" Sammy Morrison, Bobby Stone and David Gorcey and includes nearly all the original group who have made such an outstanding success on stage and screen.

AT THE BELLE

"Take a Letter Darling"

Laughs and romance abound in "Take a Letter Darling" co-starring Rosalind Russell and Fred MacMurray and featuring such favorites as Constance Moore, Robert Benchley and MacDonald Carey.

Three splendid junior feature attractions precede the feature offering.

"Jean Gabin in Moontide"

A dynamic new personality has come to the screen in the person of Jean Gabin, whose first American picture, "Moontide," comes to the Belle theatre screen.

Long a French star, Gabin won the praise of movie critics with his expert portrayals in such French pictures as "Pepe Le Moko," "Grand Illusion" and "Port of Shadows." American picture companies offered him fabulous sums to come to Hollywood and make a picture, but they were met with refusals.

However, when Paris fell to the Nazi hordes, Gabin was forced into exile, and came to the motion picture capital 20th Century-Fox presented the best opportunity and Gabin signed a long-term contract.

He was given the right to choose his own stories, and he read through some fifty scrips before he decided to make his debut in "Moontide" a best-selling novel by Willard Robertson.

"Moontide" is tailor-made for Gabin. Most of the action takes place on the Southern California waterfront, with a rugged romantic, adventure-seeking dock worker as the central character. Much of Gabin's life had been spent on the docks in France, so the role was a "natural" for him.

Mark Hellinger was selected to produce Gabin's first American effort, and he and his director, Archie Mayo, chose Ida Lupino to play opposite the French star. One of the best dramatic actresses in Hollywood, it was felt that Ida Lupino and Gabin would make a perfect team and advance reports bear this out.

The featured cast was carefully selected, and includes two of the most sought-after character actors in the movie capital, Thomas Mitchell and Claude Rains. Jerome Cowan and Helene Reynolds were given important supporting parts.

"Sunday Punch" Thrilling

Two prize fighters and a lady provide a thrilling as well as hilarious plot for "Sunday Punch" in which William Lundigan, new screen discovery makes his bow as a leading man, opposite Jean Rogers, and stages a gripping prize fight with Dan Dailey Jr., in the midst of an expert, all-comedian cast.

AT THE McCARTHY

Irene Dunne, one of Hollywood's loveliest screen stars, returns to the field of gay comedy in Universal's "Lady in a Jam," now at the McCarthy Theatre.

Produced and directed by famed Gregory La Cava, the new picture is a worthy vehicle for the comedic talents of the glamorous lady whose comedienne abilities have delighted theatre-goers in the past in such delightful film-fare as "The Awful Truth," "Theodora Goes Wild" and "My Favorite Wife."

Gay Portrayal

"In "Lady in a Jam," Miss Dunne portrays an irresponsible New York heiress who goes broke and who then proceeds to go West, to the badlands of Arizona, to work an abandoned gold mine in a ghost town. Patric Knowles and Ralph Bellamy are Miss Dunne's leading men, and the supporting cast includes Queenie Vassar, Eugene Pallette and Samuel S. Hinds.

Acclaimed as a strange and powerfully exciting drama, Columbia's "The Man Who Returned To Life" is the second hit on this holiday program. The screenplay, which was written by Gordon Rigby, has a distinctively unusual theme, being based on the question of whether or not a successful business man will dare risk his career and family in order to save the life of a man unjustly convicted of murder!

With John Howard, who was most recently seen in "Three Girls About Town," in the leading role, the cast also includes lovely Lucile Fairbanks, Marcella Martin, Ruth Ford, Roger Clark and Paul Guilfoyle among many others.

WARTIME

forced to close their doors periodically because their establishments are jammed. Others lock up for the night at 8 p.m. and earlier because they are sold out.

At night the men from the army camps stream into the towns by the hundreds, on foot, on motorcycles and army trucks. They jam the local beer taverns and lunch counters and cafes do a land office business.

The big question in the interior is "how long will it last?"

Almost any oldtimer will tell you, if you give him a chance, of the boom eras of the past which eventually faded having barely scratched the possibilities of the country in mining, lumbering and agriculture.

But most believe now that the wartime building of roads that 50 years of peacetime appeal failed to bring, the country will be open after the soldier's tents and construction gangs have disappeared.

WORK AND ORCHIDS

For Kay, the hum of activity within the red brick fortress was augmented by a new note, drums beating, insistently, steadily. Accelerated beat. Faster. Faster. The undertone of her life became so swiftly moving it took her breath away.

"Louisiana Belles" was well under way and it was bedlam. "Miss Kenyon, the model of the cabin is in the display room. Will you look it over please?" "Miss Kenyon, Nu-Novelties say they'll have to cast the iron kettles. Will you speak to them?" "Miss Kenyon, the supply office says they're run out of miniature swords for General Chocolate and they can't get more of the same. Would it be all right to use a substitute?"

Kay pinched herself.

A few months ago she did not know a display room from a prospectus. If she could have glimpsed herself in this hurly-burly of trade, in this great thrumming building in the heart of the greatest city, she would have called it a fantastic dream and promised herself she would not eat rashly before going to bed.

Kay was passing Burge's desk when the head of the department signalled her.

"Miss Kenyon," he said, "we have satisfactory reports on our feelers for the L. B. display." Already Louisiana Belles had been abbreviated for speed. "We want to put extra emphasis on this project. Pralines are a matter of course in our southern market, but in the north they're more or less stagnant. There are plenty of pecans on the market. There's nothing involved about the production of the product. Sugar, butter, pecans and a first-class candy cook. In fact it's so simple we're wondering if it will take."

Kay said, feeling very old and wise, "it's been taking for a great many years, Mr. Burge. I remember my daddy bringing me back a box of pralines from New Orleans when I was a tadpole. I'm sure Dad's father and his grandfather brought back pralines, too for their families if they went to New Orleans."

Burge said beetling his brows, "I'm not so sure. Maybe this is too simple. The way things are today, it's complicated. Specialization. Why you can't even get a good old-fashioned doughnut without it's smeared with sweet muck or wrapped up in a sugar-glass envelope. You get a dab of a specialist's idea in everything you buy—dab of this, dab of that. I expect that very soon we'll be buying handkerchiefs not only for their quality and their color, but because they are everlastingly fixed with our favorite perfume."

Kay laughed. It was the first time she had laughed, involuntarily in Burge's presence.

"Not you," she said. "You'll stand by the good old soap smell, with the touch of outdoors from the washlife."

Burge sputtered. Never before had Kay known him to be confused.

"I was—it was the ladies I meant. Despite the swains and the remembering husbands and the men who pay obligations with candy, the fact remains that at least eighty per cent of the candy is bought by women. Women like do-dads. They like fancy stuff."

"A broad statement Mr. Burge. I'm a woman and I like simplicity. If I may so—it seems to me that the important thing in these specials is to catch the eye. Appeal to the imagination. Please the sense of sight, intrigue the imagination, then follow up with a real treat for the sense of taste. A fine product attractively presented must move."

"You think so?" Burge was being the big executive again. He had, for the first time, abandoned his air of command. The office was aware. Suddenly typewriters, that had been silent, tickled swiftly.

"I have reason to believe so," Kay said. "Not a great deal of reason, but enough to make it worth while tryin. The first two displays, Cinderella and the Chocolate Soldier were born of imagination. They had eye appeal, but the product was simple. Candy kisses from a recipe we use at home in our kitchens. Old-fashioned chocolate drops. But they weren't just casual candies. They had pride and thought and purpose in them. And the best of ingredients. We can do the same with pralines. More. They're a man's candy as well as a woman's. They're wholesome, they're crunchy and they're not to complicated.

Burge came as near to the chuckling as the office could remember.

"I get what you're driving at," he said. "Every now and then my wife runs across a fancy recipe in a luxury magazine or a folderol on the Woman's Page. Thats' the night we all wish we'd stayed out for dinner and how about a steak with baked potatoes?"

Kay said. "I could use a steak myself. Appetite is creeping up on me. About the miniature iron kettles for L. B., Mr. Burge, Nu-Novelties says they'll have to be cast."

"Cast iron kettles?" Burge was the hard-boiled budgeteer again. "That'll cost money. After the display, they'll be a total waste."

"Wait a minute. Do you mind if I take this chair?" Kay sat down by Burge's desk. "How stupid of us not to have thought of it before. Pardon, I feel like I've been hit on the head. Miniature iron kettles! They'd be marvellous toys for little girls who play cooking. They'd be stunning ash trays, and practical too. Couldn't we find some way to offer miniature iron kettles as prized, say on a lucky number, or for so many pounds of pralines?"

Burge made a sudden gesture. It overturned the inkwell on his desk. He said, "I'll consider the suggestion of the miniature kettles. Tell Ellis to put through the order to Nu-Novelties. If they have to be cast, they have to be cast."

Burge pressed a button on his desk. Kay had been at National long enough to know that row of six buttons on Burge's desk. The one he pressed was for National's Mr. Big.

Kay entered her hotel late in the evening with an inner elation that kept weariness from dragging at her heels. Mr. Big of National Candies had squeezed her dry of ideas for "Louisiana Belles", but he had not shaken her enthusiasm for promotion of pralines, of her faith in her ability to put the project over.

A letter for her was at the desk. Air Mail! Somerset. Something wrong at home? No, the writing was unfamiliar. Or was it? Why no. Of course not. Bessie. Bessie Munsell. She hadn't heard from Bessie Munsell for weeks, it seemed. In her room she tore open the envelope with a glow of anticipation. The first line of the letter leaped out at her in a dazzle of words:

"Darling . . . this is Mrs. Thomas G. Burford speaking. It's true, so help me. It happened yesterday. We eloped. Yes, it's THE Tom Buford, the same Tom who used to go around with your crowd. We've been in love a long time, ever since we were in primary grade. Only, when we grew up, Tom's folks raised such a fuss, I gave him up. It all seemed so hopeless, I thought I'd better stay on my side of the railroad track where I belonged. That was why I was so bitter when you met me in the candy store, why I let myself go hang.

"You gave me a new lease on life. You picked me up, brushed me off, put hope in me. I dreamed again, and darling, it worked. Tom came home on leave, he's with a shipping firm in Seattle, Washington, you know. We both knew the first minute we met again. Kay, we're so terribly in love. We're leaving tomorrow for the West Coast and HOME, our home, before the hue and cry sets in. Can't you just hear Tilly Holmes and her gang yowling. Tom's mother knows. She wants him to be happy, so she is willing to accept me. As for the rest of the Bufords, ye gods! I'm glad we'll be a long way from here when they get the news and go into a panic. It doesn't make and difference, really, what they think, say or do. Tom is all that matters. My husband! Gee, let me pinch myself.

"I'll drop you a line as soon as we get to Seattle. I'm so happy I could float—in fact I am floating. Love and God bless you for bringing me to myself and to Tom.

"BESSIE."

Tears were in Kay's eyes; yet she was laughing. Bessie married, and to Tom Buford. Tom of THE Bufords, the eye-brow lifting Bufords, the rich and socially elect Bufords. What a morsel for the Somerset felines to roll on their tongues. The new Bessie would know how to deal with them. The new Bessie was no drab slattern, hapless and hopeless. She was a chic, courageous young woman who held her head high and her pride without a tarnish. Bessie had found love, happiness, had dared to seize upon them, claim them for herself? Would she, Kay Kenyon, dare so much for so rich a treasure?

At nine o'clock, Kay looked into a mirror.

"I'm surprised at you," she told the girl who smiled back at her. "You ought to be worn to a nub. You ought to tumble into bed and toss about in an effort to assemble yourself. You ought to do anything reasonable except what you are about to do—go dancing and prancing. Why? For Ronnie? But Ronnie doesn't need you. He's been doing this sort of thing all his adolescent, now his mature, life. Ronnie flicks reality off his elbow. He'd like you to be a flicker too. He loved you, in his Ronnie way. Is that your way, Kay Kenyon? Is it to be a hi-de-ho and away we go? Is it to be privilege, gold spoon in the mouth? You know it cannot be gold spoon, Kay Kenyon. Not now. Not in this new world. Privilege is out. Production is paramount. What can you do? What do you do? The answer to these questions is the measure of you. Oh, you have that little bit of patrimony left. And after that, what?

A knock on the door. A lavender box with silver ribbons, gardenias. From Ronnie.

Little Benny's Note Book

Us fellows are getting tired of waiting for Skinny Martin and Lucky Leroy Shooster to have their fight, and now they dont even speak to each other, and us fellows were sitting on Skinny's frant steps talking and arguing, and I said, Hay, Skinny, why dont you and uLcky Shooster make up at least for enough to talk to each other, because good night if you're not even talking how are you ever going to get to fighting?

Sure, that fight will never come off at this rate, Puds Simkins said, and Sid Hunt said, G wizzickers, what are you 2 going to do, wait till you're both old men and pull each others whiskers? All you have to do is start to say hello to each other, and after that you can work up to something insulting, he said, and Sam Cross said, Well all I know is, if you dont start talking to each other I cant invite either of you to my birthday party, because my mother wont allow me invite any enemies.

Go on, you had a party for your birthday a couple of months ago, that's one of the biggest ones you ever told, Skinny said.

Meaning on account of Sam being such a famous liar, and Sam said, Oh, that birthday, that was just my mixed-up birthday. For a long while my mother and father thought I was born in June, till they found out from our family doctor it was August, so I always have a even bigger party for my Auust birthday. So are you going to start speaking to Lucky or not? he said, and Skinny said, Not till I go and ask your mother.

Well if you do you'll only go and spoil it, because she's sensitive on the subjevt because everybody's always kidding her about it, so what she'll do is just call the whole party off, Sam said, and us other fellows said, Sure, of course, anybody's mother would be sensitive, you better hurry up and make up with Lucky.

Nothing doing, I dont believe it and you guys dont either, Skinny said.

Which we didn't.

Sky Over Channel Dotted With Spitfires

London, Aug. 4 (CP)—Spitfires swarmed over the English Channel in a mid-day attack on the Calais area today while Nazi raiders damaged two English towns in scattered bombing forays.

A third English town on the south coast was saved from bombing by a blistering anti-aircraft barrage.

Observers at Folkestone reported the sky over the channel was dotted during the afternoon with Spitfires returning from the Calais attacks. Clouds kept the planes so low that some swept in at rooftop level.

Keen competition marked the day's play according to the local team.

Promises Inquiry Into Use of Gasoline

London, Aug. 4 (CP)—A government inquiry into the use of gasoline in a 320-mile trip by Dr. Hewlett Johnson, Dean of Canterbury, to attend a political meeting July 10 was promised today by Fuel Minister Gwilym Lloyd George.

The question raised in the House of Commons by Flt. Lt. Henry Raikes, Conservative, was underlined by further comment from another Conservative member, Maurice Petherick, who said it would be "outrageous" if gasoline had been given to a "Prelate of notoriously subversive views."

William Gallacher, Communist, interjected: "You're just a bunch of Fascists," and, sighting Lady Astor entering the Chamber, he added: "here is your leader."

HOW TO RELIEVE PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY AND EASILY

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

If you try Hem-Roid and are not entirely pleased with the results your druggist will gladly return your money.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 4—(CP) — Only 36,000 shares changed hands in the first three hours of stock trading today, one of the dullest trading periods of the year.

Bell Telephone weakened 3 to 127 and losses of a point appeared for Canada Cement Pfd. and Canadian Dredge. Minor gains were boarded by Brazilian, Walkers Common, British American Oil and Canada Steamships and Canadian Bakeries Pfd. gained 4 points to 55.

Macassa, Teck Hughes, Dome, Kerr-Addison, Sylvanite and Preston posted minor gains against losses for McIntyre, San Antonio and Lake Dufault. Smelters and PePnd Oreille were weak base metals.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 4—(AP)—Selected stocks, again led by rails, managed to tack on modest gains in today's market. Fractional irregularity was the rule near the fourth hour.

Santa Fe posted a new high since 1938. Doing fairly well were Southern Railway, Southern Pacific, Pennsylvania, U. S. Steel, Anaconda, General Electric, Westinghouse and American Telephone.

Among occasional stumblers were Union Carbide, Standard Oil (NJ), Sears Roebuck, U. S. Rubber and Phelps Dodge.

Canadian stocks were quiet. Canadian Pacific gained 1-8 while Distillers Seagram eased 1-4 and Dome was unchanged.

CHEESE GRADINGS

Ottawa, Aug. 4 —(CP)— Cheese gradings in Ontario and Quebec during the week ended Aug. 1 totalled 70,717 boxes compared with 61,990 during the corresponding week last year. The Dominion Department of Agriculture reported today.

Gradings since last Dec. 1 totalled 1,160,449 boxes against 707,553 in the same period of the 1940-41 period.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Aug. 4 (CP)—Dressedweight were up 10 cents at Hull and prices were unchanged at other bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

Livestock :—Chatham $10.75.

Dressedweight: Brantford $15.50 plus transportation, Hull $15.50 plus transportation, Peterboro 15.45 plus transportation, Peterboro reported the quotation unchanged, the last report from there, however, quoted dressedweight at $15.40 plus transportation, Aug. 1.

TUNGSTEN PRICE RISES

Ottawa, Aug. 4—(CP) — In a move aimed at increasing production of tungsten from Canadian mines, Metals Controller George C. Bateman has authorized an increase in the price of tungsten from $20 to $24 a short ton unit of 20 pounds, the Department of Munitions and Supply announced today.

A departmental statement said the price ceiling does not affect purchases by the department to increase government stock piles.

ITALIANS WIPE OUT VILLAGE IN YUGOSLAVIA

London, Aug. 4—(CP) — Yugoslay government sources reported today that the Italians had wiped out the village of Jelini in the Fiume district of Yugoslavia in reprisal against patriots.

Accused patriots and their dependents were interned, 20 persons were executed and all others expelled from the village, which then was razed, the reports said.

MEMBERS OF CREW FOUND SAFE

Armstrong, Ont., Aug. 4—(CP) —The three members of the crew of a Royal Canadian Air Force bombing plane, forced down on a shallow, muddy lake 100 miles north of here, were found alive and apparently uninjured yesterday, it was learned today.

Names of the crew members were understood to be Sgt. Verdoun, pilot in charge of the plane, and leading Aircraftmen Beardmore and Smith but their initials and hometowns were not available.

The plane, missing since Sunday, was reported located yesterday by R.C.A.F. and Ontario Forestry Air Service planes.

Daring Bomber Pilot Awarded Flying Cross

London, Aug. 4 (CP Cable)—FO. Donald Philip MacIntyre of Saint John, N.B., R.C.A.F. Bomber pilot, has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for his skilful emergency landing in Norway last April and escape, with his crew, to Britain.

The citation said the 27-year-old airman was shot down over Norway after a low-level attack on the Trondheim naval base.

The citation said: "During the operation his aircraft was hit. The outer portion of the wing caught fire and the fuselage and cockpit filled with smoke.

"Soon the aircraft was well alight and as it became uncontrollable, FO MacIntyre decided to descend on a lake to which he was directed by his navigator. This he achieved by a feat of superb airmanship.

"After a perilous journey and suffering great hardships, FO. MacIntyre and his crew eventually reached England."

The bomber's crew plowed through mountain snows for three days and nights to the Swedish frontier. They were interned briefly at Falun, in central Sweden.

Hunt for 12 Missing After Boat Capsizes

Standish, Mich., Aug. 4 —(AP)— A virtually-hopeless hunt was underway today by land, sea and air for 12 persons missing since Sunday when a cruiser carrying a fishing party foundered in Saginaw Bay.

The only known survivor, Mrs. Louis Repke, 23, Bay City, Mich., who swam an estimated seven miles to safety, was recovering meanwhile from her experience.

Mrs. Repke told of having set out with her husband and a second woman in an attempt to swim to shore after the 30-foot craft, a converted tug, presumably struck a rock in mid-bay.

From about 3 p.m. until darkness, the three kept together. Then they became separated.

Mrs. Repke attained shore and struggled to an unoccupied hunting cabin, there to fall into an exhausted sleep.

At noon yesterday she awakened and walked three miles to a farm house.

Concentrations 36 Times a Day Of Reds Attack

New York, Aug. 4 —(AP)— Russian concentrations are counter attacking as often as 36 times a day with a force of six infantry divisions and three armored brigades in a fight for bridgeheads at Voronezh, German officials admitted today in a Berlin broadcast heard here.

They reiterated their claim that their troops still hold Voronezh, 10 miles east of the Don at the northern flank of the wedge into the Don bend and the Caucasus.

The Russians repeatedly have denied that Voronezh ever fell into German hands.

Unpatriotic Hoarding Will be Stopped

Unpatriotic hoarding

Toronto, Aug. 4.— (CP)— New regulations issued Sunday in connection with tea and coffee rationing will put a stop to unpatriotic hoarding, Mrs. Ryland H. New of Oakville, chairman of the Women's Advisory Committee to the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, said in an interview today.

Mrs. New's reference to unpatriotic hoarding was illustrated by one merchant at a pleasure resort 60 miles from Toronto. After the announcement of the rationing order Sunday he was "cleaned out" of tea and coffee supplies before he himself knew of the new regulations.

Missing Plane Believed Located

Armstrong, Aug. 4 — (CP)—An R.C.A.F. plane with a crew of three, missing since Sunday, is reported to have been located on the edge of a lake north of here.

Forestry officials reported air searchers believed they had located the plane after seeing smoke from a camp fire along the lake shore. R.C.A.F. and Ontario forestry air service planes participated in the search throughout Sunday and early today.

DIRECTOR DIES

Hollywood, Aug. 4—(AP)—James H. Cruze, 58, once one of the Screen's great directors, died today at his home. He had been in ill health for several years.

Subway Sleepers To "Stay Put"

London, Aug. 4—(CP)—The government has cancelled an order which would have evicted 500 members of that strange war-born society—the subway dwellers who nightly gather below London's streets to discuss everything from an allied second front to baby's new tooth.

Increased German aerial activity in the London area caused cancellation of the order which was to have gone into effect yesterday.

The underground population was relieved by this decision.

"That's fine," said Mrs. John Burford whose family of three daughters and an 11-year-old son sleeps on the Holborn subway platform. "We can all stay on here."

She and her family have spent every night since September, 1940, in the Holborn station. A German bomb destroyed their home. The only thing salvaged from the wreck was her husband's picture. He's fighting in Egypt.

She works 12 hours daily in a war factory. The soldier—father's picture is posted nightly over her son's cot in the subway.

More than 2,000 persons sleep on these subway platforms a few feet from the tracks. Another 3,000 in London's battered east end live in shelters beneath warehouses, banks and factories.

In the Strand station one woman, Lily Brider, who works in a printing office, was worried when the government first decided to close that station.

"It's real pleasant here," she said. "I've decided to move to the Trafalgar Square station, but I don't expect to like it. They have such funny people there."

40,000 TO WORK ON TOMATO CROP

Heavy Crop is Expected in Windsor Area and East of Toronto

Toronto, Aug. 4—(CP) — More than 40,000 men, women and children will begin work within the next two weeks on Ontario tomato patches and peach orchards according to applications received here by the Ontario Farm Service Branch of the Department of Agriculture which acts as clearing agent for hired help.

Growers are asking for as many as ten to twenty pickers where the local service camps are able to provide from 50 to 80 hands. Officials say that many growers are establishing camps of their own and providing cooks and other necessary help.

In the Windsor area and east of Toronto the tomato crop is expected to be heavy, and help will be required from now until the end of September.

Fined $100 on 2 Charges Illegal Sale of Tires

Brockville, Ont., Aug. 4.—(CP)— On each of two charges of selling tires, illegally William J. Nedow, Brockville, today as fined $100 with costs of $2 in each case. The case against the accused, first of its kind to be aired in the local court, was laid by the Wartime Industries Control Board and prosecuted by James R. Maclaren, K.C., appointed by the Department of Justice. The sales ere made to Clifford Snelson, Prescott, and Edward Manahan, Brockville, both ineligible as tire purchasers.

Russia Holds Right Flank Quite Firm

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Moscow's claim that Russian lines below Voronezh and around the great Don bend to the rim of the vast salt marshes in the North-eastern Caucasus are holding well seem confirmed even by Nazi war bulletins; but Berlin reports another advance southwest of Salsk. It says a German "tank army" has pushed below Belaya Glinta to "approach the upper course of the Kuban River."

If that is true, a Nazi spearhead it within forty miles or so of the great bend of the Kuban where it turns west to empty into the Sea of Azov via the lakes of Taman Peninsula. The Kuban furnishes Russian defenders of the Caucasus with a strong 200 mile front eastward from the sea to the approaches to the Maikop oil fields. The obvious Nazi attempt in driving southwestward from the Salsk area via Belaya Glinta is to turn the Kuban line from the east before Red forces can reach it for a stand.

Important Objective.

Berlin's mention of the upper course of the Kuban as an important objective leaves little doubt that the river plays a big part in Russian strategy. Moscow now reports that Cossacks of the Kuban as well as of the Don tribes are being thrown into action. They are the shock troops of the Red Army of the Caucasus, reserved until now. The implication is that Marshal Timoshenko is preparing to make a stand on his left flank above or upon the Kuban, as his centre has braced from Salsk northeastward to the Don bend and his right along the Don to Voronezh.

The immediate danger point, however, is on the left-centre sector of his indicated line. The weak spot is east of the bend of the Kuban at Temijbekskya. There is a fifty-mile span of open steppe country there, suitable for mechanised operations, down which the Germans are driving in evident hope of turning the probable Russian front along the Kuban.

The Kuban River is an ultimate defence front not only because it covers the Maikop oil field, the only Caucasus oil source as yet in jeopardy; but because it also offers protection from a Nazi flanking move from the Crimea across narrow Kerch Strait. It links up with the lake system on Taman Peninsula, east of the strait. North of it along the Azov sea coast of the Caucasus lie a bewildering maze of small inlets and islands, all but uninhabited, that appear to render that Russian flank impregnable to tank attack from the north.

Pitched Battle in Prospect.

Even should the Nazi thrust from Belaya Glinta reach the north or east bank of the Kuban in the vicinity of the bend, the river has strong defensive possibilities. Its defenders, racing northeastward below the bend and northward above it, would confront the foe with difficult barriers well served with roads and backed by the Caucasus foothills.

Southward, the terrain on the right bank, toward which the Germans are pressing, grows increasingly difficult. South of the Krasnodar-Stavropol railroad after it leaves the Kuban at Temijbekskya to swing on a wide southeasterly circle through the Steppes, a confusion of small streams tributary to the Kuban drains the right bank.

The Steppes give way to more rugged land dotted with commanding heights of 500 to 1,000 foot altitude east and south of the Kuban bend. The most open country is west of the Kuban, within the bend. That also is the route of the Rostov-Baku rail and pipelines after they cross the Kuban west of Temijbekskya.

That makes possession of the bend of the Kuban vitally important to the Nazis as they attempt to push southward either to reach Baku and its oil, or to split Russian defence lines apart. A pitched battle for that great river bend is in prospect.

VIOLENT DEATHS IN EAST CANADA NUMBER FORTY

Deaths on Monday, Civic Holiday, in Ontario Total Only Four

ONTARIO FATALITIES

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Forty persons met violent deaths in Eastern Canada between Saturday and Monday, but only four lives were lost in Ontario Monday during the Civic holiday.

Thirty-one lives were lost Saturday and Sunday, when 15 persons died in the water, nine suffered fatal injuries in traffic accidents, two died in railway accidents, one died of burns and two men were killed in an explosion and fire which swept a Montreal paint plant.

Two women and a girl were killed last night in a panic which followed a trivial fire in a Montreal wrestling stadium. The dead: Mrs. Mathilda Cote, 63; Denise Wistaff, eight, and an unidentified woman about 25 years old. A score of men, women and children were injured.

Joseph Cosgrave, 48, Toronto, was killed instantly while attempting to board a moving freight train at Winona station near Hamilton.

Drowned in Lake Erie

Mary Suzanne Patricia Milligan, four, of Leamington, Ont., was drowned in Lake Erie at Seacliff Park when she waded into the water. Patrick Brigham, 15, Fort William, Ont., was drowned in the Neebling river when he fell off a rocky ledge into deep water.

Eleven-year-old John Cinll, of Hamilton, Ont., was fatally injured when he fell off his bicycle while turning in a driveway

An unidentified airman was killed at Montreal when a Harvard training plane crashed into a lake near Ste. Anne de Bellevue, a Montreal suburb. Another airman was injured, but not seriously

A Royal Air Force flier was killed near Kentville, N.S., when a twin-motored plane crashed in wooded country.

Action Simmers Down To Patrol Activity On El Alamein Front

Cairo, Aug. 4—(AP)—Action on the El Alamein front has simmered down to patrol activity and occasional aerial clashes, a joint R.A.F. and general headquarters communique said today.

Two German Messerschmitt 109 fighters were reported damaged in dogfights yesterday.

The communique said R.A.F. fighters over Malta fought off two enemy attempts to raid the island fortress.

PLANES CONVOY TRUCKS WITH SUPPLIES FOR EL ALAMEIN

A British truck convoy, moving up to the front with supplies near El Alamein, in Egypt, is closely guarded by planes to prevent raids by Axis aircraft. One fighter plane is shown here as it swooped low over the convoy. In the desert battle for Egypt, even water has to be transported many miles. Convoys of both sides take terrific batterings, but the United Nations have won air superiority here.

ROADS, BEACHES, RESORTS CROWDED OVER HOLIDAY

Trains, Buses Carry Large Numbers of Holiday-Makers

RESTAURANTS BUSY

(By The Canadian Press)

Ontario holiday-makers thronged highways, beaches and resorts throughout the province during the Civic Holiday week-end in numbers unofficially estimated as almost equalling last year's crowds when gasoline rationing was not in force. Traffic policemen, lifeguards and restaurateurs reported their duties extended to the limit by motorists, bathers and hungry customers.

London and Goderich officials reported trains, buses and highways jammed as thousands of Western Ontario travellers returned from holiday tours of nearby beaches. Many Goderich restaurant owners were forced to shorten their opening hours when numbers of customers and the labor shortage became too much for them.

Hamilton transportation officials said holiday crowds broke all records on the public services, with fares within a radius of 30 miles of the city predominating.

Kingston police reported traffic at least as heavy as in former years. Hotels, cabins and tourist homes were filled and one restaurant keeper had to call police to clear some of his hungrier customers out to make room for waiters trying to make their way to tables. Other restaurants locked their doors every few minutes to control the traffic in and out. Some gasoline stations sold out early in the day.

TRUCK SUSTAINS $1,000 DAMAGE

Failing to negotiate a turn in the road at Foxboro, a large transport, driven by Cecil Post, of this city, crashed into a tree and turned over early Saturday. The driver escaped with minor cuts and abrasions.

Traffic Officer J. H. Hatch investigated and was informed the transport was being driven in a northerly direction and apparently went out of control and swerved into the tree, where the vehicle turned over. Damage estimated at over $1,000, resulted.

JAS. HART KILLED WHEN HIT BY CAR NEAR JONES CREEK

56-Year-Old Man Was Walking Westward at Time of Accident

INQUEST OPENED

Struck from behind while walking along Highway No. 2 three miles west of Belleville Sunday evening, 56-year-old James Hart, of R. R. No. 2 Belleville, was instantly killed. Hart suffered a compound fracture of the skull and died almost instantly, it was disclosed at a preliminary inquest held before Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson at Martin's Funeral Home on Monday.

Hart was walking westerly along Highway No. 2 opposite the Jones' Creek intersection when he was struck by a west bound motor car, driven by 23-year-old James W. Whalen, 12 St. Charles Street, in this city. Traffic Officers J. H. Hatch and W. G. Milton investigated and learned that Mr. Whalen was proceeding westerly and was about to pass another west bound automobile, driven by PO. James R. Hensler, of the R.C.A.F., stationed at Trenton. All concerned in the accident were proceeding westerly, Whalen's car striking Hart and hurling him 17 feet into a nearby driveway on the south side of the road.

PO. Hensler informed police he was travelling about 30 miles an hour when Whalen attempted to pass him at a moderate rate of speed. Whalen told police, they said, that he did not see the pedestrian until partially passed Hensler's car. Both drivers were of the opinion that Mr. Hart was walking near the edge of the pavement at the time of the impact.

At the preliminary inquest Dr. F. R. Ross stated death was instantaneous as the result of a compound fracture of the skull.

Battle Monsoon To Smash Jap Drome In Central Burma

New Delhi, India, Aug. 4—(CP)—Flying through rains so thick pilots said it was "like submarine navigation" American bombers have smashed Myitkyina airdrome in central Burma to such an extent the Japanese are unable to use it as a base for attacks on planes ferrying war goods to China United States Air Force headquarters reported today.

Added to these monsoon downpours of tropical intensity as obstacles were heavier ground defences thrown up by the Japanese in an effort to protect the airdrome, which bisects the ferry command transport line between India and China.

WILL YOU BE DRIVING NEXT YEAR?
YOUR TIRES ARE THE ANSWER!

DO YOU KNOW—in 15,000 miles of operation the wheels of your car have turned 10,800,000 complete revolutions—and that every inch of tire face and wall have flexed up and down 21,600,000 times?

(If you bend a piece of wire back and forth only a few times it will get hot and finally break.)

DO YOU KNOW—in four sets of four tires examined by us, we removed 1¼ ounces of steel (tacks, wire, steel particles, etc.), four ounces of glass, 2½ ounces of stones and 7½ ounces of rust from the rims? (None of this was visible from an external inspection.)

DO YOU KNOW—if the front wheels of your car are out of alignment ¼" on toe-in, the tires are actually dragged 78 feet sideways in every mile you drive?

DO YOU KNOW—each tire has a different wear ratio—right rear 38%—left rear 29%—right front 19%—left front 14%—if your tires are not switched regularly the right rear will wear 24% faster than the left front. By alternating your tires at 2,500 mile intervals you can lengthen tire life 18%. By using your spare you may secure 27% to 31%. From 5,000 to 9,500 miles increased tire mileage.

If you remember that at fifty miles an hour the weight of your car plus its road speed equals more than 15 tons (30,000 pounds) and that there will be a tremendous friction between tires and road surface on brake application.

And that when the accelerator is pressed to the floor for fast acceleration 90 horses (modern motors average 90 horse-power) are trying to move the dead weight of your car.

And when you change direction at forty miles per hour the weight of the car plus the speed (approximately 11 tons) is trying to push the car in the direction you were going at first—that tire squeal is scuffing off precious rubber.

To continue driving your car you must become tire conscious. There are many MUSTS you must do.

THERE ARE MANY YOU CANNOT DO.

In our tire life extension plan we offer you a practical insurance in tire conservation—that is unexcelled.

Grouped under one plan we give you all of the many services necessary to assure you of being able to use your car next year.
WE WILL BE GLAD TO EXPLAIN THIS PLAN TO YOU.

FIRST BOTTLE CONVINCED HER SYNTONA WAS GREAT MEDICINE

Rid of Stomach Gas, Acidity, Rheumatic Pains; Free from Headaches; Sleeps Better.

"I had been in poor health for so many years that I really didn't remember what it was to feel otherwise until I began taking Syntona," said Mrs. Louise Fulcher, 11 Edinburgh Street, London, Ontario, recently.

"For years I suffered with stomach disorders. It got so bad that everything I ate caused gas with belching up of hot, sour liquids. This would be followed by heartburn with a feeling of dizziness and little black spots floating before my eyes. My back felt lame all the time and I was seldom free from sore, aching joints and muscles. To make matters worse my nerves became so upset that I'd lie awake unable to sleep after going to bed at night.

"A few weeks ago a neighbor told me of the good results she got by taking Syntona and I decided right there to try it. From the very first bottle I felt some better and I knew it was going to help me. With this little encouragement I kept on taking it until now for the first time in years I can eat heartily without suffering afterwards from gas, acid-risings and heartburn. I haven't had any dizziness since and the aches and pains have been relieved. My nerves have calmed down so that I have no trouble getting to sleep at night and as a result I feel so much better in every way that even my work seems easier. I am glad to add my name to the many who are recommending this fine medicine."

MRS. LOUISE FULCHER

Syntona is made from 12 of the finest grade Herbs, Roots and Barks. It acts on stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels and many who have used it say that even after the first few days the whole system takes on a new feeling of energy and vigor.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

RUSSIANS RETIRE IN BELAYA GLINA TO NEW LINES

1938 Munich Agreement Formally Renounced by Britain

PLANTS DOUBLE NUMBER GUNS FIRST PLANNED

Nazis Land Tanks, Parachute Troops In N. Caucasus

Entire Caucasian Front Alive With Nazis Battering Toward Oil Fields

SITUATION 'TENSE'

By EDDY GILMORE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Aug. 5—(AP)—The Germans were reported landing parachute troops in groups of 100 to 150 and small tanks in the north Caucasus today as the hard-pressed Russians withdrew from the Belaya Glina area to new defence positions in the face of swarms of German armored units.

Russian Warships Frustrate Nazis

The navy newspaper Red Fleet said Russian warships in the Sea of Azov were frustrating efforts of the Germans to move reinforcements into the battle south of Rostov by sea. Russian naval guns were reported sinking German ships and shelling German positions along the shore.

The Nazi parachute troops were landing with machine-guns and mine throwers besides small tanks, Red Star said. The parachutists were dropped close to populated points or railway stations. Red Star said the German units hoped to seize communications until motorized help arrived.

Parachutists also were being landed behind the Russian lines in the Belaya Glina sector, where the Germans, sending wave after wave of tanks at the harried Russians, broke through and forced the Soviet withdrawal. The Germans were sending groups of 50 and 60 tanks smashing into the Russian defences.

The German pattern was to pound the Russian lines with dive-bombers and then send a force of small tanks at them followed by heavy tanks, Red Star said. Riding on the tanks were automatic rifle men.

The entire Caucasian front was alive with the Germans battering their way toward Russia's long-desired oil treasures and the Russians announced another new withdrawal in the Tsimlyansk sector. It was there that the Red army had been trying to stem the flow German reinforcements over newly-established Don River bridgeheads.

The entire nation was aware of the fast-developing and critical situation in the Caucasus and the newspaper Pravda, in a message to soldiers and civilians alike, appealed: "More firmness and stubbornness and the enemy will be stopped."

British Commons Will Take Recess

London, Aug. 5 (CP)—While the public still speculated on a possible second-front decision, the House of Commons agreed today to a short summer recess, its members reassured by Sir Stafford Cripps that they would be recalled in the event of "any unexpected situation".

When the recess will start or how long it will last was not announced.

Sir Stafford, leader of the House reiterated the announcement that Prime Minister Churchill would make no statement on the war situation before the recess.

ITALIAN SUPPLY SHIP SUNK BY BRITISH SUB

London, Aug. 5 (CP)—A British submarine in the Mediterranean has sunk one Italian supply ship and damaged another so severely she had to be beached, the Admiralty announced today.

The ship sunk was the 800-ton Adda. She was fully laden. A number of survivors were picked up by the submarine.

The beached ship was severely damaged by the submarine's gunfire before she managed to run ashore under protection of Italian coastal batteries on the east coast of Sardinia.

London, Aug. 5. (CP)—A wartime story that sounds stranger than fiction:

Cmdr. John S. Dalsion of Britain's 40th Convoy Escort group related how his unit captured several Germans from a destroyed U-boat on the high seas.

"When I went to question the prisoners", he said, "I opened my cigaret case and showed them one of the signatures engraved there. It was the name of a German naval officer, who was a pre-war friend in China.

"The prisoners were considerably moved. It was the name of their captain, who was killed just the night before".

COST-OF-LIVING INCREASE WILL SWELL PAYROLLS

Additional 60 Cents Weekly Will be Paid Employees Who Have Not Received Bonus

2.4 INCREASE

Ottawa, Aug. 5—(CP)—The first appreciable increase in Canada's official index of living costs since price control was applied last December is expected to swell the nation's payroll by more than $1,000,000 a week, effective Aug. 15.

The 2.4 per cent. rise in the in- [illegible] since last October, reported [illegible]erday by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, will have this compulsory effect on employers affected by the Federal Wages Stabilization Order:

1. Those already paying employees a bonus of $3.65 a week will pay an additional 60 cents, except in the case of all women earning less than $25 a week and men under 21 in the same wage category, who will receive an additional 2.4 per cent. of their basic wage.

2. Those not now paying bonuses will pay employees the weekly 60-cent bonus, or the percentage provision for lower wage groups.

Every class of employee is covered by the Wages Stabilization Order except Dominion, Provincial and municipal employees, employees in agriculture, fishing, hunting, trapping and domestic service and employees of certain non-profit institutions.

The wages order applies in general to those of the rank of foreman or lower. Employees above rank of foreman are within scope of the Wartime Salaries Order which permits, but does not require, payment of bonuses to executives.

Donald Gordon, Wartime Prices and Trade Board chairman, said 90 per cent. of the increase in living costs since October was caused by increases in food prices. Beef and potatoes, he said, accounted for 37 per cent. of the total movement.

NOT ELIGIBLE FOR BONUSES

Ottawa, Aug. 5. (CP)—Increased cost-of-living bonuses, payable after Aug. 15 do not mean anything to the wives of officers and men in the armed forces because they are not eligible for bonuses, Dependents' Allowance Board officials said today.

There have been frequent representations made to the government for payment of the bonus to dependents of those in the forces but no action has yet been taken.

Canadian Soldiers Get Tough Training Somewhere in Wilds of B. C. Interior

Editor's note: Herbert Jones, Canadian Press staff writer, has just made a trip through a section of the British Columbia interior. In this story he describes the training that is making Canada's home army tough.

By HERBERT JONES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in the British Columbia interior, Aug. 5 — (CP)— Tough soldiers in a tough country.

That's the military picture today somewhere in British Columbia's rugged interior where an arm of the Canadian army is being brought quickly up to wartime hardness.

Training grounds have been cut out of a wilderness of timber by the men themselves.

Sweating sergeants bark orders to men in full battle kit racing over an "assault course", a muscle-wracking half-mile tract of ditches, ladders, hurdles and high wires where men swing themselves through the air hand-over-hand.

On a dusty country road a route march party swings along in scatter formation—groups of five or six spaced out in single file on each side of the road. Suddenly their marching song is interrupted by a sharp command and they fling themselves into the roadside bush and lie prone.

Some scratch themselves on branches, some find themselves lying in oozing muskeg. There is more sweating and swearing. But these men are learning to scatter and protect themselves from ground-strafing planes.

Into the wild timber country 10 to 12 miles from camp goes a foray party of 600 men with full equipment to bivouac for two days in what might be described as a sort of inland commando movement.

Most of the men are from a town or city, like Cpl. S. C. Taylor of Port Hope, Ont., L. Cpl. S. J. Reid of Peterborough, Ont., or the brother combination of Lieut. Herbert Long, 27, Cpl. Frank Long, 24 and Pte. Keith Long, 28, all of Port Hope. Some of them are from prairie farms.

There's the odd American, such as Pte. J. J. Flynn, 29, of El Paso, Texas who joined up with an Ontario regiment at Windsor, Ont., two years ago and has since spurned a chance to transfer to the American forces.

But the country and the training—despite the toughness of both—seems to be agreeing with these men, whom officers say were never in better health.

All-India Congress Party Agrees to Fight if Granted Independence by Britain

Bombay, Aug. 5—(CP) — A new resolution was placed before the working committee of the all-India Congress party today stating that if India were granted independence the government "will wholeheartedly and unreservedly declare itself on the side of the united nations, agreeing to meet the Japanese or any other aggressor with armed resistance."

The new draft was described as designed to meet "reasonable and constructive" criticisms which followed the British disclosure yesterday of the draft of a resolution by Mohandas K. Gandhi which stated the first move of an independent government probably would be to negotiate with Japan.

Previously Gandhi reaffirmed his espousal of negotiations between India and Japan, once India gained her freedom from British rule, but declared "I never, even in my most unguarded moment, expressed the opinion that Japan and Germany would win the war."

"On the contrary I often have expressed the opinion that they can not win the war if only Britain will once and for all shed her Imperialism," said the wizened, ascetic leader of millions of Indians and champion of immediate independence for his country.

Scenes of Great Devastation In Bombed German Cities Viewed by Press in Pictures

(By D. E. BURRITT)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 5. (CP Cable)—Indubitable proof that the Royal Air Force is energetically fulfilling the threat of Air Marshal Arthur Travers Harris to "scourge the Reich" was given last night to representatives of the Empire's Press.

The evidence was presented in a photographic Mosaic obtained by unidentified pilots—two of them men who select the targets to be destroyed.

In detailed pictures, some so clear people could be seen in the streets, the Air Ministry produced a serial of destruction; of devastation most writers agreed was more extensive than anything to be found in Britain. Much of it came from incendiary and 4,000-pound bombs.

Areas of Damage

"You will see from the pictures", said a flight lieutenant serving as one of the R.A.F.'s photographic interpreters, "that these 4,000-pound bombs we are using today are doing far greater damage than was done by those we were using 12 months ago. Now we examine our pictures for areas of damage instead of points of damage as we used to do. These points of damage are no longer of much interest".

To a group of correspondents gathered around a big table illuminated by special lights the spokesman handed out photographs and sterescopes which revealed the detail of what the naked eye saw only as a dense picture.

Once focused on red-ringed spots the sterescopes "lifted" the picture to the point where you could appreciate the heights of the buildings, trees, factory chimneys and even people on the streets.

From all around the table came low whistles and exclamations of astonishments. And these from men who had often scanned confidential reports of damage done by British raids.

The pictures somehow brought to life what previously had been only verbal or written reports.

"Look here", said the interpreter, pointing to one part of a photograph of Saarbrucken's huge industrial area. "You will see where two 4,000-pound bombs fell within close proximity. The buildings over an areas of two acres have been actually flattened. That area of shattered buildings you see there extends over an area of 16 acres".

It was the same if not worse in each picture shown and described. There was Dusseldorf in a widespread picture with scores of little pencilled rings. One of these little marks ringed a 12-acre area ravaged by fire.

There were numerous similar rings. And it was the same on pictures of Lubeck, Bremen, Cologne, Hamburg, Rostock— where the Heinkel aircraft works were blasted—and other points receiving the attention of the R.A.F.

THREE LARGE AXIS SHIPS ATTACKED IN MEDITERRANEAN

One Hit Squarely, Near Misses Scored on Others —Two Enemy Planes Lost

LIGHT SKIRMISHES

Cairo, Aug. 5—(AP)—Heavy Allied bombers attacked three large enemy merchant ships in the Eastern Mediterranean yesterday, hitting at least one squarely and scoring near misses on the others, a British communique reported today.

Other bombers, ranging westward as far as Bardia in air activity of growing pitch, scored direct hits on Axis lighters and pounded "enemy light shipping" with sea and air escort, the communique said.

Two German Messerschmitts were listed as downed in the aerial operations.

While the R.A.F. told of developing air action, the ground forces reported only patrol skirmishes Monday night and artillery exchanges yesterday on the northern and central sectors of the dormant battle line in the El Alamein region some 70 miles west of Alexandria.

GRASS-THATCHED KOKODA WRECKED BY ALLIED PLANES

Japanese Apparently Halted in Kokoda Area of New Guinea

JUNGLE FIGHTING

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Aug. 5 (CP)—The suspension of all but reconnaissance operations in the Australian theatre today found the Japanese apparently halted in the Kokoda area of New Guinea near the base of the two-mile-high Owen Stanley range two weeks after their Buna-Gona landing and the start of their drive across the island.

Latest reports indicated that the airfield and other small clearings in the jungle at Kokoda—on the far side of the towering mountains from the Allies' port Moresby base on the south shore—were a virtual no man's land with both Allied and Japanese troops keeping close to the shelter of the dense, tropical foliage.

All advices agreed that Allied units still commanded the approaches to "the gap," a 9,000-foot pass which is 14 miles by tortuous uphill trails from Kokoda.

NOTES EXCHANGED BY EDEN, MASARYK IN WHITE PAPER

Britain 'Will Not Be Influenced by Changes in and Since Year 1938'

EDEN'S STATEMENT

London, Aug. 5 —(CP)— The British Government formally renounced today the 1938 Munich agreement—which began the partition of Czecho-Slovakia—and declared that Britain "will not be influenced by any changes effected in and since 1938" in settling Czecho-Slovakia's frontiers after the war.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden announced in the House of Commons that British policy toward Czecho-Slovakia was guided by formal recognition of the Czecho-Slovak government in London and by Prime Minister Churchill's declaration in September, 1940, that the Germans had destroyed the Munich agreement.

An exchange of notes between Eden and Jan Masaryk, foreign minister in the exiled Czecho-Slovak government, formally defining Britain's stand was issued simultaneously as a White Paper.

The Munich agreement was a four-power pact among Britain, France, Germany and Italy providing for gradual German occupation of parts of Czecho-Slovakia's Sudeten areas beginning Oct. 1, 1938.

The agreement was signed on Sept. 30, 1938, by the late Neville Chamberlain, then Britain's Prime Minister; Edouard Daladier, then Premier of France; Mussolini and Hitler.

Avoid Any Possible Misunderstanding

Mr. Eden explained in his formal declaration that Britain's attitude was adopted "to avoid any possible misunderstanding."

He recalled that the British decision on July 18, 1941, to recognize the Czech government here was taken with the understanding that Britain regarded "the juridicial position of the president and government of Czecho-Slovak Republic as identical with that of other allied heads of states and governments established in this country."

Cheers greeted Mr. Eden's announcement and the foreign secretary was asked whether the denunciation in any way affected frontiers of Czecho-Slovakia and Poland.

His reply noted that the peoples of Czecho-Slovakia and Poland, one of the countries which benefited territorially in the break-up of the Czech Republic after the agreement, now are allied and expressed confidence that they would settle any issues "on basis of the close and friendly relations which now exist between them."

'Trojan Horse' Tactics Used By Germans in Vain Before Leningrad

Moscow, Aug. 5—(AP)—Commissar of State Security P. Kubatkin asserted today that the German besiegers of Leningrad have resorted to a wide assortment of ruses, espionage and "trojan-horse" tactics in their vain efforts to break the defence of Russia's northern metropolis.

Writing in the Leningrad Pravda, Kubatkin related how a wounded man in a Russian uniform, picked up in the field and taken to a hossupplies from Red Army soldiers. He was tried by a court martial as a spy.

The commissar said the Germans also were using peasant garb to try to get behind the Red army lines as refugees, had dropped parachutists in Red army uniforms and had tried to recruit help from classes liquidated by the Soviet government.

(The Germans have been on Leningrad's outskirts since last Sept. 25.)

He reported one case in which the engineer in a factory, after making speeches urging the workers to greater efforts, was found to be a spy. The man had applied for membership in the Communist party and had been endorsed by three party members.

Last October, the commissar said, a group of young persons in Leningrad was found to be carrying on counter - revolutionary activities. They even went to the outskirts of the city and fired on the Soviet defenders. They were the children of Russians punished by the government for counter - revolutionary activities, he said.

Make 4½ Times As Many Guns Today as Year Ago

60 P.C. of 300,000 Workers in Plants Are Women Worker's Output up 40 PC

HOURS SHORTENED

London, Aug. 5—(CP)—Britain's forty-two government ordnance factories are producing four and a half times as many guns as a year ago and twice as many as they were originally intended to turn out, Sir Andrew Duncan, Supply Minister, told the House of Commons today.

He said that although 60 per cent. of the 300,000 workers now engaged at the plants are women, the output per worker had increased 40 per cent. in the past year.

Opening a parliamentary debate on criticism of government arms factories in a committee report, the Supply Minister said the plants had "improved beyond what was reasonable to expect."

Shorter Hours Success

the work week had been reduced In thirty of the factories, he said to sixty hours or less for men and fifty-five or less for women. He added that it was hoped to bring the other factories down to that hour level, also, because "we are likely to get greater production in these factories were the hours reasonable."

(The public accounts committee rapped the Ministry of Aircraft Production July 23 in a report dealing with excess profits charges and accounts which allegedly were kept secret by the British Manufacture and Research Company, Limited; British Thomson, Houston and Company, Limited, and Barr and Stroud, Limited.)

Meanwhile, Col. J. J. Llewellin, Minister of Aircraft Production, announced that the British Manufacture and Research Company, Limited, one of the firms named in the committee's report, has refunded a 'considerable" sum of money to the Ministry by way of adjustment of provincial prices paid for an aircraft gun it produces.

New 12-Sided Five-Cent Piece Will Circulate Soon

Ottawa, Aug. 5. (CP)—Canada's new 12-sided five-cent piece is likely to be in circulation sometime next month, E. W. Ewart, Master of the Royal Mint, said today.

"We are first going to use all the nickel blanks we have, but the new coins will probably be out sometime next month", Mr. Ewart said.

The new coin was announced by Finance Minister Ilsley in the course of departmental estimate consideration in the Commons.

BISWANATH DAS SENTENCED

Bombay, Aug. 5 —(CP)— Biswanath Das, former Congress Party premier of Orissa Province, today was sentenced to three months in prison for making a speech prejudicial to the war effort.

BRITISH BOMBERS MAKE LIGHT NIGHT ATTACK ON RUHR

Germans Also Send Light Forces Over Britain — Lose Six Planes

USE NEW FIRE BOMB

London, Aug. 5 (CP)—British bombers attacked targets in Germany's Ruhr Valley last night while fighter command planes raided railroads and other objectives in occupied territory, the Air Ministry announced today.

Two R.A.F. planes—a bomber and a fighter—were lost in the night operations.

Fighters and fighter-bombers, following up the night raids, made a morning sweep over the English Channel in clear weather.

The Germans sent small forces of raiders against south and southwest England and south Wales overnight and six enemy bombers were destroyed, indicating a high score for Britain's secret new anti-aircraft defences.

It was reported reliably that the Germans were dropping fire bombs with a new-type metal container, details of which were not disclosed. Some of the new-type incendiaries have been turned over to civil defence personnel so that studies may be made in how to deal with them.

Last night's raids on Germany were the first this month by R.A.F. planes, which had been weather-bound.

SWEDISH ANNOUNCER WORD-SWATS NAZI

Ottawa, Aug. 5 —(CP)— Sweden may be outwardly neutral but apparently that doesn't stop the Swedes from taking lusty verbal cracks at the Germans in neighboring Norway. Stockholm radio picked up today by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation listening post in Ottawa, quoted the German police chief in Norway as saying "that all Norwegians who oppose the present administration are fools or criminals."

"It is pretty unlikely," the Stockholm station added, "that 98 per cent of Norway's population could all be fools or criminals; and furthermore, the German chief of police may regret that statement."

"The time may come," Stockholm radio concluded, "when he'll be put into much better safekeeping than he now gives the 98 per cent."

DEVELOP URAL OIL FIELDS

Moscow, Aug. 5—(AP)—The oil industries of the Urals, the Volga and Middle Asia are being developed constantly and exceeded their quotas in July, but the Baku fields in trans-Caucasia are still first in the nation, Pravda reported today The oil refining industry has substantially increased its output of aviation gasoline, it was said.

MINNOW PILFERING ANNOYS SIDNEY MAN

When you're mind's on fishin'; it's minows you'll be wishin'.

However, badly minnows are needed for angling, Bleeker Meyers, of the second concession of Sidney Township, wishes local fishermen would refrain from snitching minnows from his private creek.

Mr. Meyers informed Provincial Police today he didn't mind when a few minnows were taken, but when the pilfering became wholesale under the cover of darkness that kept him from his slumbers at night, Mr. Meyers wants a halt called. Police added they would act accordingly.

AIRMEN'S DANCE HELD AT COUNTRY CLUB

An enjoyable dance in the summer series at the Bay of Quinte Country Club for airmen of this district was held Tuesday evening under the auspices of St. Michael's Club, with the co-operation of the Y.M.C.A. War Services. Mr. J. MacLeod, Y representative newly appointed to 6RD and Mr. Irvine Wismer, from the Trenton station were in charge of dance arrangements and contributed greatly to the success of the dance. Trenton R.C.A.F. orchestra provided their usual excellent musical program. Many specialty dances were introduced, and Miss Dorothy Keilty was winner of the birthday elimination dance, yesterday being her birthday. Refreshments were served by the hostesses and the dance concluded at midnight.

GAS RATION BOOKS SHOULD NOT BE LEFT IN CAR COMPARTMENTS

The practice of many motorists in keeping their gasoline ration books in the glove compartment of the car for convenience sake seems just a little too convenient for other persons as well.

Recently there have been complaints of ration books being stolen from automobiles and many other reports of would-be thieves being unsuccessful in their attempts to force the lock on glove compartments. A motorist was heard yesterday complaining the lock on the glove compartment of his car was damaged beyond use through would-be thieves attempting to open it with a screwdriver.

"I'm going to find a safer place than the glove compartment for my ration book," he said. "Hereafter I'm going to carry it on my person. I don't want to be held up for three or four weeks by reason of having it stolen."

TRANSIENT ARRESTED BOARDING TRAIN

Apprehended in an attempt to board a Canadian National Railways passenger train last night, Frank MacLaren, a transient, was placed under close arrest by railway police. Later it was disclosed that MacLaren was not in possession of a National Registration card and he was turned over to city police. MacLaren was subsequently remanded in custody on a charge of trespassing, while the absence of his registration card will be later probed.

Bike Stolen

Robert Lyle, 187 Charles St., reported the theft of his bicycle to local authorities Tuesday evening. Young Lyle had parked his bike in the vicinity of the Y.M.C.A. from where it disappeared.

With the exception of the arrest of an inebriate activities in city police circles were normally quiet during the past twenty-four hours, Acting Chief Harman stated today.

MISSING AUTO FOUND IN TORONTO

Police Recovery of Car Enables Rural Mail Carrier Owner to Make Delivery Without Interruption

Frankford, Aug. 5 (Special)—The motorcar owned by George E. Sine of Frankford was taken on Monday morning and discovered in Toronto in the afternoon. Three boys of tender years are blamed for taking the machine. In the pockets of one of them it is said were found Mr. Sine's registration card, chauffeur's licence, car licence and gas ration book. The latter had not been used.

Mr. Sine is the rural mailcarrier between Trenton and Frankford and covers that route twice daily. He also serves Batawa and a twenty mile rural route through Murray township.

Monday morning at 11.15 he parked his car outside the post office and went in and where he remained for about fifteen minutes. When he came out he could see no trace of the automobile. He at once notified Constable Lockwood of Frankford who got in touch with the police of Stirling, Trenton and Belleville. The latter notified Toronto authorities and at three ten o'clock the police in the latter city reported they had located the car.

Mr. Sine left for Toronto Monday night arriving at Detective headquarters at midnight. He was driven by the police to the police garage on Queen Street where his car was released on arrival. It had apparently sustained no damage. Everything was found just as Mr. Sine had left it, except that his pipe and tobacco were gone, it was said.

The car had contained enough gas to reach Toronto and still contained enough to bring Mr. Sine back as far as Brighton. By the time he had reached that place on Tuesday morning the filling stations were open and he was able to obtain gas to complete his trip. He reached Trenton in time to pick up his morning mail and deliver it on schedule at 8 a.m. at Frankford postoffice.

Three boys will appear in juvenile court on Thursday in connection with the disappearance of the car.

The Name is 'Mack' And NOT 'Mac'

Mr. Mackenzie Robertson, proprietor of the Belleville Creameries, sends in the following correction which he asks to have published:

In the issue of The Ontario Intelligencer July 29th giving list of contributors to Blood Donors Clinic, it was reported that Mac. Robertson gave money and butter. So far as is known there is no Mac. Robertson living in Belleville, but there is a Mack. Robertson living in Belleville and Mack. Robertson did contribute to this clinic.

Belleville Creameries did and is from week to week contributing butter.

Modern Carpet Manufacturing Complex Trade

Kiwanis Club Enjoys Illustrated Address by Ivor Brock

BLOOD DONOR APPEAL

The complexity of modern carpet manufacturing was revealed to members of the Belleville Kiwanis Club at their regular weekly luncheon meeting at the Queen's Hotel on Tuesday when Mr. Ivor Brock of the Brinton-Peterborough Carpet Company, Limited, showed color moving pictures demonstrating the various steps of carpet making from the preparation of the yarn to the finished rug.

Wool from Canadian sheep flocks is not suitable for the manufacture of carpets, according to Mr. Brock. Canadian wool is too fine for the purpose and fleece from English and Scotch flocks must be used.

The intricate machinery necessary for the preparation of yarn and its weaving into attractive carpet patterns was shown in actual operation in the Peterborough plant while the jacquard system of weaving pattern designs was explained by Mr. Brock who acted as commentator.

Canadians Small Users

Designs for many of the hundreds of pattern designs are taken from flowers, some are large sellers and others do not appeal to the buying public. Cost of designing and weaving the unpopular rug designs must be added to the purchase price of those which sell readily. For some unknown reason, possibly through their love of hardwood floors, Canadians are but very small users of carpets and rugs, and spend less than forty cents per annum per capita on their purchase. The four carpet manufacturing companies in Canada, if working full time, could supply far more carpets than are required so resort must be made to export markets.

Mr. Brock was introduced by Gordon Barclay with Kiwanian appreciation being expressed by Alton Johnston. President Jack Trudeau was in the chair and Harold Carruthers acting as song leader and Leo Riggs as pianist. Bruce Lattimer was Sergeant-at-Arms.

Want Blood Donors

James Barclay outlined the Kiwanis campaign to secure volunteers for the Blood Donor Clinic and emphasized the need for members to back the campaign with enthusiastic effort. He commended Publicity Chairman Bert Reid on the work he had done and stated arrangements had been completed for a special clinic from the Reliance Tool and Aircraft Company through which three to four hundred donors would be secured. Three clinics will be held this week expressly for employees of the Reliance Company. On August 16th fifty more employees from the Bata Shoe Company will attend the clinic to offer their blood.

Mr. Barclay emphasized upon the Kiwanis members that only male volunteers for the Blood Donor Clinic were to be accepted and outlined the procedure and co-operation being sought from local industrial firms and employees. Efforts will be made to get donors from industrial firms with firm heads giving their employees two hours off to attend the clinic. A tag day will be held with proceeds to go to the clinic.

Jack McVeigh, Chairman of the Karnival Committee, urged members to give every co-operation to the clinic campaign now under way but also reminded that funds were necessary to assure the work of the clinic be continued. He invited the co-operation of the members in the sale of Karnival tickets.

Farmers Begin Wheat Threshing

Farmers began wheat threshing operations in the district this week with the majority stook-threshing in the field because of lack of barn space, filled to capacity in the most cases with bumper hay crops.

The wheat is offering a little better than normal yield with crops averaging better than 35 bushels to the acre, according to threshermen.

PEDESTRIAN SAVES GIRL

Coffeyville, Kas., Aug. 5—(AP)—Pedestrian Joe Cramer was startled to see a tiny girl hanging by her hands from a fire escape high above the sidewalk. As he watched her fingers slipped. She fell. He caught her safely, inches from the concrete. The girl, two and a half, had wandered from a parked car, climbing the iron stairway as an adventure.

Obituary

GEORGE HENRY HADRELL (SIDNEY TOWNSHIP)

Trenton, August 5—(Special)—The funeral of George Henry Hadrell took place on Sunday afternoon, August 2nd., from the residence of his nephew, Mr. Clifton Rush, first concession of Sidney Township. The service in the home and at the graveside in White's Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. James Flatt, of Belleville.

The bearers were Messrs. William Hamilton, Bruce Hogle, Gerald Brickman, John Fletcher, Clayton Stickle and William Bonisteel.

The late Mr. Hadrell, who was in his 81st year, was born on the Front of Sidney Township and spent fifty years farming at Sidney Crossing. He was well known in the district and was highly esteemed. He was a loyal friend, a generous neighbor and a good citizen; always interested in community and world affairs. Since giving up farming he lived for five years with his brother, Mr. William Hadrell, Trenton, and for the past two years he made his home with his nephew, Mr. Clifton Rush, Sidney Township. He was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Hadrell. In religion he was a member of Aiken United Church.

Mr. Hadrell never married and is survived by one sister, Mrs. Lottie Jackson, Belleville; one brother, Mr. William Hadrell, Trenton; a nephew, Mr. Clifton Rush, Sidney Township, and a niece, Miss Louise Rush, Toronto.

ROBERT McGILL MOWAT (Formerly of Trenton)

Trenton, Aug. 5 (Special)—Robert McGill Mowat died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. F. P. Cond, Oakville, Ont., on Saturday, August 1st.

The late Mr. Mowat, who was in his 86th year, was a prominent and highly esteemed resident of Trenton for many years and was engaged in the hardware business. For some time he lived retired in Oakville.

Surviving him are one daughter, Mrs. F. P. Cond, Oakville, and one son, Major Angus Mowat of Kingston.

The funeral took place Tuesday afternoon from Cobley's Funeral Home. The service in the chapel and at the graveside in St. George's Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. R. C. McLean of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, assisted by the Rev. J. L. Hutchinson of St. George's Anglican Church. Many old friends were present.

The bearers were Messrs. R. M. Armstrong, Fraser Fairman, William Bain, C. Saylor, W. B. McClung and D. T. Fraser.

MRS. JESSIE F. D. CARR (Trenton)

Trenton, August 5 (Special)—Mrs. Jessie Fiddella Doherty Carr died at the home of her son, Mr. Ray Carr, 648 Front Street, Trenton on July 31st. She was in her 74th year, and was born in Colborne, being a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William J. Stimers.

The late Mrs. Carr lived in Toronto, but for the past six months resided with her son in Trenton. In religion she was a member of College Street Baptist Church, Toronto.

The funeral took place here on Monday afternoon, August 3rd, from the residence of her son and the service in the home and at the graveside in Mount Evergreen Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. R. C. McLean of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

The bearers were Messrs. H. Patrick, O. Patrick, C. Stickle, M. Stickle, K. Stickle and G. Stickle.

LEWIS ROBSON (Thurlow Township)

After an illness of five weeks' duration Lewis Robson died at his home in the 9th. concession of Thurlow Township, on Tuesday evening, August 4th.

The late Mr. Robson, who was in his 80th. year, was born in England and came to this country when a child. For the past seventy years he resided in Thurlow Township and in the regard of many friends he held a high place. He was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Peter Robson. In religion he was a member of Bethel United Church.

Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss Ida May Carney; two daughters, Mrs. Stanley Hayton, Holloway, and Mrs. William Chambers, Trenton; two sons, Mr. Roscoe Robson, Reeve of Thurlow Township, and Mr. Milton Robson, Thurlow Township.

Two sons gave their lives in France in the First Great War: Peter Robson in 1917 and John Robson in 1918.

The funeral announcement is elsewhere in this paper.

LATE MRS. CLEMENT HAIGHT (TYENDINAGA)

Melrose, Aug. 5—(Special)—The death of Mrs. Clement Haight which occurred at Kingston General Hospital after a brief illness was learned with much regret by her many friends and relatives. She will be greatly missed in the church and community for her faithful and cheerful service.

The funeral took place from her late residence on Friday afternoon to Melrose United Church where service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. Sterling. The bearers were nephews of the deceased, Messrs. Sherman, Orley, and Douglas Lazier, John, Raymond and Frank Lawrenson. Interment was made in Melrose Cemetery. The many beautiful floral tributes showed the esteem in which the deceased was held.

Among those from a distance who attended the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. R. Ryckman, Grand Rapids; Mrs. H. Lansing, Oshawa; Mrs. Douglas Lazier, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. O. Flake, Prince Edward; Mrs. J. Symington, Mrs. K. Neely, Mr. C. Osborne, Mr. W. Gibson, Mr. and Mrs. F. Hooper, Mrs. Reddick, Mr. and Mrs. H. Dupre and Mrs. G. Dupre, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfrid Miller, Mrs. Robertson, and Mr. F. Smith, of Napanee; Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Morden and Mr. J. Morden, Belleville.

MRS. SUSAN WEBBER (Marmora)

Marmora, (Special) — Shortly after 3 p.m. on Tuesday, Mrs. Susan Webber, widow of the late Robert Webber, passed away at her home on Madoc Street, Marmora, at the age of 64. About six weeks ago she was stricken with an illness from which she seemed to make good recovery, but on Monday she had another seizure from which she failed to rally. The late Mrs. Webber, who was born in Huntingdon Township was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kilpatrick. After her marriage she resided in Marmora Township for some years but shortly after the death of her husband eight years ago, moved with her family to their present home.

She was of a quiet and neighborly disposition and will be missed by her many friends. She was a member of the United Church. She is survived by three children, Mrs. George Young, Marmora Township and Robert and Blanche at home. She is also survived by one brother, Richard Kilpatrick, of Marmora Township.

COASTAL UNITS MORE ACTIVE

London, Aug. 5—(CP)—Growing activity by British coastal units—such as the motor torpedo boats which have clashed with the Germans in the English Channel nine times in the past three weeks—was described by a British source today as proof "that we have turned from the defence to the attack."

"As our coastal forces increase," he added, "I have no doubt that the scale of the attacks will be further increased."

Snetsinger was Toronto mortgage manager for the Equitable Life Insurance Company.

U. S. to Establish Office of Information

Ottawa, Aug. 5. — (CP)— The United States is taking steps, it was understood here last night, to establish in Ottawa an office of U.S. information to work in co-operation with Canada's Bureau of Information.

It was learned that Dana Doten of the United States office of War Information will arrive here Thursday for a preliminary survey which would be the groundwork for establishment of reciprocal relations between the two offices.

Creation of an office here, it was understood, would be part of a plan for better exchange of information on the war effort of all the United Nations. A similar office is being set up in London.

Production of Electric Toasters, Irons, Fans Prohibited After Aug. 15

Ottawa, Aug. 5 —(CP)— The Department of Munitions and Supply announced today that Supplies Controller Alan H. Williamson has banned manufacture of electric toasters, electric irons and electric fans after Aug. 15.

The order rescinds a previous one limiting output to 50 per cent of 1940 production.

Permits may be issued to manufacturers of toasters, irons and fans who wish to clear up inventories of pre-fabricated parts after Aug. 15. The order permits continued manufacture of repair parts.

District Resort Accommodations Packed by Canadian Tourists

Despite the fact that United States tourist traffic has decreased to practically nil as compared to other years, the tourist industry in this district is on a practical par with that of former years, according to a statement released by Secretary Manager J. O. Herity of the Chamber of Commerce today.

The Ontario tourist is travelling in numbers within his own province never before experienced, and the surplus of the native vacation-seeker is about commensurate to the deficit in across-the-border visitors.

While naturally, there is not the highway traffic nor the numbers of transient holiday-makers, war restrictions have caused the city vacationist to "stay put" at the spot he selects for his holiday. Many inquiries are being received daily from all points of Ontario, and some in Quebec regarding the holiday possibilities of this particular district.

Many tourist resorts in various sections of Hastings and Prince Edward County report a "sell-out" for the summer, with the majority of vacationists making reservations for the entire length of their holidays. This in turn makes it practically impossible for the three-day holiday-maker to secure accommodations.

Cottages in the district are taken up nearly one hundred per cent and many would-be cottage-occupants have been disappointed in their quest for accommodation.

However, the fact remains that wartime exigencies are forcing the native Ontarian to seek the holiday spots of his own province. Many of them are becoming acquainted with the fishing, swimming and general holiday atmosphere that has existed beneath their very noses for years and which have been unnoticed.

It is presumed, Mr. Herity stated, that the annual trek to United States points by Canadian visitors has decreased in like volume to that of Americans to Canada.

RIGHT GIRL FAILED TO PASS

New York, Aug. 5—Recruiting officers training at Fort Des Moines, Iowa, had found a girl saxophonist, a girl cornetist and even a girl sousaphonist for the desired 25-piece band but had almost despaired of locating a candidate who played the piccolo. Gloom gave way to joy when one finally showed up, but now all is sadness again. She failed her physical examination.

GRASS-THATCHED

Some Australian papers were calling for more allied naval and air raid to crush the Gona - Buna foothold east of Kokoda. The area has been subjected to a steady allied bombing attack since the Japanese first landed July 22.

The Japanese were reported to have shelled and machine-gunned Gona and Buna before landing. A few white officers and native troops in the district withdrew toward Kokoda, but the Japanese were right on their heels. In one place the Japanese even caught up by swimming a mountain stream whose bridge had been destroyed.

Each time the Australian patrols made a stand the Japanese fanned out into the jungle, cutting paths with Axis and bush knives, to encircle the Australian positions.

Barriers to Japanese Use

The Japanese control the coastal strip between Gona and Buna and the road to Kokoda, but their air force will be unable to use these footholds unless runways are levelled on the Papuan coast in the face of strafing attacks by the Allies and unless the Allied ground troops are cleared from the Kokoda area.

Informed sources here said that the small landing field at Kokoda would have little practical operation use for either the Allies or the Japanese as the mountain-ringed field is blanketed under heavy clouds for all but a few hours in the middle of the day.

A headquarters spokesman said that native troops fighting with the Allies in New Guinea, referred to as "Papuan battalion," was recruited largely from the island constabulary.

Front dispatches indicated that co-operating Allied planes had demolished the little grass-thatched settlement of Kokoda.

Australian patrols were said to have routed the Japanese in every clash in the area, but the Japanese displayed the same cunning which served them so well in the conquests of Malaya and the Dutch East Indies.

Kokoda is a few miles from "the gap," a 6,000-ft. pass in the towering Owen Stanley mountain range separating it from Port Moresby.

Formidable Mountain Barrier

This back door menace to Port Moresby was tempered by knowledge of the formidable mountain barrier, but it was obvious the Australians would be much happier if they, instead of the Japanese, held Kokoda.

One Australian correspondent stationed at an advance allied base said he believed "the land threat to Port Moresby will become serious only if it coincides with a seaborne attempt."

Post Family Enjoys Annual Gathering

Eldorado—On Wednesday, July 29th a large number of the members of the Post family met at Oak Lake to hold their annual picnic. Owing to the wet weather there were not as many present as in previous years. Dinner was served at 12.30. The tables were prepared under cover, on the lake shore, with every one enjoying the delicious dinner served by the ladies. The afternoon was spent in chatting by the older folk, while the younger ones enjoyed themselves in many ways.

At four o'clock Mr. Milton Raid called order. Games and sports prepared by Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wartman, of Cooper, were enjoyed. A short business meeting was held and all officers were reelected. It was decided to withdraw the picnic for the duration of the war. Officers are as follows: President—Milton Reid, Treasurer — Alger Post, Secretary—Mrs Harold Pigden, convener for Sports—Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wartman.

Gen. Riddell-Webster New Q. M. General

London, Aug. 5. (CP Cable) — Lt.-Gen. T. S. Riddell-Webster, who organized the transport of the British expeditionary force from British arrival ports after Dunkerque, will be the British army's next quartermaster general, it was announced last night.

Riddell-Webster will take over his new post August 14 succeeding Gen. Sir Walter Venning, who has reached the retirement age.

The new Quartermaster General has been principal administrative officer to the commander-in-chief in the Middle East since October, 1941 and immediately before that was general officer commanding southern command of Cairo and New Delhi. He was once deputy quartermaster general.

MAN OF 82 DIES OF INJURIES

Pembroke, Ont., Aug. 5 —(CP)— Joseph Gagnon, 82, died in hospital here Tuesday from injuries which police said he suffered Saturday night during an alleged assault in his home.

Mrs. Ruby Hamilton, Gagnon's grand-daughter, and Gnr. W. C. MacDougall of an anti-aircraft regiment are awaiting hearing Aug. 10 on assault charges arising from the case.

Gagnon is survived by his widow, two daughters and one son.

EAGLE SQUADRON IS COMING

BATTLE TO SAVE LIVES OF IRISH QUINT SURVIVORS

Little Hope Held for Two Infants Housed in Incubators

Dublin, Aug. 5 (CP Cable)—Maternity specialists fought to save the lives of two survivors of the Leydon quintuplets in the National Maternity Hospital.

Little hope was held for the infants as they were born two months prematurely, doctors said. The babies, Terese, two pounds, and three-pound Thomas, are housed in an electrically heated incubator and fed through pippets with preserved breast milk.

Dr. De Vadera, a skilled maternity physician and son of Eire's Prime Minister, was aiding in the efforts to save the two survivors.

The 36-year-old mother, Mrs. Thomas Leydon, wife of a potato farmer at Breaghway, in County Sligo, once worked in Boston, Mass, and the father was employed by a railroad in New York for 10 years. They have lived in Eire for the last eight years.

Two Die After Birth

The five babies were born Friday in the Leydon's farm home. Two died shortly after birth. A third, a boy, died early Sunday in hospital here where he and his brother and sister had been brought Saturday.

When told of the death of the third child the mother said, "it's the will of God. I have a lot to be thankful for. Two of my babies lived and I am quite all right myself."

The parents expressed surprise at the widespread publicity given the event. They were unaware of the big headlines until papers reached the farmhouse where they lived with three other children.

"I don't like publicity," said Mrs. Leydon, "but I must admit I am a little proud."

Leydon also admitted he is proud of his babies and wife who worked their 20-acre farm until a few days before birth of the quints. He said they both once worked in the United States but met only when they returned to their homeland.

The three babies were brought to hospital here Saturday after a 200-mile journey during which they were fed every hour with a mixture of brandy, water and sugar, administered with an eye dropper.

Harvesting in West Becomes General August 10th to 15th

Winnipeg, Man.,—Coarse grain cutting is under way in some districts, wheat cutting will commence this week, but harvesting will not be general throughout western Canada until some time between August 10th and 15th, according to the weekly crop report of the Department of Agriculture of the Canadian National Railways. The western farmer will then commence the annual harvesting battle faced with the task of gathering in one of the heaviest grain yields yet seen in the west, but handicapped by a late season, very heavy straw, a serious labor shortage, and great lack of storage facilities All grains are filling well, light to heavy rains have provided the moisture required for the remainder of the growing season, no serious damage has yet appeared, and indications point to a record-breaking yield of all grains except flax, which shows some frost and rust damage.

In Manitoba frequent showers have continued but warm weather has brought all crops along well except in the north where cool days have retarded maturity. Some heavy growths have lodged and an appreciable loss from this cause is anticipated, particularly of barley. Conditions have been ideal for the beet crop which looks exceptionally good.

In Saskatchewan scattered showers and some localized heavy rains have assured filling of heads, but barley is lodging at some points and there are a number of reports of leaf rust on wheat which has however caused no serious damage to grain. Hail losses have been light.

Alberta has had rains sufficient to carry all crops to maturity and little or no damage from any source is reported. Average wheat yields forecast from many points run from 30 to 40 bushels per acre.

Invite Gandhi To Conference

London, Aug. 5—(CP)—A Reuters dispatch from Bombay Tuesday said Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru, Indian Liberal leader, had written to Mohandas K. Gandhi inviting him to call a round-table conference to discuss settlement of the dispute over British rule.

Gandhi was understood to have expressed willingness to attend such a conference when Sir Tej first proposed it July 25.

THIRD HOLE IN ONE

Peterborough, Ont., Aug. 5—(CP)—Robert Bathgate, member of the Peterborough Golf and Country Club has established what is believed to be a Canadian record, scoring his third hole-in-one while playing here yesterday.

The hole-in-one was made on the sixth hole, a 165-yard drive, par three.

Four years ago while playing the Hope course, he made his first, and the following year at the Kawartha course here, made a 200-yard drive for his second.

Canadian Firefighters Leave for Britain

Announcement of the safe arrival in London of a detachment of Canadian firefighters releases the above photograph, taken at an inspection parade on the eve of their departure. Major General L. R. LaFleche, associate deputy minister of National War Services, is shown inspecting the men, accompanied by Flight Lieut. G. E. Huff, officer commanding the Canadian Corps of Firefighters for Service in Great Britain. F/L Huff appears at Gen. LaFleche's right. These Canadian volunteers, of whom there are now two detachments in England, are well trained in firefighting, many of them veterans of some years with Canadian fire departments.

Combined Anglo-American War Production Board Meets

When the combined war production boards of the United States and Great Britain met for the first time in Washington, indications were that all would be harmony. Here you see lighting up, LEFT to RIGHT, Britain's Sir Archibald Sinclair; Donald Nelson, U. S. W.P.B. head, and James S. Knowlson, Nelson's assistant.

Situation On Caucasus Front

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

The time lag between Russian and German reports from the Caucasus make it doubly difficult to trace accurately the fast shifting battle line between the Manych and Kuban Rivers. There seems no doubt however, that the Nazis have either found a weak spot in that region, or that the Russians are falling back behind the Kuban to make their stand on a new and curving river front 250 miles long.

Moscow admits further Red withdrawals below Salsk. The Germans assert they passed that point two days ago to cross the east-west line from Belaya Glinta to Bashanta and have now reached the Kuban River itself at several undesignated points and also taken Voroshilovsk by storm.

If that is true it means that the "tank army" which Berlin said recently was crashing through Russian defences in the steppes east of the Kuban has driven a spearhead 75 miles below the Belaya Glinta-Bashanta line within the last thirty-six hours. Voroshilovsk lies thirty miles east of the Kuban, and about the same distance south of its great western bend, on a line virtually with Armavir. Presumably Nazi units which may have reached the Kuban are somewhere along its eastern bank between Armavir and the bend.

The armored wedge being driven southward east of the Kuban is narrowing dangerously, however. The Belaya Glinta-Bashanta line to which the Berlin claims referred is approximately 150 miles in length. The Kuban-Voroshilovsk span is a bare thirty miles. It seems obvious that an attempt to widen the thrust either wesward across he Kuban or eastward from Voroshilovsk must be in progress. The Nazi corridor up the Kuban toward its mountainous sources is too narrow not to be subject to being pinched off by Russian counter-attacks from both sides.

A Nazi turn westward from Voroshilovsk against Armavir, coupled with drives to cross the Kuban between that point and the bend, would seem the most probable move.

It offers far more opportunity of dealing the Red Army of the Caucasus a smashing blow than would an eastward or further southward surge. The Rostov-Baku railroad and pipe lines lie west of the river. Armavir also is a more critically important junction point than Voroshilovsk.

It is a rail and pipe line connection with Tuapse on the Black Sea coast of the Caucasus, fueling base of the Russian Black Sea Fleet. The Maikop field is located about midway between the two points. The Maikop oil is also piped directly to Krasnodar, on the western course of the Kuban, via an offshoot line northward from the Armavir-Maikop - Tuapse feeder system.

Should Armavir fall to Germans attacking from beyond the Kuban to the east, the whole northwest corner of the Caucasus, including the Maikop field, might be cut off to the Black Sea and its defending army trapped. It seems clear that desperate Russian attempts to hold the Kuban below the bend must be made, even at the price of giving up more territory below Rostov and Kushchevka.

The line of the Kuban from its Black Sea outlet south of Taman Peninsula to the great bend and then southward upstream to Armavir and beyond is vital to Marshal Timoshenko's left flank. The withdrawals in the left-centre, acknowledged by Moscow, may indicate a sweeping retirement behind the Kuban.

Make Fifth Attempt To Salvage Machinery From the Tug Florence

Point Traverse, Aug. 4 — The fifth attempt to salvage winches and machinery from the ill-fated tug Florence, which went down off Timber Island, on Nov. 14th, 1933, began here today.

The lake was not calm, but is believed that operations can be continued if weather conditions permit.

The Florence was a very powerful ship, and set a record on Lake Ontario early in 1906.

The tug sprang a leak while on a voyage from Montreal to Toronto, and went to the bottom before it could be beached. It was 100 feet in length with a 20 ft. beam.

Tying Up Enemy Forces

The mighty air raids which have been levelled against German ports and cities by airmen of the Royal Air Force and the Royal Canadian Air Force have in the estimation of a Reuters correspondent had the effect of pinning down six million Germans to defence or twenty-seven per cent of the potential German manpower which would go normally into war industry of Germany or into the German armies.

Besides this result there is the disorganization of enemy shipping which is much congested.

So the air force though its numbers are many as compared with those few who guarded Britain in those trying days of September 1940 when Hitler was turned back by Brtain's air strength continues to do so much for the world.

To hold tied up six million men or three men out of every eleven men which Germany can summon into war factory or military uniform is a vast achievement. These are the figures of a correspondent who is fairly well conversant with the result of the raids from Britain against Germany.

The Horse

Horses are taking their part in the war's tasks both on the field of battle and in the industrial life of nations. Thrilling stories are told again and again about the Russian cavalrymen who attack infantry or throw their weight against tanks and dismount and fight in the trenches to throw their defiance at the Hun.

Horses have made their appearance in numbers on the streets of large and small cities having returned to favor through the strict regulations about the cost of delivery and the conservation of gasoline and rubber. In the great city of New York so numerous have horses become that the safety council has decided to issue rules for safe driving.

There is a deep association existing between man and horse. Not all the thousands of motorcars in these three or four decades of the industry have been able to make men and women overlook the attraction and appeal which the horse has for so large a share of humanity. One of the most attractive of the animals, the horse has carried man upward as civilization has climbed and it is pleasing to know that the horse still is the friend of man. Today in the days of war's alarums, the horse is able to come back and assist man to carry the burden of the struggle.

The grace and nobility of form of the horse is something that once felt is admired forever. It can never be replaced and substituted by either art or mechanism. Nature in moulding the horse for the work he had to do in spreading civilization has created of the genus equus the paragon of animals in the view of many persons. To have come so closely related to the rise of man's civilization proves the inborn qualities of this animal, so able to adapt himself to the tasks to which his master has put him. All the qualities which have developed the horse from the primitive animal became more and more emphasized as the horse developed to fill a place in the making of progress.

The intelligence of the horse puts him in a class which is bound to leave enduring marks on mankind through man's relationship with the noble animal, which has borne the tasks that man has placed upon him in the past, in industry, in agriculture, in peace and in war.

Today the horse performs the tasks for which he has qualified himself through his long development of the centuries. He is at the foundation of every great civilization. He is the great burden-bearer. Even today as fine horses pass through the streets they are the centre of attraction and those who admire the horse—and practically every man, woman and child does—must feel grateful that there are owners of these animals who do not allow them to pass out of human sight and knowledge. Nature of course endowed the horse with peculiar aptitudes and characteristics, and man has been quick to appreciate and utilize this noble development of Mother Nature.

The kindly animal so noble in appearance can look upon man's world and if he sought any compensation for the work he has been able to share with or do for man, he could claim no mean part in the rise of civilization.

BLOOD DONOR CLINIC, 10 A. M.

They file through the door,
They include men who look like ex-football players,
Big men, little men,
Men who have climbed down off coal trucks,
Bond salesmen, men in uniform,
Sailors on leave from mine sweepers,
Whole men,
And men who have lost an arm or a leg in the last war,
Who cannot fight in this one,
Who remember what transfusions mean.
Blind men have come
Who make little jokes
About the "pretty nurse."
It takes a few minutes;
A few minutes stretched comfortably out on a cot
With your heart-beats measuring Drop by drop the gift you give
To keep some soul alive.
It takes a few minutes oct of a single day.

To make you one of the vast army
Back of that fighting army.
It takes a few minutes
But because of that few minutes
Soldiers and sailors and flyers
Are going to come back after this war
Who couldn't come back
Without that "gift."
It means mothers and children
Terribly hurt when bombs rained down
Are going to live to forget those anxious days
And laugh again, and breathe the air of qciet England.

It means that you have given something
Money couldn't buy.
The "quality of mercy," Shakespeare said.
It takes a few minutes
But it lets you in on a miracle!

QUICK HENRY, THE FLIT!

Do you remember how peaceful it was before the war? When Sunday came around you could take the car and the wife and all the kids and drive to your heart's content, waste as much gasoline and rubber as you liked, buy anything you wanted, and come back pretty well when you pleased. Those were the days when you could go for weeks without so much as reading a newspaper or listening to the radio.

But when the war came things were a little different. First you were told that there was a war and that Canada was all out for victory. And so you proceeded to tighten your belt. Only by this time you probably didn't have a belt because a "Controller" had issued an order or something prohibiting the use of certain essential materials. So you tried to adjust your suspenders. By this time you weren't allowed to have more than 18 inches of elastic material in them.

So you decided you'd just let your socks hang down. But you soon found you weren't even allowed to have cuffs on your trousers. Then when they had you looking like an idiot you you were told that you couldn't-use your car as often as before. Possibly this didn't affect you because you didn't have a car. At any rate you decided to take up walking, and just when you were getting good at it the government put out an order on shoe leather, rubber heels, and the width of soles.

Then came a ration on tea and coffee. You probably didn't bother with the stuff now because it tasted pretty bad without sugar.

Things are desperate, you said, and they'll probably get worse. But don't give up hope entirely. A recent announcement from Ottawa—familiar phrase—contains a ray of hope. The Wartime Prices and Trade Board's Division of Simplified Practice, whatever that means, have announced the appointment of a regional practice officer for the Maritime Provinces, whatever that means. The Order did contain some rather subtle suggestions as to the functions of this new official, but rumor has it that the first function of the new simplified practice officer will be to simplify his own instructions. As soon as that is done, which shouldn't take longer than the time required to find a Co-Ordinator of Regional Simplified Officers, he will probably be quite easy to get along with.

Meanwhile, don't fret too much over your cares. They haven't rationed shopping days at Christmas—yet.

—Price Board.

MORE PROGRESS

Sing if you will of the beauty of spring,
Sing of the birds and the pleasure they bring,
Sing of the hyacinth; sing of the rose!
Here is a song which I rise to propose;
Here is a song I am happy to pen;
Ellen Elizabeth's smiling at men!

Who can explain it and make it quite clear?
Still not quite ended the child's second year,
Still just a baby in bonnets and frocks,
One that her mother to Slumber-land rocks,
Yet — and I grin as I write it again:
Ellen Elizabeth's smiling at men!

Gathering wisdom not taught at a school,
Knows men are simple and easy to fool;
Knows we give in when the women-folks fuss;
Knows there's a difference 'twixt females and us;
Knows how to work us and also just when:
Ellen Elizabeth's smiling at men!

Knows where the money is; knows where to go,
Certain of "yes" when the women say: "No!"
Not two years old and aware that we'll buy
Whatever she asks which the women deny.
What will she cost us at nine years or ten?
Ellen Elizabeth's smiling at men!

Functional and Organic High Blood Pressure

I can remember, many years ago, a physician putting his fingers on the pulse of one of my relatives and telling her sister afterwards that the patient's arteries were twenty years older than they should before her age. Blood pressure instruments were not in general use at that time. Had the bloodvessels been softer, more elastic to the touch the physician could have given a more hopeful outlook for this case of apoplexy.

Today, every physician uses the blood pressure instrument, in addition to feeling the 'resistance' of the bloodvessels. Even if the blood pressure is high at times, if bloodvessels are not hard, the physician assures the patient and family that the trouble is not organic but functional. Functional disturbances which cause the individual to be in a state of continuous tension. Tension of nerves, muscles and bloodvessels can alter the workings of the various organs of the body and cause symptoms greatly resembling symptoms caused by true or organic disease.

These individuals are of the high strung type, usually wiry and thin, and blush or perspire easily. There are, of course, some apparently calm individuals of normal weight who have functional high blood pressure.

The explanation of functional high blood pressure is simple; the tenseness of nerves and muscles causes a tighiness or partial closure of the bloodvessels. Naturally it takes more pressure to push blood through small bloodvessels than through large bloodvessels.

What causes true or organic high blood pressure?

In the functional type the bloodvessels are not changed in structure they are still elastic, but are in a "tightened" condition only at times. In true or organic high blood pressure the elastic walls of the bloodvessels (due to infections or other conditions) have lost some of their elastic tissue which has been deplaced by hard, fibrous or scar tissue. Thus, as the walls of the bloodvessels cannot stretch when blood is being pressed or forced through them because of this 'hardened' condition, more pressure must be used to push blood through them. And as the walls are 'always' hard so will the blood pressure be always high.

However, even when the walls are permanently hardened, physicians can, by prescribing rest, proper diet, and sometimes surgery enable the patient to live many years and delay or prevent heart or brain stroke.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

The Smoking Flax

New York, Aug. 5 — Two small news items that recently appeared induce a chain of speculation. Both came from neutral sources, but were taken from the Berlin and Budapest radios. In the one Heinrich Himmler offered two million marks' reward for information leading to the arrest of persons who had set fires to Berlin apartment houses. In the other the Hungarian Defence Minister appealed to Hungarian peasants to organize watches to save the crops which were being set afire by "incendiary balloons."

From two sources, therefore, and within a few days of each other, we hear of outbursts of incendiarism in the Axis countries of Central Europe.

The Hungarian incendiarism — scorched-earth policy—makes military sense, for Hungary is the chief granary of Germany. But it is also a country of deeply oppressed and embittered peasants, and any revolt in Hungary will come from them.

The burning of Berlin apartments, on the other hand, is senseless in any direct military sense. But it occurs in the greatest city in an urban country. German rebellion will originate in the cities.

Let us ask ourselves therefore what this can mean. Who can be doing it?

The Berlin reward offer issues from the Gestapo; therewith, the authorities indicate that the fires have political motives.

Not Foreigners' Work

It is hard to believe they are the work of foreign agents or trained saboteurs. They would go after military objectives. Their activities would be concentrated on railroad communications, industrial plants, storage warehouses and bridges.

It does not look at all like the activity of organized workers. Such workers, trained in trade union discipline, would be warned against isolated deeds that are not part of organized action and have no immediate influence on the war. Furthermore, workers have favorable opportunities for more effective sabotage in the plants where they work.

Without any desire to collect Mr. Himmler's two million marks, logic and some knowledge of the feelings of the masses in Central Europe lead me to a guess which I think is true.

The incendiarists are not important as individuals. They are people in whom a spirit is exploding, that under all the oppression and terror surrounding them can find no effective outlet. It is the spirit that cries: It can't go on like this; something must happen; I am fed up to the eyes; I must do something—anything—and I can't wait for some one to organize it.

In other words, these are acts arising out of frustration and despair, nihilistic in their impulse, and anarchic.

A spirit is sweeping Europe, and nothing is more contagious than a revolutionary spirit. It knows nothing about frontiers and nothing about nationalities, nor of conqueror or conquered.

Hitler understands the contagion of revolution. He intended to canalize it and use it. But this has been his most prodigious failure, and in the end will prove to be a determining factor in the outcome of the war. For the Nazi revolution is a flop. Nowhere in Europe have the masses arisen to its banner. On the contrary, his troops have released another revolution — the inarticulate revolution against slavery and senselessness, and against sapheads tricked out in an arrogant authority that has no inner basis. Its origins are in spiritual revulsion.

The places where it rises do not matter. If it rises in the occupied countries, it swamps the whole question of who is winning here or there, and cries out against the war itself, and the incendiarists of that war — the Nazis. It is fire fighting fire.

Now, this seems to me very important. Such a chaotic revulsion of despair and disintegration plays in the long run against our enemies but in the short run not necessarily so. It is a blind spirit that can be exploited either way. And in the long run, unless canalized, it will rise against civilization itself as a volcanic and untamable force.

Enormous Opportunity.

There is an enormous opportunity in it, for the breaking up of conventional ties provides the chance immediately to reform. Out of chaos comes creation. But, on the other hand, it merely offers an opportunity to be seized. A rebellious situation such as this one cannot be left to develop by itself; if it is, it will not develop into any kind of order, but into anarchy.

I am compelled to believe that the picture which the Allied authorities—our State Departments, Foreign Offices and Propaganda Bureaus, for instance — have of Europe is distorted in two ways. The process of disintegration is further advanced than they think, but without nearly as rational an aim as they think. All the free movements in exile speaking for Europe are programatic and rational. But Europe, on the contrary, is sick. Rebellion is not of itself revolution. Rebellion is revulsion—the nay spirit. Revolution must create. It must say yes to something.

Now, it is our business to give an aim to the rebellion—and we are not doing so. To do so requires much more courageous thinking than is being done in any official quarters, either here or in Britain. There is more at stake than the military consideration of using this spirit as an aid to a second front. We risk losing all our influence over the mind of Europe. It is urgently necessary to analyze the ingredients of this rebellious spirit and out of them to form an organized democratic revolution of our own.

And this is the function of the clearest-eyed thinkers of our world. It will never be done by Foreign Offices or State Departments.

"Irresponsible Attack" Says Premier Hepburn

Toronto, Aug. 5. (CP)—Premier Hepburn said yesterday that a statement concerning the Provincial Attorney-General's Department made in an address Monday by E. B. Jolliffe, Ontario C.C.F. leader, is 'another irresponsible attack".

Mr. Jolliffe, addressing a C.C.F.-Labor picnic here, said that the Attorney-General's department is "more interested in looking after its political friends than in a fair administration of the laws of the province".

Mr. Hepburn said it was unnecessary for him to "rush to the aid of" Attorney-General Gordon D. Conant.

"We have never had such a conscientious man in the office. Mr. Jolliffe should realize that every charge he has made so far has been disproved".

A NEW SCIENCE

The word "semantics" has been used with increasing frequency during the last few years.

It is the term applied to the science of meaning in communication.

"Semantics" was introduced into English after Michel Breal, a French scholar, in 1897 published his "Essai de Semantique."

It is derived from Greek "semantikos," which means "significant" and which was formed from "semainein," to signify, and "sema," sign.

As early as 1877 "semasiology" had been applied to that branch of philology dealing with the meanings of words and their sense development.

"Semantology" is also sometimes used as a synonym of "semaisiology" and "semantics."

Like "mathematics," "politics" and "economics," "semantics" is usually construed as a singular noun.

It is pronounced "se-MANN-ticks."

Semantics has developed beyond a mere science of meaning, and has become a discipline and a method of improving human communication.

It is based on the assumption that language has not kept pace with scientific progress and accordingly retards the development of clear thinking and communication.

Modern secantics is an attempt to establish a "science of man" and to build a system of language communication that corresponds to the structure of the universe as it is known today instead of as it was known in times past.

Semantics, according to its advocates, will release the human reason from the manacles of outmoded and inadequate language and permit the solution of many human problems produced by verbal confusion.

They say that using our present language to communicate modern scientific conceptions is like using a map of Texas to explore Alaska.

Alfred Korzybski, who in 1933 published his "Science and Sanity, an Introduction to Non-Aristotelian Systems and General Semantics," says:

"General semantics is not any 'philosophy,' or 'psychology,' or 'logic,' in the ordinary sense. It is a new extensional discipline which explains and trains us how to use our nervous system most efficiently . . . In brief, it is the formulation of a new non-aristotelian system of orientation which affects every branch of science and life."

Stuart Chase's "The Tyranny of Words," published in 1938, was an attempt to explain semantics in popular terms.

LADIES GROUP CONSERVE TEA AND COFFEE

Try Different Drink at Meeting

Neither coffee nor tea were served, as is the usual custom, at the quarterly meeting of the local Ladies Aid, but an excellent beverage was used, and the guests commented upon its delicious flavor. The president explained that the ban on tea and coffee was in deference to the request of the Government. Expressing satisfaction at the success of the experiment, the chairman said Postum,—the beverage used,—had taken less sugar than would have been used for tea and coffee. It had cost less than either tea or coffee and so was a saving to the treasury, as well as a saving on tea, coffee, sugar.

Whether it's a meeting of a society or a meal in your own home, Postum provides the easy way to conserve tea and coffee. Grand, heartening flavor—economical—so easy to make.

After Jap Bombers Attacked Dutch Harbor

Japanese bombing of the U. S. naval base at Dutch Harbor in the Aleutian Islands set fire to some oil supplies, and high explosives dropped by the Jap war planes destroyed a few buildings and shacks. There were two attacks on successive days against this north Pacific outpost. The first did little damage. This photograph shows effects of the second day's call of the Nipponese. Hose lines snake over the ground in the foreground as firefighters battle blaze in a bombed building.

U. S. soldiers and marines battle a fire set by Japanese bombing planes in the second Nipponese raid on Dutch Harbor naval base. Damage was slight, only a few buildings being destroyed and an old boat used as a barracks hit.

U.S. General Leads Men From Jap-Overrun Burma

CAIN—MASON

An interesting wedding took place on Saturday morning at nine-thirty in Christ Church, when Dorothy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Mason, Cannifton Road, became the bride of Paul Cain, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cain of Toronto. The ceremony was perfomed by Rev. C. P. Heaven.

The bride wore a street length frock of white eyelet embroidered crepe with matching hat. She was attended by her sister, Mrs. R. Dawson, wearing pale blue and pink flowered sheer, while the groomsman was the bride's brother, Mr. Jack Mason.

Following a wedding breakfast at the bride's home, Mr. and Mrs. Cain left for Montreal where they will reside. The bride travelled in a beige and brown ensemble.

EVES—CONNERS

A pretty wedding took place at Bridge Street United Church parsonage on Saturday afternoon, at two o'clock, when Helen, only daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Conners, became the bride of Harry Eves, son of Mrs. Charles Eves and the late Charles Eves, Rev. J. MacLean Fleming officiating.

The bride wore a charming gown of powder blue with white accessories, and corsage of pink and red roses. She was attended by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Milton Conners, in rose sheer with rose accessories and corsage of pink roses. Mr. Milton Conners, brother of the bride, was groomsman.

A reception was held at the home of the groom's brother, Mr. Albert Eves, Corbyville, where a delicious lunch was served. The rooms were most attractive with pink and white streamers and gladioli.

For travelling the bride wore beige with brown accessories and corsage of roses. Following a trip to Montreal, the young couple will reside in Belleville.

Colors for Eye Shadowing

Benita Granville believes that eye make-up should be carefully applied

By HELEN FOLLETT

ONE OF the exciting moments in a girl's life is when she starts to play with eyeshadow. She wonders what it is going to do to her sacred face and she hopes to goodness that the family won't start a rumpus. The attempt is made when the big date is on for the evening.

That's not the right way for her to go about the business of making herself look sweetly mysterious. She should trot to her favourite beauty shop and have a facial, get the advice of a make-up specialist, find out what it is all about. There are many colors from which to make a selection. It is tricky work getting them in so that they glorify. Putting the carnation bloom on the cheeks or sweeping the rosy glow over the lips, is cosmetic child's play compared to lid tinting.

Unless a girl has a flair she had better forego the pleasure of eye shadowing. It belongs to the type of young lady who is a few steps ahead of the style parade, who can get away with the novel coiffure and unusual make-up. She is naturally colorful, so she can take on more color. The quiet, retiring girl is out of character when she goes in for it. What she needs is subdued coloring — faint rouge glows and lip tones not too brilliant.

Before applying shadows the eyelids should be touched with oil or cream. The pigment is placed in the centre of the lid, spread out at either side to do a gradual fade away. It should not extend beydnd the terminal of the eyebrow. An effective method is to have the color fairly heavily along the line of the lashes, growing fainter as it extends upward.

In the selection of the color there are no fast rules. Blues are equally good for blonde and brunette. The red head is the one who can get away with soft green tones. Browns are inclined to be smudgy, greys are without character, mauves are wonderfully effective.

More Women Urgently Needed To Help Finish 4,000 Sheets For Russian Red Cross Appeal

One Quarter of Emergency Work is Completed in Three Weeks

RESPONSE GRATIFYING

Women of Belleville district, ever on the alert to come to the rescue of the Red Cross emergency appeals gallantly set aside their plans for a leisurely summer and attacked the very great task of fulfilling the quota of four thousand sheets and one thousand pillow cases for use in Russian war hospitals. Day and night at the local Red Cross headquarters and in private homes the work has been progressing at top speed, the tearing of sheet lengths and material for pillow cases, and the hemming, and packing of the same. All the one thousand pillow cases have been shipped and yesterday saw one thousand of the sheets packed for shipment, three weeks after the request came from Red Cross headquarters.

But more help is needed and the Red Cross seeks the co-operation of women of the district who have not yet joined in this very special appeal. Other Red Cross work is being set aside temporarily until the order is filled. Those interested in doing just a little more, and helping out the very brave allies of Britain in their special need, are asked to come to the Red Cross work rooms at any time.

Material for the sheets was purchased by headquarters at the request of the Russian Red Cross, the funds being those collected in Canada for Russian Relief. Eight hundred thousand dollars has been contributed throughout the Dominion for this cause, and the first instalment of two hundred and fifty thousand dollars was sent to Russia. The Russian Red Cross in cabling their acknowledgment asked that no further sums be sent to Russia but that supplies be purchased in Canada with the money and forwarded to Russia. The first of the supplies shipped arrived in Russia in ten weeks. Following this the Red Cross there made known the tremendous need in hospitals for sheets and pillow cases. Russian women cannot stop from their other war tasks to make up the supplies and so Canada has responded in a wonderful way. Material for the supplies, of course was purchased entirely with the Russian Relief funds and all through the Dominion women are busy with this work.

Belleville's quota of four thousand sheets to be torn and finished, and the finishing requires piecing the sheets, seemed a very great undertaking, indeed, in holiday time, but the women of the city and those affiliated with them in the County have shown their stuff and the work is well underway. Additional assistance would be most eagerly welcomed, and it is felt that there are many women who will be glad to answer the appeal.

Work is Unceasing

In other departments of Red Cross work, the activities have gone forward all summer, knitting for the services, knitting and sewing for the women's auxiliary services for the civilian women and children of Britain, the making of hospital supplies, and completing of layettes for the tiniest victims of the total war. There is a department of Red Cross work to appeal to every woman no matter what her skill or interest. In knitting the demand at present is for turtle neck sweaters and more help is sought for this phase. In looking over the supplies one finds that from the Red Cross work room, a civilian woman can be supplied with everything but shoes, all finished here. There are suits for boys, outfits for little girls, woollens for the gallant English women who are members of the services, and hospital and knitting supplies for military and civilian needs, ...everyone in England who suffers loss and experiences hardship is remembered by earnest workers over here. And as a diversion from the preparation and shipping of clothing, jam and honey are now being received at the local Red Cross centre, to be forwarded to headquarters and hence overseas.

Local Emergency Supplies

In the zest for fulfilling overseas needs, however, the Red Cross is not neglecting the home front and each branch has just received a list of articles of hospital needs, twenty-five units of which must now be kept on hand in each branch to meet any special community emergency.

Small Girls Help

Yesterday afternoon, among the visitors to the local work rooms were several Red Cross members from Deloro, the small centre which is rapidly acquiring a special place in the annals of the Red Cross for the very outstanding contribution in sewing, and knitting being made by the women of that community. Not only is their interest untiring, but the quantity and quality of their work are of unusually high standards. Knitted suits for small boys was their latest project and yesterday they were getting instructions for the work on sheets.

The daughters of the Deloro members are in a fair way to capture much of the community glory for the Red Cross work. Yesterday the Volunteer War Workers, a club of about twenty girls under the presidency of Miss Isabel McNally, sent in their latest contribution and the officials in the Red Cross rooms exclaimed with delight and admiration when they opened the large box. It contained one hundred articles of knitting for babies, sweaters, panties, shirts, all knitted very beautifully. There were little dresses, too, made by the girls, the youngest of whom are only about nine years of age. Moreover, the wool and material for the articles was purchased through funds raised by the girls themselves.

HEALTH CHATS

Hives May Be Results of Emotional Upset

Hives are most often due to sensitivity to some substance with which the affected person comes in contact or to some food he eats. It has been suggested that hives often trouble the person long after the original cause has been removed. The theory is that worry and anxiety are the cause of hives that persist beyond their first attack.

Hives is a troublesome disorder because of the severe itching produced. In most instances the condition clears up quickly and does not come back again. However, in some cases it is persistent, recurring frequently and interfering with the patient's comfort and well-being.

A single attack of hives may follow injection of serum, such as may be given to prevent tetanus or lockjaw. Attacks occur also when a person eats foods or takes medicines to which he may be sensitive. When this disorder occurs there are large swellings on the skin, known as wheals. In some cases the wheals are huge while in other instances they are smaller, varying in size from day to day. The itching may be intolerable. In many instances the cheeks lips and eyelids swell up and disfigure the patient greatly. Every now and then there may be swelling of the tongue and the lining membrane of the mouth. A rather serious symptom which may develop is the swelling of the larynx. This may block the breathing passages and cause suffocation.

While hives develops directly as a result of oversensitivty, it tends to develop particularly in nervous, sensitive persons and the disorder is aggravated greatly by worrying about it. According to Dr. Ray F. Farquharson of Toronto, in many cases the usual treatment of the patient with hives, which consists of trying to find all of the substances to which he is sensitive and removing him from contact with them fails. He thinks that these nervous persons who have hives are going through a period of strain or anxiety. Often, the emotional upset which brought on the attack has disappeared and the trouble continues only because of the patient's anxiety about it.

In treating the disorder, therefore, he thinks that an attempt should be made to find the patient's cause for worry and to get rid of it if possible. By the time the patient has been carefully studied from the standpoint of his emotions he usually understands himself better than before and has acquired confidence in the treatment. In many instances the nervous tension may be relieved by building up the patient's general physical condition.

It is a well-known fact that the skin is markedly affected by nervous conditions. For example, as a result of an acute emotional upset there may be flushing or pallor of the skin. Chronic nervous strain is often associated with generalized itching of the skin. Many types of skin disorders are made worse by nervousness. On the other hand in a person who is in good health, the skin is clear and elastic. The fact that most cases of hives clear up entirely suggests that an emotional condition is a very important cause in bringing on the attack of hives.

Picton Man Suffers Fracture of Leg

Picton, Aug. 5—(Special)—Billy Henley is in Prince Edward County hospital suffering from a broken leg as a result of an accident about 11 o'clock Monday night. The injury occurred when Henley's motorcycle and a taxi driven by L. R. Cluting collided as the latter turned into the alley next the Royal Hotel.

Two months ago Henley suffered a broken arm when thrown from his motorcycle when it struck loose gravel on the highway near the golf course.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Husband Condones "High-Stepping" Wife

The story of the philandering husband went into reverse today, when a woman wrote to me that she had philandered, and that her husband not only forgave, but was "so sweet" to her she can never do anything wrong again.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

When I read in your column the other day about a woman who had been happily married for years and whose husband had stepped out on her a few times while he was away from home, it prompted this letter to you.

Please tell her to forget all about it. I had the same experience in our home, but it was I who did the stepping out. He was away, working nights, and I got lonesome and wanted to have a good time. I did, and finally my husband found out about it. He did exactly the opposite from anything I had expected.

Instead of leaving me or getting mad, he blamed himself. Since then he has taken me out in the afternoons, bought me flowers and candy. When he couldn't go with me, he has planned for someone to take me to shows and someone else to take care of our two-year-old son. In fact, he has been so sweet to me that I could never think of doing anything wrong. Never, never!

He suggests things that keep me so busy during the day that often I have to do my housework at night, after he has gone. He knows I love dancing, so he has started taking dancing lessons.

Please tell this woman that she should try to treat her husband as my husband treated me. Maybe her husband strayed because she didn't give him the attention she should have given him. In marriage it isn't the big things that count, like being a perfect housekeeper and a good cook. More important is whether a man wants to go out and have a good time, and whether his wife is willing to go with him.

It's fatal always to say "No," or complain that she's tired after a day's work. She should learn how to say "yes" and the little outing to a dance or a movie will relax them both. She'll soon forget how tired she is.

Please tell this lady who wrote you how well toerance and forgiveness worked in our family. We are both much happier now than we were when we first married, three years ago.

GOOD MANNERS

"Thank-You" Notes Must Express Personality of the Writer

What you write in your notes of thanks for wedding presents is so personal and expression of yourself that it is ridiculous for anyone to attempt to present "real" letters that you should write. The only possibility is to give a general form to be used as a foundation upon which you may build your own letters.

To a close friend you might let your enthusiasm say:

Dearest Kay,

How inspired you were, and how kind, when you thought of sending Bob and me a traveling clock! It's a beauty, and we both thank you a thousand times. It's already busy ticking these happy hours, and of course it will go journeying with us to the tiny apartment we've taken near Bob's camp. So you see what a happy combination it brings to us, of beauty and gracoius usefulness.

Mother wants me to ask you to come to tea next Tuesday, to see my gifts. And I hope by then to be able to tell you when Bob can get his furlough, so we can get "the" date!

Affectionately,
Anne

To relatives or friends who send a check (a gift often especially appropriate to today's circumstances):

Dear Aunt Mary,

What a wonderful aunt and uncle I have, and how kind and generous you were to send Bob and me such a grand check! We were thrilled when it arrived, and we are thrilled at the thought of what a beautiful "something" it will provide for our future home. Since, however, as you probably know, Bob must return to camp a few days after our wedding, we have started a savings bank account with it, for the duration and for our cherished hope of establishing our own home. We do so hope that you and Uncle Jim will approve of this. . . . do you?

Thank you thank you for your goodness to us. And we're so happy that you will both be able to come to our wedding.

Affectionately
Anne

To a relative or friend of the prospective bridegroom:

Dear Mrs. Allen,

The handsome silver serving-dish which you and Mr. Allen so thoughtfully chose for Bob and me made us very happy and we both send our heartiest thanks. We cherish your gift especially, for besides being very beautiful it is such a convenient size for us, and the three compartments will be an incentive to my menu-planning!

We are looking forward to seeing you at our wedding, and to welcoming you in our new home.

Most sincerely,
Anne Clark

To a business acquaintance of your husband-to-be:

Dear Mr. Forbes,

Your kind and generous thought of Bob and me touched us deeply and we thank you so much for your goodness.

The silver bowl is very lovely, and I can think of so many delightful ways of using it that I am impatient to begin!

Bob has often spoken of you to me, and I am looking forward with special pleasure to meeting you at our wedding on the tenth.

Most sincerely,
Anne Clark

When a joint present is sent, by a group of friends, or perhaps members of an organization, or a group of co-workers, it is polite and gracious to write, whenever possible, a separate note of thanks to every contributor to the gift. But when the names of the givers are not listed in the accompanying card, an inclusive note might read something like this:

Dear Friends,

Your beautiful and so-thoughtfully-planned gift to Bob and me is one of the most cherished of our gifts, and our hearts are full of appreciation. Thank you, every one of you kind friends, for your generous share in this perfect gift. We dreamed of having silver candlesticks for our table, but we never thought our dreams would so gloriously "come true"! They will give a lovely light to our table, and we are and always will be very proud of them.

Very soon after our return we want you all to come to see us and to see your lovely candlesticks "on location". And we're looking forward to seeing you on the tenth!

Affectionately,
Anne

Fashion Flashes

A GOOD BUY for the country is a double-breasted jacket of quilted white pique that looks good with everything from slacks to dance dress.

COTTON TAKES A DIVE into the pool. A simply grand bathing suit is of red seersucker printed with blue and white flowers. Bra top with cut-out at midriff.

ONLY ONE COAT? Then choose a model that looks nice with sports or afternoon things. A good choice might be a new coat in bronze green smooth tweed with a wolf collar and tuxedo revers. Easy sleeves, slit pockets and a welt seam panel back.

SOFT AND SWEET are the colorful little velvet hats featured by many houses for early autumn. A forward tited fedora in navy blue and shocking pink velvet has a double brim and is trimmed with bows of navy blue satin, one in front near the crown, the other in back under the brim.

YOU WILL DISCOVER that new autumn shoes are as pretty as ever. A delightful afternoon shoe is a modified ballerina with tiny crossing straps of cinnamon-colored suede, matching the heel, on a shoe of dark brown suede.

THERE'S A MILITARY AIR to many of the new fur coats. For instance, a model in Persian lamb is cut on the lines of an officer's coat, with a loose belt that holds the fullness in back. The half belt is buttoned in the back. Narrow shouder epaulets and turn-back cuffs. Patch pockets on the slightly fitted front.

REWARDED D.F.C.

London, Aug. 4. (CP)—Flt. Lt. Oscar Coen of Murphysboro, Ill., who leads one half of the first American Eagle Squadron, has been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, it was announced today. The citation lauded him for "displaying at all times courage, devotion to duty and leadership of high order".

RADIO STATION WRECKED

Montevideo, Uruguay, Aug. 5—(AP)—Tremendous explosion early today wrecked buildings occupied by shortwave radio station CXA2, which is operated by radio continental. Police said they failed to find any clues immediately. The station is on United States and British blacklists for dealing with the enemy.

HITLER THE PHONY LOVER — as I knew him

BY

PIERRE HUSS

Distinguished foreign correspondent, the last U. S. journalist in Berlin to interview Hitler on the Russian front, and author of the recent best seller "The Foe We Face."

[illegible] talk about his women and his riches, even [illegible] Mussolini and his dissolute son-in-law [illegible] amorous adventures even as a nation dies.

It is in his closely-guarded mountain retreat that the Fuehrer frequently sees blue-eyed Theresa von Horn, daughter of an aristocratic Bavarian.

HITLER is probably the richest man in the Third Reich today. He has made many of his rough-house Nazi satellites very rich men. But all has been done under the cloak of an official effort to maintain simplicity in government and honesty in the conduct of public affairs.

I have heard Hitler time and again, in private conversation and in public speeches, say that he has no bank account and that he would be penniless if suddenly he were to be fired by the Fatherland and the Nazi Party. He invariably accompanied those harangues with a chuckle, which to those of us foreign correspondents who knew something of the inside of Nazi intrigue, sounded more like a laugh of derision aimed at the Germans who believed everything Hitler told them. I have heard him shout in equally strident tones that he chooses to remain a bachelor because he considers himself wedded to the Fatherland. With copious doses of dramatics, he sought to make it clear that he was willing and ready to sacrifice himself—a martyr for the sacred cause.

Swarthy little Joe Goebbels, who got rich and became Don Juan No. 1 while serving the Fuehrer as idea man and propaganda drum-beater, saw to it that these angelic fables of penury and martyrdom were implanted in the minds of every German and of millions of people across the borders of the Reich. The Nazi propaganda machine harped tirelessly on Hitler's spartan ways of life and living, making much of the fact that he not only eats sparingly but almost never has any money on his person. And Goebbels always hastened to add that every member of the Nazi hierarchy is a true servant of the Fuehrer and acts accordingly, although compelled to live in a manner befitting the high rank imposed on him.

This high rank, as I heard Goebbels and others of that boisterous and squandering crowd often say, is "very irksome and sometimes almost unbearable."

"Ach ja, it must be awful to live in big palaces and drive about in six-wheeled limousines," I heard more than one skeptical German worker grumble into his beer.

"Maybe Ley would rather exchange the food on the dining table of his private office up in the Labor Front headquarters for my lunch pail."

Small wonder that Hitler and his satellites fear and hate America, the nation that has the power and determination to put an end to their orgy of banditry and murder.

Hitler does not put his fear into words. He tries to cover it with a veneer of shrill and boastful bombast. I saw him only a few weeks before he declared war on the United States and talked with him at length. But it was only after the interview had been under way for some time that I sensed the terror that gnawed at his taut nerves.

"Ja, Herr Roosevelt—and his Jews!" Hitler screamed the words at me as if he could no longer keep them from erupting, fixing his fear of the United States upon the man at its head. "He wants to run the world, rob us of a place in the sun."

The Fuehrer was almost incoherent with rage as he poured forth a tirade against America's president. I needed no sixth sense to see that here was a man afraid, a man at bay lashing out blindly at the symbol of a nation destined to spell his doom.

Hitler's Fascist allies in Italy also have been active in the realms of romance and finance. Mussolini's high position and vast fortune have enabled him to indulge in a long series of affairs of the heart that have been common knowledge throughout Italy.

But Il Duce no longer is young, and he bears the burden of a land that has been hard buffeted by war. Romance plays a less important part in his life today than it did a short time ago when he was in the midst of his latest torrid affair of the heart.

The girl was a young Italian with dark eyes and velvety olive skin.

Always a lover of the arts, according to propagandist Goebbels, Hitler was—and still is—a frequent visitor to the controlled theatre and the opera. One of those artists whose performances pleased him is the dancer, La Jana, (above.)

Hitler's drum-beater, Goebbles, furthers the fable that the Fuehrer remains single because he is "wedded to the Fatherland." Hence the distribution of pictures like that above, showing the angelic Hitler lauding a delighted and buxom Bavarian peasant girl.

Il Duce was entranced, bewitched and befuddled. Important visitors were kept waiting for days at a time while the Great Man dallied with his new toy. Eventually she presented him with a daughter. The event added to the cup of bitterness of many Italians, but the romance continued.

Mussolini's son-in-law, Count Galeazzo Ciano, is fast becoming one of Italy's richest men. And the list of his romances is hardly less lengthy than the schedule of his stock holdings.

Owner of rich farms, prosperous Fascist newspapers and other valuable properties in profusion, Ciano prefers the company of glamorous lovelies to that of stodgy statesmen. His duties as Foreign Minister obviously irk the dashing count, and the cool beach of Ostia holds more attraction to him than the difficult problems of fighting a war.

Edda, mother of three children, is seen more often in the company of attractive young men than with her titled husband. Spending very little time in Rome, she shuttles between the idyllic island of Capri, where she has a new villa, and the winter sports resorts.

While Mussolini, Ciano and Edda fiddle, Rome burns with indignation. But there is little the Italian people can do about either their native leaders or the Nazi overlords who have practically occupied the country. It is a strange contrast. On the one hand, a populace that is starving, war-weary and driven to desperation by mounting military losses. On the other, a bandit crew of arrogant rulers who grow fatter and richer and more dissolute by the day.

Thus, in a general way, ran the talk of the skeptics in Nazi Germany—that is when the dread Gestapo was not listening. But on the whole Hitler and his Nazis got away with their false front of penurious and simple living. Now and then the Gestapo removed the bolder dissenters and gossipers in the rank and file, if only to impress the doubters of the wisdom of marching in step whenever and wherever the Fuehrer called the tune.

I have seen abundant evidence that "poor man" Hitler is one of the richest men in Naziland. It probably is true that he has no bank account under his own name. His wealth inside Germany lies in the vast property and income of the Nazi Party itself, and in the Machiavellian system by which he can help himself to Party funds and resources almost at will.

It must be pointed out that the Nazi Party functions as a separate entity to the government of the Reich. The hard-cash annual income of the Nazi Party from contributions, assessments and scores of monopolistic enterprises amounts to hundreds of millions. There has never been a public accounting by the Nazi Party, under whose supervision the Nazis extract from the public as much as $250,000,000 a year for so-called Winter Relief Work alone.

Only a few real insiders directly under Hitler can explain today how the bulk of that money is disposed of, and a few million marks scooped up at random by the Fuehrer for personal uses hardly would be missed. And, of course, the Gestapo is always eager to take charge of those foolhardy individuals who insist upon asking questions.

It was no problem for Hitler, therefore, to renovate and enlarge his mysterious eyrie above Berchtesgaden and transform it from a Bavarian mountain villa into a modern palace filled with priceless tapestries, mosaics, in addition to art objects stolen from occupied countries.

In the higher Nazi circles I heard it whispered last year that he intended to marry Theresa von Horn after the war. But that topic of conversation is taboo, for Goebbels still is energetically making capital of the theme that the Fuehrer is "wedded to Germany."

Theresa is one of five daughters of a staunch, old-time Nazi who rallied to Hitler's side in the street-fighting days. Lovely of face and figure, with luxuriant hair done in bangs, Theresa long has been a favorite companion of the Nazi Fuehrer at his Berchtesgarden eyrie.

A good listener, she has spent many a long evening with the harried head of the Reich, nodding her pretty head in agreement as he expounded his bizarre plans

Theresa never lived at the villa. She came only when Hitler was there, staying with her parents at a comfortable home outside Munich the rest of the time. On a few rare occasions she went to Berlin to stay a day or two at the chancellory or at the adjoining Kaiserhof Hotel, but Hitler usually preferred to see her at his mountain retreat.

Naturally Goebbels, in his inspired stories of Hitler's "marriage" to Germany, never mentions the fact that the Fuehrer bought a beautiful villa in a Munich suburb for another old flame, Eva Braun. Eva, before Hitler found her interesting, had served as secretary to Heinrich Hoffman, the hunchbacked photographer who has become a multi-millionaire in recent years because he has a monopoly on photos of the Head Man.

Hitler first met Eva in the 'twenties after his release from Landsberg prison. He shared her secretarial services with Hoffman who quickly discerned his chief's amorous interest in the fraulein and shrewdly effaced himself.

For a long period thereafter, Hitler and Eva were very much together at Berchtesgaden. When Theresa von Thorn moved into the picture, Eva moved quietly out and settled in a secluded Munich villa given her by Hitler. She draws an income from him and occasionally sees him briefly.

Other names have been linked to Hitler's from time to time, notably that of Leni Riefenstahl, the German screen star. Leni, it is true, saw much of the Fuehrer in 1935 and 1936 and undoubtedly drew more than passing interest from him, but highly placed Nazis told me that Leni herself started most of the rumors of their amorous romance. Her scheme, I was told, was to impress the Party leaders with her importance and thus further her film career.

Perhaps the strangest of all Hitler friendships was that of Unity Mitford, daughter of a family of wealth and power in the Fuehrer's hated Britain. Blonde and blue-eyed Unity eventually was shot under mysterious circumstances and went home to England via neutral Switzerland.

There is a castle in East Prussia, an old Czech hunting palace, and a country estate not far from Berlin which Hitler keeps handy for his own residential whims. He has rebuilt and furnished to his taste one hotel in every large city of Germany for use on his trips around the Reich.

All cost tremendous amounts of money, but funds are limitless.

There is, too, the great Munich race track with the best blooded horses in Europe, which win huge prizes. It is an open secret that Christian Weber, owner in name, is but a stooge for Hitler.

Then there is the Eher Verlag, most profitable and largest publishing plant in Nazi Germany. The millions of profit derived annually vanish into Nazi pockets. The chief stockholder is Adolf Hitler.

His book, "Mein Kampf," is a steady source of income to him inside and outside of Germany. Nobody knows where the accumulating funds of Hitler outside of Germany go to, but I have heard it said on good authority that, like Goering, Goebbels, Ribbentrop, Ley and Himmler, the Fuehrer could uncover some sizable bank balances abroad if the occasion called for it. Dividends from the German dye trust in numerous foreign lands have never moved back to Germany.

The moustached, nose-bobbed Fuehrer likes to play the generous and tolerant boss, who firmly professes to believe in reward for those who work hard. So he gives limousines and paintings of himself, or valuable silver gifts, to immediate henchmen who please him most. By the same token, he likes to smile kindly on the whims of his intimate pals, costly as they may be.

Thus when Goebbels spent a million Reich marks in the building of a country estate two years ago, Hitler went there for a house warming. The fact that the Reich was at war and needed all available construction materials failed to cast a shadow on their gaiety.

The huge new estate, known as Bogensee, is located in the midst of a thousand acres of wooded grounds, sixty miles from Berlin.

But Goebbels in 1941 thought he also needed a modern town palace. And Hitler let him build a million-dollar showcase next to the American Embassy, near the Brandenburger Gate. Even these lavish expenditures made no appreciable inroads on the Goebbels exchequer.

Goebbels, of course, is boss of the German film, music and theater world and expects to be recognized as such by all who earn their living from these bright light industries. If there is to be a new star, especially a feminine one, it is Goebbels who makes the final choice.

Top actress in Germany lately is Elizabeth Hase, above, the blonde Aryan type glorified in the propaganda of Herr Goebbels and favored by Hitler. Goebbels, whose wealth has mounted proportionately with that of his boss, is supreme czar of the Nazi theatre world, as well as the rabble-rousing hate singer.

I have watched the meteoric careers of numerous beauties who have skyrocketed to stardom under the guidance of Goebbels. The star can snap her fingers at UFA studio executives. She is the recipient of such sudden war privileges as living in a beautiful apartment and being transported in her own shiny limousine. Goebbels has ways of making arrangements for things like that.

Even more of a Croesus is fat and playful Goering, who was passing the hat for sausages and sauerkraut in Bavaria not many years ago. As late as 1934 he still wrote articles for foreign newspapers and magazines to get much-needed cash. Today he owns at least eight vast estates in different parts of the Reich, on each a great mansion or hunting lodge filled with the treasures of Europe. His townhouse on the Leipziger Platz in Berlin is a modest affair worth only a million or so. But in the wooded Schorfheide, sixty miles outside Berlin, he really rules like a king over a palatial estate where wild bison and all kinds of big game from Africa browse in peace until their hunting master craves a day of outdoor shooting sport.

Girls' Softball League Drafts Play-off Schedule

Deacons Score Nine Runs in One Frame to Beat Corbins 16-10 in Final League Tussle and Finish Third

THREE HOMERS

Although it was necessary to complete the entire schedule in the Belleville Ladies' Softball League before play-off berths could be determined, decks were cleared for the moneyed series last night after the Deacon A.C. lassies triumphed 16 to 10 over George Brown's Corbin "lockmakers" at the Exhibition Park diamond. Deacons finished in the third slot by winning last night following which President Don Roe announced the semi-final play-off dates for the league championship. The final standing of the league saw Zellers top the parade, followed closely by Tommy Colden's SWACO lassies, with Deacons third and Corbins fourth. The Bristol girls failed to gain a play-off berth.

Play-off Schedule

The draw for the semi-finals brings Zellers versus Corbins in a best-in-three series while Deacons clash with SWACO under similar conditions. The ultimate winners of these two semi-final series clash for the league championship in a subsequent three-in-five series. The schedule for the semi-final round reads

Aug. 6th—Corbins vs. Zellers.
Aug. 11th—Deacons vs. SWAÇO.
Aug. 13th—Zellers vs. Corbins.
Aug. 18th—SWACO vs. Deacons.

In the event of possible third and final games Corbins meets Zellers on Aug. 20 in their schedule while if a third game between Deacons and SWACO is needed it will be played on Aug. 25th with the league finals starting not later than Aug. 27th.

Sharpe Pounds Pill

Getting back to last night's game, won by the Deacons 16 to 10, the winner of the pastime was assured of third place in the final standing. It was the relief pitching of "Stewie" Stewart coupled with some lusty hitting by "Toots" Sharpe and Jean Corneal that pulled the game out of the fire with a nine run splurge in the seventh inning for "Barrett's babes."

"Toots" Sharpe started on the hilltop for the Deacons, but was replaced by "Stewie" Stewart in the initial frame after Corbins scored three. Brown's dandies added four in the fourth, but Deacons kept pecking away and the score stood at 8-6 when the fireworks ignited in the bottom half of the seventh when Deacons scored nine runs. It was during this frame "Toots" Sharpe banged out two round trippers while Jean Corneal pounded the pellet for one homer. The Deacon outfield then rallied behind their relief hurler and once in front gave a fine exhibition of shagging fly balls with Dot Hansey making the feature catch. Joyce Woodhouse did a grand job handling Stewie's slants and now Skipper Barrett contends he has an ace in the sleeve to hurl against Tommy Colden's "east-enders" in the play-offs. H. Fitzgibbon pitched the entire game for Corbins and except for the fatal seventh did herself noble off the Corbin mound and helped her own cause with four hits in as many tries.

The lineups:

Corbins: Hill ss; M. Zebedee c, B. Zebedee 3b, Barnhardt cf, Elliott 1b, Baylx 2b, Fitzgibbon p, Cook rf and Kyle lf.

Deacons: Stewart, Samain, Sword, Corneal, Woodhouse, Sharpe, Morlan, Hansey, and Freeman.

Score by innings:

Corbins ...... 301 400 020—10 runs
Deacons ..... 011 130 910—16 runs

Mexican Wrestler In Preliminary

Some new faces have been included on tonight's wrestling program at the Hume Arena. For instance Pedro Martinez, a burly Mexican whose ring reputation as a wrestler of parts has long been accepted. Martinez meets Al Tucker, a New England heavyweight who is making his first ring tour of Canada. Tucker proved a crowd-pleasurer of the first water in Toronto last week. The curtain-raiser brings two popular grapplers, Jan Gotch and Rudy Patek together.

Getting back to the main scrap the principals need introduction, the only question in the minds of the patrons is whether or not the burly Al Dunlop is capable of keeping "Irish Jerry" Monnahan in tow in his bout with "Whipper Billie" Watson. Although Watson and Monnahan are well acquainted when it comes to ring activities, just what the former masked man has to present the paying public for a laugh can never be anticipated and tonight will be no exception, Dunlop or no Dunlop.

I. T. S. FLYERS WIN DISTRICT SOFTBALL LOOP

No. 5 I.T.S. Downs Repair Depot, Advancing to Air Force Regional Play-Offs

Not satisfied with making a creditable 'showing' in Belleville softball circles the No. 5 ITS mushballers won the district R.C.A.F. softball championship and now advance to the regional Air Force softball play-offs versus the Kingston Flyers. All of this came about when Archie Green's No. 5 ITS softballers defeated the No. 6 A.R.D. nine in a third and final Air Force play-off game at the Trenton Air Station by a 10-4 score last evening.

As was the case in the Belleville City League playdowns the night previous, Pitcher Al Bell was in the centre of the local Flyers activities and not satisfied with doing some spot relief hurling, Bell helped his own cause with two hits. Jones, Green and Weir hit home runs for the No. 5 Flyers, as the winners pounded out 13 safe base knocks, many of the extra base nature, off the offerings of two Six A. R. D. hurlers.

The losers scored three of their four runs in the initial frame and added another in the second. Ray Smith started for the local Flyers, but gave-way to Bell in the fourth and the Trenton "Repair depot boys" only got two aboard thereafter. Forman, Green, Conley, Lamaure and Bell each counted two hits for the winners, while not a single member of the losing nine counted more than one safety off the combined deliveries of Smith and Bell. It was a keenly contested match as the No. 6 R. D. boys didn't take their medicine lying down and battled all and sundry, umpires included, to the last ditch.

The score by innings:

                              r.  h. e.
No. 6 R. D. 3 1 0 0 0 0 0— 4  5  2
No. 5 ITS   1 0 3 0 3 3 x—10 13  2

Batteries — No. 6 RD.—Beattie, Canbell and Bullard; No. 5 ITS — Smith, Bell and Forman.

Umpires — Schrieder and Bawden, of Belleville.

Toronto, Aug. 5—(CP)—Next big golf tournament after the Canadian Open is the $2,500 Lions Gate Open at Vancouver Shaughnessy. . . . Ken Black is doing much of the drum-beating and has a fine line-up of Pacific Northwest pros signed.

The expert says:

Walt (Saskatoon Star-Phoenix) Riddell: "If your favorite race horse lacks its usual oomph you can place some of the blame squarely on the Axis. The reason: their feet are heavier this year, for gone are the light, snappy aluminum horse-shoes. War industry needs the aluminum more than the bangtails. The nags are now wearing just plain steel shoes."

Incidentally:

Holes-in-one don't happen very often in golf competition but Byron Nelson got one in the Tam O'Shanter and nobody's bashful any more. . . . Mrs. M. I. Lights Out at Polo Grounds Save Giants From Defeat After Dodgers Score in Tenth

War Regulations See Lights Doused After Brooklyn Scores Four, Game Reverts to 1-1 Tie as Teams Stall for Darkness

Marchildon Wins for A's Whle Senators Wallop Yankees and York Hits 16th Circuit Blow

(By JUDSON BAILEY)

New York fans may never like "twi-night" baseball, but they now are ready to admit that the dim-out plays no favorites.

Twice in two nights the gripping struggles of the Brooklyn Dodgers and New York Giants have been prematurely ended by the army regulations which require that floodlights must be extinguished an hour after sundown.

Monday this rule helped beat the Giants 7-4 when darkness smothered a promising rally in the last half of the ninth inning—to the violent displeasure of a crowd of 57,305 fans assembled for the benefit of army relief.

Last night, however, the switching off of the Polo grounds lights erased a four-run 10th inning outburst by the Dodgers and gave the Giants a 1-1 tie which the teams will play off Sept. 6. This time the 15,000 fans accepted the incident without a demonstration, although they had booed time-killing manoeuvres of the rivals throughout the game.

Reese Loses Honor

The fans' loss was slight compared to that of Peewee Reese, the Dodgers' little shortstop, who hit a home run with the bases loaded to knock Fiddler Bill McGee out of the box in the 10th. It didn't count because the inning wasn't finished.

The Giants had little chance of getting a turn at bat anyway, and they made certain they would not by some dexterous stalling.

The same teams meet in their third successive twi-night game tonight, but this time across the city in Brooklyn.

Although the Dodgers didn't win, their National League lead was extended to ten full games, their largest margin of the season, because St. Louis Cardinals were set down 4-3 at Cincinnati.

Pittsburgh Pirates captured a 2-1 decision over Chicago Cubs on Frankie Gustine's only hit of the day, a single with two on in the 11th inning. Bob Klinger held the Cubs to seven hits.

At Philadelphia Jim Tobin held the Phils to five hits, but was beaten 4-2 because the only runs Boston Braves scored were on Tobin's own home run with a mate aboard in the seventh inning. This was the big righthander's sixth circuit clout of the year and tied Hal Schumacher's National League record for homers by a pitcher. In winning old Si Johnson pitched seven-hit ball.

New York Yankees were beaten 4-3 in a night game at Washington, but received some consolation from the fact that their ailing lefthander, Marius Russo, rejoined the club and pitched two innings of no-hit ball in relief.

Phil Marchildon, of Penetanguishene, Ont., the standout hurler of the last-place Philadelphia Athletics, held Boston Red Sox to four hits to achieve his 13th triumph of the year by a 6-4 score. Marchildon caused himself uncommon trouble with six bases on balls, but his teammates thumped Charley Wagner solidly.

Rudy York hit his 16th homer but Detroit Tigers were beaten 5-4 by Chicago White Sox in a loose pitching battle between two old-timers, Ted Lyons and Tommy Bridges.

Cleveland at St. Louis was postponed.

Marchildon Chalks up Win No. 13 for Philadephia

By STEVE O'LEARY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Boston, Aug. 5 — (AP) — Phil Marchildon's name won't be found anywhere among the American League's leading pitchers but every other Major League manager would part with a couple of eye teeth to have the Canadian-born ace of the Philadelphia Athletics on his side.

They might do all right at that for, in return for the pair of ivories, they'd be collecting one of the outstanding pitchers in the Major Leagues, even though he has been toiling in virtual privacy with the tenants of the American circuit cellar.

Take Phil and Roger Wolff away from the A's this season and they would be tunneling deep enough in the standings to come up somewhere around the Coastal Plains League. Phil has won 13 games and Roger 10, more than one-half of the 42 games the Athletics have marked down this season on the black ink side of the ledger.

First in League

That mystic 13, incidentally, makes Marchildon the first American League bowler to gain that many decisions this season — an accomplishment the more noteworthy when one considers how often his team has labored in a losing cause. He has been defeated only eight times — another more than creditable feat when one reflects on what punching bags the once-mighty Athletics have become for the rest of the league.

Marchildon, native of Penetanguishene, Ont., came up to the Athletics from Toronto Maple Leafs near the end of the 1940 season. Before being signed by the Leafs he had made a name for himself in Canada on Ontario sandlots.

His four-hit verdict against the Boston Red Sox yesterday gave him two victories and one defeat against them this year, equalling his record against them for the entire season in 1941.

The Sox blasted him from the box in the opening game of the season but he's had their number ever since. He's been impartial, too, beating them both at home and on the road and each and every one of the heavy hitting Red Sox array concedes that he's one of the toughest pitchers in the business to face when he's really pouring it in there.

Phil is inclined to be really wild at times, as his six bases on balls, a hit batter and two wild pitches yesterday proved. But no one can laugh off his amazing record and such distinguished service makes him the envy of other big league managers.

They needn't worry about their eye teeth, though.

Phil has a date with the Canadian army and expects a call almost anytime for further distinguished service in a greater cause.

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON JR.)
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Aug. 5. (AP) —Fast time pastime: while fans still are talking about the sudden end of the Giants-Dodgers benefit game the other evening it seems like a good idea to point out that clubs can and do finish games in a lot less than two hours and 25 minutes. . . .The Sally League—'Mother of the Minors, Cradle of the Great"—has the same sort of dim-out problem and President E. M. Wilder reports that by barring all stalling they have cut the average time to about an hour and a half. . . . ."As long as we can hold this record, the fans, the officials and everybody else concerned are satisfied", he adds. . . . Only official action to bring about this speed-up was a ban on mass arguments, but we understand a lot of the wasted time between innings has been cut out, too.

Sport Pourri

Another sock at golf is the news that Balata, the stuff they use for retreading golf balls, has been frozen. Seems it can be used in the war effort. . . .It happens in the Bronx: popular Sunday afternoon diversions are the frequent soccer games between the German-American Club teams and British sailors—and the players have a swell time at post-game get-togethers.

No Slip of the Lip

When Leo Durocher tried to buy his way into the Polo Grounds for Monday's Army-Navy Baseball game between the Giants and Brooklyn, he got into an argument with the ticket man and finally had to get a cop to buy his pasteboards. Then he learned that the other Dodgers, after similar disputes, had been passed in free through the press gate. . . "That doesn't go". Leo the Lip proclaimed. "Take up a collection and buy tickets for everyone. They're not going to say we got in for nothing".

WINS OWN GAME

Gloversville, N.Y., Aug. 5 (AP)—Lefty Earl Jones not only hurled Gloversville to victory in both ends of a Canadian-American League doubleheader against Quebec last night, but drove in the winning run in the second game. He fanned seven in the seven-inning opener, and nine in the full-length nightcap, walked one man, and allowed 11 hits.

BOXER DIES AFTER KNOCK-OUT BLOW

Melbourne, Aug. 4—(AP)—Struck down by a knockout blow from young Frisco, his Filipino opponent, Cecil Overall, a leading professional boxer here, died in hospital today. He received his injuries Saturday night while defending his cruiserweight title.

LOCAL GOLFER IN CANADIAN OPEN MATCH

Bill Little, of Quinte Country Club, Has Trial Round With Golf's Big-Wigs

Toronto, Aug. 5—(CP,—The locker-room boys are wondering today if they weren't a little hasty in conceding the Canadian open to tee-sized Ben Hogan the moment he turned up here yesterday.

When Hogan toured the championship layout at the Mississauga Club a few hours after his arrival he looked good only rarely to fall far in the shadow of the Maestro from Mamoroneck, N. Y., Craig Wood. Hogan's score wasn't recorded, but he was nursing a fearsome hook and had trouble keeping clear of the swift-running Credit river which threads the 6543-yard course.

Wood rolled home with a 70, two under par and two over the course record. His long, straight game seemed fitted to the narrow fairways and malicious traps.

Some Ontario players were matched against each other, with Bob Barringer, amateur from Timmins, playing with Bill Freeman, Toronto York Downs and Bill Little, Belleville.

Abandon Race Horses Sold At Auction

London, Aug. 5 — (CP) — The thousands of dollars worth of racing horseflesh left in Britain while their French owners remain in France raised a problem of keep. Here's the answer supplied by the Board of Trade:

When trainers decide they can no longer keep a French-owned horse they apply to the Board of Trade and are granted an order to sell. Proceeds are given the custodian of enemy property, who pays the trainer the costs of keep since the last payment received from the owner. The balance is held by the custodian and ultimately will be included in the financial settlements of the peace treaty.

Three such valuable animals belonging to the wealthy Greek sportsman, S. Viasto, were sold at Newmarket after the trainer said he hadn't heard from the owner since the war's start.

CASUAL COMMENT

by K.J.C.

THAT FLEET-FOOTED CENTRE fielder trotted out by Skipper Archie Green's No. 5 ITS "Flyers" Monday night was none other than Jack Parry, formerly of Windsor. Perry is considered by Doug Vaughan and other Border Cities sports luminaries as the best all-around athlete to come out of Windsor since the day Tony Golab forsook Ouelette Ave. The way Parry raced from first to score on a short single Monday night versus Reliance it was quite apparent he had been around ball diamonds before.

Jack Parry was the star track and field ace of Windsor during his secondary school days and also starred at basketball and baseball, having little to do with softball until he joined the R.C.A.F. a few months ago. Fortunately for some of the boys at No. 5 ITS Parry wasn't around for their annual track and field meet the other day. Incidentally this lad Doidge, in left field for the Flyers, looks like a ball hawk also, but not in Perry's class offensively.

F/O. RAY BARRETT, SKIPPER of the Mountain View "Bombers" [illegible] in this morning to warn all and sundry he had a new [illegible] up his sleeve to hurl at the Army and Navy Vets tonight. The reply was obvious —"You'll need him".

No doubt Connie Harris will be on the firing line for the Vets tonight, as Johnnie Bawden's injured toe isn't exactly fully recovered. Last Wednesday the Bombers and Vets battled through a ten inning eleven all draw when the Vets outhit the Bombers 19 to 14, but also out-errored them to even matters in all respects. Murney Green was the only Vet to miss the hit column last week, but the veteran receiver can usually be depended on. On the other hand the Bombers' two right fielders, Zadow and Cook went hitless before Harris. If Skipper Barrett's new mystery hurler does not measure up to par—well don't be surprised if Freddie Smith returns to the Bombers' mound.

LEO BARRETT'S DEACON GALS pulled up in third place in the Ladies' Softball final standing, but much of the credit must go to "Stewie" Stewart for some top-ranking relief pitching and to Toots Sharpe, who hit two circuit blows, while Jean Corneal banged out another round-tripper when Deacons scored nine runs in the seventh to down Corbins 16 to 10 last night. Now President Don Roe's lassies are ready for the league playdowns, which commence tomorrow night with Corbins meeting Chuck Barnett's twice league champion . Zellers. Tommy Colden's SWACOs play "Barrett's Beauties" in the other half of the league semi-finals commencing next week. The fact the girls league had to play out its complete schedule before all play-off berths were decided indicates the keen competition that marked the regular schedule. The league play-off dates are published elsewhere in today's issue.

REMEMBER WHEN E. H. Temme of England, only swimmer to conquer the treacherous English Channel twice, ploughed through the choppy waters 15 years ago today in 14 hours and 29 minutes? Temme duplicated the feat seven years later, his time in the last attempt being one hour slower.

PROMOTER FRANK TUNNEY is introducing two new rasslin' faces on tonight's grunt and groan circus at the Arena in the persons of Pedro Martinez, a Mexican villain, and Al Tucker who hails from the Bluenose country. Of course the mainbouters, Monnahan and Watson, will have to be introduced all over again, but it's safe betting 'Irish Jerry' will come up with some new-fanged trick to treat the patrons. That guy can concoct more ideas to irritate and arouse the fans than the villain in an oldtime melodrama.

TURF FANS APPARENTLY forgot to take into consideration that Whirlaway (mister big tail) had to give away twenty-seven pounds on a bad and sloppy track when beaten by Emerson Woodward's Irish-bred colt Rounders in the Arlington Handicap at Chicago the other day. When "Big Whirlie" failed to capture the $25,000 handicap upwards of 30,000 booed Jockeye Arcaro. Even Ben Jones, trainer of the greatest money winner of all time, hints that Arcaro rode a poor race. "Arcaro made two or three moves to get out in front when one is usually sufficient". However, 27 pounds is a lotta weight to give away, and more especially so on a sloppy track where the going was heavy. The Arlington Handicap has long since been known as "the graveyard of champions". Johnstown in 1939 felt the sting of the Arlington graveyard, as did Bimelech in 1940 and now it's Whirlaway. Strangely enough Jockey Freddie Smith, up on Rounders, warned the press photographers he would be the one they'd snap after the classic.

Archie Green's ITS Flyers" have really got themselves tangled up in this business of softball play-offs. Last night they won the district R.C.A.F. softball championship defeating No. 6 Repair Depot of Trenton 10 to 4, but not before the game had its moments. Now the local Flyers tangle with the Kingston Airmen in the first regional title series, the winner advancing into the all-Ontario Air Force semi-finals at Toronto. Al Bell's relief hurling coupled with circuit blows by Jones, Weir and Green helped the Flyers win the district Air Force title, that included all of the air bases in the entire Quinte area. Incidentally we see "Wayward Weir," the apple-knocker deluxe, is back with the Flyers.

THIS AND THAT — Who said "youth must be served?" . . . Yesterday Ted Lyons bested Tommy Bridges in a loose pitching battle between two old timers as the White Sox beat the Tigers 5 and 4 . . . . Their combined ages must border 80 years . . . . Phil Marchildon, one of many Canadians making good in the major leagues today, chalked up his 13th win for the A's yesterday. . . . He was the first junior circuit hurler to reach this figure even though pitching for the cellar-position Athletics . . . . which should make his mound accomplishments all the more outstanding. . . . Bill Little, golf pro. up at the Bay of Quinte Country Club, is hob-knobbing with golf's big-wigs up at Toronto Mississauga, scene of the Canadian open. . . . Bill is entered in the Canadian open. . . . It was Ted Lyons' 254th in his 19 years with Chicago. . . . There is a chance Kingston may be included in a major rugby football set-up next fall. . . . Montreal is talking of dropping out of rugby for the duration, so armed service teams are being considered from Toronto and Kingston. . . . With over 20,000 airmen in the Quinte area why not include Belleville . . . team for one now.

Mrs. George Phillips of Toronto is visiting Flt. Lt. and Mrs. J. Phillips on the Belleville Road. Mrs. George Phillips and Miss Joanne Phillips spent last weekend in Montreal with Squadron Leader George Phillips.

Squadron Leader Pat Twist, recently returned from England visited friends in Trenton over the weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. Melville Wilson, Toronto, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hall, Henry Street.

Nursing Sister Helen Kerr of the R.C.A.F. spent a brief furlough last week with her parents Mr. and Mrs. James A. Kerr, Hotel Gilbert.

Mr and Mrs. H. E. McClung and daughters Margaret Joan and Janet spent last week visiting Mrs. McClung's father in Cobden.

Mrs. Fred Gitelman, Shuter St., is in Toronto this week on business.

Police Court

Magistrate J. L. Lloyd presided over Trenton police court on Tuesday with County Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C. prosecuting.

Grant Burrows came before the court on a charge of vagrancy which was dismissed. He had been charged with being able but refusing to work and the case was laid over for several weeks until today as in the meantime he became attached to a local army unit where he had given splendid service.

C. C. Woods charged with common assault was let go on suspended sentence on payment of costs of $30.25.

John Whalen, Violet Newton and Arthur Benham each paid $10 and costs for being drunk.

A keeper of a common gaming house was fined $25 and $8.75 costs. Two found-ins paid $10 and costs. There are eleven more found-ins to be dealt with in Friday's court.

Leafs, Newark Bears Divided Twin Bill

Newark Bears and Toronto Maple Leafs divide a double header with the Leafs winning the first, 6-4, and the Bears the finale, 4-2 in 11 innings. Harry Shuman allowed one hit and one run until the ninth inning of the opener. Then the Bears slammed three more hits good for three more runs.

The star of the nightcap was Tommy Byrne, who pitched the entire distance for Newark and notched his 14th conquest. Byrne didn't issue a single pass and figured prominently in the scoring with three hits, including a triple.

Ken Trinkle hurled the Baltimore Orioles to an 8-3 victory over Montreal Royals in the lid-lifter, but Les McCrabb outpitched Pete Center to give the Royals a 3-1 victory in the wind-up of a twin feature. Gene Moore, of the Royals hit safely in both encounters to run his hitting streak to 15 straight games.

"Bomb Scourge" Of Italy Urged By British M.P.

London, Aug. 5 (CP Cable) — A "bomb scourge of Italy as well as Germany" was urged by Cmdr. Sir Archibald Southby, Conservative member for Epsom, in a question tabled in the House of Commons today.

He asked Prime Minister Churchill if military targets in Rome and other Italian cities will be attacked in view of the Axis bombing of Malta and Cairo.

At the same time another question by Rev. Reginald Sorenson, Labor, asked the Minister of Information whether use had been made of the number of air raid casualties in Britain and Axis countries to "impress on the German, Italian and other peoples of Europe the imperative necessity of abolishing or restricting aerial warfare through an international authority?"

GOLD RUSH STRONG MAN DIES

Juneau, Alaska, Aug. 5—(AP)—John Wagner, 80, who during the Klondike gold rush was known as the strongest man on the Chilkoot Pass trail, died yesterday in a hospital where he had been a patient since last October. Wagner established a reputation as the only packer who could carry a cook stove.

THRESHER'S ARM CAUGHT IN BELT

Lorne Bailey's Arm So Badly Crushed That Amputation is Necessary

Allans Mills, Aug. 5—(Special)—While operating a threshing outfit near here yesterday Lorne Bailey, of Harold, had his left arm crushed in the machine pulley and later the arm had to be amputated at the Belleville General Hospital.

Mr. Bailey was operating the threshing outfit when the drive belt from the tractor to the separator came off. In attempting to replace the belt over the pulley Mr. Bailey's arm engaged the wheel and was caught in the belt. His left arm was drawn around the pulley and badly crushed. The injured man was hurled to the ground where he sustained a severe head injury and was picked up in a semi-conscious condition.

Bailey was taken to the Belleville General Hospital where Dr. R. S. Gibson attended and later found the arm crushed so badly that it was necessary to amputate it at the elbow. Otherwise his condition is reported to be improving today. Mr. Bailey is the son of the late George and Mrs. Bailey, of Harold. The tractor he was operating belongs to him, while the separator is the property of Theodore Cooney. Mr. Bailey was threshing on the farm of James Gibson, near Bonarlaw when the accident occurred.

ARGENTINE COUPLE WANTS TO JOIN R.C.A.F.

Toronto, Aug. 5 —(CP)— Mr. and Mrs. John Asher of Buenos Aires, Argentina, arrived here yesterday by air to enlist in the Royal Canadian Air Force. He hopes to become a member of the air crew and she is going to join the R.C.A.F. (Women's Division). They are both 26.

SOLDIER SUFFERS GUNSHOT WOUND

Halifax, Aug. 5—(CP)—Fusilier D. Shutz was taken to Military Hospital here yesterday with a gunshot wound and officials said his condition was "dangerous." Military District No. 6 headquarters said an investigation was underway, but no statement would be made until its completion. The soldier is a member of the Princess Louise Fusiliers of Halifax.

AT THE BELLE

"MOONTIDE"

The long-awaited appearance of Jean Gabin in his first American motion picture takes place at the Belle Theatre today, when the 20th Century-Fox's "Moontide" makes its local debut.

From the first moment Gabin appears on the screen, to the final fade-out, there is no question that here is one of the great screen actors of our time. Coming from French language films to Hollywood, Gabin makes the transition with complete success and turns in a powerful and realistic portrayal of the conscience - tortured Pacific Coast bait fisherman

Aided by splendid performances by Ida Lupino, Thomas Mitchell, and Claude Rains, Gabin makes the film a memorable addition to the season's roster of fine motion pictures—and one of its best.

Those who were stirred by Gabin's previous portrayals in French pictures will find him at the peak of his talent in "Moontide," while those who meet Gabin for the first time are certain of a great film experience.

The feature has been excellently directed by Archie Mayo, while the production leaves nothing to be desired under the guidance of Mark Hellinger. The screenplay by John O'Hara preserves the dramatic flavor of the Willard Robertson best-selling nove.

A screen event of major importance is in store for moviegoers today, Thursday and Friday.

"Sunday Punch" Entertaining

With a vicious prize fight providing a major thrill and romance and comedy, "Sunday Punch," teaming William Lundigan, new leading man discovery with glamorous Jean Rogers, is the added attraction now playing at the Belle Theatre. Excitement galore is embellished by the work of a cast of comedians whose antics punctuate each episode of the picture.

AT THE McCARTHY

"REMEMBER PEARL HARBOR"

Latest in the parade of outstanding screen attractions coming to the McCarthy Theatre is "Remember Pearl Harbor," the thrilling new Republic action drama which opens a two day run there tomorrow.

Donald M. Barry, Alan Curtis and Fay McKenzie head the excellent cast of players appearing in the film. Sig Ruman, Rhys Williams, Maynard Holmes, Robert Emmett Keane, Ian Keith, and Diana Del Rio also have important featured roles.

The story — which is, of course, entirely fictional — presents Barry, Curtis, and Holmes as three soldiers stationed at a U. S. Army post in the Phillipines. Barry is the happy-go-lucky member of the trio whose main interest in life is romancing with the lovely Miss McKenzie. His blithe disregard for rules and regulations keeps not only himself, but Curtis and Holmes as well, constantly in hot water.

However, with the opening of war between the United States and Japan, he quickly reforms and proves himself to be a first-class fighting man. When a contingent of enemy troops attempt to land near the army post, his valor in battle inspires the Americans and leads them on to victory in the encounter.

In the second feature Boston Blackie, that hard-hitting handsome young rogue who constantly beats cops to the punch and to the solution of seemingly insoluble crimes, returns to the McCarthy Theatre tomorrow in Columbia's "Confessions of Boston Blackie," second in the thrilling new series which features Chester Morris in the title role. Harriet Hilliard, the lovely vocalist of radio and stage fame, plays the romantic lead opposite Morris, in her first straight dramatic role.

The regular weekly foto-nite feature will also be presented from the stage tomorrow.

Tonight is the last time to see Irene Dunne in her latest comedy "Lady in A Jam," and the thrill picture "The Man Who Returned to Life."

AT THE CAPITOL

GENE AUTRY

"Home in Wyomin'," the latest in Gene Autry's series of musical action dramas for Republic, will open tomorrow at the Capitol Theatre for a three day run.

Smiley Burnette has his customary comedy role in the new film, with a talented youngster, Joe Strauch, Jr., portraying Smiley's kid brother, half-pint edition known as "Tadpole"

Fay McKenzie has the feminine lead in the story, which has to do with Gene's adventures setting a near-defunct rodeo on its feet, with a few murders thrown in to make the proceedings exciting.

Among the supporting players are Olin Howlin, Chick Chandler, James Seay, Forrest Taylor, George Douglas, Bud Geary, Ken Cooper, Hal Price and James McNamara.

"CHARLIE CHAPLIN"

Imagine, if you can, five hundred million people — half a billion human beings—all looking at, laughing at, and hugely enjoying the same thing! It's a world's record to end world's records—but it's perfectly true. For that, conservatively estimated, is the number of people in the world who have seen and laughed at Charlie Chaplin in the twenty-five years.

Four of the greatest of these immortal pictures, showing Charlie in the original character upon which his fame is built, namely "The Immigrant," "The Adventurer," "The Cure" and "Easy Street," are now being shown in a modern streamlined feature version, known as "The Charlie Chaplin Festival," at the Capitol Theatre tomorrow. It is remarkable to note that these comedies have never been seen by many of the younger generation of American movie goers, yet they are familiar to persons in as remote places as China, Thibet, South Africa, Australia, and the Malay Peninsula.

A color cartoon and the final chapter of Dick Tracy vs. Crime Inc. concludes another grand weekend bill for all to see.

Says Vichy Vice Consul Condemned to Death

Istanbul, Turkey, Aug. 5 —(AP)— A Vichy French vice consul in the southern district of Turkey has been condemned to death for espionage against Turkey, it was disclosed today.

The case now is before an appellate court after being tried by a special tribunal.

The vice consul, whose name was not disclosed, was stationed in Antakia (Antioch), in the Hatay district, which borders on Syria and lies close to Cyprus.

GIRL DISAPPEARS

Toronto, Aug. 5 —(CP)— Thomas Turner of Toronto said last night he feared foul play in the disappearance of his 13-year-old daughter, Ramona Jean Turner, who left her home on Bathurst Street in central Toronto Sunday night to buy her father cigarettes and who has not been seen since.

O.P.P. WILL PROBE DISTURBANCES

Crystal Beach, Ont., Aug. 5—(CP)—Municipal authorities here waited today for provincial police investigation of disturbances between Jews and Gentiles, which resulted in the congregation of large crowds of downtown streets last Thursday and Friday and the request by Police Chief Floyd Gerrard for additional police aid because he had feared trouble between the two races.

Reeve N. L. Smith said last night application had been made and granted for police investigation of the disturbances.

One man is being held in jail here on charges of resisting an officer and assault occasioning actual bodily harm following a disturbance last Friday night when a crowd of 3,000 persons filled downtown intersections. Chief Gerrard said the same-size crowd had congregated the previous night and following the trouble Friday he had asked for and received eight provincial policemen from the Niagara district to aid his men.

Chief Gerrard said he feared last week a racial riot was being instigated by two antagonistic factions of Jews and Gentiles in Crystal Beach, whose normal population of 700 is swelled to thousands by summer visitors. The regular police force has been augmented by provincial police since Sunday night, officials said.

Streets were cleared and places of business were asked to close three-quarters of an hour earlier Saturday night after a number of disturbances took place.

Officials of the Crystal Beach Amusement Company, which operates the concessions at the resort, said "the troubles are not happening at the park but in Crystal Beach village."

WOUNDED WHILE HAYING

Yarmouth, N.S., Aug. 5—(CP)—Although Mrs. Leonard Baker of nearby Chegoggin suffered sixteen separate wounds when thrown on the prongs of a haying machine, doctors believe she will recover. Helping with the haying last weekend, Mrs. Baker was operating a "tedder" when the horse bolted after being stung by a bee.

WANT NO JAPS IN BEER PARLORS

Lethbridge, Alta., Aug. 5—(CP)—The Lethbridge city council has endorsed a resolution asking the Alberta Liquor Control Board to prohibit Japanese and Hutterites from frequenting beer parlors here. Mayor D. H. Elton said "keeping these people out of beer parlors is a measure for their own protection."

2 NAZI PATROL BOATS BLOWN UP IN OSTEND BY BELGIAN PATRIOTS

Ottawa, Aug. 5 —(CP)— Moscow radio, picked up by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation listening post at Ottawa, today said that two German patrol boats have been blown up in the harbor of Ostend, Belgium. Military stores were also blown up and set afire on shore.

Moscow indicated the explosions were caused by patriots because the broadcast reported that a number of people have been arrested.

The same broadcast said the Germans are considering giving autonomy to the French coastal area of Brittany. According to this report the Germans feel that if Brittany was separated from the rest of France, it would help the Germans in case of an Allied invasion.

A MAN'S WOMAN

by JANE DIXON

CHAPTER 26
NIGHT LIFE

Kay was ready and waiting when Ronnie called shortly after nine that night. She was glad she had yielded to his insistent invitation. All work and no play . . . she was wearing the misty green crepe gown Ronnie liked best. It suited her somehow. Just a slim green sheath, with her tawny head perched like a bloom at the top of it and the exotic lei of gardenias. She had seen necklaces of tropical flowers in pictures, worn by women who took fortune and fantasy as a matter of course. She had even considered weaving one of old-fashioned flowers from the angled garden, but somehow the picture had been incongrous.

The heavy swimming perfume of the gardenias was like a drug. Langorous. After the swift pace of National promotion department she could use a bit of langour.

The undisguised flash of admiration on the face of the elevator boy gave Kay fresh assurance, a new appreciation for the hours ahead of her. She said to herself "Kay Kenyon, the Candy Kid of Somerset, wrapped in gardenias. Amazing!"

Ronnie's greeting was so spontaneous, so superlative that Kay wondered whether she might be on the spectacular side.

"Red!" Ronnie stood back for a general survey. "You look like I've never seen a woman look. You're a dream walking You're the walking dream of every man who wants to snare his life with a woman as beautiful as she is intelligent."

"Thanks, Ronnie," Kay said, moved in spite of herself. "It's just the old green dress you like and the gardenias."

Ronnie went on feasting his eyes on a dream as she walked to a taxi.

"Uh-huh," he said. "Wait 'til you see what happens. This town is glutted with wilting babes. A fresh number like you, lovely to look at, with dew on the petals, is news."

The taxi stopped.

"It's too early for Stork or Morocco or any of the big parade," Ronnie said. "This is a between place for a few who can find their way waround. It's a club. You have to sign on the dotted line. Two hundred and fifty to join, but my college crew tells me it's worth it. I'm not boasting, Red. I'm just telling you how New York ticks."

"How your New York ticks," Kay murmured.

"What was that?"

"Nothing. Nothing at all. I was talking to myself. A very bad habit."

Inside the drab brownstone front Kay gasped. The lights. The color. The music. Pale moonlight. Deep blue. A spot of crimson like blood on the moon. Music, sensuous, compelling.

There were four people at the table in a far corner toward which a lofty waiter led them.

Two women. Two men. They weren't having fun. The men were smashing out cigarettes they had just lighted. One woman was making signs to the orchestra leader who bobbed at her from behind a screen of greenery. The other woman sat, with her head between her hands.

"Hi," Ronnie said, smacking his palm on the table. "What goes on? What is this, a tomb?"

The men stood up. Their eyes were glued on Kay. The woman who had been signaling the orchestra leader plunged at Ronnie. "Darling," she said. "We've been napping. Waiting for you. Drag up a chair, order me a Zombie, and let's play hands until it's time to go places."

Ronnie said, appropriating a chair from an adjoining table, "try this one, Red. Parties like this, no introductions. No one remembers anyhow. It's up to you to get your bearings. Don't look so startled. These people don't wake up until eleven, at the earliest."

"I see," Kay said. She didn't see in the least, but it was the thing to say.

The woman who was holding her head roused herself.

"Ron," she said. Her voice was thick, her eyes uncertain. "You walked out on me. You went away Ron—what was it you went away for? You went away to find—to find, what was it you went to find? I know." The woman threw back her head. She yawned at the string of pearls around her throat. The pearls bounced on the floor. "Sorry," she said. Her head was weaving. "Waiter, pick up the pearls. Put 'em in my bag. Here's the bag. And don't hold out. The pearls are registered. If you hold out the gendarmes will be here tomorrow to throw you in the jug. Damn the pearls. A string of beads, a jug of wine beneath the bough . . . Ron, why are you staring at me?"

"I'm not staring," Ronnie said. "I'm looking. Maybe it's a good show, but I don't like it. Pull yourself together, will you Duke? I get a headache, just looking at you."

The woman ran her fingers through hair that had been immaculately groomed, now tousled.

"Where's that big blast from down yonder you were loading us with tonight?" The woman's eyes were roving the room, unseeingly. Roving they focussed on Kay. "So there you are," she said. "Up from the sea in gardenias."

arls b tpe X o yo a

"Why, yes," Kay said. Suddenly she felt adequate to this strange situation. "The sea, the gardenias. What could be sweeter? Nice, no?"

Kay thought that her cordial acceptance of a situation would have a pacifying effect. Instead it was a goad to the woman who was not yet fully aware, but in a mood to be quarrelsome.

"I get you," the woman said. "Why are you staring at me? You don't like the cute little plaster I'm wearing. So what? I'm drunkie. So what again? So you're taking over. You're the smartly who takes the place of men who need jobs. Maybe I am drunkie, but I've enough left to know that women like you knock the hell out of women like me. What are we? Liabilities. We want to get our men, to hold our men, but what chance have we with a lot of office sirens scheming to show how clever they are, what a help they'd be in the house. There ought to be a law against office wives."

Kay shrunk before the vehement attack.

"But we're not the way you say," she protested, quietly. "At least very few of us are. We work because we must earn our living, because we have family responsibilities, the same as men."

"I'll bet," the woman scoffed. "and that of course, is why you're being the big office executive, like Ron told us. You have to take a man's place in the world."

Kay said, "yes, that's why I work." Then, with spirit. "But I like doing it. It's lots more fun than loafing."

"Noble sentiment. Suppose you'd never done anything but play? Suppose there was nothing you could do?"

"There wasn't," Kay said. "a few months ago. Anyhow, that's what I thought. Only dire necessity forced me to find there is a place for me in the working world, as there is for every one of us."

The other young woman adjusted the bodice of her strapless evening gown and yawned ostentatiously. "I'm dry as powder," she said. "Can't we have a drink and talk about something interesting?"

"Let's dance," Ronnie said to Kay. He felt uncomfortable.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was smoking and reading in his private chair, saying, There's a mosquito in this room, confound it, and it seems to be singling me out as the object of its attention. If I was really a philosophical man I'd no doubt be able to ignore it, telling myself that it's probably more afraid of me than I am of it, but the way I'm constituted I haven't had any idea of what I've been reading for the passel 5 minutes. If I was a Yogi I could probably concentrate happily on my —cigar and my book in the middle of a whole swarm of mosquitoes, but I'm not a Yogi, he said.

Do you mean an Okie? ma said and pop said, I dont know what I mean as long as that confounded mosquito keeps making fake power dives at me Here I am surrounded by everything necessary to make a man happy, and I'm weak minded enough to think of nothing but one infinitessimal mosquita, he said.

Well jimminy, pop, it must be a pretty smart of a mosquito to find its way in here through the screens and everything when none of the other mosquitoes couldn't, I said. and pop said, It's not smart enough to keep from being knocked silly if it ever gets within reach of my hand.

Well that's just the thing, pop, it's so smart it wont get in reach, I said. G, pop, if we could only cach it do you think we could train it to do some real tricks and have the only trained mosquito in the world? I said, and pop said, Who knows? If it's as smart as you say it might learn to bite the people I dont like and keep me awake at the wheel of my car on long drives by buzzing harmlessly in my ear, he said

And he went back to his book, being War and Peace, and I went back to mine, being Kollosal Komics, Number 48.

MAROONED GIRL RESCUED

Dryden, Ont., Aug. 4 — (CP)—Miss Margaret Parker, 20, of Winnipeg, was brought here yesterday after searchers found her on Copeland Island, Lake Wabigoon. She was marooned on the island last Saturday when her canoe drifted ashore after she had lost a paddle. She was without food for two nights and a day.

Oil Tank Cars Must Be Emptied Within 24 Hours After Arrival

Montreal, Aug. 5 (CP)—Orders designed to speed movements of railway tank cars in Canada and the provision that if through negligence they are not followed it will mean operators will be deprived of further use of the cars were made public here today by T. C. Lockwood, Dominion Transport Controller.

The orders, effective Aug. 10, direct consignees to discharge tank cars at destination within 24 hours after the cars are placed on the consignee's siding, regardless of the time of arrival. An exception to this rule are tank cars containing liquefied petroleum and other cases.

Flight Engineers' Badge is Planned

London, Aug. 5—(CP Cable)—A badge for flight engineers in the R.A.F., will be introduced soon, Capt. Harold Balfour, Under-Secretary for Air, announced in the House of Commons today. He did not indicate whether the badge has been designed to date.

It is understood also from unofficial sources that the question of giving "double wings" to all air crew members is being considered by the Air Ministry. At present, pilots are the only fliers permitted to wear full wings; others have a half-wing.

$1,000 RING STOLEN

Toronto, Aug. 5 —(CP)— A youth wearing a Royal Canadian Air Force uniform stole a diamond ring valued at $1,000 from a Toronto jewelry store Tuesday by substituting for it another valued at $400. Detectives said he had stolen the $400 ring last week in a department store leaving in its place a 15-cent ring.

TWO NICE 'LUNGE CAUGHT IN MOIRA R.

That big fish can still be caught in the Moira River was demonstrated on Monday evening when Jack Lee, son of Mr. George Lee, local tailor, brought home two lovely 'lunge, the result of a few minutes' casting north of the city. The two fish were caught in the Plainfield district by casting from the bank and weighed five and 14 pounds respectively.

GAS PRICES CUT

New York, Aug. 5—(AP)—Gas-rationed eastern United States motorists smiled today as the price of the fuel was cut two and a half cents a gallon or back to the level of June 29 by order of Price Administrator Leon Henderson. Money, they have found, doesn't mean a thing in many parts of the rationed area because most stations are virtually dry.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 5 (AP)—A number of the stock market's bellwethers moved to lower ground today, and the bulk of the list showed fractional declines.

From 50 cents to $1 or more a share came off the prices of U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Santa Fe, Union Carbide, American Telephone, Douglas Aircraft, Southern Railway, Westinghouse and Western Union, but in no case was turnover unduly heavy. Timken Roller Bearing was down as much as two points on a lower dividend announcement.

Canadian issues were fractionally lower. Dome Mines dropped 1-4, Hiram Walker 5-8 and Distillers Seagram 1-4.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 5 (CP)—Stock trading was decidedly dull in the early hours today.

Bell Telephone declined 2 1-4 to a new low for the year at 123. Imperial, B.A. and International Pete weakened minimum fractions. Walkers common dropped 3-8 to 42 1-2.

Macassa, Hollinger, East Malartic, Preston and MacLeod-Cockshutt posted losses of 2 to 5 cents and soft spots in base metals included Hudson Bay, International Nickel, Ventures and Steep Rock.

Ten Listed Missing Of U. S. Cargo Ship's Crew After Torpedoing

An East Coast U.S. Port, Aug. 5.— (AP)— Ten American seamen were listed as missing when a United States cargo vessel was torpedoed during the first part of July 200 miles off the New England Coast, and survivors who landed here declared that the 47 crewmen who were saved literally had to fight their way clear of their suddenly-blazing ship.

Five of the 31 men brought to this port required hospital treatment after being rescued by a United Nations ship. A second rescue ship was reported to have picked up sixteen other seamen.

Capt. Carl Froisland, 61, of Brooklyn, N.Y., said his boat was struck by a single torpedo and when he turned "I saw a mass of fire all over the afterdeck".

Third Anniversary Of War's Outbreak To be Day of Prayer

London, Aug. 5. (CP)—The King has decreed that the third anniversary of the outbreak of war, Sept. 3, shall be observed as a National Day of Prayer, it was announced today.

THE WAR TODAY

By DE WITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

The Hitlerites have continued to gain ground in the face of magnificent Russian resistance in the Tsimlyansk sector of the Lower Don and in the Belaya Glina zone almost due south of Rostov near the mouth of the great river, but while the Red position is serious it can be said that nothing of a decisive nature has yet developed in this fateful battle.

From the standpoint of the Allied cause, the most important fact which emerges from this colossal engagement upon which so much of our hope hangs is that thus far the Muscovites haven't suffered annihilation of any considerable units of troops, as happened in last year's bloody fighting. The Bolshevist retirement has been carried out in an orderly manner, and apparently without excessive losses, considering the nature of the conflict.

Such a retreat represents one of the most difficult of military operations and I believe it will be recorded as one of the great feats of the war. Certainly it provides still further evidence of the outstanding generalship of the Soviet army and the staunchness and sturdiness of the men.

As a result the Reds at latest reports were maintaining a battle line which, throughout much of its great length, seemed to be holding well. That affords encouragement.

This doesn't mean that further Russian retirement isn't to be expected, for it is. We must be prepared to see the Nazis thrust forward to the very edge of the great Caucasian mountain range. However once the foothills are reached the Reds will be on better ground to counter the attack of Hitler's mechanized forces which at present are operating so freely and effectively over the firm, level plains of the northern Caucasus.

In view of the great weight to Hitler's attack, it is natural that the question of a second front should continue to be a burning issue. Still, it strikes me that we shall save a bit of wear and tear on the nerves if we take cognizance of the fact that the conflicting reports about the possibilities of such a front are part of a game of bean - porridge - hot - bean - porridge-cold which allied chiefs seem to be encouraging with the shrewd idea of worrying the Axis.

This isn't to suggest that there's any doubt about a second front being established. It will be, but the time and place are the secret of the Allied High Command, as should be. After all, that is their lookout and not ours.

That's really all we of the general public need know about the matter, and so we are free to get ahead with our own jobs in support of the war effort. But it isn't all that the Germans need know, and for that reason they are badly worried, as is shown in numerous ways. The most striking sign, of course is the hurried tightening up of Nazi defences by Field Marshal Von Runstedt along the "invasion coast."

While the Nazis presumably are as much in the dark as are we of the general public regarding allied military plans, it's logical for them to fear some sort of invasion in the not distant future.

Hitler knows that the need of an allied second front grows in direct ration to the increase of the Red danger. Therefore, unless the Muscovites are able to halt his drive soon, he naturally will look for an emergency invasion of the continent to relieve the pressure on the eastern front.

Airmen of No. 5 I. T. S. Have Been Of Great Help in Harvesting Crops

They exchanged the sun-swept parade ground for the stubbled hay and grain field. Their weapons were pitchforks, hoes and rakes. Their "commanding officers" were tanned smiling farmers of the district, and they obeyed his "orders" with enthusiasm equal to that of their service officers.

And thanks to the voluntary efforts of a large number of Canada's flyers-in - the - making, literally hundreds of tons of hay have been harvested and placed in barns or stacks in this district.

Stationed at No. 5 Initial Training School here, these tanned Canadian youngsters, many of whom had never set foot on a farm before, went out to assist the national agricultural production, with a smile on their faces, and willingness in their hearts.

Many of them were experienced. A lot of them were not. But the hay went in the barns just the same. They cut hay, they coiled it in windrows. They pitched it on wagons, and the sweat of summer toil ran down flushed young faces in the shady corners of dusty mows.

Liked the Change

But they liked it. They liked the change from training routine of the station. And perhaps best of all they liked the meals, country style served piping hot by beaming farmer women. The lads' appetites, the best at any time, were whetted by the work, and satisfied by the mounds of wholesome food placed in front of them.

They travelled from farm to farm as the occasion warranted. They became favorites with the farmer, the farmer's wife and the farmer's daughters. So much so, in fact, that many farmers asked to have the same airmen sent to them when the next call for help became necessary.

Some of them are now stooking grain. Some are hoeing plant crops. Others are thinning out vegetables. And doing a job that is worth its weight in gold not only to the farmer but to the country's production as well.

Went Voluntarily

The airmen of the I.T.S. have in the greater part solved the problem of an acute shortage of farm labor here. There was nothing of a compulsory nature about the boys going to the farms. Each and every one went of their own accord. They were, in the main, the boys awaiting transfer or who had finished a course. Their official training at the station was not interfered with.

Thanks to the kindness of the commanding officer and his staff, farmers of this district are now uttering sighs of relief at the solution of a problem that held out few hopes at the beginning of the hay harvest. They are deeply appreciative of the efforts of Canada's fledgling airmen who set an example that lackadaisical urbanites would do well to emulate.

A. J. SNETSINGER COMES TO 5 I.T.S.

Succeeds Squadron Leader Dobson Who is Transferred to Claresholme, Alberta

Squadron Leader J. M. Dobson, officer commanding No. 5 I.T.S., who has been transferred to the command of No. 15 Service Flying Training School at Claresholme, Alta., will leave to assume his new post new week.

He will be succeeded here by Wing Commander A. J. Snetsinger, E.D., now at No. 1 Training Command Headquarters, Toronto.

Wing Commander Snetsinger, who is a veteran of the First World War, was first associated with the Royal Canadian Air—Force in 1921. Born in Newington, Ontario, he has had a long association with Canada's armed forces, having when only 15 years old, been a bandsman with the 44th Regiment at Grimsby, Ont. After service in France, he returned to England in 1917 for training with the Royal Flying Corps and in July, 1918, was back in France, flying war planes. He joined the Canadian Air Force in 1921. A few years later he became associated with the Irish Regiment of Canada, holding the rank of major in March, 1940, when he transferred to active service with the R.C.A.F.

In civil life, Wing Commander

Ex-Dressmaker And Maid Help Shoot Down 3 Nazi Bombers

London, Aug. 5.— (CP)—A former dressmaker and a maid helped shoot down three of the six German bombers destroyed over Britain in the past 48 hours.

They are members of the Auxiliary Territorial Service who help man anti-aircraft defences along the East Coast.

Others who were in action included a former telephone operator, a nurse and seamstress. The girls, all between the ages of 18 and 27, were in action for several hours alongside male members of the anti-aircraft batteries.

ON SPECIAL BROADCAST

Among the Canadian airmen who will broadcast in a special R.C.A.F. broadcast program on Saturday Aug. 8 from 6.00 p.m. until 6.15 are Cpl. Bill Clarke, of Kingston, and Lac. J. Stephen, of Colborne.

ALL-INDIA

Disobedience Campaign Likely

A resolution calling for a civil disobedience campaign against British rule unless India is given freedom will be voted upon at a meeting of the powerful all-India Congress Friday and its adoption is considered a foregone conclusion.

The Congress working committee already has acted upon the resolution, omitting from it references calling for dealing with Japan as included in the original draft put forward by Gandhi.

British authorities said they seized the original draft and other documents in a raid on the party's headquarters at Allahabad, prompting their charge that the great majority of the working committee members are "appeasers" of Japan.

Gandhi told interviewers that despite the omission from the resolution of the reference to Japan, at the behest of the more moderate Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, he still favored negotiations with Tokyo.

Would Plead With Japs

If independence came to India immediately, he said he would ask to be sent to Japan to plead with her to free China or else "count on the stubborn resistance" of millions of Indians.

While most British observers accepted as timely the release of the text of the seized Gandhi resolution, the Bombay correspondent of the London News Chronicle said in a message to his paper it might prove a "propaganda boomerang" that likely would close gaps in the ranks of Congress leaders and supporters.

(There was no indication in London what action the British were preparing to take to cope with the mass disobedience movement in India if the Congress gives the "go-ahead" at Friday's meeting as expected. Observers there recalled the statement in the House of Commons by L. S. Amery, secretary for India, on July 30 that the government of India will "take every possible step to meet the situation.")

NAZIS' LAND

Situation Called "Tense"

Izvestia described the situation as tense, with the Germans concentrating superior numbers of troops and large tank forces in the Belaya Glina area while dive-bombers rained bombs on the wearing Russian defenders. The paper added without explanation that Russia strength is growing and that the southern commanders realize the German offensive must be stopped.

Of the withdrawal at Belaya Glina, the mid-day communique said:

"In the Belaya Glina area our troops fought a heavy engagement with enemy tanks and motorized units which had broken through. Our troops withdrew to new defensive positions."

Heavy Pressure at Kushchevka

The German pressure was heavy too at Kushchevka, south of Rostov, where the Russians have fought stubbornly and unyieldingingly and now face the possibility of being cut off by German troops moving southwestward from Belaya Glina.

One infantry formation at Kushchevka was credited in the mid-day bulletin with destroying six German tanks and much equipment and killing about 550 Germans. Three thousand in all were reported wiped out in engagements in this sector.

Fighting was likewise fierce in the Kletskaya sector northwest of Stalingrad, with the Germans attacking repeatedly in an effort to bridge the Don, but the trend of the fighting was not indicated. Earlier the Russians had reported a setback here.

Furious Russian Resistance

In almost all the important southern sectors, the Germans were reported making some progress against furious Russian resistance which took a heavy toll in German manpower and machines. threw new reserves into the

At Kletskaya, the Germans struggle and, in a bitter exchange of blows, "pressed back somewhat" the Russian defenders, the midnight Soviet communique said. The vicious fighting in the Kletskaya sector has whirled about one populated place for several days, the communique reported.

To the south, the midnight bulletin said, the Russians were counter-attacking after blunting many enemy attacks. Russian tanks, it was said, crushed 270 German officers and men in one fight and Red army fliers were reported to have destroyed 30 tanks, 90 trucks and other Nazi equipment in one day.

German drive to Belaya Glina developed after the Russians had been forced to withdraw from Salsk forty miles to the northeast. The German push was aimed directly at Tikhoretsk, about fifty miles southwest of Belaya Glina.

(The German High Command claimed yesterday that Voroshilovsk, 90 miles southeast of Belaya Glina, was in German hands.)

Tikhoretsk is the junction of the Rostov-Baku railroad and the line running from the Black Sea to Stalingrad. It is only 90 miles north of Maikop, the oil centre in the foothills of the Caucasus Mountains which supplies seven per cent of Russia's oil.

Situation in Kushchevka

The most serious element in the German advance toward Tikhoretsk is the threat to the body of Russion troops fighting in the Kushchevka area to the north. But the stubborn defence of Kushchevka seemed to indicate the Russians were planning to defend a north-south line extending roughly along the Rostov-Baku railway from the Sea of Azov through Kushchevka and Tikhoretsk and anchored in the south to the Caucasus Mountain.

Fierce Don and Kuban Cossacks were slashing at the invader on plains which have known the second battle for centuries. But even their ferocity and skill were not enough to turn back the mechanized Nazi units with their protecting cover of dive-bombers.

RED OFFICERS PROMOTED

Housewives Must Report Excess Of Two Weeks' Supply Tea, Coffee

Ottawa, August 5—Persons having more than two weeks' supply of tea or coffee on hand August 3, effective date of the new rationing regulations, must report the total quantity to the nearest ration office, the Wartime Prices and Trade Board said today. Coupons to cover the difference between the amount on hand and the amount the holder was entitled to on August 3 must be turned in along with the report. In the event that the coupon value of the surplus exceeds the coupons attached to the temporary ration cards of all members of the household who have reached the full age of twelve years, the report should be amended by an undertaking to surrender the appropriate number of additional coupons when received. The regulation applies to any consumer, any operator of a boarding-house, and to each person over twelve years of age in a household.

If you have two ration cards you must return one immediately, according to the latest order. It is illegal to "obtain, use, retain or have in possession any ration coupon or card which one has no right to obtain, use, retain or have in possession."

Incidentally, it is unlawful to deface, mutilate or alter any ration coupon, card, purchase permit or any other official document relating to the purchase of tea, coffee or sugar, board of officials emphasized.

Discusses Cargo Planes

Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, world war I air hero, is shown as he appeared before the senate committee investigating the use of cargo carrying planes to transport men and material to the farflung battlefronts of the globe. In answer to the proposition of Henry J. Kaiser, west coast shipbuilder, who intends to convert his shipyard to the building of cargo planes, Rickenbacker threw a wet blanket on the idea when he stated that shipbuilders should build ships and plane builders should build planes. Rickenbacker also stressed the need for more air mechanics.

THREE PERSONS KILLED WHEN CAR IS HIT BY TRAIN

Six in Car Were Returning From Tobacco Picking Expedition Near Sorel

TWO SERIOUSLY HURT

St. Roch de Richelieu, Que., Aug. 5—(CP)—Three persons were killed and two seriously injured when a Canadian National Railway freight train approaching Sorel, Quebec, crashed into an automobile at a level crossing near here Tuesday.

The dead:

Roger Hebert, 20, driver of the car; Mrs. Alberic Deblois, 55; Roland Deblois, 28.

The injured:

Eva Berthiaume, 18, fractured pelvis; Yette Hebert, 18, fractured arm and other injuries.

A sixth passenger, Mrs. Lucien Courtemanche, 45, was taken to her home suffering shock. All the passengers were residents of St. Roch but it was not learned what relation they were to each other.

The injured were taken to Sorel hospital, 12 miles away. A coroner's inquest will be held at Sorel today.

The force of the impact was such that the driver was decapitated. Police said the six were returning from a tobacco picking expedition at a nearby plantation.

Navy League Needs Books, Ditty Bag Fillers

The Navy League of Canada carries on a good deal of work that isn't covered by the monies they raise such as trying to give our thousands of Canadian and Allied sailors some of the things that government issues and government care don't cover—like ditty bags at Christmas time, and magazines and books and playing cards and portable phonographs and records, and woollies all the time, as near as possible.

Right now the Belleville Branch of the Navy League is looking for 500 residents to come forward and take away that number of empty ditty bags, waiting down there at headquarters, 311 Front Street to be filled with good things to make a sailor happy at Christmastime, when he's away from home.

Tisn't much they're asking on behalf of the men whose fight on our behalf will make some kind of Christmas possible for us at home.

If you take a few ditty bags now — phone Mrs. J. Ingram, 2098 or write for them—you've got from now till November 1—three good months—to fill them in. It only means say one article a week, and you'd have the bag full in plenty of time.

And the Magazine Department of the Belleville Branch at 311 Front Street is looking for more than thirty thousand magazines in this second half of the year. For magazines phone 2154 or 1483W.

Giving filled ditty bags and magazines and books and woollies for our sailors isn't much of a chore, really!

After you've given your local Navy League Tag Day contribution, don't dismiss the sailor's needs from your minds for another year—think about what we've said, will you?

TIMOSHENKO MOVES RESERVES INTO BATTLE

NEW U.S.-CANADIAN COMMANDO FORCE FORMED

Nazis Hurl Tanks And Infantry Into New Drive

Russians Pushed Back to Kotelnikvski But Repulse Huns in Northwest

IN OLD BATTLE AREA

(By EDDY GILMORE)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Aug. 6. (AP)—Russia's carefully saved reserves were moving into the battle today as Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's troops fought back bitterly against a new threat to Stalingrad on the battleground where the fledgling Red Army made history in the 1917 revolution.

Dispatches which indicated for the first time that the reserves were going into action against the terrific German offensive said the battleline apparently had been stabilised at both flanks—near Kletskaya, 80 miles northwest of Stalingrad and K[illegible]chevka, on the Yeya River, fifty miles south of Rostov.

The line still sagged, however, under the weight of Nazi numerical superiority in the Belaya Glina sector, 100 miles southeast of Rostov, and near Kotelnikovski, south of the Don, 95 miles southeast of Stalingrad.

Threat at Belaya Glina

At Belaya Glina the threat to the North Caucasus was greatest, at Kotelnikovski the menace to Stalingrad was sharpened by the danger of a by-passing drive toward Astrakhan on the Caspian Sea 240 miles to the East or by the possibility of a squeeze on the import Volga stronghold of Stalingrad from the northwest and southwest simultaneously.

Meanwhile ,however, all Nazi assaults northwest of Stalingrad, in the Kletskaya area, were being stopped dead. Similarly, the Russians repoted a firm stand near Kushchevka where they said reckless Don and Kuban Cossacks held a waterline, (apparently the Yeya River) repulsing attack after attack by German tanks and infantry.

The necessity for blows in return was emphasized by Red Star, the army newspaper, which said "in order to halt the enemy it is necessary to reply to every attack with counterattacks".

(Nazi military sources claimed the capture of Tokhoretsk, on the Caucasian railway 40 miles southwest of Belaya Glina and about the same distance southeast of Kushchevka.)

On the Stalingrad front, Kotelnikovski itself still was in Russian hands but was under German attack. The fighting switched there from Tsimlyansk where the Red army for two weeks had held the Nazis on the banks of the Don.

Nazi Gains at Terrific Cost

The army newspaper Red Star said the situation on the southern flank below Belaya Glina and Kuschevka continued grave, with the Germans making new dents in Russian defence lines. It said enemy gains there, however, were achieved at great cost in Nazi lives and equipment.

PALESTINE REG'T OF JEWS, ARABS WILL BE CREATED

Normally They Will Serve in Palestine or in Adjacent Lands

RECRUITS SOUGHT

London, Aug. 6 (CP Cable)—War Secretary Sir James Grigg announced today in the House of Commons that a Palestine regiment of Jewish and Arab infantry battalions will be created immediately for service in the British army in the Middle East.

Existing Palestinian companies will be incorporated into the force, he said, and it is hoped that at least 10,000 additional recruits will be obtained. Normally they would serve in Palestine or adjacent lands.

The question of organizing a Jewish army was raised in Commons by Ian C. Hannah (Conservative, Bilston) who said he felt Britons should pledge themselves to find new homes for Jews, persecuted in Europe, "if they'll stand side by side with us in this terrible emergency."

Position in Palestine

A member of the English committee for a Jewish army, Mr. Hannah declared the position of Palestine is "most delicate" and no one could believe that Britain has a quarrel with Islam because she is fighting to hold inviolate from inhuman foes Cairo, a city which above all others is the capital of the Molsem faith.

He added that Britain "ought to hold out the hand of fellowship to the Moslems and if the Arabs fought side by side with us they should be promised definitely that they should be allowed to remain in the majority in the Holy Land."

Maj. Victor Cazalet (Conservative, Chippenham) said that excluding the 2,000 recruits who joined the army in July, there are some 14,000 Jews serving in the armed forces in the Middle East, but for the most part they are doing static jobs and none are in the fighting units.

Service By Jews

Apart from these 14,000, Maj. Cazalet said, there are some 7,000 out of 23,000 home guards working full-time along with 15,000 in the auxiliary territorial service. This, he declared, was the whole of the effective contribution the Jews in Palestine have been allowed to make.

The Jewish agency estimated another 20,000 fighting Jewish soldiers could be raised and the home guard figure increased to 40,000 or 50,000.

R. A. F. Coastal Command's Work Scares U-Boats From British Coasts

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press Staff Writer

With the R.A.F. Somewhere in England, Aug. 6 — (CP) — R.A.F. Coastal Command's greatest and most important task brings it the least publicity.

Attacks on enemy shipping, many by the R. C. A. F. "Demon" squadron with its pot-bellied Hudsons, get Coastal Command most of its space in newspapers.

But least heard about is its daily patrol covering 5,500,000 square miles of sea from Iceland to Gibraltar in search of the wary U-boat.

Three R.C.A.F. Coastal Command squadrons, including the Demons, help carry it out and there are Canadian crews — pilots, navigators, wireless operators and gunners — scattered through the R.A.F. squadrons.

Coastal Command aircraft now number more than the entire peace-time R. A. F. They act as escort for convoys and perform air-sea rescues in addition to the vast sweep which has scared U-boats from this side of the Atlantic.

On shipping escort, they keep on the lookout for long-range enemy aircraft such as Focke-Wulf Condors and Kuriens as well as Nazi submarines.

In the words of the Air Ministry, Coastal Command has taken the offensive. In the words of FO. Malcolm Smith of Stoney Creek, Ont., who navigates one of the patrolling planes: "We just don't see U-boats any more — they don't like us."

Lately, bomber command has stepped heavily into anti-submarine warfare by repeated raids on plants where U-boats are built and the bases to which they must return sooner or later for refits and repairs.

Coastal Command has adopted the navy's secrecy about its success in attacks on the submarines for the same reason that makes the navy silent — it doesn't help Nazi morale any to have U-boats leave their bases never to be heard from again.

Vigilant patrols don't contribute either to good spirits on the part of U-boat crews who must surface their craft at least every 24 hours, to re-charge batteries, knowing that any moment a coastal command plane may pounce down.

STEPHAN TO HANG FOR ASSISTING NAZI FLIER, KRUG

Judge Says Court Not Hesitant in Taking Life of Traitor For Good of Cause

NOV. 13 DATE SET

Detroit, Aug. 6 — (AP) — Max Stephan, first person in 150 years to be convicted of treason in the United States, was sentenced in Federal Court today to be hanged.

Judge Arthur J. Tuttle directed that Stephan, German-born American citizen, be hanged on Nov. 13, 1942, within the walls of the federal detention prison at Milan, Mich.

Stephan was convicted in federal court here of aiding the flight of a Nazi flier, Lieut. Peter Krug, escaped from a Canadian war prisonners camp at Bowmanville, Ont.

In pronouncing sentence, Judge Tuttle said that since "the lives of millions of our boys will be taken in the course of this war, the court should not be hesitant in taking the life of one traitor for the sake of the cause."

Krug after being aided by Stephan in Michigan was picked up by the Federal Bureau of Investigation at San Antonio, Texas, and returned to Canada. He was a witness at Stephan's treason trial.

Boasted of Deed

The 40-year-old Detroit restauranteur who boasted that his love for Germany was stronger than that for his adopted country was found guilty July 2 by a federal court jury of aiding the Nazi air force prisoner of war.

"Although I have become an American citizen," he once said, "my blood is German. I am not sorry for what I have done and I would do it again."

Certain Soldiers Given Farm Leave In District No. 6

Halifax, Aug. 6 —(CP)— Brig. W. W. Foster, officer commanding Military District No. 6, yesterday published orders under which soldiers in certain classes who are experienced farm workers will be granted leave to help bring in the harvests of Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island.

The leave is not to exceed four weeks duration and may be cancelled at any time.

Soldiers in the "war establishment," those stationed at defence bases and at Camp Debert, N.S., will not be available for the harvest, although they form the great majority of personnel in Nova Scotia.

French Catholic Clergy Plead With Vichy On Behalf of Jews

Berne, Switzerland, Aug. 6 (AP)—Leading Catholic clergymen in France, with the support of the Pope, made a serious appeal to the Vichy government in an effort to alleviate the condition of the Jews and curtail an anti-Semistic program, it was reported today, but indications in reliable foreign quarters were that deportations to the east, at least of foreign Jews, would continue.

The Papal Nuncio himself was said to have seen Chief of State Petain and a delegation of French clergy appealed to Pierre Laval and Fernand De Brinon, Vichy emissary in Paris, their efforts being spurned by the recent arrests in the Paris area of about 3,000 Jews.

The Nuncio conveyed, it was said, a Papal expression of regret at the sweeping measures under which Jews are deported, presumably for the German work program.

Petain was reported to have sought the assurance of the German occupation authorities that only non-French Jews would be deported, as has been the general practice thus far.

Foreign observers thought it likely that this policy would continue, with arrests of French Jews being avoided for the most part.

Somewhere in England, Aug. 6—(CP)—Army motor lorries, heavy-laden with barbed wire, their camouflage paint dry and cracking in the hot July sun, trundled into this east Anglian area over the winding country lanes.

Against this army tide moved a stream of English country folk, all of them wayfarers for the moment at least, refugees in their own country, people seeking new homes and farms for those they were leaving in the hands of the army.

They were the people of five East Anglia villages and the surrounding countsyside, ordered to evacuate as the army took over 8,000 acres for use as a battle training ground.

At one point news reporters watched the army move in as the villagers moved out. Soldiers hopped down off their trucks, stripped to the waist and unrolled the barbed wire that was to seal off the area from the rest of Britain.

Solemn, Almost Tearful

In one village the work of removal progressed solemnly almost tearfully. Some villagers were living picturesque gabled cottages where they were born. Some, even among the old timers, had not been more than a few leagues from their home village in their life.

Almost as much as they hated to leave their homes, villagers said they hated leaving their friends of a lifetime. 'It's like cutting strings and starting again," said Alfred Chambers, 60-year-old village postman in a village which must now be known only as "x". "My father and my grandfather had the village post-office before me."

In another village where civilian life ended for the war's duration with the advent of the military, newspapermen arrived a few jumps ahead of the army. They found the place being stripped of virtually everything moveable.

Terrier Stands Guard

In a little cobbler's shop a nine-year-old terrier stood guard over a pile of boot lasts that belonged to Horace Holmes, grocer and shoemaker. Holmes was 75. Just after he received his notice to quit he died in a little upper room of his shop.

Friends, sorrowfully but pluckily packing their own belongings said he died of a broken heart. He couldn't face the prospect of moving away.

ADVISER ON CERAMICS

Toronto, Aug. 6—(CP)—Appointment of W. G. Pulkingham of Hamilton, Ont., as technical adviser to the ceramics division of the Sundry Items Administration, wartime Prices and Trade Board, was announced here today.

Mr. Pulkingham, president of Sovereign Potters, Ltd., will corelate potteries throughout Canada for maximum economic production.

R. G. BARCLAY APPOINTED

Ottawa, Aug. 6 —(CP)— R. G. Barclay of Ottawa, chief insurance officer of the Unemployment Insurance Commission, has been appointed assistant executive director of the commission, it was announced today by Commission Chairman Louis J. Trottier.

During the last war Mr. Barclay was awarded his commission in the field and was an officer of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

Roosevelt Honors Queen Wilhelmina

Washington, Aug. 6 — (AP) — President Roosevelt rose last night at a state dinner in the White House to toast the ruling queen of the homeland of his ancestors, Wilhelmina of the Netherlands. She responded with one to his health as head of a great country, and to the success of its armed forces.

"I think that all of us at this table tonight" — the Roosevelts had invited 38 guests to honor the Queen — "realize the symbolism of the visit of Her Majesty to this country of ours," President Roosevelt said.

"The friendship between our great nations has never ceased. It has been the friendship of peoples who lived for the same kind of human rights and the same kind of national independence."

Obviously moved, the 61-year-old queen, who made her first trip to the new world in a bomber, responded that she was greatly touched by the friendly welcome extended her at the White House.

"This visit to this capital city is to be the culminating point of my stay in the United States," she said.

"I know," she said, "that when you make me feel a welcome guest, your thoughts are, like mine, with my country, where at this time, in East and West, oppression breeds resistance, and cruelty increases determination to hold out."

Apparently on the theory that if "A cat can look at a Queen," a Scottie can too, the President's dog, Fala, selected a vantage spot on the White House lawn where he sat and watched the arrival of the queen.

Juvenile Gang War Ends in Fatal Beating

Los Angeles, Aug. 6 (AP) — City and country authorities have united in a rigorous campaign to wipe out sporadic warfare between juvenile gangs which was climaxed by the fatal beating of one fouth in a clash of rival mobs at a birthday party.

More than a score of youths have been detained for questioning in the death of Jose Diaz, 22 in a gang fight on a ranch near here Sunday. The fight took place police were told when one mob attempted to break up a birthday party being staged by another group of youths.

The fatal battle took place after months of less serious uprisings among youthful neighbourhood gangs composed chiefly of boys and girls from 14 to 22.

Not One Failure In Graduating Class

Toronto, Aug. 6 (CP)—The July graduating class of the Galt Air Training School established a record at that school without a single failure in the Royal Canadian Air Force and enlisted in a body, Hon. N. C. Hipel, Minister of Labor and Public Welfare announced today.

"There were no trade test barriers or medical rejections," he said.

NAMED SECOND IN COMMAND

London, Ont., Aug. 6 —(CP)— Major James Gow of Windsor, Ont., who returned from overseas a few months ago to join the Canadian Armored Corps at Camp Borden as instructor, has been named second in command of the 30th. Reconnaissance Battalion (Active), training here.

JEWELRY STORE ROBBED OF $500 IN RINGS, WATCHES

Plate Glass Show Window of McCurdy Store Shattered by Large Stone

ESTIMATE OF LOSS

Shattering the front store window of McCurdy's jewelry store with a large size stone, robbers reached through the broken plate glass window and stole upwards of $500,00 worth of jewelry some time early Thursday morning. The shattered window was discovered by Mr. J. O. McCurdy, proprietor, when he was about to open his place of business shortly before seven o'clock Thursday morning.

The loot, for the greater part, consisted of diamond rings and other small articles of jewelry that could easily be carried away in a person's pocket. A Ronson lighter, several small gold rings and two valuable wrist watches were reported missing along with all of the diamond rings on display in the window. Mr. McCurdy told police eight rings were missing of which three were set with diamonds, and estimated his loss at between four and five hundred dollars in all. P. C. Wright was notified of the robbery early today.

Stone Found Inside Window

Found inside the broken glass window was a large round stone, about the size of an ordinary softball. Residents in nearby apartments bordering both sides of Front St. assured police today they heard no undue noises, except the overturning of garbage cans onto the street considerable time after midnight Wednesday.

Later Thursday morning Detective Fred Isard found a man's undershirt sleeve in an alleyway immediately north of Mr. McCurdy's store. He examined the sleeves along with an Ontario-Intelligencer police reporter, and discovered that the end of the sleeve had been tied with a string and it appears that the stone found inside the broken window had first been placed in the cotton undershirt sleeve, which was used to muffle the sound of the breaking glass. The stone, shirt sleeve and a portion of the broken window pane were removed to the police station for further examination Acting Chief Harman announced.

It is slightly over two years ago since Mr. McCurdy's store was broken into from the rear and over $600.00 worth of all types of jewelry taken. Police circularized a description of the goods stolen at that time, but no trace of the missing jewelry was ever made.

"It would be quite simple to reach inside the broken window and snatch all of the jewelry in reach, but why nearby residents didn't hear the shattering of such a thick plate glass window is a problem, as it would take a heavy and forceful blow to break such a plate glass," remarked Acting Chief Harman later today.

Every 14th Person in United States Killed or Disabled by Accident in '41

New York, Aug. 6 (AP)—It would take a lot of enemy bombs to do as much damage to the United States war effort as Americans themselves are doing with accidents that kill them, cripple them or keep them from work.

The National Safety Council figures that in 1941 accidents:

Killed or disabled every 14th. person in the United States; cost $4,000,000,000, enough to pay the cost of running New York City six years; were the first cause of death among all males from 23 to 38 years of age; cost 480,000,000 man-days of labor time.

Those 480,000,000 lost man-days, translated into terms of production, could have turned out 23,000 flying fortresses.

Accidents last year left 102,500 Americans dead, twice as many Americans as were killed in the First Great War in battle, plus 350,000 permanently disabled, and 8,950,000 lesser casualties.

The toll among workers this year, according to the council's estimates, will be at least 18,000 killed on the job, 33,000 killed off the job, and 343,000 permanently disabled.

This is in addition to other kinds of accidental deaths that will push the total up around the 100,000 mark, even though deaths from automobiles will be fewer.

So far this year more Americans have been killed in industrial accidents than in the same period a year ago and the Wall Street Journal notes more workers will be killed in 1942 than all the bomb raid deaths in Britain since the war's beginning.

Members of Unit Will be Trained At Helena, Mont.

Force Will be Composed of Specially-Qualified Men Skilled In Offensive Work

WEAR SAME UNIFORM

Washington, Aug. 6 (CP)—War Under-secretary Robert P. Patterson today announced creation of a new American-Canadian force of super-specialists in offensive warfare.

The new unit designated the 1st. Special Service Force, was described as a unique combat unit composed of specially-qualified men skilled in all offensive operations, including marine landings and mountain and desert warfare.

The super-commando force will operate directly under direction of the United States deputy chief of staff, Lt.-General Joseph T. McArney. A training camp has been established at Helena, Mont., with Col. Robert T. Frederick of the coast artillery commanding.

The Canadian contingent will be the first to serve as a part of a United States army unit, Patterson said. Canadian officers are already helping form the outfit. Canadians and Americans will wear the same uniform.

Train Air-Borne Divisions

Patterson also announced that a group of six Canadian officers and 20 non-commissioned officers have arrived at Fort Benning, Ga., to train as parachute instructors for Canadian parachute troops.

He further disclosed the formation of the first two of an undisclosed number of entire divisions of United States infantry to move to a battle front by air.

The 82nd. and 101st. Infantry Divisions at Camp Claiborne, La., will be the first of the air-borne units, which will be streamlined down to a strength of about 8,000 men each. All their weapons and equipment will be moved by planes and gliders.

In action, the air-borne divisions will fight as infantry after the manner of similar German army divisions.

Command of another new United States fighting force, the Engineer Amphibian Command, which has been training at Camp Edwards, Mass., for special assault missions landing operations has been given to Col. Daniel Noce, he reported.

Recruit Motor Operators

The engineers are recruiting motor and sail boat operators, diesel and automobile mechanics for the unit.

Patterson also announced formation of a board of army officers, to be known as the Inter-Allied Personal Board, to handle the exchange of nationals between the American army and the armed forces of the other United Nations, and creation of a new transportation corps in the services of supply, concentrating in a single command all of the army's transportation functions except air travel.

Patterson also reported the Alaskan Highway is making "very good progress," the work having "gone forward faster than anticipated."

MURDER-SUICIDE CASE SOLVED BY NOTE ON BODY

Investigation of Hamilton Tragedy Reveals Love Angle as Cause of Violent Deed

GIRL BLUDGEONED

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 6 (CP)—While detectives were "cleaning up a few loose ends" in a tragedy which claimed two lives, funeral arrangements were being completed today for 40-year-old Mike Vargo of Hamilton who died by decapitation under the wheels of a street car and 20-year-old Annette Maley, whom police say Vargo bludgeoned to death Tuesday night.

A note written in a Slovak dialect was found in Vargo's pocket and in it he said "I loved her and she loved me but that's all finished now. I'm going to do away with both of us....I leave enough money to pay for both funerals."

Although Vargo died instantly under the wheels of a street car in Hamilton's east end shortly after 10 o'clock Tuesday night, the Maley girl did not die until midnight. A soldier returning to barracks heard moans and found her lying in bushes covered with blood. She died while being taken to hospital in an ambulance.

Late yesterday detectives found a heavy piece of scrap iron they believed Vargo used to beat the girl.

John Maley, father of the dead girl, who worked with Vargo at the Hamilton Bridge Company plant, said Vargo seemed worried in recent months. Maley said he befriended his fellow-worker in 1931 when he was destitute. Vargo lived with the Maleys until 1936.

People living near the Maleys said they had seen Vargo in the district during the past few days, watching the Maley girl whenever she left her home. The night she was killed she left home at seven o'clock, telling her parents she was going to visit friends.

Lieut. G. W. Stone Killed in Accident On Bombing Range

London, Ont., Aug. 6. (CP)—Lieut. George Wilmot Stone, 20, only son of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Stone, of London, was killed recently in England in a bombing range accident, according to word received here today.

Lieut. Stone was born in Prescott and also resided in Hamilton before coming to London about five years ago. He attended Royal Military College at Kingston, and joined the Perth Regiment in 1940. He went overseas last April.

His father is a district official of the Department of National Revenue.

Bus-Train Crash Kills 13 Persons, Over 30 Injured

Crystal Springs, Miss., Aug. 6.—(AP)—A collision between a bus carrying 52 persons and a fast passenger train brought death to 13 persons and injured more than 30 in the heart of this southern Mississippi City yesterday.

Efforts were continuing today to identify the bodies of two women taken to Jackson, Miss., funeral parlors after the crash.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

COMPLAINS 3 COWS DAMAGE GARDEN

These cows weren't in the meadow, they were in Charlie Brown's garden patch and naturally Mr. Brown was anything but pleased about the whole thing. Early today Charles Brown, 64 Benjamin St., complained to police that three cows had strayed onto his premises and were destroying his garden vegetables. "And it isn't the first time cows wandering at large have trampled and eaten my produce," Mr. Brown informed P. C. Wright, who investigated. Police are seeking the owners of the bovines.

CANTALOUPES SELL AT NICKEL EACH

Cantaloupes were offered on the local produce market this morning for the first time this season, with the one vendor offering his lot of small-sized melons at a nickel apiece. Apples were quite freely offered at 50 cents and $1 per basket, while plums brought $1 and peaches 65 cents the basket. Tomatoes were offered more freely and for the first time in quantities of one-half bushels and by the basket. Six quart baskets sold at 65 cents with berry boxes bringing corresponding prices. Potatoes held firm at 50 cents the peck, while whitefish sold at the usual 25 cents the pound.

RATTLE OF CANS ANGERS RESIDENTS

Garbage cans left for collection along Front St. were upset early Thursday morning. Apartment residents north of Victoria Ave. complained to police during the night that their slumbers were being interrupted by the clatter of garbage cans being toppled over onto the street. Garbage was strewn along the main thoroughfare causing the collector considerable annoyance. Although they were unable to apprehend any of the culprits, tenants in that area assured police the trouble was started by men who had apparently been drinking.

RELIANCE AIRCRAFT EMPLOYEES GIVE BLOOD DONATIONS

Staff and personnel of the Reliance Aircraft and Tool Company took their duty as blood donors in their stride.

Facilities of the Belleville Red Cross Blood Donor Clinic were moved to the plant hospital on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, where 88 employees and staff, forty per cent of which were women, gave blood donations. The greater majority of these were key employees.

Next Tuesday at the regular clinic in Kiwanis Centre, fifty more employees of the company will give their blood, and ten weekly thereafter until 294 donors have gone through the procedure.

GROUP CAPT. F. G. WAIT GIVEN LONDON APPT.

Group Captain Frank G. Wait, Ottawa, senior organization officer for No. 3 Training Command of the R.C.A.F. at Montreal, and formerly officer commanding the Mountain View Bombing and Gunnery School, has been appointed senior personnel staff officer in London, England and will leave shortly for overseas, according to advices received from Ottawa today.

One of the first permanent force officers to receive a commission in the R.C.A.F., Group Captain Wait is a graduate of the Royal Military College, Kingston where he took instructional courses. He has been overseas twice since his enlistment in 1924 and at the outbreak of war was stationed at Ottawa as director of staff duties.

Before his transfer to Montreal where he now resides with his wife and three-year-old son, he was the popular C.O. at Mountain View. Group Captain Wait and Mrs. Wait made many friends in this city and district during his tenure of office at the nearby air station.

YOUTH GIVEN CHANCE TO MAKE RESTITUTION

"If this young man will make restitution for the damage he did I will consider levying a fine of one dollar and costs, but if he fails to make restitution he'll have to serve two months in the common jail," decided Magistrate J. L. Lloyd after Woodrow Maracle, 19-year-old Deseronto youth, had pleaded guilty to the wilful destruction of household goods, the property of Mrs. Annie Maracle, Tyendinaga, in county police court today.

"I found the accused drunk upstairs in Mrs. Maracle's home, and I might say they are not related although their names are the same," stated Provincial Constable A. Kellogg who apprehended the younger Maracle after the accused had broken a door, several windows and all the lamps in the elderly woman's home. Constable Kellogg added that Mrs. Maracle had six eleven-quart baskets of broken glass following the youth's destructive actions.

Young Maracle assured the court he would make restitution, amounting to approximately $25.00, if given the opportunity.

FRED MARSDEN WILL SPEND YEAR IN REFORMATORY

Admitted Theft of Motorcar and Driving it 500 Miles

CASE NO. 13

"I suggest the court treat this man as thoug hhe were a civilian", suggested Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., after Frederick Marsden of the Trenton R.C.A.F., had pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing a motorcar and appeared for sentence before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd here today.

His Worship had first inquired as to whether or not Marsden was of any use to the service. "He recently stole a truck at the Mohawk Air Base and was sentenced to 28 days' detention at Trenton from where he escaped detention last Saturday and then stole the car which he is charged with taking here today", revealed Sergt.-Major Geo. Law of the R.C.A.F. Provost Corps.

Without further hesitation His Worship sentenced Marsden to one year in the Ontario Reformatory. The accused man stole a motorcar, the property of Jack Hartwick of Wellington, from the Country Club and drove it 500 miles from Saturday afternoon until apprehended at Stoco late Monday night, Provincial Constable Robt. Duncan stated in court today.

"Case No. 13 was rather unlucky today", remarked Mr. Donnan as he ordered two constables to escort Marsden to the cell block at the Court House. Marsden's case was listed as No. 13 on the day's docket.

Ten Traffic Cases Heard In Police Court

Ten traffic cases were disposed of in Thursday's county police court, held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd here today with Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., conducting the prosecution.

Arthur Neadow, Sharbot Lake, was assessed ten dollars and costs when convicted of operating a truck without the proper commercial vehicle licence and was fined an additional $3.00 and costs for failing to produce his driver's licence.

A charge of speeding was dismissed against Dorothy Burton, of Allendale, Ont., after Motorcycle Patrolman W. G. Milton informed the court he had been unable to locate the owner for service of court summons.

For speeding in a restricted area on the highway, Douglas Loucks, R.R. No. 6 Belleville, and Cecil Crawford of this city, were respectively fined $5.00 and costs, while Robt. Stuart, R.R. No. 3 Belleville, was assessed ten and costs for failing to notify the Department of Highways of a change of address.

Russell Campbell, Trenton, and Gerald Adams of Ivanhoe, paid $7.50, including costs, after being apprehended driving motor vehicles after sundown without the proper lights displayed. Stephen Rousell, Montreal, was fined $15.00 and costs when convicted of speeding under the War Measures Act and it cost Robt. Hatton, Stirling, $12.50, including costs, after pleading guilty to a charge of careless driving on the open highway. No evidence was heard in the cases where pleas of guilty were tendered before the opening of court. Provincial Constables J. H. Hatch, W. G. Milton and Robt. Duncan preferred the charges listed.

Two juveniles appeared on charges of car theft, but as a third alleged culprit had escaped custody the entire matter was enlarged for one week. The charges arose out of the recent taking of a motor car, the property of Geo. Sine, at Frankford. The vehicle was found in Toronto.

Base Ingratitude

A glaring example of ingratitude was dramatised at the Hume Arena last night.

A young wrestling fan and a lady friend, who had witnessed the show, had sat beside another fan of the male species who exhibited his feelings toward the ring gladiators by various forms of physical calisthenics.

After the match had ended the young fan looked down at the seat beside him and discovered a fat wallet, bulging with money and war savings certificates.

He immediately went in search of the man who had sat next to him and finally located him as he was leaving the Arena. He was plainly worried and was searching his pockets in a futile effort to find his missing property.

The young fan approached him and asked him if he had lost something.

"I'll say I have," replied the other.

"Then," said the young man, extending a hand which held the wallet," perhaps this is what you lost?"

The other stared for a moment, then snatching the wallet exclaimed, "It is, if you didn't steal it," and without as much as a word of thanks strode away and disappeared in the crowd.

PALESTINE REG'T

Maj. Camlet said he was not asking for a separate Jewish army but proposed that these men might serve together as an integral part of the British army, with a separate badge — the Lion of Judah. Jews, he said, have been standing in queues for nearly three years asking for arms.

James Griffiths (Labor, Llanelly) said he shared the Jewish people's desire that they me enabled to fight together and asked the war secretary to give the problem the fullest consideration.

Somerset de Chair (Conservative, Southwest Norfolk) who returned recently from Palestine, said that while he was aware of the Jews' determination to be allowed to play a part in the defence of the Holy Land he felt it would be dangerous to create a purely Jewish army in Palestine because of the highly excitable state of Arab opinion.

Daniel L. Lipson (Conservative, (Cheltanham) drew attention to the fact that British Jews are liable for service and are playing a part in all countries where they have a right to serve.

In the knowledge that everything the Jews stood for was threatened by the Nazi menace was not a sufficient motive for the Jews to go all-out into the fight, no political argument about a Jewish army was likely to carry any weight, Lipson said.

Sir D. W. Gunston (Conservative, Thornbury) said he did not believe the formation of a Jewish army would help win the war but would only make more difficult the post-war settlement of the Jewish problem and would create the erroneous idea that Palestine alone could take care of the many Jews who were dispossessed.

Cmdr. Oliver S. Locker - Lampson (Conservative Handsworth) said:

George Gleason, Veteran Operator Of Steam Engines, Recalls His Early Experiences in Threshing Work

A lifetime of working with "steam" and with steam engines has been all to the liking of Mr. George Gleason, Boswell Street, for 22 years steam roller engineer with the Belleville Public Works Department.

Winding up his seasonal job as engineer with the department by washing out the boiler of the steam roller which he has operated on city streets for the past four months, Mr. Gleason this week casually told the Ontario Intelligencer that "steam" had been his vocation since he was 12 years old. He is now 65.

Judging from his conversation Mr. Gleason's big interest is in steam engines which under his operation have the care of a loved child. When only a mere lad he broke in with steam, learning to stoke the "portable" threshing engine owned by his father. Operating his own and other machines he worked for approximately thirty seasons as a thresherman in the Cobourg and Colborne districts before moving to Belleville 22 years ago.

Threshing Was Real Work

A thresherman of the old school Mr. Gleason vividly remembers the old "hand-fed" separators which required backbreaking effort on the part of the operator in cutting the bands of the sheaves before they were allowed to go into the cylinder.

"Cutting those bands was a stiff job," he relates. "Two men of the four-man threshing crew used to alternate at the job to make it easier."

The introduction of the traction engine was a great boon to threshermen as was the counter-balanced flywheel which made for smoothness of operation. Cost of threshing 40 years ago was two cents per bushel "all around," while threshermen paid one dollar per day for their crew.

"That was good only for the first eighty days however," Mr. Gleason relates, "after that the men got 75 cents per day."

Fewer Machines

Threshing machines were not so plentiful 40 years ago as they are today and the custom was to start out around the first of August and run continually until the threshing was completed, "sometimes in February." Now with many machines in operation threshing is completed in from four to six weeks.

Although for the past 22 years working for the city on steam rollers and occasionally furnishing power for the city stone crusher, Mr. Gleason still likes belt work. "I like to hear the engine bark out," he says, "but I don't like to see them overloaded as they are on the railroads."

Public work for the city is much less now than when Mr. Gleason started 22 years ago. Streets and sewers were being laid every summer with the city spending from "80 to 90 thousand dollars annually." Now $20,000 is considered a big summer's work.

After the city work is completed each summer, Mr. Gleason occasionally obtains employment with construction firms. Always however the job is with "steam," the vocation he has followed for 53 years.

Obscure Girl's Dream Comes True, She Will Christen U. S. Warship

New York, Aug. 6 (AP)—The dream of an obscure Brooklyn girl, expressed in a letter to the President of the United States, will come true Saturday for 22-year-old Elsie D. Papapjohn when she sponsors a new naval vessel.

"Is it necessary for a person to be well known to christen a ship?" she had asked in her letter. "You see, sir, I am asking this question because I've always had an ambition to christen a ship even before the war, but more so now that I know our ships are going out to help destroy our enemies.

"I watched well-known persons christen them and each time wished with all my heart that it was I that was doing the christening. Not only because it would be an honor I would never forget, but because I feel that the prayers I have in my heart will help bless it and help it destroy that which brought death and destruction and hunger to my parents' people . . ."

Miss Papajohn said her father, Michael, an artist, and her mother, were natives of Greece, although she born in Brooklyn.

Elsie Papajohn will wield the champagne bottle when the new navy Minesweeper YMS 165 is launched at Greenport, Long Island.

STEPHAN TO HANG

Stephan was taken into custody April 21 by Federal Bureau of Investigation agents after 21-year-old Oberleutnant Krug passed through Detroit in an attempt to reach Mexico and thence Germany after his escape.

He was first charged with unlawfully harboring an alien, a misdemeanor, but at the direction of Attorney-General Francis Biddle, he subsequently was indicted for treason which accused him of 13 overt acts which gave "aid and comfort" to an enemy in time of war.

Krug Testified

Krug was the government's most important witness. He told of his escape April 16 from the camp at Bowmanville, of reaching Windsor and crossing the Detroit River in a stolen rowboat. Arriving here April 18, he made contact with a German alien, Mrs. Margareta Bertelmann, whose address he obtained from packages she had sent to the camp. Mrs. Bertelmann informed Stephan, who feted Krug and took him on a sightseeing trip of the city, before placing him aboard a Chicago-bound bus from where he began his argosy to New York, Philadelphia, Memphis and finally San Antonio.

Death Sentence Best

Judge Tuttle said that before he pronounced the sentence he asked himself, "Will the sentence of death be a greater deterrent than any other to fifth columnists who also want to adhere to Germany?"

"The court sees only one answer," the judge said. "It is the affirmative. Disloyal citizens know even better than the court does that a prison sentence to life is eligible to pardon after 15 years and also that after the war such prisoners usually are paroled or their sentences commuted."

Judge Tuttle said it was impossible to impose a sentence that would "teach Max Stephan a lesson so he won't do it again."

He said, "There was nothing more that Stephan could have done in the way of helping Hans Peter Krug get back to Germany."

The courtroom was packed as the first man convicted of treason since the famous "Whiskey rebellion" was brought before the Federal judge for sentence.

Showed No Emotion

Stephan, wearing the wrinkled gray suit in which he had sat through his trial four weeks ago, gave no evidence of emotion when he heard his fate pronounced.

When he was summoned before the bench, he rose quickly and came forward. Asked whether he had anything to say, the convicted traitor, in gutteral tones, asserted:

"All I have to say is that I am not guilty of treason. That is all."

When the judge read off the sentence that gives Stephan only a little more than three months to live, a hush descended on the courtroom. There was no demonstration.

Will Not Intervene

At Lansing, Governor Murray D. Van Wagoner of Michigan said that he would make no move to intervene in the death sentence. Michigan law does not provide for capital punishment, and in 1938, when Anthony Chebatoris was hanged by the Federal Government for violation of the National Bank Robbery Act, Frank Murphy, then governor of Michigan, contended that the hanging should take place in some other state.

"If Stephan has got to die, Michigan soil is no different than any other," Van Wagoner said today.

Hitler Forbids Any More Ground To be Cultivated

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 6 (CP)—Hitler has forbidden German property owners to cultivate any additional ground unless it is absolutely necessary—Berlin radio, picked up in Ottawa by the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation listening post, today broadcast Hitler's order but did not explain it.

The broadcast said merely that the ban was in effect for the duration of the war.

Boys' Brigade Stook the Grain

Brantford, Ont., Aug. 6 (CP)—Eleven 'teen-aged members of the Brantford Boys' Brigade apparently do no hold to the theory all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy.

Asked if they wanted to "knock off" the grain-shocking job and 'play ball? Shucks no, we'll finish shocking this grain."

The young harvesters, aged 13 and 14, shocked 10 acres of grain on the nearby farm of I. McLure and finished the job in an hour and 10 minutes.

Obituary

MRS. MARY MOON
(Madoc)

Madoc, August 6. (Special.)—Mrs. Mary Moon died at her home here on Wednesday, August 5th., after an illness of five months' duration.

The late Mrs. Moon had reached the age of eighty-one years and five months. She was born in Madoc Township and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Johnson. She was the last of her family and all her life was passed in this district. In religion she was a member of Trinity United Church and when age and health permitted she took an active part in church work. By many friends she was highly esteemed. Mrs. Moon was also a member of Oakdale Rebekah Lodge.

Her husband died forty-one years ago and she is survived by two sons, Mr. George Moon, Belleville, and Mr. Cleveland Moon, Madoc.

The funeral will take place on Friday afternoon.

MRS. THOS. CLAPP
(Picton)

Mrs. Thos. Clapp, ninety-two-year old resident of Centre Street, passed away in her sleep on Monday, August 3rd. She had enjoyed remarkable health and the use of all her faculties to the last. Her daughter, Mrs. Harold Knapman, Mr. Knapman and two daughters, Harice and Dorothy, made their home with Mrs. Clapp who had resided in Picton many years, since she and her husband retired from their farm at Royal Street. Mr. Clapp predeceased her about fifteen years ago. Maurice Clapp on the homestead at Royal Street, is a son, while another son resides in New York City and Mrs. Ed. Garbutt is a sister.

The body is resting at the home on Centre Street. The funeral service will be conducted by Rev. J. F. Reycraft on Thursday afternoon at the G. M. Hicks Funeral Home, and interment was made in Glenwood cemetery.

LATE JOHN WILLIAM DAY

The funeral of the late John William Day, Purdy Street, took place from the Thomas C. Thompson Funeral Home on Wednesday afternoon with service in the chapel and the committal prayers at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery being conducted by Rev. G.G. Wright, rector of Christ Church.

The bearers were Messrs. Sgt. George Ellarby, Sgt. Nixon, William Ford, A. Jordan, Robert Stuart and R. Browning.

The late Mr. Day was a veteran of the First Great War and a number of his old comrades were present. At the cemetery the Last Post and Reveille were sounded by Bugler George Wardle.

LATE MRS. W. A. SANDERSON MARMORA

Marmora—(Special)— The funeral of the late Mrs. W. A. Sanderson was held on Wednesday afternoon and was largely attended. Service was conducted at her late home by Rev. Dr. W. P. Fletcher assisted by Rev. C. W. Hollingsworth, of Odessa, former pastor of St. Andrew's United Church. Many beautiful floral emblems testified to the high esteem in which the deceased was held.

Interment took place in Marmora Protestant Cemetery. The pallbearers were H. W. Sabine, E. C. Prentice, C. H. Buskard, W. L. Rigg, H. R. Haacke and H. A. Burwash.

HIRAM VANCE

Following a lengthy illness Hiram Vance passed away on Wednesday at the home of his son, Assistant Chief Gerald Vance of the Belleville Fire Department, residence 42 Murney Street. He was in his 76th year.

The late Mr. Vance was born in Elzevir township, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Vance. At an early age he moved to Prince Edward county where he resided until 43 years ago when he came to reside in Belleville. Since the death of Mrs. Vance in April 1941, the deceased had lived with his son, Gerald. Mr. Vance was affiliated with the United Church of Canada.

Surviving are one son, Gerald, two grandsons, Corporal Lawrence Vance of No. 6, A.R.D., Trenton, and Allan, of Belleville; also one great grandson, Lawrence Jr., and Private Jack Kennedy of Petawawa. One sister, Mrs. John Luffman of Kisbey, Sask., and one brother, Mr. James Vance, of Australia, also survive.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

Prize List Booklet Of Belleville Fair Lists Many Attractions

Prize lists of the Belleville Agricultural Society are now off the press and are being distributed throughout the district.

A number of special prizes have been added to the already attractive list and present indications as regards entries point to one of the best exhibitions in years.

Outstanding programs of horseracing, entertainment, music, topped by the famous Conklin Shows, form the background of an attractive fair list.

Directors of the fair feel, in common with the government, that autumn exhibitions provide the show windows of Canada's agricultural production, and as such are necessary to the maintenance of the high morale of the people of the Dominion.

With this in view and in an effort to enhance the enviable reputation of Belleville's fairs, they are providing an outstanding exhibition that should rank with the best of its kind in the province.

16 Births in Hospital From August 1 to 4

Although the number of births registered at the Belleville General Hospital during July was lower than in the month previous, another all-time record in stork visitations is indicated for August if the first four days are any criterion. Births registered during July were 86, just a few under the record of the previous month, but 16 babies arrived during the first four days of the current month, an average of just four per day, which suggests that August will possibly be a record.

County League Softball Clubs Tied

Scoring eight runs in each of the first two innings to build up a commanding margin, the Foxboro entrant in the Sidney Softball League evened matters in the township softball playdowns last night as they defeated Centenary in the second game of a best of two series by a decisive 20-1 count.

The Centenary lads downed the Foxboro boys in the first game of the series last week when they eked out a close win by a one run margin but proved no match for their opponents Wednesday evening when last year's champions broke out on a batting spree at the expense of Fred Waite, Centenary twirler. Waite was nicked for an even two dozen safeties by the Foxboro lads with Walt and Campbell paving the way by smashing out three and two homers respectively.

Wright twirled for the winners and scattered Centenary hits well to limit them to one run in the final frame. The third and final game of the series will be played Friday evening.

YUGOSLAV FORCES KILL 4,000 AXIS TROOPS IN KHAZAR MTS.

London, Aug. 6 —(CP)— Reuters reported that a Moscow radio broadcast said 4,000 Germans and Italians had been killed in a battle between Axis and Yugoslav forces in the Khazar mountains. The Moscow broadcast evidently gave no source for this information.

Reuters said the broadcast reported tanks, guns and anti-tank artillery captured from the Germans, who were said to have been driven back toward Kastainitsa, southeast of Zagreb.

Reuters quoted the broadcast as reporting that in Slovenia, where large-scale operations were said to be going on, the Italians used tanks, artillery and bombers to reduce villages captured by the Yugoslavs. In one section the Yugoslavs were said to have counter-attacked, checking the Italian offensive.

Estate of E.G. Bogart Appraised at $95,123

New York, Aug. 6 —(Special to the Ontario Intelligencer) — The estate left by the late Ellis Gilbert Bogart, formerly of Belleville, was appraised here today at $95,123 gross value, $91,799 net, according to a New York State Transfer Tax Department report filed in Brooklyn Surrogates Court. The bulk of the estate consisted of stocks and bonds.

All property left by the testator goes to his wife, Mary E. Hubley Bogart of Brooklyn. She is named executrix of the estate.

Mr. Bogart died November 9, 1940, in Brooklyn. He was buried in Belleville.

MAJOR WAR STATEMENT GIVEN 'IF NECESSARY' AFTER HOUSE RECESS

London, Aug. 6 — (CP) — The House of Commons, which is planning a recess for the summer holiday, was promised today that it would receive a major war statement upon its return "if necessary."

Tentatively scheduling a review of the war situation for the first day after the return of parliament, Sir Stafford Cripps did not announce who would make the statement but it was presumed the speaker would be Prime Minister Churchill.

Sir Stafford has reiterated yesterday that there would be no statement before the recess.

APPOINTED DEPUTY SEA LORD

London, Aug. 6 —(CP)— Admiral Sir Charles Kennedy-Purvis has been appointed Deputy First Sea Lord and assumed his new duties on July 29 after having relinquished command of a foreign station, A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, announced in the House of Commons.

Mr. Alexander said the post was created to handle administrative duties of the First Sea Lord in order that the latter might "devote the maximum time to planning operational duties."

Belleville Boys Appreciate Fags Sent by Kinsmen

With the Kinsmen "Fag Fund" having passed the half million mark of cigarettes sent to Belleville boys serving overseas over 500 letters expressing appreciation for the receipt of smokes have been received by Chairman Matt Currie as the Kinsmen opened their "Fag Fund Week."

Cigarettes are a vital need to members of the armed forces serving overseas and it is through such mediums as the Kinsmen Fag Fund that smokes can be assured Canadians serving their country where cigarettes are at present rationed. The fun is wholly one of public contributions as all administration costs are absorbed by the Kinsmen Club leaving all donations being used solely for the purchase of smokes.

In a recent mail received from overseas a few of the replies were received from Pat Boyle, J. R. Miller, J. K. O'Gorman, C. R. Coxon and others too numerous to mention. In each case the recipient expressed personal thanks and hopes that smokes from this side of the Atlantic would continue. This week is "Fag Fund Week" when citizens at large may assist and learn what the sending of smokes overseas means to your kin by reading many of the letters of appreciation now on display at the Metropolitan store.

Two Airmen Escape From Burning Plane After Forced Landing

Consecon, (Special.)—On Wednesday afternoon a plane made a forced landing near Consecon, between the farm of Richard Hayes and the Partridge Hollow road.

It was seen to be having difficulty as it passed along the beach by residents who watched and soon afterwards saw it come down and burst into fire which destroyed most of it. Two airmen had a narrow escape as they staggered from the burning plane, according to nearby residents who witnessed the accident.

Ruhr Valley Given Pasting During Night

London, Aug. 6 (CP)—R.A.F.'s night bomber squadrons, determined on destroying Germany's arsenal in any weather, smashed at the Ruhr Valley last night for the second successive night, the Air Ministry announced today.

The weather still was bad and British sources said the night air operations were not on a large scale. The communique reported five planes missing.

Conacher Suggests Flyers to Play Senior Football

Ottawa, Aug. 6 (CP)—Sqdn. Ldr. Lionel Conacher, recently-appointed director of athletics for the Royal Canadian Air Force, said in an interview last night there may be an announcement from R.C.A.F. headquarters "in the very near future" on a possible air force entry in Eastern Senior Football.

The former "big train" of Canadian sport did not eleborate the statement but it was understood he is in Ottawa to draft plans for an air force entry.

Kuban Offers Obstacle To Hitler Forces

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Foreboding despatches from Moscow on battle trends in the Caucasus are fully warranted, although they did not tell all the story.

Berlin announces that the Kuban River, main barrier protecting the Maikop oil fields and Russian communications with the Red Fleet in the Sea of Azov, has been reached on a wide front and crossed at some points. The Nazi bulletins place the fighting front from 50 to 100 miles south of the areas where Moscow tells of continued actions although admitting an enemy break-through and further Russian retreat. There is every indication, however, that the Russian advices describe event of two days or more ago and afford no exact picture of more recent and ominous developments.

The situation for Russian troops on the left flank is bad enough, even by Russian reports. It is acutely critical if the German version is accurate. The line of the Kuban has already been invested, if not turned to loose German armored spearheads westward below the river and in the rear of retreating Russian forces racing southward to escape entrapment.

Formidable Obstacle

The Kuban west of Kropotkin, which the Germans say they have captured, still offers possible refuge to Russian forces now north of the river in the triangular northwestern corner of the Caucasus between the Azov Sea coast and the line of the Rostov-Baku Railway. That line and its paralleling oil pipeline from Baku cross the river at Kropotkin.

From that point westward to its outlet into the Black Sea via the lake estuaries of the Taman Peninsula the Kuban is a formidable obstacle if the retreating Russians north of the Kuban and west of the railroad can reach it in time. There are few rail or highway connections to facilitate their retreat, however, and such as there are must be under constant air attack.

So far as Nazi strategic designs in this critical area can be discerned, they are following an expected course. The great bend of the Kuban seems virtually in German hands and doubtless Russian scorched-earth crews are standing by to blast Maikop oilfields installations at a moment's notice. Even its capture will not soon fill the tanks of Nazi warcraft of land, sea or air.

Good Line of Defence

There is still a chance for the Russians in the Kuban sector to rally in defence of Maikop. Even with the Kuban bend lost, as indicated, they have another river front behind it, the Laba, a Kuban tributary. It curves closely along the Caucasus range foothills, following the general course of the Kuban from south to north and west and averaging forty miles west of the larger river.

Although a lesser stream than the Kuban, the Laba is backed to the west by the Caucasus Mountains so closely that it should be even better defensive ground than the Kuban Bend area. The Nazi drive to the Kuban has consistently followed the open Steppes, most favorable for mechanized operations and blitzkrieg attack. That probably accounts for its speed.

The most hopeful outlook for the Russians lies in the fact that to reach any of the three great oil areas of the Caucasus, Hitler must now fight among mountains peopled with hardy tribesmen familiar with every trail and bypath.

BRITAIN PAYS INTEREST

Washington, Aug. 6 —(AP)— Commerce Secretary Jesse Jones has announced that during the 12 months ended July 31, Britain paid $38,928,797 interest and principal on its $390,000,000 loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Britain borrowed the money to pay for part of its war purchases in this country prior to receiving lend-lease assistance.

WOMEN PAY BIG PRICE FOR POOR "BLOOD MAKE UP"

You women who feel and look "washed out"—limp and droopy—may be paying the price of hemoglobin shortage in the blood.

The demands of monthly "periods" pregnancy, etc. all conspire to bring about this shortage of the vital red coloring matter in the red blood cells. Try Dr. Williams Pink Pills.

They help increase hemoglobin where there is a shortage of it due to iron deficiency and help chase away that "leaden" feeling of tiredness so often due to this condition. Start your course of Dr. Williams Pink Pills today. Ask your druggist.

NO MORE WAKING UP MORNINGS FEELING TIRED, ACHY AND DIZZY

Has Good Appetite and Steady Nerves; Free From Indigestion, Dizzy Spells and Headache Since Taking Syntona.

"In all my life I never took anything that gave me such good results as Syntona has," said Mr. Murray Thorpe, 99 Langarth St., London, Ontario, who is a well known employee of London Motor Products Ltd.

"I used to start every day with a headache and often felt so tired and dizzy I could hardly get out of bed. My arms ached and I had a sore pain across my back. I didn't have much of an appetite, but what little I did eat gave me indigestion. I would have a full, heavy feeling in my stomach and belch up hot, sour liquids. I became nervous, irritable and rarely slept well at night.

"A friend advised me to try Syntona and it was only a matter of a few days when my stomach began to feel better. As I kept taking it my appetite picked up. I soon found I could enjoy hearty meals without sourness or gas pains afterwards. Then the pains in my arms and backache went away. It is a long time now since I've had any dizzy feeling, I sleep fine and when I awaken in the morning I feel like my old self again. I advise everyone needing a good system tonic to take Syntona without delay."

Syntona is made from 12 of the finest herbs and roots. It acts on stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels and many who take it say that even after the first few days the whole system takes on a new feeling of energy and vigor.

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

Fewer Colors

The world of recent years has been one of color and more and more color has been added, to clothes, to houses, to decorations, to vehicles, not forgetting the motorcar which has worn every hue, tone, shade and color.

In the wars of the Middle Ages there was color as the knights and their squires and fighters went to war. Horses wore rich panoply and knights a great wealth of scarlet, purple, blue and gold.

Recent warfare has eliminated a great deal of color. Uuiforms of high color are no longer worn in battle. War endeavors to blend every movable and immovable thing of importance with the landscape and hence the art of camouflage has come to great developments, similar to the successful developments of nature in protective surroundings.

The present titanic struggle has struck at colors too. But there is another reason. Colors and shades of paints and varnishes have been reduced under orders from Ottawa. There is a maximum of 14 shades for first quality house paint compared with 32 previously offered. War has cut off from 60 to 70 per cent of the pre-water color and shades.

Reduction in numbers of colors and shades means of course saving in cost and time of production and saving in chemicals, worthwhile aims in wartime.

British Gun Production

A revelation of the growth of British ordnance manufacturing was made in the House of Commons showing that the 42 government ordnance factories in Britain are producing four and a half times as many guns as a year ago and double the number of guns which had been originally intended.

These developments show the reserve of power of Britain and the United Nations that the people are able to expand so greatly and achieve more than they set out to do in production.

Other interesting facts brought to light included these that British women workers number 180,000 of the 300,000 workers in these plants, that there is a rise in the individual production of the worker of forty per cent, and also there is the bettering of production by shortening of the hours at work.

This is the road that the British worker is taking to make the utmost contribution to the task of making the tools which will defeat the Hun and destroy his works.

Resolute Yugoslavs

In Yugoslovia the ways of the patriots are making things hard for the Germans and Italians. Here is one part of so-called overrun Europe where the loyal zeal and fervor of the people know no bounds with the result that they are ever at war with the invader Germans and Italians. Thousands of Italians and Huns have lost their lives in the struggle with the people. The latest news story from Moscow tells of a bloody battle in which four thousand of the enemy bit the dust in death in the clash with the Yugoslavs in the mountains.

There is a powerful Yugoslav army which has made life most unpleasant and annoying to the aggressors.

Here in Yugoslavia burns the fire which will not die, but will live to see liberty restored when the tyrants have been laid low and servile Axis peoples taught a lesson they will never forget.

All kinds of trouble face the invaders. The Yugoslavian consul-general in Montreal said the other day that when the Axis starts to crack, it was his belief that none of the enemy will ever escape to their native lands. Here is what he said of the enemy in Yugoslavia: "they have killed 500,000 of our people. Not in battle; they were murdered. We have kept the names of the local officers and we are going to attend to them after the war." He pointed out that the enemy have levelled village after village, destroying all the buildings and killing all the people. There will assuredly come a day of accounting when these criminals will be brought to face their crimes of murder and cruelty.

Yugoslavia like other states has suffered from the awful brutality of the enemy and the people cannot forget those who have so brought these calamities upon their peaceful country.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

WINNIE SPENDS A WEEKEND ON THE FARM

"Dear Boss:—

Whew, am I glad to be back to the city. I sneaked outa here last Saturday p.m. after hearing a couple of salesmen who specialize in offering the 'quiet calm and peace of the rural districts' and decided to grab myself some well-earned rest. After all, hovering around your desk seven days a week ain't no pipedream, and I wanted to get away from the political arguments, wartime armchair generalship and the noise and general disturbances of a newspaper office.

"At first I thought those salesguys had the right slant on this rural peace and quietness. The air was lovely and rich with the scent of new mown hay. There was a cool breeze and shortly after sundown there fell a hush over everything that reminded me of a cathedral. It was grand. I could hear the "umpwump" of a bullfrog in a distant swamp, There was a light singing noise as a mosquito swung too close. But there was peace alright. Not a sound disturbed the quiet of the evening.

"But that was the evening and after the farm folks had tucked themselves away for the night, I couldn't go to sleep so just hung around wonderin' what show was screened at the Capitol Theatre; if the gang was jitterbugging at the Park or if the Wackie Wolfie was making faces at a lot of delirious folks at the Hume Arena.

"But, as the poet fellows say, 'Came the dawn.' And brother did it come. No regiment of soldiers got a better fanfare from nature than did Old Sol, long before he poked a pink snout over the eastern horizon.

"I slept downstairs and was awakened at 4.45 a.m. (farm time) by what I thought was the advance guard of a couple of panzer divisions. It was the farmer and his son sleepy-eyed, hiking for the barn. Then came the raucous honk of a motor as the young one got his milk truck ready for the morning pick-up. The tangy taste of wood smoke greeted my mouth and nose as the old iron stove in the woodshed emitted curly wisps as the kindin wood 'took holt.' Outside a young lady hummed something about not sitting under an apple tree while a feathered flock of early morning sopranos clucked their pre-breakfast enjoyment. Then came a rattle and several bangs. I jumped up in bed, thinking the Gestapo had arrived, then settled down when I discovered it was a tractor backfiring. It lumbered past the window like a Ram tank on manoeuvres.

"Somewhere in the house an alarm clock shrilled. A sleepy voice answered the stentorian call of the "boss." Waddling cows mooed a good morning to a Holstein boy friend in the next pasture. A pugnacious gander stuck his neck out and honked at a disinterested collie dog. Two roosters staged a cocky battle, and the squealing cacophony of seventeen pigs in a mad race for the trough added to the barnyard symphony. A windmill added a squeaky obligato, and the pump supplied a groaning melody.

"By this time, Boss, I was awake, as you may have guessed. Then came the delicious odor of frying bacon and eggs country style. Pancakes sizzled in a pan. It was well worth the trouble, but Boss, I was glad to get back to the Front Street atmosphere with its motors and trucks; where life begins at 7.40 and a girl can sleep until eight bells.

Yours,
Winnie."

THE POOR PROOFREADER is blamed for this one. In a southern newspaper the local sleuths were referred to as the "defective force." Came the usual uproar and the publisher ordered a retraction. The dicks nearly died the next day when it appeared in the paper this way, 'detective farce.'

Curing Migraine by Changing Bite of Teeth

One of the most stubborn ailments physicians have to treat is migraine or one-sided headache. With this headache, which makes the individual oversensitive to noise and light, is also a feeling of nausea and vomiting. The treatment formerly was to have the patient lie quietly in a darkened room for the two or more days this ailment usually lasts.

Recently, the use of ergotamine tartrate (gynergen) has been routine treatment and gives excellent results. Another successful method of treatment is the breathing in of pure oxygen as reported by Dr. Walter Alvarez, Mayo Clinic. Getting relief is gratifying but the cause is yet unknown.

Some months ago I mentioned the excellent results obtained in helping some cases of hard of hearing by putting in artificial grinding teeth. Lack of these grinding teeth also affects the hinge joint between upper and lower jaw so that a portion of the large nerve supplying jaws, face and head is disturbed. With the artificial teeth giving a proper biting surface, this joint can work in the "exact" way it should work, the large nerve is not disturbed and migraine attacks stop.

Edward A. Fisher, D.D.S., New York City, in the Journal of the American Dental Association, states that "head pains often result when the hinge joint between jaws is out-under pressure". "The resulting pains may have all the signs and symptoms of true migraine headache, and we must now recognize the closed bite as a definite factor in migraine".

Dr. Fisher reports a case of migraine of 20 years' standing in which he wished to improve the appearance and balance when mouth was closed by opening up the distance between upper and lower teeth in front. The patient now has complete mouth comfort and the migraine attacks have disappeared. Another case of ten years' standing obtained similar results. In this second case the space was opened up in two operations three months apart.

The dangers of opening the bite too much are pointed out by Dr. Fisher.

As no cause of migraine is known, the fact that some cases are relieved by this treatment should be considered by patients, physicians, and dentists.

Stewart Says—

Russia Is Expected To Co-ordinate Later With Democracies

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Canadian Columnist

Washington. — Maxim Litvinoff, Russia's ambassador here, is a popular diplomat in Washington. Back during the period of treaty relations between Mascow and Berlin he was looked on pretty much askance, but he really was a likeable chap, personally, even then. Now he's so recognized by the capital's officialdom, the press and the public generally.

It also is noteworthy that the various representatives the United States government has sent recently to Soviet headquarters all have returned with the most favorable accounts of their conversations with Josef Stalin. He was represented as a ferocious old Muscovite bear not so long ago — an OGPU kind of character, whom it was at least disagreeable, if not downright dangerous, to associate with. Today he's described as amiable and kindly, as well as seemingly perfectly reliable.

Of course, the explanation's simple enough. Wheras previously tied up with the Nazis, the Russians are fighting on our side at present and doing it very creditably, considering their unpreparedness for having Herr Hitler suddenly turn against 'em. True, they shouldn't have been caught off base, as they were. Still, it's recognized as highly desirable to let bygones be bygones as of the current juncture.

Miscalculation

Furthermore, we and politico-socio-economic folk like us miscalculated those Communists for quite awhile.

They considered government a bad thing and some kinds of it ARE. Under czarism, they had one of the bad kinds. Rebelling against it, they undoubtedly overdid matters in wiping it out. They needn't have been as homicidal as they were with Nicholas Romanov and all the members of his family. It wasn't a principle of communism, though. A small group of fanatics pulled it off. Communism, by intention, is an industrial sort of a thing, not altogether different from labor unionism, though an enormously exaggerated form of it, certainly.

Okey. It unpopularized itself initially. Investigators like Representatives Ham Fish and Martin Dies went on its trail before any other "ism" was available.

Then along came fascism. For a bit, facism wasn't considered so awful. Signor Mussolini was spoken of for a spell as perhaps a fairly competent workingman's friend and reorganizer. It was Adolf who, breaking into the situation later, absorbed Benito and tore genuine hades loose.

Japan isn't totalitarian yet. All it's grabbing at is an imperial rather than a totalitarian opportunity.

Herr Hitler and Signor Mussolini surely don't see it, as to the Japs.

The Jap'll hop them as soon as they'll hop any white race, as soon as they think the right time's come.

Investigators Fish and Dies don't see it, either.

Argentina's government doesn't see it yet. It's had a neutrality complex for years. I don't think Chile's got it. It has that temporary bug, but it appears to me to be wearing off. Otherwise, we new worldlings are middling solid.

In Generalissimo Francisco Franco, Spain has a fuehrer or duce, locally known as a caudillo, who aligns with the totalitarians, but he's wobbling.

Well, as pro-wartime, this isn't so fierce.

But as post-wartime?

Can Russia be hooked into the ultimate world?

Co-ordination

It's big enough to be necessary.

There's hope in Washington to the effect that Moscow and the democracies can co-ordinate.

It's imaginable that they can do it.

They can do it, so far as concern the United States, the British, the miscellaneous little European countries, the Free French, the Italians, perhaps the civilized German element, the Chinese and the Latin Americans. And the Russians, apparently.

That would be a tolerably compact world consolidation.

But the three bunches that are most essential are the Yankees, the British and the Russians.

The Russians can't be omitted.

Neither, indeed, can the Chinese.

Nor can the little countries—classing France as one of 'em.

Nor can India be disregarded, with that bird Gandhi.

The Russians, though, shouldn't go into the discard merely because of what Investigators Fish and Die have said about 'em.

Whitehall Notebook—

Bright Future is Predicted For R. A. Butler, President Of British Bd. of Education

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 6. (CP) — This may just be gossip, but there is a feeling in some circles in Britain that R. A. Butler, president of the Board of Education, has a bright political future ahead of him.

In fact, Maurice Webb of The Daily Herald says Mr. Butler is being mentioned in discussions about the post-war Conservative Leader, a job many observers predict is destined for Anthony Eden, foreign secretary.

Highly-placed Tories believe Prime Minister Churchill, present Conservative leader will decide that his exacting war services are the end of his public career. At 67, Mr. Churchill has devoted many years of his life to public service.

Mr. Eden, popular in Britain and a favorite with younger Conservatives, is labelled as the man to succeed Mr. Churchill if anything should force the Prime Minister to step down before the war is over. But many Tories feel he does not carry all the equipment they regard essential to long-term purposes.

Mr. Butler is a promising dark horse. Already he wields considerable power at the Central Office as directing brain behind its reconstruction policy committee. He was at one time Mr. Eden's lieutenant at the foreign office. His friends feel their relative political positions may some day change.

Mr. Butler's sister, Mrs. Laurence Middleton, is a new recruit to the Ministry of Information. She is in charge of Japanese counter-propaganda in the Far East section of the foreign division.

Hoare Home Soon

Sir Samuel Hoare, ambassador in Madrid who for two years has kept the British point of view before Spain's leaders, is expected home on leave soon. Some of his political friends suggest he now should return to Parliament, leaving the Embassy to a career diplomat. . .

There's a report too, though very much in the gossip category, that Sir John Anderson, Lord President of the Council, may be the next Viceroy of India. . ..

Viscount Halifax, on leave from Washington, is said to be preparing to return there shortly. Friends of the former foreign secretary, have been amused by the colloquialisms he picked up during his stay in the United States. For instance, his invitation to questions after a statement is "now shoot!"

David Lloyd George is paying his annual visit this week to the Welsh National Eisteddfod, an event he has not missed for many years. "L. G." has a special interest in the choir finals, in which a choir from North Wales will sing. It comes from Caernarvonshire, his constituency.

Bracken Pleases House

It was a treat to listen to Brendan Bracken, during the House of Commons debate on the tricky subject of propaganda. The Minister of Information's breeziness sometimes is mistaken for flippancy, but there was no questioning the good effect it had on the Commons. His good humor was infectious and Mr. Eden and Sir Stafford Cripps enjoyed some of his sallies.

Mr. Bracken introduced phrases and words rarely heard in Parliament. "Sculdruggery" was one term he used which left a number of members scratching their heads. He described the foreign office as "a violet which blushed unseen", the microphone as a "mike", and his own ministry's output of propaganda as "artillery of words".

The Ministry, at its inception, was a "Heath Robinson Construction", and so he went on, with references to two governors of the BBC as "Casabiancas" and to "Socialities" whom he denied sending to the United States as propaganda.

The debate produced two maiden speeches, by Cyril Lakin, Conservative Member for Llandaff and Barry, and Tom Driberg, Independent for Maldon. Both newspapermen, they were at home in a debate of this kind and spoke with more confidence than most members display in inaugural speeches.

ANIMAL HAYMAKERS

It is haymaking time on the grassy slopes above the timberlane in the Rockies.

The curious little rodent known as the pika is unique among animals in that it makes hay to eat and to keep itself warm during the winter.

Early naturalists had considerable difficulty in deciding whether the pika is a rabbit, a hare, a cony or a rat.

The result is that this animal has a plethora of appellations. It is known variously as the pika, cony, little-chief hare, rock rabbit, tailless hare, whistling hare, calling hare and starved rat.

"Pika" is derived from the native name for these animals among the Tongus of eastern Siberia.

In North America pikas live in small colonies at considerable altitudes in the Rocky Mountains and other Pacific Coast ranges.

They do not hibernate during the long snow-bound winters and they are vegetarians.

About August these nimble, noisy, industrious and shy little rodents cut large quantities of grass and other herbage with their sharp teeth and place it on warm rocks to dry in the sunshine.

The pikas seem to realize instinctively that if their vegetable food were stored green it would become moldy and rot.

Accordingly they wait until it is thoroughly cured by the sun and then they store it in their homes in the crevices of the rocks.

These pika "haymows" average about a bushel measure in size.

Cured thoroughly by the sun before it is stored, this "hay" remains sweet and in good condition until after the spring rains wash away the snow and a fresh crop of vegetation is available.

The pikas seldom fail to include a little thistle for spice in their winter storehouse.

It is said that the similar but larger rodent known variously as the shewellel, showt'l and mountain beaver, which is found in Washington and Oregon, also cuts green vegetation, leaves it to cure in the sunshine and stores it in its burrow as a winter food supply.

The pika has no external tail, small ears, hind legs shorter than the front ones, and in general appearance it resembles a cross between a rabbit and a guinea-pig.

Bold Thief Ransacks Purse in Florist Shop

Trenton, (Special.)—Miss Lottie I. Jones, local florist, while sitting at her desk about 6 p.m. on Wednesday, happened to look up just in time to see some person crouching behind one of her show cases. She thought at first that it was a child, but when she got up, a man described as about 22 years of age, wearing dark trousers and a light sweat shirt ran from the store and it is thought jumped into a truck near the Trent Theatre which is next to Miss Jones' store.

On investigation Miss Jones found that her purse had been ransacked and thrown on the floor when he made a rush for the door. She was not aware exactly how much money was in the purse at the time but at least two dollars were taken. She informed police that he closely resembled a young man who had been in the store early in the morning asking for information about a bouquet of flowers. Trenton police are investigating.

Personals

Mrs. Rea Black spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Alex Hill, who are at Old Orchard Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. MacKenzie and family, MacLellan Ave., have returned after spending a vacation in Branchton and Galt.

Mrs. J. C. Gillen ho has been spending some time with her mother near Hamilton has returned to her home on King Street.

Mrs. Ed. Shier and daughter, Sheila have returned from visiting relatives at Cannington.

Miss Betty LeClair of Montreal, is visiting her aunt, Miss Hazel Walker, Scott Street.

Sold Stolen Bike

A bicycle belonging to Mac Robinson, 61 Dominion Street, was stolen on Wednesday afternoon from in front of the Trent Theatre. About five o'clock in the afternoon the police received information that two men were trying to sell bicycles at a ridiculously low price on the Second Concession of Sidney half way between Trenton and Belleville. Police investigated and eventually found where they had sold the bike stolen from the Trent Theatre to Ross Yateman, care of Casey Ketcheson, Second Concession of Sidney, for $4. The bicycle was worth over $20. A thorough search was made of the neighborhood for the accused by the police but without success.

The two men are described as both in their teens, rather rough looking, and they are still in possession of a green bicycle with double frame which the farmers saw with them at the time they sold the other bike.

Charged With Theft

Trenton Police arrested James Schriver on Thursday morning charged with stealing a battle-dress uniform, military boots and socks and cap from a locker in the Crosse & Blackwell factory. He was remanded to jail until Friday.

Arrested for Assault

Provincial police arrested Thomas Clairmont of Trenton, on a charge of assault inflicting grievous bodily harm on one Thomas Gray on Tuesday night, at the Avalon Dance Hall. It is alleged that Gray lost three of his teeth. Clairmont was also remanded to jail till Friday.

U.S. Destroyer Sinks U-Boat in Atlantic

Geysers of water are shown shooting into the ozone as this U. S. destroyer sows her depth charges. After dropping the charges, oil slicks and bubbles (arrows) appeared, indicating that a lurking enemy sub had been destroyed. The sub had been first sighted by a coast-guard plane which dropped its depth charges and then called for assistance. The destroyer rushed to the scene of action, somewhere off the Atlantic coast, and took over. Part of the coast-guard plane is visible at the UPPER LEFT of the photo.

Scorched Earth on the Western Desert

Warfare across the barren Egyptian and Libyan deserts depends a lot upon whatever supplies can be captured from the enemy especially when long, stretched-out supply lines are continually harassed from the air. The ABOVE photo was made while General Rommel's forces were still advancing into Egypt and shows supply dumps at the Tnaiatha railhead after being set afire by the retreating British. Rommel since has been stopped cold and his worn-out army is taking a terrific pounding from the British and U. S. aircraft.

Bancroft District Men Pleased With Training At Summer Camp

Bancroft, (Special.) — Sunday evening terminated a two week training at Connaught Ranges Camp near Ottawa, for over ninety officers and men of "A" Company 2nd. Battalion H. & P.E. Regiment Reserve under command of Captain D. F. Bleecker. The bronzed youths and men returned to Bancroft by motor convoy. During the intensive training the men received a much better training than they did at Petawawa the first year as more equipment was available to train with. The Bancroft boys were very keen when it came to range work and their scores were indicative that they were men from the northern part of Hastings County. The weatherman was more than kind in that rain fell only during one day of the fifteen-day period and altered the syllabus slightly. "A" Company expect to resume their night training again this coming Friday evening in order to complete their schedule for this year.

SURVIVOR FLOATS FOR 73½ HOURS

Rescue of Second Person Out of 13 Borders on Miraculous

Standish, Mich., Aug. 6 (AP) — Another dramatic chapter in the Great Lakes' latest story of shipwreck and drowning unfolded today after the rescue of a second survivor from the tragic Sunday fishing cruise of 13 persons on Saginaw Bay.

Coast guardsmen patrolling the bay for victims' bodies pulled Abraham La Bean, 32-year-old Bay City welder, from the water at 3:25 p.m. yesterday—a rescue that bordered on the miraculous, the guardsmen said, since he had been in the water 73 1-2 hours.

A life jacket so water-logged that it weighed approximately 50 pounds when La Bean was rescued had kept the husky, six-footer afloat for three days and three nights from the time the fishing party's cruiser had struck a rocky reef and foundered.

Weary and badly burned by the sun on his back and shoulders, La Bean still was capable of an attempt at a joke when the guardsmen's work boat found him.

"You almost caught me napping," he said, trying to grin.

Later he said he "hadn't slept a wink" during the ordeal.

Not long before, the body of La Bean's wife, Dorothy, 26, had been recovered. It was the ninth body to be found. The only other known survivor was 23-year-old Mrs. Dorothy Repkie, who swam seven miles to the shore. Her husband, Louis, drowned in an attempt to make safety with her.

Picton and District

Council Sets Rate at 37 Mills

Picton, Special — Town council met on Tuesday evening with His Worship, Mayor McKibbon in the chair.

The new bus service from Picton to Belleville was submitted, and council members pledged themselves to give Mr. Smith all co-operation possible to make it a success.

Schedule:

Leave Picton 11 a.m. ar. Bell 12 a.m.
Leave Bell 2.30 p.m. Picton 3.30 p.m.
Lv. Picton 4.45 p.m. ar. Bell 5.45 p.m
Lv. Bell 7.35 p.m. ar. Picton 8.35 p.m.

Accounts Passed

Town Foreman — Salaries and labor for July $1,384.85.

Relief Expenditure — month of June—$275.95.

Persons on relief June 1942—42.

Persons on relief, June 1941—55.

Cost of relief, June 1941—$375.55.

The mill rate for the Town of Picton was struck at 37 mills, (the same as last year) in the following manner.

County rate	$ 7.59
Town rate	12.86
Public School purposes	6.56
Collegiate Institute	3.72
Public Library	1.07
Public School Deb.	.60
Public Utilities Deb.	1.11
Street Debenture	2.69

R. C. School purposes	9.05

Being based on a total assessment of $2,745,920.93 of which $193,195 is assessed to supporters of the R. C. School.

Reeve Colliver would have liked a lower tax rate this year in keeping with the lower rate in many other towns. The mayor pointed out however that this year the town is paying for extra services—gathering the garbage; gathering of salvage; and the wages of town workmen have been raised.

Clerk Rutter pointed out that the end of July the cost of streets was up $2,411.07 over last year.

By-law No. 1174 was passed setting the 28th day of Sept. on the payment of the first installment of taxes and Nov. 2nd for the final instalment with the usual penalty for delayed payment.

Proposal Turned Down

The mayor reported a meeting held last week to consider bringing in Japanese help to work in the canning factories, and for picking tomatoes. As the government insisted on the Japanese men bringing their families with them, the idea was considered unacceptable.

Escapes Injury

Don Clark, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Clark, miraculously escaped injury on Monday night, about 10 o'clock, when his car left the road near the stone quarry, near Greenbush, and turned over several times in the ditch. The car was a complete wreck but Clark escaped with a slight injury to one hand.

Holiday Dance Greatly Enjoyed

Picton (Special)—Uniforms of the navy, air force and army added color to the Civic Holiday dance Monday night in Picton armouries. Sponsored by the local branch of the Navy League, some 150 couples tripped the light fantastic to the melodic music by the R.A.F. orchestra. Included in the crowd were members of the crew of the R.C.N.V.R. training ship "Magedoma" from Kingston. The event was also popular with summer visitors who were present in large numbers from the various resorts.

Quartette tables were placed along the walls and here parties sat out or enjoyed refreshments, the Legion Ladies' Auxiliary, under the president, Mrs. James Hedges, ably catering.

The guests were received by the president, Dr. A. H. Walton and Mrs. Walton, the latter wearing sky blue printed sheer; the vice president, C. H. McGibbon, Mrs. McGibbon in poudre blue; Miss B. ed print. Mrs. Frank Kemsley, who convened the tables, was in white taffeta with corsage of crimson roses. Herb Daubney, treasurer, assisted at the door and Mrs. Wm. Ryan had charge of the cloak room. Mayor G. N. McKibbon, Hon. President also welcomed the visitors.

Among those from out-of-town attending were Capt. and Mrs. G. Tobey, Ottawa; Mrs. Hulme Duffill and daughter, Miss Elizabeth Duffill, Cleveland, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Keith Gilmore, Belleville; Lieut. H. J. Colliver, Kingston; Miss Nancy Davern, Mrs. George Wallace, Major and Mrs. W. A. Davern, Wellington; Miss Rebecca Brittain, Kitchener; Pte. John Walton, Can. Dental Corp, Kingston; Mrs. Milton Davison, Belleville; Petty Officer F.O. Shibley, R.C.N.V.R., Halifax, and Mrs. Shibley; Seaman Fred Walden, Kingston.

Raise $75 For N.L.

The splendid sum of $75 was realized from the sale of tickets on a lovely crocheted table cloth made by Miss Jennie Sandberg and donated to the local branch of the Navy League. This was won by Mrs. Alton McKinley of Greenbush and was drawn for at the Navy League dance in Picton armouries Monday night with Dr. A. H. Walton in charge and Mayor G. N. McKibbon drawing the lucky ticket.

Miss Blanche Lighthall arranged the draw and it was largely due to her efforts that the draw was such a success. As well, she generously donated the printed tickets. Thanks is extended by the Navy League to Miss Lighthall, those who sold tickets and to the purchasers. Proceeds go to buy comforts for the men in the navy.

Instal Cathedral Chimes

Arrangements are about completed for the placing of a set of cathedral chimes to be played from the organ console of the Picton United Church, and will be heard from the tower. This addition to the United Church and to the town of Picton is a gift of Mr. W. H. Benson, well known business man and canner of Picton and Prince Edward County. It is expected that these will be completed within the next few weeks. Picton United Church officials met Sunday and accepted with thankful appreciation the gift of Mr. Benson.

How You SAVE CLOTHES IN WARTIME WITH New OXYDOL
WASH WHITE WITHOUT BLEACHING AND CLEAN WITHOUT HARD RUBBING!
OXYDOL
OXYDOL
NEW OXYDOL WASHES WHITE WITHOUT BLEACHING!

Clothes come gloriously white just with rich, safe washing action—and last much longer

Get a wash so sparkling white you'll hardly believe you haven't used a bleach. Do it with the New OXYDOL. And without the harsh bleaching that so easily weakens fabrics and fades colors. And without the hard rubbing that causes so much wash-day wear and tear. You save clothes with New Oxydol because you get your wash gloriously white and bright just with rich, safe washing action alone. Every ounce of New Oxydol gets more dirt for you. Its livelier "Hustle-Bubble" suds are now so much richer in washing power! Safely, gently, these suds soak dirt loose . . . draw it out!

Except for stains, of course, or unusual pieces—your wash comes gloriously white—without bleaching . . . without hard rubbing . . . without extra washer-running time! So switch to New OXYDOL that's so kind to your clothes . . . so safe for colored washables and dainty washable rayons! Make clothes last longer in wartime.

Vitamin Deficiency Particularly Perilous in Elderly Persons

People live longer these days than ever before. About two out of three persons reach the age of 60; two out of five reach the age of 70. That means that elderly people are now a more significant part of our population. Their economic, social and health problems must be given an equal place with those of any part of society.

Dr. G. Wilse Robinson, Jr., of Kansas City, Mo., declares that about one out of every four persons past the age of 60 may enter some institution for the care of mental disease, and many more than this are kept at home for treatment. It is also his opinion that one out of every four people over sixty may develop a mental disorder which is so severe that he must be separated from his family during the last years of his life.

The mental changes which occur in these patients are due in large measure to hardening of the arteries in the brain. This cuts down the circulation of blood to the brain tissues so that these tissues are damaged, but other factors also probably play a part in producing the mental disturbances. Nevertheless, Dr. Robinson believes that the same methods of treatment, such as rest and diet, used for mental diseases in younger persons may be effective in the elderly.

The most common type of mental disturbance noted in elderly persons is called senile dementia. It is usually diagnosed only when it has been present for a long time and has been slowly progressing.

A number of elderly persons with mental disturbances were treated by giving them injections of glucose, a sugar solution, into a vein and almost all of them made complete recoveries. Of about 120 patients treated, more than one-half completely recovered and were able to return home and resume their usual activities.

It is interesting to note that Dr. W. Stephenson and his co-workers of Oxford University were able to produce benefit in the mental state of a number of elderly persons by treating them with large doses of vitamin B-complex and vitamin C.

This does not mean that all kinds of mental deterioration in the elderly are due to a vitamin deficiency. However, since the diet of elderly persons often is faulty because of digestive upsets and other conditions which interfere with the use of well-balanced diets, the giving of vitamin preparations may be found useful.

With advancing age, a number of the various tissues in the body become deficient in vitamins. This may be due in part to the fact that the vitamins are not taken up or absorbed from the bowel, or that the body chemistry may be upset so that the vitamins are not properly utilized. Thus, a great deal of care must be used to prevent a deficiency of vitamins in elderly people. If mental disturbances develop the use of vitamin preparations may be of some value.

New Mother's Beauty Tasks

Dolores Costello believes mothers shouldn't neglect their beauty routine

By HELEN FOLLETT

WHEN THE first baby comes there is often a let up on mama's attention to herself. While she has been accustomed to reveling in the luxuries of the beauty shop, getting her hair laundered and set, having her claws shined like pink mirrors, she has looked topping. Now there's the new job, that seems to take most of her time.

No help to be had. Meals to get, furniture to dust, the clothes of Little Angel Face to wash. More than one young woman has aged five years in the first six motnhs of motherhood. This isn't right. The papa doesn't like it, either.

Arranging New Schedule

The household will gradually adjust itself to the new arrival, get down to a routine. When the schedule of daily duties is arranged, the young mother must have her innings. If baby keeps her awake at night she must snatch a few winks when he has his nap. Loss of sleep tuckers one out, promotes premature wrinkles, raises the dickens generally.

She and the newcomer must have as much outdoor life as can be arranged for. Sunshine is the grand vitalize. It won't matter if there's a little dust under the beds or if the faucets aren't polished. The big thing is to keep well and fit. Too many young mothers take better care of their household possessions than they do of themselves.

When Baby is Asleep

When baby is tucked into bed for the night, there should be a half hour of beauty chores. Hair should be brushed, the scalp frictioned, complexion and hands creamed, the nails given a little attention. If there's much laundry work to be done, the hands must be lotioned at least once a day, even in the dear old summer time.

When the baby is weaned the breasts must be massaged lightly with cocoa butter so they will not lose youthful contour. Use flattened fingers, rub round and round with slightly upward pressure.

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Wants Engagement Ring — But Not a Diamond

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am planning to announce my engagement in the Fall, and my fiance and I have been talking over what I would like to have for an engagement ring. I feel very definitely that I don't want a diamond ring. Do you think that something other than a diamond ring would be too unusual? If you think my point of view isn't out of order, would you suggest a substitute for a diamond engagement ring?

Patricia.

I think you're a very wise girl to know what you want—or, at least, to know what you don't want—and I urge you to choose the kind of ring that will make you happier. You're the one who is to wear it, and so it's sensible as well as romantic to have the ring you're going to enjoy wearing.

The fact that a diamond engagement ring is the usual choice need not bother you, for there are many girls who prefer another gem. Some girls even prefer not to have an engagement ring, and, instead, to have a circlet or half-circlet of diamonds for a wedding ring. Other girls prefer emerald, sapphire, ruby or pearl. Others choose a large interesting cut semi-precious stone such as a topaz, carnelian or aquamarine. If you are enthusiastic about your birthstone, you might like to have this, in either a modern or an antique setting.

There are no rules about engagement rings and you can be as original as you like, so long as your originality is in good taste.

Flower Girl or Junior Bridesmaid

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

What is the difference between a flower girl and a junior bridesmaid? Does height differentiate

Marie

A junior bridesmaid is a girl who is considered too young to be a brdesmaid and too old (or too tall) to be a flower gril. Height, as well as age, does enter into the difference between the two.

Wedding Presents Sent in Advance

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1.—Are wedding gifts always sent in advance of the wedding?

2.—To whom are they addressed?

R. A.

1.—Yes, we should send our wedding gift before the wedding—two or three weeks before, if possible. The idea is that then we're not only making the prospective bride happy by our gift, but also are making it more convenient for her to write the thank-you notes that she should write before the wedding.

2.—All wedding presents are addressed to the bride-to-be at her home.

Courtesy for Courtesy

You asked someone for a letter of recommendation? You asked someone for the privilege of using his or her name as a reference, for a position, for membership in an organization, for sponsorship for a lease, or some similar sponsorship? Your friend was so kind as to grant your request? Did you write a note of thanks for this courtesy? Politeness, even decency, demands this.

8 Colors Limit In Knit Outwear

These Include Air Force Blue and Khaki — Choice of 33 Shades

Ottawa, Aug. 6—(CP)—The Wartime Prices and Trade Board moved in on the "sweater girl" today with an order limiting to eight the colors or shades which may be used as body colors in the manufacture of any one line or style of knitted outwear — and the eight include air force blue and khaki.

The order applies to all kinds of knitted goods except underwear, underwear, lingeries, knitted seamless basque berets, Jersey cloth, hosiery and fabric gloves.

A schedule of 33 shades has been prepared from which manufacturers may make their choices. In addition to such old stand-bys as air force blue, khaki, white, orange, navy, and grey there are such exotics as goldenrod, pebble sand, peach beige, conch pink, alpine rose, victory red, teal, sea aque, light sky and monet.

Manufacturers are permitted to complete goods in process of manufacture in any shades not named in the order, and also to use up stocks of yarn now on hand or an order and specified as to the color. Manufacture of knitted outwear from yarn containing shoddy is not affected by the order.

Any manufacturer who has on hand a stock of wool or worested yarn in shades other than those allowed by the order, or who actually has such yarns on order and specified as to color, and who requires cotton yarns on matching shades to level out his stock for knitting purposes, may purchase such cotton yarns, providing he reports all such stocks to knit goods administrator H. G. Smith, of Toronto, not later than Aug. 15.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Grim World Awaits 1942 Graduates

Never was there a time in the history of our country when youngsters, with the ink on their diplomas hardly dry, faced such a baffling prospect as the future holds.

What we used to call the "Sweet Girl Graduate" is today facing a grim, realistic world. Her chances of marriage have declined, as the result of global warfare to such an alarming percentage I hesitate tate to mention it.

If she does marry her high school sweetheart and he goes overseas, the possibilities are that she may have to earn her own living. Life for her will never be the delightful adventure it was for her mother—summer vacations, the family car, the partying and picnicking must all give way to the rationing of gas and tires.

She will, of course, engage in some type of war work. And with it will come the thrills that are youth's birthright. Despite its tragic uncertainties, war is the great love philter, and the young gods in uniform will streamline romance to a degree unthinkable in her mother's day.

She, too, will make a croney of danger, as well as her young man. These girls are learning how to drive cars in a blackout, to sit at the controls of airplanes. Did you read of one the other day who, realizing she was losing consciousness set the controls of her plane and remained aloft? When consciousness retuned, she landed her plane safely.

Have you heard the women nurses of Bataan talk of their experiences in an all-in-the-day's-work manner?

Here's luck to the graduates of '42, both boys and girls! They're landing in a new and terrifying world but they'll be equal to it.

Community Honors Miss Irene Wood

About seventy friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Wood, Stirling, to honour their daughter, Irene, who is joining the R.C.A.F. (Women's Division).

Rev. M. Walker, Stirling, acted as chairman. Community singing was enjoyed by all also a number of instrumental selections and readings.

An address was read by Miss Marion Richardson and Irene was presented with a Nylon hair brush and comb, unbreakable mirror and diary, all in a lovely Airforce blue zippered overnight case, by Miss Lillian Mathews. Irene very graciously thanked her friends for their kindness.

A number of those present made some very pleasant remarks, wishing Irene every success. A lovely lunch was served and the meeting closed with "God Save the King".

Before joining the R.C.A.F., Irene was a school teacher at Stockdale for the past three years and was presented with an R.C.A.F. ring by the community and an ever-sharp pencil by the pupils.

A number of her Stirling girl friends also presented her with a leather billfold on Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Mathews.

WALKING DISTANCE

When the baseball season closes this year the Phillies won't present such a transportation problem. Manager Hans Lobert and four of his lads—Hoerst, Podgajny, Murtaugh and Peterman—can walk home, and get there in time for supper. Two others, Northey and Litwhiler, are from the nearby hard coal fields.

MAY DO IT

Ray Starr may soon get a favorable answer to his request to pitch a doubleheader for the Reds. In the minors he pitched 21.

IF BABY IS CROSS FIND OUT WHY

HEALTHY BABIES are not cross. Your baby should not be cross. If he is, then something in his little system is "out of order". Probably Baby's Own Tablets can promptly "put it right". Mrs. H——, of Fenelon Falls, had the experience. She writes: "My little girl was irritable, feverish and sometimes sick at her stomach—what a relief it was, after giving her Baby's Own Tablets, to see how much better she was."

No matter how delicate your baby may be, these little sweet-tasting tablets cannot harm him. Easy to take. Promptly effective in clearing up simple fevers, diarrhoea, colds, constipation, simple croup, colic, teething troubles and other minor ills.

Never be without a full box of Baby's Own Tablets. Sickness so often strikes in the night. 25 cents. Money back if you are not satisfied.

U.S. Seaman Tells How German Fliers Flew Directly at Ships' Guns In Persistent Attack on Convoy

Boston, Aug. 6 —(AP)— Ab. John W. Tattersall of Haverhill, Mass., told yesterday how his convoy to Russia had been under aerial attack for 28 days in the Murmansk River and how during the course of his long voyage his vessel was torpedoed from under him.

In an interview with the Boston Traveller, which was passed by the United States Office of Censorship, Tattersall said:

"I've been a seaman eight years. I've seen all kinds of murder. I've been bombed for eight days at a time in the Suez Canal — but I never saw anything like this."

Tattersall praised the men who manned the British and Russian destroyers, saying "they're cold, wild men, those guys," and added that Russian workmen labored steadily at Murmansk in unloading American goods despite a "rain of bombs."

He said a German flying boat spotted their convoy last May 24 and bombers arrived the next day, starting a six-day battle.

Describing the start of the running fight, he said:

"Either they're crazy or they don't give a damn for anything or else they're doped and needled higher than a kite. I think they're needled, that's what. They'd have to be to do what they do. Why, some of those babies would come roaring right in at our guns. We sent up a hell of'a barrage, everything hammering away at once, and they'd dive right at the guns and we could see our tracers ripping through them. But they'd keep right on coming and drop their sticks and shake their wings a little and then go whissing straight over our heads and way up high.

"They fought us all day long, we got three of them, but not till after they'd knocked off two of our ships. And, man, those ships sure went sky high.

"My ship had 19 near misses and every one was enough to rattle your ribs off. But it was worth it, to see those Heinies go down in flames."

½ cup Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk
¼ cup vinegar or lemon juice
¼ cup salad oil or melted butter
1 egg yolk ½ teaspoon salt
Few grains cayenne 1 teaspoon dry mustard

Place ingredients in mixing bowl. Beat with rotary egg beater until mixture thickens. If thicker consistency is desired, place in refrigerator to chill before serving. Makes 1¼ cups.

★ ECONOMY SALAD DRESSING

1⅓ cups (1 can) Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk
1 teaspoon salt ½ cup vinegar
1 teaspoon dry mustard

Blend thoroughly Eagle Brand, salt, vinegar, and mustard. Stir until mixture thickens. If thicker consistency is desired, place in refrigerator to chill before serving. Makes 1¾ cups.

★ COTTAGE CHEESE DRESSING

½ cup Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk
½ cup vinegar ½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon dry mustard ½ teaspoon paprika
½ cup cottage cheese

Mix Eagle Brand, vinegar, salt, mustard and paprika thoroughly. Force cottage cheese through sieve. Add to mixture, beating until smooth. (Baumert Cream Cheese may be used instead of cottage cheese.) If thicker consistency is desired, chill before serving. Serve on fruit salad or salad greens.

And you can make scores of other good things to eat . . . quickly and easily . . . with Eagle Brand Sweetened Condensed Milk. Candies, Cookies, Cake Frostings, Pie Fillings, and all kinds of Desserts. There's a folder of Magic Recipes on top of every can.

Increased Yields Cherries, Pears, Grapes Fewer Apples, Plums

Toronto, Aug. 6—(CP)—Increased yields in cherries, pears, grapes and raspberries, with substantially decreased yields for apples, peaches, plums and strawberries were noted for the 1942 fruit crop in a monthly report issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Preliminary estimates for the apple crop place the yield at approximately 283,000 barrels, a 25 per cent reduction from last year and 44 per cent below the average of the past three years. Greatest decreases were noted in Peel-York, Niagara-Burlington, and Georgian Bay districts.

The plum crop, similarly, is less than last year, with an estimated 90,000 bushels, or 37 per cent below that of 1941 estimated.

Cherry orchards have reported an increase of 15 per cent, while strawberries producing more than estimated, were 16 per cent below last year's crop.

Highest fruit yield is expected from grapes, with a 50 per cent increase, or an estimated 33,800 tons looked for. The report indicates all varieties are producing well.

In Eastern Ontario vegetable crops are maturing about the same as last year, but due to the scarcity of labor, fields are not getting the same care they usually do, the report added.

Canadian Railway Had 1st Diner in N. America

Toronto, Aug. 6 — The first regular dining car service in North America was established in Canada seventy-five years ago on the Great Western Railway, now part of the Canadian National Railways, according to a writer in the August issue of the Canadian National Magazine. The following year, 1886, George Pullman built the first regular dining car for the service which now bears his name.

JARVIS AIRWOMEN HAVE LOT OF FUN ON EVENINGS OFF

Train for Baseball Schedule, Spend Their Leisure Time Reading and in Other Recreations

By MARGARET ECKER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Jarvis, Ont., Aug. 6—(CP)—Evening on an R.C.A.F. station, and what do the air women do on their evenings off?

They have a lot of fun, if Jarvis is an example; even more fun, probably, than when they were civilian working girls or living quietly at home.

The airwomen here certainly didn't look regimented or standardized after dinner. They appeared suddenly in cute playsuits and bright slacks with little resemblance to the young women who had gone about their duties at No. 1 Bombing School earlier in the day.

From 6.30 to 7.30 p.m. there was "P. T."—physical training — with Sergeant Kay Milligan directing. "It's fun, and it keeps down the waistline," said the sergeant who comes from Vancouver and who was a brilliant agriculture graduate of the University of British Columbia. "You eat so much better here that you need it."

After P. T., as the sun was slanting down across the lush Norfolk county countryside, the girls scattered to do pretty much as they wanted. Their time was their own till bedtime at 10 p.m.

Some members of the R.C.A.F.'s women's division got back into uniform and trooped off with the airmen to the station movie that runs three times a week. As many as the courts would hold were playing tennis; others were playing badminton in the big gymnasium. And some, in sun suits, were lying on a sheltered piece of grass getting the last rays of the sun.

Competitive Baseball

Over in a field there was a baseball game and an airman was coaching the girls for their league game against W. D.'s from Hagersville the next evening. Small, brunette Corporal Mary Pound, of Winnipeg, in brown slacks and white sweat shirt, was catching.

The team's best rooter is Airwoman Flora Glass, a cook from Calgary. In bright pink slacks and sweater she was talking a fine baseball game and the team members said they couldn't play without her.

Girls who take their fun a bit more quietly were reading or writing in the airwomen's creation centre and some had been invited into the airmen's mess where they were chatting or reading. When the girls came to the station, the airmen voted that the girls should be invited to use the library as a common meeting ground. The arrangement doesn't seem to be a hardship on anyone.

Two nights a week the girls ask the men to their recreation hall. On Thursday there's a dancing party there and on Sunday, games and a sing-song. The library is a popular place in the evening. The airmen and airwomen prefer to read humorous books and murder mysteries, said AW2 Doris Spring, of Hamilton, the station's librarian.

But it's not all fun and games on the air station at night and there was plenty of work going on. AW2. Nano Pennefather, of Ottawa, was wandering about as duty airwoman, relieving the N.C.O's. Her job, she said, was to be available wherever she was granted, to keep things running smoothly. At the minute she was carrying an armful of extra blankets to someone who had been cold the night before.

Eats For Fliers

It wasn't an off-duty hour for the kitchen staff either. AW. M. N. Woodworth, of Oliver, B.C., — she said she's called "Blitz" around here—was cooking up a fine hash of meat, vegetables and onions for the night fliers who would be bringing their planes down soon. Preliminary preparations for breakfast were also being made. Corporal Harold Cormier, of Moncton, N.B., by his own admission is a "hard man" and he makes sure the girls keep their white chef's caps on and their white smocks clean. A girl with straggly hair loses a month's leaves.

Girls are slower and steadier in a barracks kitchen, said Cpl. Cormier as he prepared a big pan of pumpkin pie for the late fliers. It take two girls to handle some of the big pots and soup cauldrons where one man could do it, but the girls are faster on the steam table from which the food is served.

The girls clean up better, he said, and pointed to AW. Florence Nightingale from Vancouver who was sweeping up the floor. She stopped long enough to say she thought she was a relative "distantly removed" of the famous Forence Nightingale. The golden tan she had, she said, resulted from a 48-hour leave at Port Dover, Ont. The people of Port Dover have opened their homes to the airmen and airwomen and give them a chance to spend leaves on the shore of Lake Erie.

LOBLAW GROCETERIAS CO., LIMITED

Viscount Bennett Says Allied Powers Would Resent British Lead In Making Terms of Peace for U.N.

London, Aug. 5—(CP Cable)—Viscount Bennett declared in the House of Lords today that "nothing, in my judgment, could be more fatal than that we were undertaking in this kingdom to make the terms of peace for the Allied powers fighting against the Axis."

"It would be resented," added the former Canadian Prime, Minister, "not only among those with equal status with ourselves, namely the Dominions, but it would be resented equally by people in other lands associated with us in the war."

Lord Bennett spoke at a debate opened by Lord Davies who proposed the establishment of an Inter-Allied Commission at the end of the war to consider the implications of the Atlantic Charter and the Anglo-Soviet Treaty.

Not a Treaty, Just Expression

The Atlantic Charter, said Lord Bennett, is not a treaty but merely an expression of the hopes and aspirations of Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt.

In the United States, he said, legislation giving force to the operation of declarations in the charter could become effective only after senate approval.

That was the reason why there was a treaty with Russia but no treaty with the United States, Lord Bennett said, because it was by no means certain that the result might not be the same as when President Wilson gave his approval to the League of Nations.

Fate of 14 Points

Lord Bennett recalled the fate of the 14 points and added "nothing could be more fatal than to make a declaration of our views with respect to peace and then have our enemies, defeated, saying they relied upon statements which we made but which we couldn't give effect to because they were our declarations and not the declarations of everyone concerned with us".

He cautioned his audience against attaching too much importance to speeches made by men in public life in the United States on matters of this type.

Here, he said, the Prime Minister could bind the government and the country or else go out of office in an endeavour to give effect to his conclusions. In the United States, he added that is not the case.

Express Views

"It would be extremely ill-considered for the government to do other than express its views as to what we are struggling for", said Lord Bennett. "That's one thing. To say what we are going to endeavour to impose upon someone is another".

Viscount Simon, Lord Chancellor, in reply did not agree that the charter was vague or nebulous. The most significant and hopeful feature of the charter, he said, was not the unilateral declaration but the pledge of co-operation not only in framing plans for peace but in carrying them out.

"If that is achieved, there is no place in history too high to put this document", he said.

Everything that has been said about the Atlantic charter by United States statesmen, Lord Simon said, has confirmed the resolve of the American government to act in a spirit of co-operation. These, he declared, were very powerful men who made these declarations and their speeches exercised an enormous influence inside their country as well as on outside nations.

Lord Simon stated the government is in entire agreement with a recent speech by State Secretary Cordell Hull of the United States on post-war affairs and said the government's aim was not to impose international authority upon the world after the war.

Concentrated Wall Of A.A. Fire Guards Key City of Nile

(By LARRY ALLEN)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Alexandria, Egypt, Aug. 5 —(AP)—One of the hardest-hitting and most effective anti-aircraft barrages in the world is making Nazi bombers keep their distance over this key city to the valley of the Nile.

The concentrated wall of fierce flame that spurts skyward from strategically-placed guns guarantees a hot reception for the enemy raiders who lately have been over Alexandria almost every night.

All shore batteries, going into action simultaneously, split the darkness like a series of giant sparklers, their light spreading fanwise into the sky and merging into a huge blob of white as projectiles explode in the area of the planes.

Night fighters also have been busy, and in the last few nights it has not been uncommon to see Italian or German bombers burst into flames and plummet into the Mediterranean.

The enemy thus far has failed to create widespread damage in this principal base of the Mediterranean fleet. There has been no indiscriminate bombing of the city itself.

Every Precaution Taken

Alexandrians, aware that the decisive battle between the British and Axis armies facing each other near El Alamein, 65 miles westward, remains to be fought, are taking every precaution to meet any big-scale air raids which might be the prelude or follow-up of any new Nazi push.

Hundreds of private and public shelters have been built in recent weeks.

Although the war is at the city's doorstep, and the rumble of artillery fire is audible, life goes on normally.

Night clubs, bars, restaurants, theatres and hotels are doing a rushing business despite the rigidly enforced blackout.

R. R. REFRIGERATOR CARS SOON RATIONED

Montreal, Aug. 5 (CP)—T. C. Lockwood, Dominion Transport Controller, said today that beginning Sept. 1 there will be a serious shortage of railway refrigerator cars and they will have to be rationed.

Mr. Lockwood made the statement when announcing that a directive to railways June 13 forbidding the use of refrigerator cars for certain classes of traffic has been amended to allow the use of available refrigerator cars for the shipment of early potatoes, onions and turnips until August 31.

"As the supply of refrigerator cars is short in Canada", he said, "shippers will probably not be able to ship all their products in these particular cars, in which case box or stock cars will have to be used in order to move the products offering".

He said there would be a serious shortage of the cars beginning Sept. 1 and "undoubtedly the cars will have to be rationed to the best advantage".

At that time of year large quantities of fruits as well as vegetables and other perishable products are moving.

Conservatives to Hold Meeting at Port Hope

Edmonton, Aug. 5 —(CP)— Men and women from all parts of Canada will meet in Port Hope, Ont., the first week in September for "a round table on Canadian policy." Port Hope is about 60 miles east of Toronto.

At the meeting, convened by a group of Conservatives, Canada's war and post-war problems will be discussed.

H. R. Milner, past-president of the Alberta Conservative Association, last night announced plans for the gathering.

"It is being held as a result of a number of informal discussions, first in Winnipeg and later in Montreal and elsewhere," he said in a statement.

It will be a meeting of laymen, and, said the Milner statement, "it is not intended that it should deal with leadership or with organization, and this is understood by the official leaders of the party."

It was explained that the meeting was called to "interest a wide variety of Canadian citizens" in the urgent and important public business of the country . . . Those responsible for calling the meeting believe that there is a new opportunity and responsibility facing the party and it is their earnest hope that the present may be the beginning of a broad movement which will help the party in the discharge of its duty to the country . . ."

Referring to the meetings held in Montreal and Winnipeg, the statement said:

"The interest shown indicated that the Conservative party holds the allegiance of wide variety of people in all parts of the country who are thinking in terms of the problems of 1942."

Mr. Milner said that it is expected approximately 150 men and women will attend the meeting. It will be held at Trinity College, Port Hope.

PROBE CHARGES OF 'BLACKMARKET'

Allegation Made Steel 'Black Market' Exists Where 'Immediate Delivery Was Made'

New Orleans, Aug. 5—(AP)—Two investigations were promised today into charges made before a congressional subcommittee here that a "black market" in steel existed where "immediate delivery was made" from "bulging warehouses scattered over the nation"

Price Administrator Leon Henderson in Washington ordered an immediate probe by the office of price administration of charges made yesterday by Frank Higgins, associated with his father, A. J. Higgins, in shipbuilding here, that his company bought steel from such markets at higher premiums.

Prior to Henderson's order, President Roosevelt at a Washington press conference said he thought persons who sold steel in such markets should go to jail and that the charges should be investigated.

The second investigation was promised by Rep. J. Harden Peterson (Dem.-Fla.), chairman of the house sub-committee investigating the maritime commission's cancellation last month of the A. J. Higgins contract to build 200 liberty ships because of an alleged steel shortage.

"We got the steel from warehouses all over the country," Higgins said. "They know even before we do that we'll get certain contracts and they send us lists of what we'll need to fill the contracts. They send us these lists before we know what contracts we will get."

No Way of Knowing Premiums

A. J. Higgins said there was no way of knowing what the premium price of such steel would be, adding that sometimes the bill carried "delivery charges" or charges for "wear and tear on tires."

"I don't see what all the excitement is about," he asserted. "Everyone who knows anything about steel or building knows of this market, and of the fact that warehouses are bulging with steel which is sold in slightly less than carlots at premium prices and the buyer's priority rating used to replenish the supply."

Frank Higgins told the committee there was nothing illegal in the transaction.

"It's legal profiteering, but it's as black as the ace of spades," he said. Adding that priority ratings were needed but that immediate delivery was made, whereas he said his company could not be sure of delivery on specific dates on war production board commitments.

How to make the most of your Coffee

WHATEVER type of coffee-maker you use, follow these rules to prevent waste and to use coffee to best advantage.

1 Use good coffee—correctly ground for your method of coffee-making.

2 Measure ground coffee and water carefully so as to provide just the number of cupfuls you need and no more. Use freshly drawn water.

3 Make coffee at just below boiling point. Boiling develops bitterness and spoils flavor. Remove grounds as soon as coffee is made.

4 Serve immediately, if possible. If necessary to keep hot, use only low heat.

5 Keep coffee maker scrupulously clean. Stale odors and sediment affect flavor. Preheat by scalding just before use.

MAXWELL HOUSE is a blend of the world's finest coffees, roasted by a special process to capture all its extra goodness. It offers precisely correct grinds for each type of coffee maker—Drip and Regular. Maxwell House reaches you absolutely roaster-fresh because it is sealed in a Super-Vacuum tin. This is important because roasted coffee, once ground, loses flavor rapidly when exposed to air. The best way to retain its aroma is to keep it in the tin.

GEN. PAGET TOURS CANADIAN ARMY AREA IN ENGLAND

McNaughton Accompanies Chief of Home Forces—Battle Practice Demonstrated

DISCUSSIONS HELD

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Somewhere in England, Aug. 6—(CP)—Touring a section of the Canadian army area in Southern England, Gen. Sir Bernard Paget, Commander-in-Chief of Britain's home forces, inspected the great airdrome being built by the Royal Canadian engineers, watched armored division troops in battle practice and saw Canadian pilots make daring tree-top sweeps.

Regiments of medium and field artillery were massed for the British military leader and he visited reinforcement units where thousands of soldiers, fresh from Canada, are learning their jobs to back up line regiments for the push into Europe.

The General also passed through a 1,000-man hutted camp, one of many being erected by the R.C.E.'s for the flood of Canadian troops that will pour into Britain before the end of the year.

Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, the army commander, accompanied Gen. Paget and throughout the day they had earnest discussions about the Canadian army's preparations for the big offensive.

Many High Officers

The party included Capt. R. I. Agnew, head of the Royal Canadian Navy in Britain and Air Marshal Harold Edwards Chief of the Royal Canadian Air Force overseas. There also were a score of major-generals, brigadiers and colonels.

Work at the airdrome was in full swing when the party arrived. Concrete was being laid on mile-long runways —and the area resembled a huge construction camp in peacetime Canada.

A battalion of sappers, many of them stripped to the waist, worked with giant trucks and shovels rushing the job to completion in record time. The Canucks stood on no ceremony for the distinguished visitors, but went right ahead with their work in billows of dust.

Gen. Paget drove around the airdrome on the completed runways in a "blitz buggy" and marvelled at the task being done by the engineers.

At the artillery demonstration, where nearly 100 guns were massed in fields under camouflage nets, the new Canadian air support control unit showed how air support could be rapidly called up by wireless to take on targets chosen by army commanders. Fighter-reconnaissance aircraft of Canadian army co-operation squadrons received orders while they were in the air miles away and came swooping down on the targets.

In the armored division area, Gen. Paget watched an attack by American tanks, driven by troopers of the Lord Strathcona's Horse from Winnipeg and Calgary followed up by infantry of the Westminster regiment from New Westminster, B.C.

At the reinforcement units, the party watched soldiers training as ordnance workshop men, saw enthusiastic new gunner reinforcements doing gun drill on the square as if they were turning back a whole German army by their efforts, and viewed mimic infantry attacks.

NAZIS HURL

The most violent battle was in progress in the Belaya Glina sector where the Germans have driven closest to the oil fields of Maikop, some 120 miles farther to the southwest.

Memories of 1917

Stalingrad's defenders were spurred by the memories of the heroic and successful defence of the city in 1917 by troops under Joseph Stalin, who organized supply services there for the newly-created Red army. After the revolution the city was renamed in honor of the Soviet premier.

Deeper in the Caucasus, Russian troops fighting a delaying action below Belaya Glina, 100 miles southeast of Rostov, made a new withdrawal yesterday while in the Kushchevka area, 50 miles south of Rostov, Cossacks were reported inflicting particularly heavy losses upon Nazi air-borne tanks and parachutists who descended behind Russian lines in groups of 100 and 150.

The mid-day Soviet communique said today that during last night Red forces in the Belaya Glina sector made a fighting withdrawal to new positions and that Kushevka area Soviet anti-tank gunners and "tank busters" destroyed eight Nazi tanks and 25 other vehicles.

Cossacks Charge Huns in Caucasus Village

Night-riding Cossacks charged into a Caucasus village, slaughtered more than 600 Germans and disappeared swiftly into the darkness, the communique reported.

Soviet defenders continued to hold firmly to their positions on the Kletskaya front where the official announcement related one Russian unit picked off 3,000 Germans. Another 250 Nazis were reported slain by Soviet tank units in a dash against the enemy's rear.

Fighting has erupted on the long dormant Bryansk front, 210 miles southwest of Moscow, and the Soviet announcement said Red army forces recaptured a village there, killing 100 Germans in street fighting.

Fighting blazed without let-up throughout the night on the Stalingrad and other major fronts in the south, the communique said.

Enemy Units Exterminated

Elsewhere in the North Caucasus the Russians said inclusive fighting continued. In the Don Elbow the Germans broke through Russian defences in one sector but frontline dispatches said the enemy units were quickly encircled and exterminated.

The German advance to Kotelnikovski presented a new threat to the railroad spanning the isthmus from Stalingrad to Novorossiisk, Soviet naval base on the Black Sea. This line already has been severed in the Belya Glina sector.

From Kotelnikovski the Germans might strike toward Astrakhan, 240 miles to the southeast on the Caspian Sea at the mouth of the Volga. A thrust across the comparatively flat country to that oil port would isolate the Caucasus by land from the rest of Russia.

Plastic Support For Plane Plumbing Will Save Rubber

Burbank, Calif., Aug. 6— (AP)—An aircraft equipment manufacturing firm disclosed today it is producing a plastic support for aircraft plumbing which will save enough rubber annually to make 22,750 tires. The Adel Precision Products Corp., reported it is employing a plastic block with a thin strip of synthetic rubber compound instead of a thick block of rubber or rubber compound. Engineers said it reduces the rubber content of plane plumbing systems by 88 to 94 per cent.

CHRISTMAS MAY COME BACK TO ARIZONA

Tucson, Ariz., Aug. 6 — (AP) — Christmas may return to Arizona. The Bureau of Mines reports that the copper mine which formerly supported the small post office of Christmas may be re-opened. If the mine prospers, the post office, once the country's favorite mailing spot for Yule cards, probably will be revived.

Itching Toes Quickly Relieved

OR MONEY BACK

If you suffer with fiery itching of your feet, if they swell and burn; if there are tiny, inflamed cracks between or under your toes you should not neglect immediate treatment because these are symptoms of dreaded athlete's foot infection. Take quick action before the condition becomes acute and spreads to your hands or other parts of your body. Go to any drug store today and get an inexpensive bottle of Cortisol. The very first application will stop the itching and burning and a few days' use will effectively destroy the athlete's foot germ that is causing your foot misery. Cortisol is a clean, pure liquid, quick and easy to use, no stain, no muss, no bandages. Just pat a little Cortisol on your feet night and morning. If in three days you are not pleased with the results—get your money back. You can not afford to ignore this generous and liberal offer.

12-Year-Old Boy Stays Up Late To Conduct Venerable Orchestra

Lorin Maazel Off Stage Like Any Other Boy Under Teens

LIKES TO CLIMB TREES

New York, Aug. 6.— (AP) — A chunky 12-year-old boy from Pittsburgh stayed up way past his bedtime last night to conduct the venerable Philharmonic-Symphony Society before some 8,500 cheering patrons.

The boy was Lorin Maazel and he was making his debut before a Manhattan audience at Lewisohn Stadium, which is concluding its 25th season next week.

The odd thing was that Lorin impressed the orchestra as much as he did the audience. The men not only played for him willingly and graciously—they liked the way he rehearsed, earlier yesterday. He knew the score, said John Corigliano, concertmaster, and he knew how to get what he wanted.

Last night he conducted without score, not as a stunt, his mother insists, but because to his young mind learning by heart" comes easy, and it works out better that way.

The music played was familiar, including the overture to Mozart's "Marriage of Figaro", the Fifth Beethoven Symphony, Tchaikowsky's "Nutcracker Suite" and the same composer's "Marche Slave".

Off stage Lorin is much like other boys. He goes to public school, plays afternoons, and lately has conceived a passion for tree climbing that worries his parents a little.

5 COAL MINERS TRAPPED, KILLED

Caught by Huge Wreckage Caused by Fall-in at Cadomin Mine

Cadomin, Alta., Aug. 6 (CP) — Five coal miners at the Cadomin Mine, about 150 miles southwest of Edmonton in the coal branch district, were killed last night when trapped in a huge fall of wreckage caused by the falling-in of part of the workings under No. 9 level.

Details of the disaster, described as the worst in the history of mining at this centre, were not immediately available.

The body of one man has been extricated from the wreckage and although the others have been located officials said it is impossible yet to recover them because of the difficulties in removing rock and timber.

The accident is believed to have been caused when pent-up water from an old working, heavily reinforced by recent rainfalls, burst under No. 9 level.

Several other miners in the workings at the time escaped.

Those killed were one fireboss, a mucker and three miners.

Names of the dead were not immediately available.

Officials said the crash knocked coal, timber, rock aand rubble in all directions and it was this wreckage that was causing the delay in extricating the bodies.

Harris Pitches Three-Hitter, Whiffing Nine of Opposition, As Vets Down Bombers 6-2

Army & Navy Rise Up in Seventh With Three Run Rally and Chase Pitcher Smith

TARLAGLIA HOMERS

Behind Connie Harris' thee-hit spot pitching the Army and Navy "Vets" rose up with a seventh inning splurge, to score three runs, and subsequently down the Mountain View "Bombers" 6-2 in the Belleville and District Softball League semi-final play-offs at the Exhibition Park last evening.

Up until the ninth inning Harris had allowed only one single and an unearned run before Tarlaglia hit for the circuit. Harris' control was slightly off color as he walked eleven, but his spot pitching was timely as Connie allowed only three hits and struck out nine, the majority of his fanning efforts coming when Skipper Barrett had Bombers on the runways. For six frames Skipper Kiser's Vets did little with Pitcher Freddie Smith's slants, but they rose up in the seventh to score three and drive Smith to the showers and coast in scoring two more off the offerings of relief hurler Ray.

Bombers Open Score

The Bombers garnered an initial inning run without the resemblance of a hit as two walks, Barriage's infield error and a fielder's choice saw Abelson scamper home. Although Cy Barriage opened the fourth for the Vets with a triple, there was no further scoring until the top half of the sixth when the Vets evened the count with one out. Cy Barriage strolled, went to second on St. Louis' single and scored on Murney Green's subsequent one base blow. In the bottom half of the sixth the Bombers got three aboard, with two out, when Abelson's hit to right was foul by inches and he later flew to Kiser to relieve the situation, as far as the Vets were concerned.

Vets Break Out

Came the fireworks in the seventh — Goyer opened with a triple and Harris promptly helped his own cause with a timely single. Jim Barriage sacrificed and Henn drew a walk. In the clutch St. Louis came through with a single that drove Harris and Henn home for what proved the winning counters. Hits by Jim and Cy Barriage, along with a walk and an error gave the Vets two more in the top half of the ninth. The Bombers attempted a rally in the ninth as Tarlaglia homered with one out and Porter singled for the Bombers third and final hit as Harris struck out the next two batters to end the pastime.

Cy Barriage, with a triple and single, led the Vets on the attack as St. Louis picked up a brace of singles to help the Vets in their nine-hit effort, with Goyer getting a three base wallop. Of the three Bomber hits Taralaglia's homer was outstanding, while the losers kicked in with the only two-ply killing of the tussle to halt a Vet rally in the 8th. The League semi-finals continue Friday with Reliance and No. 5 ITS tangling in their second meeting.

Base Stealing Record May Be Shattered

Stealing is a crime anywhere but in baseball, and a good many International League catchers wish the law would be extended to the National pastime, at least for George (Snuffy) Stirnweiss of Newark Bears.

Stirnweiss had stolen 31 bases at mid-season when he realized he had an excellent chance to beat the modern record of 63 set by John Kelly of Baltimore in 1906 and tied by another Oriole, Fritz Maisel, in 1919.

Since the league's all-star clash he has swiped 29 bases in 33 games, with the climax coming last night as he pilfered four in a double-header with Toronto Maple Leafs to bring his total to 60 for the season.

Sharing the spotlight with Stirnweiss' brilliant larceny were the four-hitters turned in by George Washburn and Joe Page as the Bears won both ends of the twin bill, 3-2 and 7-1. In the second frame, Page had a shutout until the ninth inning when Frank Coleman homered.

Bisons Beat Chiefs

Buffalo Bisons ended their season's play with Syracuse Chiefs by taking a double victory, 5-2 and 3-1. The Bisons broke a 2-2 deadlock in the opener, with the help of a home run by Jack Redmond with one aboard in the sixth inning.

In the nightcap, Tom Pullig bested Clayton Lambert in a pitching duel as Buffalo scored twice in the eighth inning to break a 1-1 tie.

It was a battle of left-handers at Montreal with Clyde Smoll of the visiting Baltimore Orioles coming out on top, 1-0. Smoll gave up four hits and his opponent, Jack Kraus, yielded only three, but one of these was coupled with an error and resulted in the only run of the evening in the fourth inning.

A blackout helped Jersey City Giants down Rochester Red Wings, 5-4. Hugh Poland doubled in the sixth inning to drive home Bobby Westfall who had walked, breaking a 4-4 deadlock just a few minutes before the lights were turned out at Red Wing stadium in Rochester. This run proved to be the deciding one.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, Aug. 6 (AP)—Short ration rushin'—so many high school coaches have left Oklahoma for the armed services that the State High School Athletic Association has put out a manual, intended for women, on how to coach. . . One big prep league there has lost all its basketball coaches in two months. . . And in Texas they made special arrangements at the annual football clinic for school superintendents looking for coaches instead of trying to find places for jobless coaches. . . And word from the south is that they may even run out of football officials, since attendance at Spring meetings of the southern football officials association was off 20 per cent.

Today's Guest Star

Howard Preston, Cleveland News: 'It must be very comforting to St. Louis Cardinals to have historians recall that the Dodgers blew a late season 17-game lead and the pennant to the Cards back in 1930. And it must also be very comforting to the Dodger management to recall that those 1930 players no longer are playing with Brooklyn."

Recovered Fumbles

Because 16,000 officers and men soon will be in camp at the Lincoln, Neb., air base, Coach Glenn Presnell plans to have nothing but secret practices for his Nebraska footballers this Fall. There might be some alumni or amateur scouts of rival colleges on hand.

Whiffed Again

Dick Bartell of the Giants, who hasn't been hitting his weight, picked up his morning paper the other day and saw that a horse named "slump" was entered at Rockingham Park. . . The hunch looked too good to miss, but Dick forgot to "insure" his bet so when slump came in at $111 for $2 Dick could only collect at 30 to 1.

Referee Dunlop Helps Watson Dispose of Jerry Monnahan

The ability of Jerry Monnahan, the Unmasked, as a wrestler is well known in Belleville but it is rather too much for mountainous Jerry or even the fans to expect that he can take on a top notch opponent and the referee as well and emerge victorious.

This, however, is exactly what the villainous Unmasked has attempted to do on his last three visits to the Quinte city and upon each occasion he has come second best, with his shoulders on the mat and amid the vociferous acclaim of the cash customers as they gave vaunt to their feelings in seeing Monnahan tamed.

Last night at the Hume Arena Gardens it was no exception as "Whipper" Billy Watson, one of the most popular wrestlers ever to step into a Belleville ring, pinned "Irish Jerry" to the canvas in two straight falls, and managed to do it in between the side bouts which his opponent persisted in having with "Bunny" Dunlop, the referee, who had more than his hands full in keeping the two wrestlers from indulging in too strenuous unorthodox jousting.

Hangs Referee

Frankly speaking Monnahan took the rotund Dunlop for more falls than he ever experienced as a main attraction in a Belleville ring and once put the referee's neck in a hangman's noose as he crossed the ropes over the distressed Dunlop's head. This proved his downfall, however, as the ever watchful Watson took advantage of the opportune moment to grab Monnahan unawares and pin his shoulders for the second and last fall of the bout.

Watson had previously won the first fall when he was declared winner as after repeated warnings by the referee, Monnahan persisted in shutting of the "Whipper's" wind off with punishing head chancery holds. The decision was an unpopular one with the villainous Monnahan and it took the combined efforts of Whipper and the referee to tame him as he rushed the victor after the bell.

Preliminary Bouts

Two newcomers to the Belleville squared ring were presented by Frank Tunney as the principals in the semi-final bout which saw only six minutes of whirlwnid action. The victor, a huge Mexican with a name almost as long as himself, but called Pedro Martinez, for short was much too good for his lighter opponent, Al. Tucker of Boston. Pedro literally kicked the Bostonian into submission to win the bout in record time.

In the curtain raiser Jan Gotch, the aggressive Dutchman, took only 16 minutes to pin Rudy Patek's shoulders to the canvas as, with the fans, he took a very unpopular decision. Cliff Fox refereed the first two bouts of the evening with Dunlop officiating in the finale.

Five of Seven Major League Games See Pitchers Rise Up And Hurl Shut Out Baseball

Rookie Max Macon Fires Two-Hitter as Dodgers Win 4-0 Over New York Giants

PITCHERS STINGY

One Batting Melee as Indians Down St. Louis 8-5 With Browns Out-Hitting Cleveland

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Pitching always is the mainspring of baseball, but yesterday it was almost the whole works in the major leagues.

In the greatest one-day concentration of pitching prowess this season, five of the seven games played ended in shut outs and not a single home run was produced in the entire card. In fact, there was only one triple.

Rookie Max Macon, pitching his first complete game since joining Brooklyn Dodgers several weeks ago, muffled New York Giants to two hits in winning 4-0 and for the first five frames he had a no-hitter.

John Beazley of St. Louis Cardinasl and Cecil (Tex) Hughson of Boston Red Sox each hurled three-hitters, the former in trimming Cincinnati Reds 3-0 and the latter in stopping Philadelphia Athletics 7-0.

But Hal Newhouser pitched five-hit ball and lost in the rarest game of all as Don Kolloway stole home to give Chicago White Sox a 1-0 decision over Detroit Tigers.

Thornton Lee Back

It was the second start of the season for Lefty Thornton Lee. the outstanding hurler of the American League a year ago and it apparently proved the mysterious arm ailment which kept him out of action for more than half the season has vanished. Lee allowed only seven scattered hits and fanned six.

It was the fifth straight triumph for the White Sox.

Red Sox backed up Hughson's fine hurling with a 14-hit offensive spread over every inning and gained half a game on the New York Yankees, who were kept idle by weather at Washington.

The only other American League game was the one contest that developed into a batting melee, Cleveland curbing the St. Louis Browns 8-5 in a night tilt with a six-run rally in the fourth inning after being held to one hit for three stanzas by Denny Galehouse. The Browns outhit the Indians 12-11, out couldn't bunch their blows.

Giants, Dodgers Finish

In the National League the Dodgers and Giants finally turned in a complete twi-light game at Ebbets Field in Brooklyn after having been halted twice by the Dimout deadline while playing across town in the Polo Grounds. With Macon pitching swiftly as well as expertly, the contest was finished in one hour and 51 minutes. The Dodgers made good use of eight hits.

All the other National League activity also was at night. In one of the best games Truett (Rip) Sewell blanked the Chicago Cubs, 3-0. The Pirates put an end to a scoreless pitching duel between Sewell and Les Fleming by getting all their runs in the seventh on a walk and four singles after two were out. Each team made six hits.

Although he didn't get a shutout, Tommy Hughes pitched five-hit ball at Philadelphia to lead the Phils to their second straight victory over the Boston Braves, 5-2, with the help of Danny Litwhiler, who hit a triple and double good for three runs.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

(By The Associated Press)

Max Macon, Dodgers: Pitched two-hit shutout against Giants.

Tommy Hughes, Phils: Held Braves to five hits for his eighth victory.

Tex Hughson, Red Sox: Blanked Athletics on three hits.

Don Kolloway, White Sox: Stole home in sixth inning for 1-0 victory over Tigers.

Johnny Beazley, Cardinals: Shut out Reds on three hits.

Rip Sewell, Pirates: Kept six hits scattered to whitewash Cubs.

Chis Hockett and Ken Keltner, Indians: They divided six of Cleveland's 11 hits leading to triumph over Browns.

CAN CANADIAN BEAT IMPORTED YANKEE GOLFER?

This is Burning Question on Eve of Canadian Open Golf Tournament

(By SCOTT YOUNG)

Toronto, Aug. 6 (CP)—Main interest in the Canadian Open Golf Championship's first-round gallery today was on a question as old as the tournament itself—whether a Canadian could beat the top-notch imported talent to he $1,000 first prize and the Seagram gold cup.

The chances are as good as they ever were. Opposing such big-name Americans as Ben Hogan, Clay Heafner, Craig Wood and Paul Runyan is a battery of capable Canadians headed by Stan Leonard and Gordon Brydson among the professionls and Phil Farley in the amateur section.

Farley may be the most solvent hope, because his startling 67 in a practice round shows he knows his way around the championship layout's narrow fairways and well-trapped greens. But Brydson is the solid choice among the Canadian professionals, because Mississauga is his home course and he knows it as no one else does.

Brydson is co-holder with Walter Hagen of the competitive course record of 68.

Vancouver's tSan Leonard must be considered and Montreal's Stan Horne will be well up among the Canadians. The problem still is not which Canadian can win the event, but whether any Canadian can do it. Bob Ray of Toronto Scarborough, was second to Sam Snead last year, with Brydson, fourth, and Brydson's shots in the last two rounds—when the heat was on—were better than those of the long-hitting Gray.

Mississauga is a 6543-yard layout, par 72, and is heavily trapped. Another potent hazard is the fast-running Credit River, which crosses five fairways and skirts 11 others. Only two holes of the 18 arer free of the water menace.

Total prize money is $3,6000. The field will play 18 holes today, another 18 tomorrow and the best 60 scores and ties will move into the championship 36-hole windup Saturday.

REAL PITCHERS' DUEL

Hull, Que., Aug. 6 (CP)—Ray LaRose blanked Hull Volants on 7 hits last night in pitching Ottawa Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps to a 1-0 Interprovincal Baseball League victory.

Sam Dinardo's drag bunt scored Leo Blcndin from third base with the winning run in the sixth inning, moving Ordnance a full game closer to the leagu-leading Volants who have lost only four games in 17 starts this season.

Sport Short

Toronto, Aug. 6—(CP) — Latest Canadian city to feel the rejuvenating influence of R.A.F. men in soccer is Calgary . . . the sport was almost dead there—as it was in almost every Canadian City — until the war brought R.A.F. schools to this side of the pond . . . to Canadians who have played these air force teams, it seems one of the prime requisites for enlistment is an ability to play soccer . . . the Maritimes and Western Ontario are among the other districts found teeming with soccer fans when the right kind of soccer came along.

CASTILLOUX DEPT.

Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson, speaking on the 1-1 tie in the Castilloux retirement league: "Get the real low down on Mr. Castilloux's fistic future by consulting the new manager, Mrs. Castilloux . . . the answer, incidentally, will be no." . . . Hal (Toronto Globe and Mail) Walker, commenting on Castilloux's statement that he would retire and Manager Raoul Godbout's rebuttal that Castilloux's statement shouldn't be considered official, says: "Godbout has done much for Castilloux and if he says that Dave will fight again you can take it for as close to gospel as the ten commandments that Dapper David will be in thar flicking leather again."

INCIDENTALLY:

Bill Carse, Chicago Black Hawks forward, has enlisted with the 31st Reconnaissance battalion in Edmonton . . . horsemen at the Regina exhibition race meeting last week gave Jddge George Schilling something to remember them by . . . last Friday, when entries were being taken for the last day of the meeting, the boys gave Schilling a pair of turkeys then entered 98 (count 'em) thoroughbreds in the seven-race cards to assure a full field for every race of closing day . . . eight starters was the maximum for each race, so 42 horses didn't get in . . . that type of situation is nothing short of heaven for a presiding steward.

CLUTCH HITTING, plus Connie Harris' spot pitching, gave the "Vets" first draw over the "Bombers" last night. Connie pitched a hard game well, he got himself into some trouble with 11 bases on balls and then turned around and pitched himself out of difficulty by striking out nine, but his best achievement was limiting Skipper Barrett's Bombers to three scattered hits, two of which came in the ninth and included Tarlaglia's circuit blow. Pitcher Freddie Smith went splendidly for the visitors until the Vets broke out in the seventh and it was "Good-bye Mister Smith," who shouldn't feel bad as those Vets are a merciless crew once they open their batting barrages. However, the orchids go to Connie Harris for his splendid spot hurling and now the Vets are in the same position as the Flyers, enjoying a first game win in a best-in-three series. Incidentally the local softball league executive should do something about the markings of the Fair Grounds diamond base lines, as the present condition is even confusing to the officials, to say nothing of the patrons.

WARNINGS THAT OSHAWA has a strong intermediate "A" entry in the O.A.S.A. were issued by Scribe Geo. Campbell, the demon Motor City scribe, recently. Seems the Motor City team known as the Colts embraces such former C.O.B.L. diamond luminaries as Red Jubenville, Hall and Dalton as well as Claus and Opychany, former Oshawa juniors who played here two years ago, included on the line-up. "Preem" Whitely is still firing 'em for the Motor City mushballers, but another up-and-coming hurler is the youthful Al Woods. The Colts are leading the Oshawa "Big Four" loop, only one game afront of the Malleables. According to Scribe Campbell the Motor City clubs play a strong defensive game, which can be substantiated in the fact 2-1 and 3-2 scores were registered recently. All of which reminds us that Nicky Sero is going great guns in the Peterborough City Softball League, the former Point Anne infielder being considered one of the best short infielders in the Liftlock City loop.

ON THE EVE OF THE LADIES softball play-offs at least one manager feels the league schedule was really worth while, even though he did have to wait until the final game to discover he had a pitcher laboring under the guise of a second-sacker all season. It's Leo Barrett, who now knows that "Stewie" Stewart may be more valuable to him on the hilltop than perhaps otherwise, thus giving Toots Sharpe ease in the field to blast extra base hits. Looks as though Chuck Barnett has the edge when it comes to pitchers, however, as he can toss in either "Pee Wee' Colden or the veteran Bessie Doolittle against George Brown's lone mound ace, Miss Fitzgibbon. However, the team to be feared is Tommy Colden's SWACO "eastenders," whose power with the willow has to be respected. The "eastenders" piled up 29 runs against Bristol and came back the next league game to score 33 against Deacons. However, league results can be cast into the discard once the moneyed play-offs loom on the horizon.

"Pee Wee"

IT TOOK THE UNITED efforts of four referees, all of whom materially assisted "Whipper Watson, to assure Jerry Monnahan his wrestling antics were not exactly appreciated in Belleville. Monnahan had manhandled referees Phil Lawson and Cliff Fox in days past and before disrobing Jack Sharkey, the former world heavyweight boxing champion, but last night Al Dunlop coordinated with Watson to finally beat Monnahan in straight falls. "I'll never come to Belleville again," screamed Monnahan. "Every time I try to put on a show and please the fans here I have to beat the referee, my opponent and even the press," he lamented.

Well, we have to admit "Irish Jerry" was a swell drawing card while wearing his mask, but of late Promoter Tunney wanted a way out. He got it last night. Now the fans would like to have Mister Tunney bring in a suitable opponent for Senor Martinez, the six-foot three Mexicano grappler.

REMEMBER WHEN Gertrude Ederele of the United States became the first woman swimmer to conquer the English Channel 16 years ago today? She was in the water 14 hours, 31 minutes. Eight women have performed the feat since then but none received the fame of "Trudy," who was acclaimed on her return to New York as few athletes ever were received.

IF THE YANKEES win the 1942 pennant—and who's willing to bet the don't—Rollie Hemsley will play on his first American League pennant-winner. In his long big league career, beginning with Pittsburgh in 1928, Hemsley has been on only one champion, the Cub National League flag winners of 1932. Oddly enough, Hemsley, then second-stringer to Gabby Hartnett, got into three world's Series games against his present club, the Yankees. He wound up the fourth and final game behind the bat for Hartnett, relieving Gabby in a late inning, and twice was sent up as a pinch-hitter. Rollie failed to punch through a hit all three times.

. . Just about the sorest guy in these parts today is Skipper Archie Green of the ITS "Flyers." It seems Green's No. 5 nine trounced the No. 6 Repair Depot mushballers three times in the district Air Force league, but on the last occasion there arose a dispute as to which team was the home club, as the game arose a dispute as to which team was the home club, as the game was being played at the Trenton Central Air School grounds. After much bickering Green consented to bat first and the game progressed with No. 5 ITS winning 10 to 4, but the game was called in the seventh on account of darkness. Now comes the joker — it seems the Repair Depot heads ganged up on Green and company, protesting the game on the grounds that the local Flyers "purposely delayed the starting of the game. Trenton and Mountain View voted in favour of No. 6 R. D. and the game was ruled "no contest." In the meantime the Kingston Flyers have withdrawn from the Air Force play-offs, which in itself doesn't make Mentor Green and his merry men any happier either.

This and That — While on the subject of softball, Archie Major and the Reliance A. C. are probing into the playing status of several of the No. 5 ITS players as to their O.A.S.A. qualifications. . . . Looks as though the boys are beginning to worry about Green and company all around, but that's what comes when you win too often. . . . FLASH—just heard the Flyer-Repair Depot game is to be replayed this afternoon with the winner advancing to the provincial R.C.A.P. softball semi-finals in Toronto on Saturday. . . . Squd.-Ldr. Lionel Conacher, who is in charge of all R.C.A.F. sports, intimated today that the Air Force may be represented in senior rugby football circles this fall. He didn't say where the squad would be located, however. . . . The Toronto Leafs muffed a chance to advance by dropping two to the Bears last night. . . . Frankie Drews, of the St. Paul Saints, has played forty-three games without committing a bobble. . . . Five of the six wrestlers appearing at the Hume Arena last night are included in Promoter Tunney's Maple Leaf Garden show tonight . . . so it's morphens now!

NO MORE BADMINTON

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 6—(CP)—The Kingston Badminton Club is not going to operate this season as it has been taken over by the Department of Naval Services according to an announcement made yesterday by Hon. Angus MacDonald, Minister of National Defence for Naval Services.

The Badminton Club was formerly a school, and was sold to the Club when found to be unsuitable for school purposes some years ago.

Clubs in Ottawa and other cities have similarly been taken over by the government.

SECOND FRONT DOMINANT NOTE ACROSS EUROPE

Hitler's Anxiety Shown in Feverish Thrusts in South Russia

DUTCH SEE TURN

London, Aug. 6—(CP)—European capitals exhibited growing tension today as official quarters combined with the press and radio to keep the second-front issue a dominant theme.

Broadcasting from London, Premier Pieter S. Gerbrandy of the Dutch government in London told his countrymen in the German-occupied Netherlands last night that the tide of war is turning and urged them to "await with wise patience the moment the call comes from here not only to take a passive but also an active part" in the opening of a new front.

At the same time the Moscow radio declared that "every day brings nearer the time when the agreement signed between Britain and the U.S.S.R. on the urgency of establishing a second front in Europe will be put into effect."

Proof of Nazi Anxiety

Anxiety over the situation, the Russian broadcast said, "is driving the Hitler gangsters to furious and [illegible] efforts in south Russia," where the Nazi armies are making a desperate bid to win control of the vital Caucasian oil fields.

German pre-occupation with the second front issue was reflected in a fresh flood of propaganda from Nazi sources emphasizing the strength of the defences being completed in Western Europe.

Alleged details of these defences also were reported in the Swiss press in a Berlin dispatch written for the Zurich Die Tat by one of a party of neutral journalists permitted to tour the coastal zone under Nazi guidance.

The dispatch told of "mighty fortifications of concrete and iron" extending deep inland. The correspondent said he saw big-gun emplacements, underground airdromes for bombers and fighter planes and supply bases close to the coast.

Stockholm dispatches to Switzerland said the Germans likewise were building extensive defences on the Lofoten islands of northern Norway and were extending mining operations off the Norwegian coast.

The collection was $1.55. The National Anthem closed the meeting after which refreshments prepared by Mrs. Bonter were enjoyed.

Boy Wants One Gallon Gasoline Twice a Year

Worcester, Mass., Aug. 6 (AP)—A formal application for "one gallon of gasoline each six months" has stumped the local ration board. The applicant is Clark Wesson, 12, who has a thimble-sized gasoline engine for operating a model airplane. Conceding that the quantity sought wouldn't interfere with the war effort, Board Chairman Michael J. O'Hara said no machinery existed for authorizing purchases of such small quantities. He has sent a "what to do" message to Washington.

'No Policy Of Treating Italy With Tenderness'

London, Aug. 6—(CP Cable) — Clement Attlee, dominions secretary and deputy prime minister, assured the House of Commons today that "there is no policy of treating Italy with tenderness."

His statement was in reply to the question of Cmdr. Sir Archibald Southby, Conservative, who pointed out that Italy was a supply base for the Axis in North Africa and asked whether Britain would bomb military targets in Rome and elsewhere in view of the enemy bombings of Cairo and Malta.

Cmdr. Southby said the public is unable to understand why Italy is treated with such "tenderness."

Australia Adopts New Simple Styles

Canberra, Australia. — John J. Dedman, Minister of War Organization and Industrial Research, has announced that the government had ordered the simplification of clothing to economize on materials and labor. The manufacture of certain types of garments and the use of non-essential trimmings will be prohibited shortly.

Regulations effectuating this control largely follow the lines of those operatng in the United Kingdom and the United States. The prescribed styles allow designers and manufacturers of women's clothing scope for ingenuity and originality, and afford purchasers individual choice

Men's suits will have single-breasted, two-button roats and cuffless trousers, with the number of pockets limited. Overcoats will be limited to the single-breasted fitted types and the straight box coat.

Women's frocks will conform to "fashions for victory", within the limits of which new styles may be created. Excessive fullness of skirts is banned, and shirring, tucking and pleating are reduced to a minimum. No more than thirty-six square inches of embroidery is allowed on any frock. Evening dresses, cloaks and wraps, bridge coats and dinner gowns may not be manufactured.

Day frocks must not be made with matching jackets and other accessories and buttons and buttonholes must be functional. Only five buttons and two pockets are allowed for women's suits, which cannot be double-breasted. Ski suits, playsuits, divided skirts and riding breeches are banned.

Each manufacturer of women's underwear will be permitted to follow only one pattern for each type of garment, except night dresses and pyjamas, for which two patterns are permitted.

Victory fashions for girls will follow closely those for adults.

Mr. Dedman explained that 113 men's suits would be obtained from the amount of material formerly required for 100. He added that since the war Australia had doubled its production of woollens, but that all extra production, as well as a major portion of normal production, must be diverted to the services.

Prices on 1942 Wool Clip To Be Uniform

Toronto, Aug. 6 (CP) — Prices on the 1942 wool clip will be on a similar basis to all growers by grades irrespective of what time delivery might be made, The Canadian Wool Board Ltd. announced in a statement today.

The statement said there would be no advantage to any grower in Canada withholding his wool in the hope of obtaining a more favorable price later. "Any wools held over until the 1943 clip will be graded as 1942 wools by the grading warehouses," it said.

OTTAWA TENNIS

Ottawa, Aug. 6. (CP)—Gaetan Valois of Ottawa Victoria Tennis Club retained hte Ottawa and District Junior Men's Singles Championship last night with a 6-2, 6-2 victory over Bobby Duford of Ottawa Club.

Ruth Freedman of Tel-Aviv captured the Junior Women's Singles crown by defeating Lise Boivin of Hull, Que., Laurier Club 6-2, 9-7.

Pelley Convicted On Sedition Count

Indianapolis, Aug. 6 (CP)—William Dudley Pelley, convicted on 11 counts of criminal sedition and conspiracy and facing a possible maximum sentence of 220 years in prison, based his hopes for freedom today on a new trial.

A motion for a new trial will be filed within three days, Defence Attorney Floyd Christian said, and if it is denied the case will be appealed promptly to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Chicago.

Pelley, a spruce little man who once headed the Silver Shirts of America, was convicted last night by a Federal Court jury which also convicted two business associates, Lawrence A. Brown and Miss Agnes Marian Henderson. Brown and Miss Henderson were convicted of one count of conspiracy to commit sedition.

The three were officers of the Fellowship Press, a publishing house at Noblesville, Ind., where Pelley's magazine, The Galilean, was printed once a week. The government charged statements in The Galilean were made "wilfully to cause or attempt to cause insubordination, disloyalty, mutiny and refusal of duty (in United States military forces), and also to obstruct recruiting."

Pelley did not appear to be ruffled when the jury returned its verdict after three hours and 15 minutes of deliberation, although he faces possible sentences of 20 years, plus $10,000 fines, on each of the 11 counts.

DON'T MISTAKE LETTERED COUPONS FOR SUGAR COUPONS

Ottawa, Aug. 6 —(CP)— Lettered coupons required for the purchase of tea and coffee cannot be replaced if they are erroneously removed from a ration card in the purchase of sugar, it was announced today by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

The Board said reports had been received that, in isolated cases, lettered coupons instead of numbered coupons had been removed from the cards in the buying of sugar.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Remember Pearl Harbor"

"Remember Pearl Harbor" is a timely new Republic picture, opening at McCarthy Theatre, a thrilling and absorbing screen attraction.

A stirring tribute to those heroes who defend our far-flung frontiers, the film—the story of which is, of course, entirely fictional — deals with the exploits of a group of soldiers who fight brilliantly and bravely in defence of the Phillipines against the Japanese aggressors.

Personable Donald M. Barry has one of his best roles to date as fun-loving Private "Lucky" Smith, who refuses to take army life seriously until the time of the attack, then distinguishes himself by his valorous conduct in battle. He is ably seconded by Alan Curtis and Maynard Holmes, who are seen as the pals who stick by him through thick and thin.

The Second Feature

Columbia's "Confessions of Boston Blackie", which features Chester Morris and Harriet Hilliard at the McCarthy Theatre, ends its sensational run there tomorrow. Second in a series of screen mysteries based upon the fabulous exploits of fiction's smoothest rogue, "Confessions of Boston Blackie" was directed by Edward Dmytryk.

Tonight's Foto-nite offers amount to $325.00.

AT THE BELLE

"Moontide"

A screen event of major importance is now evident on the Belle theatre screen where Jean Gabin, the great French star, makes his American film debut in 20th Century-Fox's "Moontide" the stirring story of life along the Pacific waterfront, adapted from the best-selling novel of Willard Robertson.

Gabin, who in recent years has been recognized as the greatest star of French films, gives a performance which is said to outshine any of his previous characterizations in a part which is tailor-made for his virile type of acting. It is a credit to his studio that "Moontide" was picked as the vehicle to best introduce Gabin to the great mass of American moviegoers.

For a co-star, Ida Lupino was chosen. It was felt she could best complement Gabin's realistic and powerful role in the film. Thomas Mitchell and Claude Rains, two of Hollywood's outstanding actors, were added to the cast, and John O'Hara, the famous novelist was assigned to the adaptation of the story.

Archie Mayo, noted for his handling of many of filmdom's outstanding performers, was chosen to direct the film. The entire production was placed in the hands of Producer Mark Hellinger.

According to preview critics, the transition from French to American films, has, for Gabin, been a remarkably successful one. In short, "Moontide" is a screen event which every moviegoer should experience. A visit to the Belle theatre tonight or Friday looks like a 'must" on everybody's entertainment list.

"Sunday Punch"

A thrilling prize fight, a zestful romance, and the by-play of a cast of well-known comedians provide mirth and heart interest as well as drama in "Sunday Punch" the companion feature attraction.

The action opens in a New York boarding house for prize fighters. One of the group is the title contender, played by William Lundigan. Blonde Jean Rogers enters as the landlady's niece. Lundigan is smitten by her charms, as is also the man-of-all-work about the place, cleverly portrayed by Dan Dailey, Jr. Dailey decides he'll have a chance to win her if he becomes a fighter. Guy Kibbee, as a broken-down fight manager, discovers that Dailey has a "Sunday punch," or peculiar "haymaker," books him for a series of fights, and Dailey proves terrific.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Gene Autry"

The flashing of Gene Autry's name on a movie marquee is usually sufficient guarantee for this reviewer of an evening's top entertainment.

Republic's singing cowboy now showing at the Capitol Theatre in his latest western drama, "Home in Wyomin'" and yesterday's preview revealed thrills, action and songs galore, moving swiftly and entrancingly along a rodeo backbackground.

"Home in Wyomin'" more than adequately maintains Republic's Autry standards, and is herewith heartily endorsed for every movie fan in town.

Gene is cast as a radio star who, with his pal Frog Millhouse and the latter's kid brother, "Tadpole", journeys westward to bring the rodeo owned by his boyhood chum out of the doldrums.

When a dastardly murder is committed, Gene turns sleuth, and thus is inaugurated a brand new phase of cowboy entertainment—the western murder mystery.

"Charlie Chaplin"

A great deal is heard these days of the elaborate preparations used in readying a motion picture—the purchase of the story, the assignment of one or more writers, drawing up of the scenario, filling in of dialogue by other writers, etc.

Things were done quite differently, and very much more lightheartedly, by Charlie Chaplin when he produced the famous comedies now being seen at the Capitol Theatre as "The Charlie Chaplin Festival," streamlined in a modern version with new sound and music. For Chaplin, believe it or not, didn't use a script!

The outline of scenes used in these hilarious Chaplin pictures, "The Immigrant," "The Adventurer", "The Cure" and "Easy Street" was literally written "on the cuff." Charlie, who produced and directed them himself, started out in each case with an idea and a cast. The situations and comedy gags arose out of the characters and the goofy complications in which they immediately found themselves, and these situations were adopted into the plot.

A colored cartoon and the final chapter of "Dick Tracy vs. Crime Inc." completes another grand entertaining week and bill.

CHAPTER 27

Alarming News

At eleven o'clock the party with Ronnie and his friends rallied. Night life took on a new zest. People began to pour in from the theatres. The two young women for whom Kay practically had ceased to exist went to the powder room. They remained so long that Kay thought they must have taken French Leave, gone on to bigger and better playgrounds. She whispered as much to Ronnie; adding that she, too, must be on her way shortly.

"They'll be back," he said. "They are shining up for the shank of the evening. They belong to the fun-begins-at-midnight set. Anything going on before twelve to them is merely marking time."

Just when their escorts, immured as they were to such vagaries, began to show impatience the young women returned to the table. Ronnie's prediction was right. They were fresh and shining as though they had this minute stepped from a beauty salon, smooth as silk and brittle as glass.

"I thought you'd given me the gate," one young man said to the girl who had been befogged or belligerent all evening.

"Why darling!" she gave him her most radiant smile. "How perfectly putrid of you. And what an idea to have about me—you of all people!"

"Never mind the chi-chi," the young man said, sullenly. "I threw my teething ring away day before yesterday."

The young woman shrugged shoulders.

"Beast," she said. Her eyes roved the room, questing.

Kay was glad to step from the glitter of it all into the open air. Somehow her presence had been a clashing note in the party, no matter how anxiously she sought to adjust herself to its tempo. Surely she had not changed so much in the little while since parties had become an avocation, not the main purpose of her life. Yet these glossy young women resented her. They had received her adieus with outward indifference, but she was sure, with inner satisfaction.

"Why so silent?" Ronnie asked when they were in a taxi. "Want to change your mind and go back to the business of the evening?"

"Oh, no" she said so eagerly that Ronnie laughed, not too happily.

"It was pretty much of a dirge," he said. "Sorry."

"But Ronnie, it wasn't. That's what worries me. I seemed to be all out of tune. They didn't like me."

"The men liked you plenty. The gals—well—no use mincing matters they'd have liked to give you the boot. In the first place you were the best-looking number in the place. Maybe they wore the clothes but you made them look like overdressed dolls. You made them sound phoney too. Not what you said, but because you're you. You were putting on Red Kenyon, not an act. You're a menace to their way of life. They were out to clip you."

Kay said, "Thanks, Ronnie. I hope you're right in the first place, wrong in the second. Every girl wants to look as well or better than every other girl. That's our feminine nature. But no girl wants to be a target for suspicion of her sex. She doesn't want to arouse other women's antagonism. A real woman has as many friends and admirers among women as she has among men. That's what worries me, Ron. At home there was Tally and Eunice, even Elsa, my own cousin . . . they resented me, at times actually hated me. And now tonight, two young women, strangers . . ."

"Oh ho!" Ronnie said. "So you pick out the soreheads, lump them together and wonder what you do to get them that way. Don't you know, Red, that every time a human being sticks his head up above the mediocre the soreheads who have to look up take pot shots at him? Or at her? Tally and Eunice and Elsa. There's a trio of hell-cats for you. They not only hate you, they hate themselves. They hate you for your superiority. They hate themselves for their inferiority. For every one of them you have dozens of loyal friends in Somerset who give you their sincere affection and their hearty applause. Forget the meows. Keep your eyes on the cheering section."

"I believe you're right." Kay had never felt as close to Ronnie as she did tonight. "I needed bucking up. You've done a grand job of it, chum."

"Good. Then file my application for permanent bucker-upper. I crave to sign for the duration of our natural lives."

Kay was relieved to find the taxi drawing to the curb in front of her hotel. A serious Ronnie disarmed her. She was in no mood to consider the suit of any man. Any man? She pushed away the question mark. This was no time for emotional conjecture. She had work to do. This first. Later . . . but that was for some tomorrow. Sufficient unto the day . . .

"Ronnie," Kay said, "you're a swell person."

She put up her lips for a fleeting kiss. Ronnie was so astounded that Kay had gone before he could recover. It was the first time she had permitted him to kiss her. She was not a girl who gives or takes kisses lightly.

x x x

The usual hum vibrated through the office of National Candies when Kay entered in the morning.

Ed Ellis met her with "We're having kettle trouble, Miss Kenyon. Nu-Novelties say they can't have those miniature iron kettles ready a day earlier than two weeks. They've got to be cast."

"But the contract said ten days." Kay opened her desk. "The order was predicated on that clause."

"I know. I told 'em we'd hold 'em to. the contract. They say it's impossible to deliver in that time. The boss is having pups."

"I don't blame him. They should not have promised if they can't deliver. How many days extension do they say they need?"

"Four. The say they can't make it a day earlier."

"Four days". Kay might have been saying, "four centuries." Her brow was furrowed, her eyes stormy. "But this display is due to be shown the twenty-fourth. We can't release it unless we have the kettles on schedule. That would mean a week's delay for us."

"At least. That's what the boss is yelling about."

Kay said, her lips tight, "I'll talk with Mr. Nu. We must have the kettles on the dot agreed for delivery. I'll go into one of the phone booths." She was conscious of office eyes, watching her narrowly.

In a few minutes she was back, stern but no longer stormy.

"We'll get them," she said, "on the date stipulated in the contract."

"Well I'll be darned!" Ed Ellis scratched his damp brow. "How did you do it?"

"I contacted the man who is handling our order. He's a good sort, remember? Sort of fatherly. I explained to him how much this order meant to me . . . it might mean my job. I used the feminine approach, practically threw myself on his mercy. Don't look at me that way Mr. Ellis. I know what I did isn't cricket. But it's the truth. You know Mr. Burge. He dislikes women in his department. Such a let down might mean a two weeks' notice in my pay envelope. That can't happen. I've got to go on earning. Heaven knows when or where I'd find another position. It isn't as though I were a skilled worker. I'm only an amateur, who has had a great lot of luck."

Ellis grinned. He said, "If you're an amateur, I'm an egg that has not hatched."

Kay sat down at her desk, prepared to swing into the day's routine. Mr. Burge was out of the office. She would tell him the kettle matter had been adjusted as soon as he returned.

The telephone on her desk buzzed.

"National Candy. Miss Kenyon speaking."

A woman's voice said, "Miss Kenyon, this is your hotel. A telegram just arrived for you. An immediate answer is requested. The boy is waiting. What would you like us to do?"

Somerset. Her mother. "Read it to me please." Her voice was far away. She gripped the receiver to keep it from clattering on her desk. The woman read:

"Come home at once. Your mother in bad shape. Wire reply. Hurry."

"Cora Kenyon".

Little Benny's Note Book

I got a letter from Glasses Magee up in the mountains today, saying in it, Dear Benny, I'm sorry you're still suffering from the heat down there, although I wouldn't know it if we didn't happen to get the newspapers up here. I need blankets every night and believe me they feel swell. I guess if I wasn't so good hearted I'd have to laugh at the idea of you fellows boiling and broiling down there. I told you I was going to catch mountain trout up here, and that's just what I been doing. I'm sorry I cant send you a picture of me holding some up, but the fish were too big for my little camera. Boy were those fish big! The dining room in the hotel is one of the biggest rooms you ever saw, and it's got to be to hold all the different kinds of swell food. There's a different menu card every day with the date on it to prove how fresh it is. Oh boy is that some size of a menu card! There's enough desserts on it alone to make you dizzy if you try to read them too fast, and I can order as many different kinds as I have room for, or even as I haven't got room for. Well, dont feel too bad, the heat cant last forever and I guess you're still getting enough to eat, even if it is always the same things. Your friend Glasses Magee.

Being a pretty insulting letter, and I wrote him one back, saying:

Dear Glasses, Cheer up, you'll be home soon, although it may be too late for you to sleep without any covers or anything else on and get the pure air all over you instead of having to shut it out with a lot of other peoples old blankets. Personaly I dont like fish and even look the other way from it in a fish store. It seems like a dirty trick giving you so many different kinds of food you cant eat dessert with a clear conscience. I pity you stuck away up there where you cant see the big Skinny Martin Lucky Leroy Shooster fight when it comes off, looking like any day now. Your friend Benny Potts.

ICELANDIC LIGHTHOUSE ATTACKED

Reykjavik, Iceland, Aug. 6 (AP) —German planes have attacked a lighthouse on tiny Grimsey Island a half-mile off Holmavik on the northeast coast of Iceland, United States army authorities announced Wednesday.

The lighthouse is operated entirely by Icelanders in a region known as "The Claw."

The army announced Monday that a lone German raider bombed and machine-gunned a military installation on the southeast coast of Iceland. There were no casualties or damage.

That was the fifth instance of German aerial activity over Iceland.

Hog Quotations

Toronto, Aug 6. — (CP)— Bacon-hog quotations were changed from delivered basis to plus transportation at Stratford and prices were unchanged at other markets reporting early today.

Liveweight Chatham $10.75.

Dressedweight: Barrie $15.75, Brantford $15.60 plus transportation, Hamilton $15.75 delivered, Hull $15.50 plus transportation, Peterborough $15.65 plus transportation, Stratford $15.50 plus transportation.

The previous quotation, Aug. 1, from Stratford was $15.75 delivered. Yesterday's quotation at Peterborough was erroneously given as $15.45 plus transportation, but prices there were 20 cents up yesterday from Tuesday at $15.65 plus the same as today.

Operations of Wartime Food Corp. in Cattle Trade Are Explained

Toronto, Aug. 6. (CP)—Operations of the Wartime Food Corporation in cattle trade on the Livestock Market here, to prevent excessive export of Canadian cattle, were explained today by the Dominion Marketing Service.

The corporation maintains an appraiser at the market who determines the value of the cattle in the United States market and sets the price. The corporation may then resell the cattle to the highest bidder in the local market.

Prices set far cattle today by the corporatoin were announced as follows:

Weighty steers $11.40 to $13.20, butcher steers $11 to $11.50, butcher heifers $9.50 to $11.50, cows $8 to $9.50, bulls $9.50 to $11.

At the finish of trade on the market yesterday 1,800 head of cattle remained unsold and most of this supply was consigned to the corporation.

Producers are not forced to sell cattle to the corporation but if any of their stock meets the corporation standards they may obtain the prices set.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 6. —(CP)—Stock prices held steady in the early hours today. Bell Telephone weakened a point to 124 and prices were higher for Distillers Seagrams, Ford A and Canada Steamships Pfd.

Dome, Hollinger, and Kirkland Lake were stronger Gold issues while moderate declines were boarded by Kerr-Addison, San Antonio, MacLeod-Cockshutt and O'Brien.

Steep Rock traded in quite heavy volume with the price swinging between 1.20 and 1.24, down slightly for the day. Smelters lost 1-4 to 33 1-2.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 6 (AP)—Selected stocks got a finger-hold on recovery today but market leaders generally were unable to grasp advancing trends.

Minor fractional variations either way were the rule. Numerous issues were unchanged.

Occasional plus marks were shown by shares of U.S. Steel, Great Northern, Phelps Dodge, Texas Co., General Motors, U.S. Gypsum and International Harvester. In the wavering class were Anaconda, Standard Oil (NJ), American Telephone, Du Pont, Sears Roebuck and Owens-Illinois.

Several Canadian stocks made fractional gains. Dome Mines and Distillers Seagram climbed 1-4 and Hiram Walker 1-2. Lake Shore Mines lost 1-8 while McIntyre was unchanged.

Livestock

Toronto, Aug. 6 —(CP)— Cattle trade was fairly active up to mid-session on the livestock market here today. Veal calves, lambs and hogs were steady. No sheep were offered. Unsold from yesterday was 450 head of cattle.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service were: Cattle 520, calves 35, hogs 125, lambs 55.

Weighty steers sold at $10.25 with one load at $10.50, butcher heifers $10.10, stockers $7.50-$9.50.

Prices paid by the Wartime Food Corporation for cattle meeting their standards were: Steers $10.75-$12.25, heifers $9.50-$11.50, cows, $8-$9.50 and bulls $10-$11.50.

Veal calves traded at 14.50 downward.

Lambs sold at $14 for good ewes and wethers.

Hogs brought $16.10 dressedweight and sows $12.50 dressed.

Time Magazine Praises Canadians And Their General

New York, Aug. 6—(CP) — Time magazine today devoted two pages to an enthusiastic review of the Canadian army in Britain and its cover to a picture of the army's commander, Lt.-Col. Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton.

"Canadians are going into battle again," says the magazine. "When and where is one facet of the Greatest Secret. But the news that Canadians will be in the vanguard of invasion is freshening and heartening to a world which needs good news."

"Canadians in England no longer feel that they are garrison troops," Time continues. "They know, with their commander, that they are going places. The public got its first inkling of this change with the news that Canadians were training for amphibious invasion on a huge scale. . . ."

(Ross Munro, Canadian Press war correspondent, was the only newspaperman with the Canadians on their recent large-scale amphibious manoeuvre. His despatches were the basis of much of Time's factual material).

"And now that the one-time Canadian Corps in England has the status of an army, McNaughton is soon to become a full General Then, as never before, Canadians will argue that he ought to be the supreme allied commander in Europe. . . .

"McNaughton is not one to fret about the supreme commmand, whether it falls to him, to the U S Army's Gen. George C. Marshall or to any one of several others The Canadians are enough for McNaughton."

Great Lakes, Grave of Thousands Of Ships, Begin to Yield Salvage

By DAVID J. WILKIE
Associated Press Staff Writer

DETROIT, Aug. 6 — (AP) —The Great Lakes, which have claimed thousands of ships and an untold number of lives since LaSalle sailed his "Le Griffen" from Niagara to Green Bay and to her doom in 1680, have begun to contribute to the war production effort of 1942.

Searching out scrap metal essential to the uninterrupted operation of United States steel mills, the special projects salvage section of the war production board is giving impetus to salvage operations on all the wrecks that can be raised.

Thomas Little, director of the salvage section, and William J. Spicer, his assistant, saw the first of the old ships, victims of wind, explosions or other mishap, brought to the scrap pile here recently. It was the twisted hull of the oil tanker J. Oswald Boyd which foundered in Upper Lake Michigan in 1936 while carrying a cargo of more than 900,000 gallons of gasoline.

1,200 Tons Expected in Salvage

Out of the ship the Great Lakes Steel Corporation expects to reclaim more than 1,200 tons of metal. The scrap metal brings $17 a ton.

The entire shipwreck salvaging project is expected by experts of the war production board to yield upwards of 30,000 tons of scrap metal within the next two years. Before winter closes navigation, salvage experts hope to bring up several craft lost off desolate Keweenaw point in Lake Superior during the last decade and more.

One of these is the steel-hulled 438-foot City of Bangor which went down Nov. 30, while carrying a cargo of automobiles.

One of the richest cargoes ever to go down in a lake mishap was in the hold of the steamship Pewabic, which had 300 tons of copper and other valuable material aboard when it sank August 9, 865, following a collision with the steamship Meteor, off Thunder Bay, Lake Huron. The crash carried 125 persons to death. Many attempts at salvaging have been made but lying in about 200 feet of water the Pewabic is not easily accessible.

Copper Salvaged in 1918

One salvaging operation in 1918 brought up 72 tons of the copper but the cost of the undertaking was too great to justify it, and the W. P. B. salvage experts aren't thinking seriously now of attempting to recover the cargo.

Among the ships salvage experts believe may be brought up and reconditioned for the service are the Canadian Steamship Novadoc, a 253 foot pulp wood carrier, and the 360 foot sand boat Material Service.

The Novadoc went down in Lake Michigan, off Pentwater, Mich., in the storm of Armistice Day, 1940, after breaking in two. The Material Service carried 15 men to death when it sank in a storm off Chicago, July 29, 1936.

War Savings Certificates Now Offered For Sale by Banks, Post Offices

Ottawa, Aug. 6 (Special to The Ontario Intelligencer)—War Savings Certificates go on sale today over the counters of all chartered bank branches and post offices throughout Canada in denominations of $5, $10 and $25.

For the first time, citizens will be able to put down their money and receive a registered Certificate without going through the process of mailing the money or War Savings Stamps to Ottawa and then wait for receipt of the Certificate.

Under the new, over-the-counter plan where sales are made for cash in the $5, $10 and $25 denominations, the chartered banks and the post offices will henceforth make delivery of the Certificates themselves, sending appropriate records to Ottawa.

The new departure does not conflict in any way with, but is in addition to, the system of bank pledges and the payroll savings' plan. These not only continue but will be intensified as major operations of The National War Finance Committee in enlisting the savings of the population to help finance Canada's huge share of war costs.

From now on the staff of the branch postmasters and the bank branch managers will be added as an important section of the voluntary sales staff for War Savings Certificates from Coast to Coast.

THE WAR TODAY

By DON GILBERT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The first open criticism of Gen. Douglas MacArthur's direction of the defence of Australia has been made by the veteran William M. Hughes, who was prime minister of the commonwealth during the First Great War. He asks why the Japanese have been allowed to occupy Buna and Gona in New Guinea practically without opposition when strong air forces were presumably available in Port Moresby 120 miles away.

Prime Minister John Curtin was quick to come to Gen. MacArthur's defence, declaring that the high command in the southwest Pacific was influenced neither by "unwillingness nor incompetence." He pointed to repeated conference between the Australian government and Gen. MacArthur on every aspect of the war as it affects Australia.

Gen. Sir Thomas Blamey, commander-in-chief of land forces under Gen. MacArthur, also defended allied operations in New Guinea, declaring that topographical considerations had been against the united nations forces in preventing the Japanese incursion along the Papuan peninsula.

An allied military spokesman in Australia at the same time replied to Mr. Hughes with a statement that the Buna-Gona area could not have been defended without exposing allied troops to unwarranted sacrifices. Anyway, he contended, no special danger is involved in the New Japanese thrust.

Mr. Hughes sees things differently. He finds, contrary to the military spokesman, that Buna and Gona are of strategic importance. He believes the occupation of the area has improved. the Japanese position in New Guinea immeasurably, giving them a foothold on the flank of Port Moresby, the main Allied base on the huge island northeast of the Australian mainland. He estimates that the enemy is now within 30 minutes flying time of the Allied base.

The former prime minister, now deputy leader of the opposition, contends that the Japanese invasion force which moved down the coast from previously established footholds on the island could have been scattered by bombs and machine-gun fire from the air forces based at Port Moresby.

"It is difficult to understand why the Japanese were allowed to occupy these strategic points without opposition," he declared. "Did those controlling our military defences not know that Buna and Gona were strategically valuable? If they did know, why did they not occupy and defend them? Were they not warned by reconnaissance planes that the enemy convoy was approaching. When they were informed of the enemy landing why did they not immediately concentrate an air force overwhelmingly strong? . . .

"The more we consider all that is involved — the menace to Moresby and South Australia — the more baffling and disturbing the problem becomes."

For Eczema— Skin Troubles

Make up your mind today that you are going to give your skin a real chance to get well. Go to Doyle's Drug Store, or any good drug store and get an original bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil—it lasts many days because it is highly concentrated.

The very first application will give you relief—the itching of Eczema is quickly stopped—eruptions dry up and scale off in a very few days. The same is true of Itching Toes and Feet, Barber's Itch, Salt Rheum and other skin troubles.

Remember that Moone's Emerald Oil is a clean, powerful, penetrating Antiseptic Oil that does not stain or leave a greasy residue. Complete satisfaction or money back.

NOW'S THE TIME TO BUY YOUR COAL!
"Fill that coal bin now!" says the government

"Get all the winter coal you're going to need—and get it NOW," is the urgent request of the government. Protect your family from the serious consequences of the possible shortage next winter!

There is a simple way to buy all the coal you need—to buy for cash and take advantage of low coal cash prices. A special plan now lets you have all the cash you need and repay the cost in small monthly instalments at a very small net charge per ton. For instance, a $100 loan can be repaid for as little as $7.78 per month.

You get four other important advantages by taking prompt advantage of this new plan. 1. Complete privacy in making all arrangements. 2. No co-signers or endorsers required. 3. 15 full months in which to repay. 4. No guarantee of your loan by your coal dealer or any outside source. And the first payment will not be due for thirty days.

Learn all about this budget plan for coal users. Phone or visit Household Finance Corporation of Canada, 177 Charlotte Street, Peterborough. Phone 5841.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, FRIDAY, AUGUST 7, 1942

NAZIS CHECKED ON WHOLE STALINGRAD FRONT
REPORT ALLIES WILL CONFER IN MOSCOW

Newly Reinforced Defences Hold Firm Against Enemy

One of Greatest Tank Battles Of War Being Fought At Present Time

HUNS ROLLED BACK

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Aug. 7 (AP)—Hurling its own huge tanks against the mechanised Nazi onrush, the Red army checked the Germans today along the whole Stalingrad front in one of the great tank battles of the war, with infantry crushed by the hundreds under the treads of the steel war wagons, battle-front dispatches said today.

Only in the critical Belaya Glina sector 100 miles into the North Caucasus were the Russian defences still reported sagging before the big Axis offensives. Their dive bombers blasted ceaselessly at the Russian lines as they battered the way for German gains.

The Russians reported rolling the Nazis back in hard counter-attacks at the Don Bend approaches to Stalingrad, and said fierce-charging Don and Kuban Cossacks sabred more than 3,000 Germans as they beat off the assault of two tank and two infantry divisions in a fight for a Cossack town south of the Don. Reports from this front said the Russians were driven from the town twice, but each time won it back.

(The German high command took significant cognizance of the arrival of Red Army reserves in the battle, mentioned large-scale Russian use of tanks in the Caucasus for the first time and said the bolstered Soviet forces were counter-attacking against German and Rumanian troops between the Sal and Don rivers, in the Don bend, and in the Rzhev Salient, northwest of Moscow.

(The Germas said they had thrown large air forces into a heavy defence in the Rzhev area, indicating that the scale of the Russian attacks there was considerable.

(The Berlin communique said Axis forces had penetrated deeper into the Caucasus, driving across the Kuban river to a point 30 miles northeast of the Maikop oil fields which produce seven per cent of Russia's oil.)

The Russian communique gave this account of operations at key points on the battlefront:

"South of Kletskaya (80 miles northwest of Stalingrad) our troops launched a number of counter-attacks and pressed the enemy back. . . .

Tank Attacks Repelled

"In the Kotelnikovski area (95 miles southwest of Stalingrad) the Germans are sending in large numbers of tanks in an attempt to smash our defences. Our troops have repelled these attacks. . . .

"South of Kushchevka (50 miles south of Rostov) the Germans launched repeated attacks against our positions but were repulsed with heavy losses."

The Germans were reported landing troop-laden air transports and dropping fresh swarms of parachutists behind Soviet lines in a costly expenditure of men and machines.

In the first officially reported big scale attempt to put airborne troops down in the rear of Soviet positions on the Caucasus battlefront, the Russians said nine of the 10 big Junkers transports which landed in one sector were set afire or smashed and the soldiers accounted for to the last man.

Warfront dispatches said the Nazis were showering more parachutists behind Soviet lines after landing groups of between 100 and 150 along with small tanks earlier in the week. The latest invaders were declared exterminated or swiftly rounded up.

The increasing Nazi use of aerial troops was disclosed as tank-paced enemy spearheads drove deeper into the North Caucasus below Rostov and edged closer to Stalingrad from the southwest.

The Soviet noon communique said fighting continued without let-up through the night in the four main theatres of action.

U. S. Bombers Destroy 10 Jap Planes on Ground

Chungking, Aug. 7 (AP)—United States army bombers attacked a Japanese airdrome near Canton yesterday destroying at least 10 grounded enemy planes, Lt.-Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters announced today.

"The Japanese were taken completely by surprise," a communique said.

Besides the destruction of grounded Japanese planes, the bombers scored hits on the airdrome runway, it said.

All of the American planes, including bombers and fighter escort, returned safely.

CHINESE ARMY IN TRAINING

London, Aug. 7 — (CP) — BBC today reported a Chinese army, composed largely of veterans of the war against the Japanese, is being trained in India in the use of the Allies' latest weapons.

The assembly of this force has been made possible by an organization acting as liaison among the Chinese, Indians and Americans.

17 NAZI PLANES etc K-

Moscow, Aug. 7 — (AP) — The army newspaper Red Star said today that 7 German planes were destroyed in two Russian bomber raids on a camouflaged Nazi air base in Northern Finland. None of the Russian planes was reporied lost.

CONSTABLE SUFFERS BROKEN RIGHT ARM

Campbellford, Ont., Aug. 7 (CP)—Despite the fact that he suffered a broken right arm during a scuffle while rounding up two drunks in Hastings village Thursday night, Constable William Wellman succeeded in holding one of the men until provincial constable Donald Carruthers came to the rescue.

Kenneth Kensley of Trenton and Nicholas Parcels of Campbellford are in jail, charged with creating a disturbance and assaulting police. Both were taken to Cobourg pending trial.

Constable Wellman is receiving treatment in Peterborough hospital.

LT. COL. MCQUEEN 2ND IN COMMAND OF NEW FORCE

Ralston Announces Some of the Training Will Be Carried out In Canada

HIGHLY MOBILE

Ottawa, Aug. 7 (CP)—Canada and the United States, drawn ever closer together by the necessities of war, today were embarked on a new joint project—creation of a hard-hitting super-commando force for offensive warfare.

Announcement of the new venture, already under way at Helena, Mont., where training will be centred came from Washington. But a short time later Defence Minister Ralston gave confirmation and told a bit more about the Canadian share in the project:

The second-in-command at Helena will be Lt.-Col. J. G. McQueen of Calgary who has just returned from overseas. Some of the training will be carried out in Canada.

Force of Experts

Known as the "1st Special Service Force," the new super-commandos will be experts in all forms of offensive warfare; parachute attacks, marine landings, mountain fighting and desert warfare.

At Canadian army headquarters overseas the force is viewed as an outfit resembling the 1st Canadian Corps, the units of which are rated to top shock troops in Britain.

The first Canadian troops assigned to the new special service force have already arrived at Helena, Col. Ralston's announcement said. But while they left the Dominion as Canadian fighting men it is understood here that the force will have no special Canadian or United States wing or section.

Canadian and United States forces have co-operated since early in the war in defence of North America but they have operated as separate forces. The new combined force, which will be commanded by Col. Robert T. Frederick of the United States army, is considered a new departure in international co-operation.

Even when Canadians fight with British troops they keep their distinctive Canadian establishment, instead of merking it with the British as in the new super-commando force.

Americans and Canadians will wear identical uniforms of a distinctive pattern, but the design has not been decided upon yet, it was said at National Defence Headquarters here.

There has been no formal announcement what duties the super-commandos are likely to perform, or where.

The highly-specialized force will be highly mobile and can be moved speedily to any point where it is needed. It might be called upon to strike at any invader who managed to establish a foothold on this continent, or to form the spearhead of an invasion of enemy territory.

There were suggestions that some day, when the right time came, it might be ordered to move against the Japanese outposts established in the outer Aleutian Islands.

FARM CHIEF FARMS

London—(CP)—Agriculture Minister Hudson is going into agriculture himself in a considerable way, having purchased Manor Farm in Wiltshire, a property, 900 acres, formerly owned by George Odium, a Canadian.

Review Not Yet Completed by F.D.R. Of Evidence Over Alleged Saboteurs

Washington, Aug. 7 (AP)—President Roosevelt told a press conference today he had not yet finished his review of testimony in the case of eight alleged Nazi saboteurs and added that he did not know whether he would finish today.

The President made no amplification of that brief statement.

Shortly before the press conference, the White House said that "the President has not yet concluded his reading of the testimony" in the saboteur case.

This statement was read to reporters by William D. Hassett, an assistant Secretary, in response to inquiries about reports that Mr. Roosevelt had decreed death for six and clemency for two Nazi agents tried by a military tribunal on charges that they came to this country to sabotage vital war activities.

Mr. Roosevelt had disclosed Tuesday that he expected to spend at least two or three days reviewing the evidence and findings of the military trial commission. He is the sole reviewing authority who will pass on the commission's sentence.

White House officials declined to amplify the brief statement by Hassett which said:-

"The President has not yet concluded his reading of the testimony in the saboteur case."

U. S. Approves Construction Of 500 "Mars" Flying Boats

Washington, Aug. 7.— (AP) — Chairman Donald M. Nelson said today the War Production Board had approved construction by Henry J. Kaiser, West Coast shipbuilder, of 500 huge "Mars"-type flying boats, with an initial order for 100 to be placed by the United Navy shortly.

The other 400 70-ton carrying planes will be built, Nelson said, if the initial program is accomplished successfully in Kaiser's Pacific coast shipbuilding plants.

"This is all contingent upon the construction not interfering with our combat plane program," Nelson added.

Asked whether the W.P.B. believed it could be done without hampering war plane production he replied:—

"I have hopes—at least we can try".

Nelson said Kaiser, now in Washington, would go to the coast and then "come back and tell us what materials and facilities he needs, when he can get started, and where he will build them"".

Other W.P.B. officials said they believed Kaiser planned to construct the big sky freighters at Richmond, Calif., on San Francisco Bay.

Nelson said no other builder would participate in the program under present plans.

AXIS E-BOATS HIT IN AIR ATTACK ON MATRUH PORT

Bombs Fall Squarely In Centre of Seventeen Boats Concentrated In Outer Harbor

ALL PLANES SAFE

(By LARRY ALLEN)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

With the Royal Naval Air Force in the Egyptian Desert, Aug. 7—(AP)— Royal Navy bombers blasted a concentration of Axis motor torpedo boats and barges in the outer harbor of Matruh early yesterday.

Pilots reported sticks of bombs fell squarely amid 10 or 12 torpedo boats and five "E-boats" or barges which they spotted while still "fairly close together."

They said the vessels sent up a large number of multi-colored flares so that full results of the attack were difficult to determine, but they knew definitely that one barge was set afire and a big blaze was started on a quayside.

"Axis shore bases threw up heavy anti-aircraft fire but all planes returned safely from the half-hour raid, which began at 3 a.m.

One pilot said the fact that bombs fell amid the flotilla made it likely that several boats and barges were destroyed by the blasts.

The boats apparently were being used to escort oil barges into Matruh for the Axis army.

VOTES TO APPEAL TO ROOSEVELT, CHIANG; MAISKY

Working Committee of All-India Congress Party Would Ask Support to Demands for Independence

GANDHI QUESTIONED

By PRESTON GROVER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Bombay, Aug. 7 (AP)—The working committee of the All-Indian Congress party voted today to appeal to President Roosevelt, Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek and Ivan Maisky, Russian Ambassadors to Britain, to support its demands that Great Britain grant India immediate independence.

Maulana Abul Kazan Azad, President of the Congress, was authorized to dispatch the appeals as soon as the Congress Committee passes upon a resolution calling for a mass campaign of passive resistance to continued British rule.

Endorsement of the resolution backed by Gandhi, was regarded as a foregone conclusion.

Gandhi himself sent a message to the Chinese today to "let China know that this struggle is as much for her defence as it is for India's liberation." He declared that India's "ability to give effective assistance" is dependent on her freedom.

Deliberate Under Canvas Tent

Under a canvas tent, the 360 militant committeemen assembled to begin India's grimmest bid for independence.

THREE CANADIAN SQUADRONS JOIN IN DUISBURG RAID

Fourth Attack in Six Nights Made on Centre at Junction of Rhine and Ruhr

NAZIS OVER BRITAIN

London, Aug. 7—(CP)—A strong force of R.A.F. - R.C.A.F. bombers last night attacked the big German industrial centre of Duisburg, target of repeated raids in July, and other points in the Ruhr valley, the air ministry announced today.

Three Canadian squadrons participated.

Nazi airdromes in the low countries also were attacked by British raiders, six of which failed to return from their night missions, a communique said.

The size of the strong force was not disclosed officially but a British source said that in the days before the 1,000-bomber raids, last night's total would have been considered "a whooper."

Duisburg, an important communications centre at the junction of the Ruhr and Rhine rivers as well as the site of many vital war industries, was last bombed by the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. on the night of July 25—the fourth attack of the city in six nights.

Last night's foray was the third successive night assault upon the Ruhr region.

PRAISES CANADA'S NAVY

London, Aug. 7 —(CP)— A. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, told a London audience today that the Canadian Government "may very well be proud of the part which the ships of the Royal Canadian Navy are taking" in the fight against U-boats.

"We are continuing to take a very heavy toll of Axis submarines," the First Lord said, but explained that strategical considerations forbade publication of details.

BUTTS GOOD SMOKING

Stockholm—(CP)—So severe has the tobacco shortage become in Oslo, Norway that people are paying the equivalent of 50 cents for a match box full of cigaret ends. Cigar ends bring a still higher price.

SENTENCED TO 12 MONTHS

Calvert was sentenced to 12 months in jail.

Claim Strategy Will be Discussed At Gathering

Opinion in London Interprets Talks As Giving Fuller Recognition of Russia

QUESTION OF FAR EAST

(By E. C. DANIEL)
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 7. (AP) —Representatives of major United Nations were reported assembling in Moscow today for a "save Russia and win the war" conference, the urgency of which was accented by the increasingly desperate plight of the southern Soviet armies.

This information came from sources whose identity could not be disclosed. The British authorities themselves maintained dead silence on the movements of their own leaders except for their ambassador to Russia, Sir Archibald Clark Kerr, who has gone from Kuibyshev to Moscow along with the United States Ambassador, Admiral William Standley.

Reports From Various Sources

As reports streamed into London from both Axis and Allied sources indicating that the cast was being assembled for grand strategy talks of the utmost importance in the Soviet capital, Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard coupled these black faced banner lines:—

"Allied diplomats reported gathering in Russia".

"Germans speed up oil field drive".

In the same edition Cartoonist David Low pictured the hope and belief of many Britons with a cartoon showing Premier Joseph Stalin, President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek seated side by side in a truck with four steering wheels.

The truck was labelled "correlation of strategy" and the caption said: "Now supposing we all try to go somewhere together".

A German-inspired report regarding the reported second front conference said that Laurence Steinhardt, former United States Ambassador in Moscow, was on his way there from his present post at Ankara.

(For the past week the Axis radios have been circulating "unconfirmed rumors" that Prime Minister Churchill was in Moscow along with William C. Bullitt, a special envoy of President Roosevelt.)

Already known to be in Moscow besides Sir Archibald Clark Kerr and Admiral Standley, are Maj.-Gen. Follett Bradley, of the U. S. fair forces; Roger Garreau, head of the fighting French mission to Russia; and Maj.-Gen. William Steffens, Norwegian military attache at Kuibyshev.)

The Moscow consultations were interpreted in London as an effort to give fuller recognition to the indispensable part being played by the wearing but unbeaten Soviet legions in the worldwide strategy of the United Nations.

There was little doubt in London that wherever and whenever allied leaders gather these days their deliberations are centred on what Anthony Eden, foreign secretary, called at one time in the Anglo-Russian treaty negotiations "the urgent task of creating a second front in Europe in 1942."

In the background of the United Nations talks were repeated warnings from allied quarters that Japan intends to knife Rusia soon in the Far East.

These warnings were reiterated today by Dr. George Yeh, London director of the Chinese ministry of information, who said the Japanese appeared to have deployed their forces on the Russian frontier both for attack and for defence against Chinese-Soviet flanking attempts.

Dr. Yeh said that more Japanese troops were moving north to reinforce upwards of 500,000 already reported there and that 1,000 Japanese planes had been concentrated in the northeast.

Continuous Activity Goes on in RCAF Strategic Bases Along West Coast

(By STUART UNDERHILL)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

A West Coast Canadian Air Station, Aug. 7. (CP)—Two years ago it was an isolated stump ranch on the wilderness coast of British Columbia—today it's a steadily expanding Royal Canadian Air Force Station from which flying-boats roar out to patrol the Pacific sea-lanes.

The story of this base is typical in the development of West Coast defences in the past months. At strategic points along the coast the forest is being pushed back to make way for stations manned by personnel drawn from all parts of Canada.

The men who fly the planes and those who service them are on a war footing around the clock. Lights burn in the hangar workshops through the night and work crews carry on their endless task of repair and adjustment.

Minor repair jobs are performed on the flying boats while they ride at their moorings in a sheltered anchorage but for major repairs they are hauled from the water into the hangars.

Needs Hardy Men

Beaching an aircraft calls for four men who don't mind chilly water, such as LAC. H. Reading of Millet, Alta., AC. W. G. L. Inch of Alliston, Ont., AC. J. A. Struthers of Haney, B.C., and AC. A. W. L. Reid of Thornton, Ont.

Clad in bathing and "Mae West" life jackets, they waded out to a plane which had taxied inshore and under the glare of searchlights fixed "dollies" under the wings and tail.

Towed by a tractor driven by LAC. H. F. Copp of Grand Falls, N.B., the big flying-boat slowly emerged tail first from the water. In the hangar it was turned over to a night crew which included Cpl. R. Penwill of Windsor, Ont.

A visit to the same workshop during the day found a crew busy regrinding valves. Hurrying to take their places on pay parade were AC. R. M. Snelson of Brockville, Ont., AC. J. D. Mowat of Toronto, AC. C. M. Alton of Brockwood, Ont.

No Smoking

No smoking is strictly the order in and around the hangars with the exception of an asbestos-lined room to which men can retire and light up for a 10-minute break twice on each shift.

To enforce such orders as well as to keep unauthorized persons away, security guards, especially trained for the task, are on duty at all approaches to the station. They carry out their instructions so thoroughly a reporter recently was picked up and detained until they were satisfied of his purpose on the premises.

Women Drafted For Fire Control

London, Aug. 7. (CP)—Compulsory fire-watching by women 20 to 45 years old was introduced today with a statement by Home Secretary Herbert Morrison that the measure was taken on the assumption that the weight of German air raids will increase and "because of the seriousness of the manpower situation". Millions of women will be affected, he said.

Three Killed In Plane Crash

Charlottetown, Aug. 7 (CP)—Three men were killed and a fourth was seriously injured when a plane crashed during a take-off from the Royal Air Force training station here early today. The commandant of the school declined to issue any immediate statement on the accident(but said an official version would be released later in the day.

FARM AND PREMISES SWEPT BY FIRE.

Wingham, Ont., Aug. 7 (CP)—One of the worst fires in years, causing damage upwards of $25,000, swept the farm and premises of Arthur Fields here today. The fire destroyed the dairy barn, a large colony house, the Fields' residence, and some other buildings. Over 600 hens, 60 tons of hay, 1,000 bushels of last year's crop, and considerable equipment were lost.

NO CHAPLAINS OVER 46 HEREAFTER FOR OVERSEAS

Ottawa, Aug. 7 (CP)—Chaplains more than 46 years old will not be appointed in future for overseas service with the Canadian army, it was announced today at the National Defence headquarters.

It also was decided that young clergy of 26 years of age would be accepted into the chaplain service if they had three years' experience as ordained ministers or priests.

GOERING CONFERS WITH HIGHEST NAZIS

London, Aug. 7 — (CP)—Reichsmarshal Herman Goering has concluded a two-day conference with the "highest Nazi functionaries," Reuters news agency reported today, quoting a broadcast of D.N.B., the German news agency.

The conference dealt particularly with "internal economic and political questions arising from the war." Goering, according to the broadcast, conferred at length with German officials of occupied territories.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

VICTIM OF THRESHING ACCIDENT IMPROVED

The condition of Mr. Lorne Bailey of Harold who was admitted to the Belleville General Hospital on Tuesday evening where it was necessary to amputate his arm following a threshing accident, is slightly improved according to a hospital report this morning. Besides his arm being terribly mangled in the belt pulley, Mr. Bailey suffered injury to his head as he was hurled against the side of the machine while trying to replace a thrown belt.

LOADING OF BOILER MISTAKEN FOR WRECK

The loading of a large steam boiler at the Bristol Aircraft Products plant on Sidney Street caused residents in the north end of the city living near the railway to believe there had been a railroad accident this morning. The Ontario Intelligencer was called several times with persons asking what had caused the believed wreck, but an inquiry revealed the "trouble" was merely two railway derricks loading a big steam boiler on a railway flat car. Undoubtedly, from a distance, it did look as though cars were being replaced on the track.

FIREMEN CONSTRUCT BLOOD DONOR BOOTHS

Ten trim and tidy blood donor booths are waiting at the Belleville fire hall in readiness for placing at various points along the main thoroughfare of the city Saturday when the Kiwanis Club will hold their Blood Donor Tag Day to conclude their campaign for additional blood donors at the local clinic. The booths were constructed by members of the fire department in their off hours and are attractively decorated with placards appealing for donations of blood for the great cause.

FLOWERS STOLEN OWNER COMPLAINS

Growing flowers are a thing of beauty and should be left in their beauteous glory and not trampled and stolen. That is the opinion of Mr. John B. Harper, 110 West Bridge Street, and many other lovers of floral beauty. What annoys Mr. Harker, and others who grow flowers in an effort to beautify the city, is to have miscreants trample their flower beds and steal the budding blooms. Some time last night destructive intruders stole a goodly number of flowers from Mr. Harker's garden, he complained to police today. "If I can find out who is responsible I will gladly prefer charges," stated Mr. Harker, who was promised action by Acting Chief Harman, himself a lover of flowers.

OFFERS UNCLAIMED

One Belleville and one Point Anne resident lost out on considerable vacation spending money through their failure to attend the McCarthy Theatre Foto-Nite on Thursday evening. The name of Mrs. C. Haite, 77 Pine Street, was called for the first offer, while that of Miss Ellen Burshaw was called for the second prize. Neither person was in attendance at the theatre when their name was called.

RETURNED SOLDIERS WEAR NEW BADGES

A new returned soldier's badge, emblematic of service overseas or in the active forces in Canada, is now being worn by discharged men of the city and district.

The badge does not resemble in any manner, that issued at the close of the last Great War. It is of silver with three red maple leaves imposed upon the face. At the top is a red and silver crown. Along the bottom is inscribed "General Service."

Discharged members of the Merchant Marine wear badges inscribed with the letters "M.M.".

Local Store Manager Is Still Wondering How It Was Done

The dress of the knitted suit is missing and the department store manager is scratching his head over the question of a clever piece of shop-lifting or an extraordinary coincidence.

The two-piece knitted garment hung on display in a prominent part of the store. A few hours later, the skirt was gone, but the upper part hung on the hanger.

The next day a prospective customer entered the shop and enquired the price of the remaining garment. The clerk's eyes nearly popped out of her head when she noticed the party in front of her was wearing a knitted skirt of exactly the same color and weave as its missing counterpart.

The customer made no effort to buy after being told the price, but wandered through the shop and eventually outside.

The manager's only comment was "You figure it out."

POLICE COURT

"The accused has returned to his ship and gone to sea," revealed Acting Chief Arthur Harman when the name of a sailor lad, charged with intoxication, was read before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd in Friday's city police court.

"In that case we'll have to dismiss the charge," added His Worship, who was informed by Acting Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson that the sailor lad had been apprehended on a charge of intoxication here some time ago after causing a disturbance by kicking over garbage pails on Front Street. The sailor, a local lad serving his country in time of war, had his case enlarged until today when originally arraigned.

Frank McLarnen, transient, appeared on a charge of trespassing on railway property and his case was enlarged one week owing to the fact the accused could not produce his National Registration card.

"He informs me he lost the card while drunk in Kingston last week," revealed Acting Chief Harman, who informed the court that application for a new registration card had already been made.

"He'd better remain in custody until the card is renewed," suggested His Worship.

Motorists, who continue to violate the one-hour parking bylaw in the downtown area of the city, were fined one dollar and costs for their delinquency.

Germans Complete Defence Manoeuvres Against Allied Invasion

London, Aug. 7.—(CP)—German troops have completed manoeuvres in the interior of Holland in the course of which special attention was given to defence against parachute troops, it was reported today by the Netherlands News Agency Aneta.

Air General Friedrich Christiansen, commander of German occupation forces, participated in the exercises. He and several German major-generals inspected fortifications and heavy naval artillery positions along the coast, Aneta said.

The Netherlands Agency added that the Germans had taken several new precautions against an invasion of Holland. A military order required the slaughter of all carrier pigeons in Holland by Aug. 13.

Appeal For More Blood Donors Will Be Made on Saturday

Booths Will Be Set Up On Business Streets Where the Public May Get Information And Register to Give Blood Donations

PLEA FOR PROMPT ACTION MADE

Residents of this city will view what they think perhaps are strange sights on Front Street on Saturday.

Strange, perhaps, yes, but vitally necessary if this city is to contribute its rightful amount of blood donations to the Dominion's pledged quota to Britain.

All this week the Red Cross Blood Donor Clinic has been conducting a campaign for more and yet more donors. Industrial firms have rallied to the appeal, but the man on the street has not as yet come forward to offer his bit in the numbers anticipated.

So the Blood Donor Clinic is taking its appeal directly to the residents of the city and district.

Attractive booths will be erected in various parts of the main thoroughfare of the city. In attendance will be a member of the Red Cross Emergency Corps and a member of the Belleville Kiwanis Club.

The unseen message of Britain's wounded will materialize through the medium of these booths. The general public will be asked to contribute its blood at a moment when the fate of empires, nations and the whole world trembles in the balance.

Belleville has promised that 100 blood donations will go forward from this district weekly. Donors can contribute blood every three months. It is therefore a matter of simple arithmetic to ascertain the total number needed if this amount is to be contributed.

And this can only be done by residents of the city coming forward and making a voluntary offering of the fluid so vital to the saving of British lives in the far-flung theatres of war.

Supply Too Small

At the present time, the demand for blood plasma does not approach the available supply. It takes anywhere from five donations to successfully treat a wounded man woman or child. Thus it is easy to conceive the sheer necessity of more donors—and yet more.

The world these days is humming with conjecture and talk of a "second front." Canadian troops, highly trained to a point where they are now considered to be the finest fighting material in the world have not yet gone into action as a whole.

That day will come. The Dominion's sons are, and have been, impatiently champing at the bit to come to grips with the common enemy and with that contact will come the inevitable casualty lists. Our sons, brothers, husbands and sweethearts, will be in sore need of the precious fluid that members of the home front can suply.

And now is the time to build a supply of the plasma that can save the life of a Canadian soldier, perhaps your son, brother or friend. A little later may be too late. It is vitally necessary that not only the present demands be supplied, but that a surplus be built for the great need that will come sooner or later as sure as the sun rises in the east.

It must never be said of Belleville, Canada or the Empire, that their blood donations were "to little and too late." This must not happen.

Opportunity To Help

Saturday will provide an opportunity for those who have not already done so, to help in this important phase of war work. It is the bounden duty of every Canadian who is eligible to offer and give his blood to his country's armed forces or the civilian victims of enemy horrors.

The Red Cross nurse and the Kiwanian will gladly give all information to those interested. Plan to pause a moment in the busy activities of Saturday morning and enlist in the silent army of blood donors. There will be ten booths available under the supervisions of Section Officer Mrs. A. H. Ketcheson, Reg. N.

All are urged to help in this vital war work.

POLICE BLOTTER

Frank Moore, 66 Grier Street, reported the theft of money, left in a milk bottle for collection at his home last night.

Oshawa police reported the theft of a 1935 Ford sedan bearing Ontario licence plates number 28-M-9 last night.

A juvenile, who escaped custody when left in the care of his parents while awaiting trial for the theft of a motor car, was captured by the authorities last night. Taking no chances on a second wandering away the police held the lad in close custody until he can be arraigned in Juvenile Court.

Found wandering at large and unable to give an account of her activities a 19 year old girl was held on a nominal charge of vagrancy last night after being apprehended for alleged loitering.

No Lighting Restrictions At Belleville Fair

Governmental restrictions of lighting for fall fairs have been lifted locally and the Belleville fall exhibition will go on as scheduled, it was learned here today.

The restrictions which are in effect now, do not permit of the construction of any additional outdoor electric signs, or use of power for other than essential purposes.

On September 1st., however, power restrictions will go into effect. These will include the elimination of street signs, a reduction of window lighting in shops and other places of business and some electrical appliances.

Negotiations are under way to get the approval of the Metal Controller to allow the procedure of the Belleville Rotary Club Carnival scheduled for the third week in August and the Belleville Kiwanis Club Karnival due to open some time in September.

August meetng was held the 3rd.

RESTRICT PRODUCTION OF HEATERS USING FUEL OIL OR GAS

Washington, Aug. 7 (AP)—The War Production Board has ordered a production stoppage of domestic heaters which use fuel oil or gas, except to fill orders for the army, navy, coast guard, maritime commission or war shipping administration. W. P. B. explaned that types of heaters affected are those designed to heat only the space in which they are located and which are not equipped with distribution pipes."

$15,000 FIRE DAMAGE

Cornwall, Ont., Aug. 7 (CP) — Damages of $15,000 were caused yesterday by fire of unknown origin which gutted the office, bottling room and basement of the plant here of Parisien Beverage Company. Three trucks were damaged.

SERGT. R. GRINDLEY IS SENTENCED FOR 'GAS' THEFT

Term of Four to Six Months Imposed in the Ontario Reformatory

Culminating a trial that was spread over several weeks' duration along the instalment plan program, Sergt. Richard Grindley, of the R.C.A.F., Trenton base, was sentenced to serve from four to six months in the Ontario Reformatory by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd at the conclusion of County Police Court held at the Court House Thursday afternoon. Grindley was convicted of stealing gasoline from the Trenton Air Base filling stations. Another charge of stealing government stores was withdrawn by Assistant Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson.

Evidence presented by Sergt. Earl Fry, of the R.C.A.F. service police, included large gasoline cans and rubber hose suitable for the siphoning of gasoline. The accused denied knowledge of the articles, which Sergt. Fry testified were found in Grindley's car. The gasoline said to be stolen was of high octane standard used only in aeroplanes. Provincial Police assisted in the original investigation.

Mr. Charles A. Payne, K.C., local barrister, appeared on Grindley's behalf and urged a suspended sentence be considered owing to the accused man's previously good record in the service. His Worship stated it was necessary to impose a prison term when a conviction was registered in the theft of government property. Assistant Crown Attorney S. G. Robertson had previously moved for a conviction and a stiff jail sentence. "The stealing of His Majesty's property is a serious offence," held Mr. Robertson.

Sidney Council

August meeting was held the 3rd. inst. Minutes of July session read and adopted. The request of Mr. C. Orr for information as to his right to erect a building on certain property in St. Albans was laid over to the September meeting to enable the council to obtain the required information and the Reeve and Mr. F. J. Woods were appointed a committee for that purpose.

The council accepted the offer of the Frankford Hydro Commission re Mr. McMahon's Hydro account and gave their approval to the cancellation of his Hydro contract.

The following resolutions were passed by the council:

That a grant of $150 be made to the Belleville Agricultural Society.

That a refund of $2.40 be made to Mr. Wm. Edwards, Toronto.

That accounts on the July pay list be paid.

That relief accounts for July be paid.

The necessary by-law for accepting the 1942 assessment and levying the taxes was passed through its various readings and council was adjourned to meet Monday, Sept. 7th at 8 o'clock p.m.

W. H. Nobes, Clerk.

61-Year-Old Woman Angler Lands 18-lb. 'Lunge With Bamboo Pole

Fish stories may come and go as the anglers' season reaches its peak but the best have nothing on the experience of Mrs. Thomas Orr, 61-year-old Belleville woman, residing at 51 Cannifton Road.

As is often the custom of the Orr family, Mrs. Orr motored to Stoco Lake, on the Civic holiday and during the course of the afternoon took up her position on the shore of the lake to enjoy a bit of bass fishing. Soon she had a strike and what a strike. With a terrific pull that almost snatched the pole from the 61-year-old woman's hands, the big one fought valiantly in is efforts to get free.

Mrs. Orr hung on grimly and after a short tussle the big one was landed at her feet. Bass? no not a bass, but an eighteen pound lunge, and landed with a bamboo pole. Mrs. Orr now has the laugh on the other members of her party who were fishing—with lesser luck—with high-priced "store" equipment.

Wartime Prices Bd. Gives Assurance Of Sufficient Supply of Cheese Boxes

"Belleville district will be supplied with sufficient cheese boxes to supply the demand even if members of the armed forces have to cut the veneer," the Belleville Cheese Board has been assured in a communication from the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

This, according to Secretary-Treasurer Fred Mallory, was the gist of the communication received from Ottawa in reply to the board's request that the cheese box shortage in the Belleville district be given immediate consideration. The request was forwarded to Ottawa two weeks ago following the near ultimatum by local cheese box manufacturers that they could not continue making boxes at the present ceiling price of 35 cents each.

So acute had the cheese box shortage become in the Belleville district that many cheese had to be left on the factory storage room shelves as the result of there being no boxes in which to ship them.

Considerable relief of the situation was made this week as the result of the shipment of two carloads of boxes, totalling some 3,000, to Belleville. The boxes were shipped from Quebec and laid down in Belleville at the present 35 cent ceiling price. Another carload is expected next week and it is stated arrangements have been completed to ship veneer to district box manufacturers at a price enabling them to continue making boxes at the ceiling price.

The boxes are handled through the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association with distribution being in charge of Mr. George Pollard, and other district cheese factory instructors who are in a position to know where the boxes are needed.

Mr. W. R. McCreary, local cheese buyer, doubted at cheese board meeting Thursday night if 3,000 boxes from Quebec would be sufficient to take care of the demand in this district. "The Belleville board will require at least 5,000 boxes each week for some time to come," he stated. "It looks as though there is a serious situation developing here."

"We have been guaranteed a sufficient supply of boxes by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board to take care of all needs in this district," returned Mr. W. H. Montgomery, member of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association. "Arrangements have been made to ship in veneer if necessary and every effort will be made to keep the price of boxes at the present 35 cent ceiling."

Holland's Queen Will Decorate Five Americans

Washington, Aug. 7. — (AP) — Queen Wilhelmina, a guest at President Roosevelt's press conference, said today the contribution of press and radio to the efforts of the war leaders was of "immense value" in helping to lead mankind "toward a brighter morrow"

The Queen of the Netherlands engaged in no question-and answer exchange with reporters, but read a statement after Mr. Roosevelt had introduced the members of his press conference to her in a group.

"The mission of the press and radio is one of great responsibility—more so now than ever when the future of the world and civilization is in the balance," she said. "Its fulfillment is dependent upon freedom of speech and a free press, two conditions no dictator ever grants.

"In this country like in all the parts of my country both rights are constitutionally guaranteed and deeply engrained in the life of the nation. Where occupation has temporarily abolished them, defeat of the enemy will see them restored."

Freedom In Democracy

Mr. Roosevelt also had said that the constitutions of both the Netherlands and the United States guaranteed freedom of expression and of the press, and that these rights are a fundamental part of government.

Not only are the United States and the Netherlands allies, Mr. Roosevelt said, but they hold most of their ideals in common.

After reading her statement, the Queen and Mr. Roosevelt sat down and the President shifted into the routine of an ordinary press conference, passing along information and answering questions.

Although further away from the Netherlands than ever before in her 61 years, diplomatic protocol gave the queen the privilege of standing on Dutch soil and decorating five Americans for distinguished service.

One of those to be cited is Admiral Thomas C. Hart, 65, whose request last February to be retired as commander of the United Nations sea forces in the South Pacific caused a flurry of comment.

While the Japanese battered at Singapore, his second-in-command, Vice Admiral C. E. L. Helfrich, of the Royal Netherlands navy, was elevated to his place. The change in command was occasioned, it was officially announced at the time, by the illness of Admiral Hart.

A few days later the Army and Navy Journal ascribed Hart's removal to a desire to "mollify the Dutch government." The Netherlands Indies government, said the unofficial service periodical, "has insisted that it is entitled to representation on the staff of General Wavell in general command of the defence of this fighting front."

Given Rank of Full Admiral

Anyway Admiral Hart came home in March, and three months later President Roosevelt nominated him to be placed on the navy retired list with the rank of full admiral, a distinction shared by few other naval officers.

Another fighting man, it was understood the Queen wished to honor was Vice Admiral William A. Glassford, Jr., formerly of the staff of the Allied High Command in the Western Pacific and now naval district commandant at Charleston, S. C.

The identity of the three others was to be disclosed at the ceremony scheduled to take place on Dutch soil — the Netherlands embassy.

Last night the Queen gave a dinner at the Embassy for 60 guests, including the vice president and Mrs. Wallace, members of the cabinet and others.

TOBRUK SHIPPING ATTACKED

Cairo, Aug. 7 —(AP)— Allied heavy bombers attacked shipping and docks at the Axis supply base of Tobruk yesterday but otherwise there was little air or land activity on the Egyptian battlefront, British headquarters reported today.

R.A.F. operations over the enemy lines were on a reduced scale, a communique said, while ground forces engaged in patrol clashes and minor artillery exchanges.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

Heavy Fine Levied For Rental Infractions

The fact that increasingly heavy penalties are being imposed by the courts for infractions of the Maximum Prices Regulations and other regulations administered by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board is brought to the attention of the public by its regional office.

When Mrs. Agnes O'Brien of Fort William, was charged with four violations of the rentals regulations, she was fined a total of $75 and more than $30 in costs by the magistrate, who pointed out that the accused was well aware of the existence of the regulations and deliberately violated them. She was given the option of four months in jail.

STRONG VOTE FOR A.F. OF L.

Montreal, Aug. 7 (CP)—Workers at the defence industries plant at nearby Ste. Therese yesterday cast "a strong majority" vote in favor of the American Federation of Labor as their bargaining agency it was announced last night.

The vote held under authority of the Department of Labor, gave the A.F. of L. a majority over the Canadian Congress of Labor and the Catholic Syndicates. The comparative count was not available.

NOMINATED FOR THIRD TERM

Nashville, Tenn., Aug. 7 (AP)—For the second time since the Civil War, Tennessee Democrats yesterday nominated a Governor for a third two-year term, bestowing the honor upon Prence Cooper. Nominated along with Cooper was incumbent Tom Stewart for the United States Senate. The Democratic nomination in statewide races is tantamount to election.

New Nazi Lunge Between Don And Sal Rivers

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Despatches from Moscow indicate that a new Nazi lunge toward Stalingrad between the Don and the Sal Rivers is giving the Russians the most concern at the moment. It is far down in the Central Caucasus, however, that Berlin claims a more immediately dangerous penetration.

At that point, below Voroshilovsk, never yet mentioned in Moscow war bulletins as a battle area, Berlin says that Nazi spearheads have cut the main rail route across the Caucasus connecting the Black Sea and Caspian coasts. That means that they have crossed the Kuban River at or south of Armavir.

Armavir is an important junction on the Rostov-Baku Railroad. A branch line runs from Tuapse on the Black Sea to Armavir, connecting these with the railroad running to the Caspian coast at Makhach Kala, 400 miles southeast of Armavir and 300 miles south of Astrakan at the mouth of the Volga. That is the only Black Sea-Caspian rail route north of the Caucasus range. It is likely that the Nazis may try to follow this route to the Caspian, thus splitting the Caucasus off from the rest of Russia.

Accept Nazi Claim.

Authorized military spokesmen in London accept the German claims of having captured Vorshilovsk and crossed the Kuban south of its great bend even though Moscow has not admitted these advances of Nazi flying columns. It is pointed out by the British observer, however, as is apparent from the maps, that the German thrust from Belaya Glina to Voroshilovsk is dangerously deep for its width. In so far as its outlines can be sketched, it is a corridor forty miles or less wide and more than 100 miles deep. Surprise that Marshal Timoshenko had not already struck from the east to pinch it off was expressed in London.

If the Germans have crossed the Kuban River south of Armavir, as Berlin claimed, that spearhead is now probably 150 miles from its Belaya Glina jump-off. The Nazis appear now to be trying to widen the base of the wedge being driven down the central steppes to the Kuban River before the Russians can shift forces to attempt a flanking drive to close the neck of the sack.

It is increasingly certain from the speed of its advance and the recklessness with which it is being hurled southward, despite dangers of being cut off, that the Nazi spearhead on the upper Kuban below Amavir must be a self-contained panzer unit. To what degree the Germans have been able to back it up with larger and heavier forces to consolidate footholds gained west of the Kuban is not clear. There is ample evidence, however, that the Riussians still are holding in the Kushchevka region, 250 miles north of Armavir.

May Sever Russ Lines.

If the Nazis succeed in pressing their advantage, and spear their way down the Rostov-Baku railroad to the Caspian, the result, at worst, will be a severance of the Russian lines. It would leave the southern wing of the Red Army, if it escapes entrapment north of the Kuban, standing along the 10,000-foot wall of the Caucasus range from Taman Peninsula to the Caspain and still in possession of the great Baku oil fields, well sheltered even from air attack by the tremendous mountain bastion.

There are adequate rail and pipeline connections from the Black Sea to the Caspian south of the mountains. That southwest corner of the Caucasus also is the entry port for British-American war supplies arriving via the Persian Gulf and Iran. Some traffic with the rest of Russia via the Caspian also would remain possible.

Great as Nazi gains have been in Southern Russia, grave as is Red peril, the battle of the Caucasus is not yet decided. Hitler's forces still are hundreds of miles from their objectives.

TOO MANY GRAB TELEPHONES

Kentville, N.S., Aug. 7 (CP)—When an aircraft crashed near here Monday so many curious citizens grabbed their telephones that the automatically operated exchange refused to function. The telephone company yesterday repeated an appeal to leave the line free for necessary calls during blackouts and emergencies. An R.A.F. pilot was killed in the crash.

Big Lancaster Bomber of 1942 Visualized as Far Back as 6 Years Ago

New Type Was Conceived in May 1936 and Was Then Only a 'Number'

1936 CONFERENCE

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Aug. 7 — (CP) — Behind Britain's big bombers, the high-speed Lancaster, the heavy Stirling and Halifax and the slightly smaller twin-engine Manchester, is a story of careful planning that dates from 1936, when the giant raider of today was just a number.

It isn't generally realized that the "new" bombers of 1942, whose very existence was a secret until fairly recently, were visualized as far back as six years ago by the aircraft designers and the British air staff.

The new type four-motor bomber pictured by the air staff as the bomber of the future was born at a conference held at the Air Ministry in May, 1936. It was held to consider a specification, then known only as a number — B12/36 —for a heavy bomber land plane. The air staff officer behind that specification was Air Vice-Marshal R. D. Oxland, C. B. E., who now commands a bomber group.

Decisive Conference

The list of those present at this decisive conference included names which since have become famous as leaders of Britain's air forces in war. Air Chief Marshal Sir Wilfred Freeman, now vice-chief of air staff, and Air Marshal Sir Christopher Courtney, air member for supply and organization, were there. Air Marshal Sir Arthur Harris, C. in-C. Bomber Command who then was a Group Captain, also took part in the discussion. There was a squadron leader, now Group Capt. O. R. Gayford, D. F. C., A. F. C., who held the long distance record and later commanded the team of R.A.F. pilots that made a world record flight to Australia.

Range and Bomb Load

The specifications which resulted in the modern four-engine bomber of R.A.F. called for an aircraft with a certain range and bomb load. Its wing span was to be not less than so much. It had to be able to defend itself from any angle, have accommodation for so many crew. Above all, this masterpiece of the future had to be capable of taking off and landing within given distances.

Another requirement was that the aircraft should be "buoyant"—capable of floating should it be forced down into the sea. For such a "solid" aircraft as the new, high performance bomber had to be, that last requirement was a designer's headache.

That specification, and a later one for a somewhat similar type — No. B13/36 — were passed to the aircraft industry and the selected firms were asked to build aircraft that would measure up to those far-reaching requirements. Short, Handley Page and Avro were the firms chosen.

Certain details about the resulting types of four-engine bombers, Stirlings, Halifaxes and Lancasters, were released recently, but speed and load still are service secrets. The new bombers are about the fastest and hardest hitting in the world.

DEPUTY SHERIFF WAS NEXT

Scranton, Pa., Aug. 7 (AP)—Edmund Nealis, carrying out the duties of his job as Deputy Sheriff, took a parolee, Joseph J. Reilly, 36, to the draft board for induction yesterday. Reilly was turned down, the board noting a detainer had been lodged by the state for violation of his parole. Nealis, instead, was inducted. His number had come up next.

Farmer Near Picton Falls From Scaffold Injuring His Back

Picton, Aug. 7 — Arnold Friar, farmer residing south of Picton, was admitted to Prince Edward County Hospital suffering from injuries to the back as a result of a fall from a scaffold. He was working on the side of the home of Seymour Jinks, Waupoos Road, standing on a scaffold thirteen feet from the ground. In pulling up a cable he lost his balance and fell to the ground. An x-ray is being taken to determine the extent of his injuries.

Falls From Bike

Charles, young son of Bernard Kingsley, was admitted to hospital suffering from a broken arm. He fell from his bicycle.

Personals

Cp. Howard Foster, son of Mrs. S. J. Foster is in an English hospital suffering from a gunshot wound in the leg, according to word received by his mother yesterday. He was taking—part in army manoeuvres when live ammunition was being used and was accidentally struck by a bullet. He will be in hospital for three weeks.

Lieut. John Graydon has arrived overseas and will join his brother, Lieut. William Graydon, with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Members of the Catholic Women's League sponsored a shower last night in honor of Mr. and Mrs. George Hobson who were recently married. The event was held at the home of the groom's mother, Mrs. Roy Hobson.

Dr. G. W. Morden of Napanee is spending this week in town.

Sister Mary Jean of the General Hospital, Sault Ste Marie, is a guest of her sister, Mrs. George McCaw.

Rev. and Mrs. J. B. Creeggan are in Montreal this week.

C.Q.M.S. Frank Starr and Mrs. Starr are visiting their son in Timmins this week.

Launches Move To Liberate Houde

Montreal, Aug. 7—(CP)—A move to liberate Camilien Houde, former Montreal mayor detained in an internment camp since 1940, was launched here Thursday at City Hall by Councillor J. M. Savignac.

Mr. Savignac read into the record a motion that "at an early meeting of this city council, Councillor Savignac will move that this city council ask the executive commitee to urge upon the federal authorites the advisability of liberating Camilien Houde."

Mr. Savignac, a notary, was chairman of Montreal Executive Committee during part of Camilien Houde's civic administration. Mr. Houde was interned after he advised the people to ignore the national registration in 1940.

Injunction Continued Against Petrillo

Chicago, Aug. 7 (AP)—The Federal government has obtained a continuance to Sept. 16 in its antitrust injunction action against James C. Petrillo, President of the American Federation of Musicians, the Union and others of its officers. Th defendants had been ordered to appear today to show cause why they should not be restrained from enforcing a Union order prohibiting Union musicians from making recordings for radio stations, juke boxes and for other public use.

Trenton and District

Trenton, (Special.)— While patrolling the streets at 3.15 a.m. on Thursday police picked up a minor, but after questioning him and checking with the Bowmanville Boys' school, he was allowed to go when they satisfied themselves that he had no connection with the bicycle which was stolen from the Trent Theatre or the theft of money from Miss Lottie I. Jones, florist. They were later asked by the authorities to be on the look-out for another young boy who had escaped from there and was still at large, apparently stealing cars.

Clothing Stolen

Miss Adeline Sharrard, 72 Scott Street, reported to police that during the evening a considerable amount of clothing had been taken from the clothes line in her yard.

Construct New Warehouse

With the great demand for raw cotton in war industries Trent Cottons Limited have found it necessary to construct another large warehouse. This has been started and is expected to be completed shortly, being located south of their present factory. The company has already some dozens of carloads of cotton stored elsewhere in town awaiting the construction of the new warehouse.

Red Cross Workers Needed

The need for Red Cross workers is still very urgent and it is hoped that with the close of holidays for the many members they will all again realize what needs to be done and come out in large numbers to help. Those who were present on Thursday afternoon at the work rooms were kept busy with hospital supplies, sewing, quilting and knitting. Large quotas of each are still to be made.

A beautiful bouquet of gladioli which was donated by Miss B. Robertson was raffled during the afternoon and was won by Mrs. Currie. $1.30 was realized from this the lucky ticket being drawn by Mrs. Anderson.

Personals

Mr. Harry Bardwell has returned to town from points on the Canadian East coast, to spend a short holiday. For some months past he has been serving in the merchant marine and will return to the service after his visit home.

Flying Officer Godfrey and Mrs. Godfrey spent the weekend with friends in Toronto.

Mrs. Clare Northey and baby daughter, are visiting relatives in Peterborough.

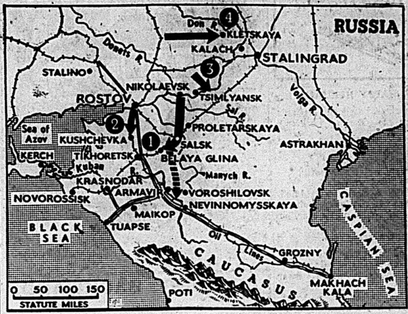
Mrs. J. Anderson has returned to town after visiting relatives in Kitchener, Toronto and Whitby. Lieut. Anderson has returned after spending three weeks at Connaught Ranges with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Mr. and Mrs. Ken Crews, Mrs. W. Crews, Miss Evelyn Little, Mrs. J. Little, Miss A. Waldron and Miss J. Waldron are leaving for a holiday at Bass Lake.

Reports Hitting Man on Cycle

Lieut. R. B. Boyce of Belleville reported to Trenton Police that while he was driving west on Highway No. 2 on Wednesday night about one mile east of Trenton he struck a man who was riding a bicycle on the highway. The man was taken to the office of Dr. Farley where it was found he had received severe skin abrasions. Lieut. Boyce informed police that because of the glare of headlights on approaching cars his view of the bicycle had been obstructed. The injured man was identified as Archie McKinnon of Trenton who works at the airport for one of the construction companies and who was a former caretaker of the Anglican church.

Germans Make New Gains in the Caucasus



Nazi forces gained 50 miles to reach Belaya Glina (1), threatening Tikhoretsk and encirclement of Red troops forced back slightly at Kushchevka (2). At Tsimlyansk (3), Germans reached the lower Don River but were apparently in a pocket. The Russians also admitted slight losses in the area of Kletskaya (4). Germans claimed capture of Voroshilovsk and indicated an advance to the Kuban River (indicated by broken arrow.)

Newly Reinforced

Nazi Tank Losses

In one clash on the Kletskaya sector of the Stalingrad front it reported the Germans were forced to retreat after losing 22 tanks and Soviet forces were credited with killing 800 Germans and knocking out nine tanks in another battle.

Repeated German attacks were declared repulsed south of Kushchevka in the Northern Caucasus. 700 Germans were killed and nine tanks knocked out by one Soviet unit.

Red army units were forced back in several sectors of the Belaya Glina front, 100 miles southeast of Rostov, yesterday by a German thrust paralleling the Rostov-Baku railway.

In the Kushchevka sector, fifty miles south of Rostov, Don and Kuban Cossacks charged into the German lines at numerous points and were declared to have inflicted enormous losses upon the enemy.

(The German radio claimed Friday that a Nazi column had reached Kursavka, on the Rostov-Baku line 230 miles southeast of Rostov and 200 airline miles below Kushchevka.)

Thrust to Stalingrad Increased

To the north the threat to Stalingrad was increased by new German gains in the Kotelnikovski area, 95 miles southwest of the steel city on the Volga. There German tanks tore holes in Soviet lines, forcing the defenders to withdraw in several sectors.

Red Star, in a dispatch from Kotelnikovski, said the Germans had taken the railway in that sector and now were seeking to develop a broader offensive.

Kotelnikovski is located on the railway running southwest from Stalingrad to Tikhoretsk, where it connects with the Rostov-Baku line. Belaya Glina also is on the railway, between Kotelnikovski and Tikohoretsk, so the line already had been cut by the Germans.

Germans Thrown Out of Sectors.

Above Stalingrad, Russian forces in the Don Elbow around Kletskaya accounted for the one bit of cheering news from the battlefronts by throwing the Nazis out of several sectors, Russian advices reported.

Last night's Soviet communique said this counterstroke in the Kletskaya sector, 75 miles northwest of Stalingrad, netted the Russians "an advantageous defence line." It thus eased somewhat the developing German threat of a pincer thrust about Stalingrad, it was indicated.

Russ Continue Counter Attacks

Elaborating on the action there, today's communique said the Russians were continuing their counterattacks, forcing the enemy back still farther.

Fresh waves of Nazi tanks were hurled against the Russians during the day in the Kotelnikovski sector but the Moscow announcement said the enemy failed to make further headway there.

Red Star said German forces which crossed the Don in the region of Tsimlyansk, 60 miles west of Kotelnikovski, had occupied the big Cossack village of Krasnoyarsky after 20 days of bloody fighting.

The noon communique told of increasing activity by the Soviet air force. It listed 18 Nazi planes downed and 13 damaged in dogfights.

Artillery duelling continued in the Volkhov sector of the Leningrad front where the Germans were reported dislodged from a small inhabited place in a surprise Soviet attack.

Great Ruler of Great People

Norway's King, who marked his seventieth birthday this week in England, can feel proud of the country whose ruler he became by the choice of the people thirty-six years ago. He has seen his kingdom stout and steadfast though the Hun has come and he has seen Norwegians everywhere stoutly resolved to free Norway.

It is one of the great facts in this greatest of all wars that the leaders of the nations that love peace, the nations resisting aggression have all played the heroic part. Not one of them has the slimy Hitler won to his black order of death and corruption.

When the story of this war is written and appraised, it will be shown how great was the soul of the small as well as that of the large nations which uphold the banner of liberty.

To their undying glory they stood resolute. Ages hence will sing the praises of the united nations that faced the foulest brood that ever crawled out of the slime of the infernal pit to attack truth and liberty. Norway and these nations battle still and continue to write a story that will brighten history's page against the dark sinister designs of Hitler's nazified mad race.

Fooling Hitler's Men

The publication "Poland Fights" tells an interesting story of how the patriots of Warsaw beguiled the German police a whole day into guarding illegal Polish posters, while the Poles laughed and the Huns did not know why they were laughing. The incident is told as follows:

Since the beginning of 1942 the walls of Warsaw buildings have frequently been covered with large yellow Nazi posters, written in Polish. The posters, headed in heavy black type, "The Fuehrer Said," consist of quotations from Hitler's latest speeches, boasting about the triumphant march of the German army eastward, about the heroic flight of German pilots over Russia and England, and so on. The Polish underground movement was quick to answer these posters. One day "unknown" hands pasted small cards over all the posters, on which the following mocking verse was printed:

"The Fuehrer bragged with insolence
That in February the Russian winter would be over,
But he did not know that even if he could shorten the winter
No German would come back alive from Russia."

The Germans removed these cards, but they invariably reappeared on the following day.

Soon a more ambitious plan was undertaken. One lovely spring day the walls of Warsaw were covered with new "yellow Nazi posters." The first words read as usual: "The Fuehrer said." Below followed quotations from Hitler's speeches, but selected so cleverly that all the nonsense and inconsistencies of his boasts and claims stood glaringly emphasized. There, for all to read, were the promises that Hitler made and never fulfilled—the boast that England and Russia would be conquered before the winter of 1941, that the war would end before Christmas, 1941, and so on.

Crowds gathered before the posters, amid confusion, consternation, and laughter. Poles laughed openly Germans scanned the "official," though incomprehensible propaganda with sullen expressions.

The German police became alarmed on seeing the large crowds and posted guards lest some "unknown" hand dare damage or tear down the posters. All day long the Poles smiling read what "The Fuehrer Said." It was not until late in the evening that the Nazi authorities understood that they had been duped by the Polish Underground. Gestapo agents in uniform dispersed the crowds and hurried through the streets, feverishly tearing down the compromising "official" posters.

Appreciation of the strong ties which bind the British and American peoples was indicated in the news in the papers recently telling how one of the young British princes, the infant son of the Duke and Duchess of Kent, has received the name in baptism of Franklin, in token that the President of the United States is his godfather.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS...

BY

NOT-SO-HAPPY HERMAN

(Revised portrait based on Goering's latest advice to Berlin workers.)

My name is H. Goering, the formerly purring
Exponent of personal charm;
I used to be hearty, an affable party,
But now I am filled with alarm.
I feel myself diddled, incessantly riddled
By doubts that will not be controlled;
My waistline is spacious as ever, but gracious,
My feet are uncommonly cold.

As Luftwaffe Laddie I never was faddy
On methods and means of attack;
I welcomed all blitzes—by which I mean
Fritz's,
Not those that came bombing us back.
I was pleased as a kitten at smashing up
Britain,
And Rotterdam filled me with glee,
But writing off Rostock as just so much lost stock
Was never intended by me.

And Russia was awful—its folks are unlawful,
Its winter a perfect disgrace;
Our chances have faded since first we invaded
That positive pest of a place.
But don't blame your Fuehrer—to make you securer
He went on that bellicose bust;
As Master Magician his least intuition
Is not to be crossed or discussed..

Remember, ye lowly, your Fuehrer is holy
A proper respect you must keep,
Or I, as his prophet, must bid you come off it,
And follow your Leader like sheep.
By Jove, you must do it, or else you will rue it
And find yourself wholly bereft;
Grown ever demurer, O, cling to your Fuehrer—
He's all you poor mutts have got left!

MOTIVE UNKNOWN

Down Ottawa way, says the Journal of that city, police are puzzled as to the motives of a thief who has been stealing the brassieres of young ladies from the clothes lines.

There has been no word of rationing of satin or lace and the rubber in them isn't worth mentioning, so the mystery deepens.

When the first of the "unmentionables" disappeared from a clothes line last week, its owner credited the happening to a mischievous breeze. But when a second well-anchored undergarment was whisked away the following evening she knew it was no coincidence.

A check-up with other gals of the Sand Hill section of Ottawa revealed that it was nothing knew. More than a few had hung out a lineful of wispy wearables in the evening only to find bras, and bras alone, missing in the morning.

Police don't know, the story goes, much about the whole thing, for the simple reason the gals haven't summoned the courage or whatever it takes, to tell them about it. So for the moment the ladies are keeping their brassieres under lock and key when they setire.

"But we do know this much," quipped a sweet young thing. "It must be someone without a visible means of support. But as far as I can see, it is simply a matter of catching him or her, or bust." The whole thing was damaging to a working girl's morale, she asserted.

Cheer up gals, it might have been worse. They could have taken your compacts.

IN THE MOVIE house the audience sat spellbound while a thrilling tale of love and romance was unfolded on the screen. One of the high points was a scene where the hero slapped the heroine vigorously on the face and stalked off. In the tense silence following this bit of drama, a child's voice piped up from somewhere in the theatre: "Mama, why doesn't she hit him back like you do?"

THE VALOR OF RIGHT

Never yet has tyrant Might
Won the final joust with Right,
Fight as hard as evil could
Right has tyranny withstood.
Faced by all the guns of Krupp
Right has never given up.

Routed oft and driven back
It has fled before attack
And by greater force compelled
It has given ground it held,
But, outnumbered, one to ten,
Right has always struck again.

Bruised and battered, tired and worn,
Ill and troubled and forlorn,
Undiscouraged, still the few
Dare to dream and dare to do,
Right's defenders, left to one,
Still for truth would carry on!

Now if heavy seems the load,
Long and tedious the road,
Dark the sky and strong the blast
Hold the faith unto the last,
Soon or late the Right must win!
Right has never given in!

Placing Ovary Products Under Skin to Relieve Menopause Symptoms

As the distressing symptoms of the menopause—hot flushes, nervousness and even mental disturbance—were believed due to the wasting away of the ovaries, physicians began using ovary extract to lessen the shock and other symptoms. This ovary extract made the "change of life" more gradual and in most cases the hot flushes and other symptoms were controlled.

It was found, however, that the taking of ovary extract by mouth did not give the amount of relief obtained by injections under the skin or into the muscles and so injections by the physician and taking of ovary by mouth between injections, has been more frequently used. Even this method has its drawbacks in that it often means many visits to the physician.

As it is the gradual absorption of the ovary extract (and other preparations now available) into the blood and tissues that gives the relief from the symptoms, the idea of placing the extract under the skin for "slow" absorption was tried.

In the fall of 1938 a study of this method was begun at the dispensary of the Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, by Drs. Henry G. Bennett, Jr., and Richard W. Te Linde. The report of this study appeared recently in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

In a series of 21 patients at the menopause, the theelin (estrone) was implanted under the skin. "In this series of patients it was found that after the implanation of the theelin (pellets)) relief from nervousness and flushes occurred within two weeks and persisted as long as fourteen and a half weeks". There were scarcely any ill effects noted.

These physicians report the results by research workers elsewhere obtained by this placing of theelin pellets under the skin, all of whom report favorably on this method. This method helps the great majority of cases.

Some of the facts now known about the results of this method are:

The planting of the pellets is very simple. A local anaesthetic is used on the skin and the needle holding the tiny pellets at its pointed end is passed through the skin over the buttocks. Pressure on the little stilet or plunger deposits the pellets.

The theelin lasts much longer than when given in other ways.

There were no ill effects from this method.

The treatment is more effective if given early.

It is gratifying to know that not only can women pass through the menopause more easily by the use of these products, but this (implantation) means fewer visits to their physician.

Symptoms in Society

New York, Aug. 7—A person may have a little too much sugar in his blood, a little too high blood pressure and a heart that shows symptoms of trouble to come and yet worry on for years without flagrant diabetes, sclerosis or angina pectoris.

He may, provided he is not subjected to extraordinary strain. If he is his symptoms become virulent.

It is so with society. It indulges its appetites and neglects its symptoms in normal times—in times of peace, for instance. It wisecracks them off.

But, subjected to an extraordinary test, the symptoms become acute, and then there is a demand that the patient be immediately cured.

This war is an extraordinary strain; it is a test of all living societies. And in the test we are finding out that we have been sick—for a long time.

The daily papers are full of symptoms, of which we are now becoming alarmedly aware. So we call for specialists. But what the body social needs at this moment is not specialists but good diagnosticians, who will look at the patient as a whole.

Reading the newspapers is like reading a clinical chart. "United States uncovers theft under war contracts"; "Black market in steel charged by Higgins' son"; "File Federal suit to enjoin Petrillo"; "Pelley on stand says he is patriot."

All these things now, suddenly, attract universal attention. They menace our war morale. They must be cured.

But the diseases indicated by these symptoms in the body social have been here all the time.

Surgery Not Medicine

Now—to continue the metaphor for a moment— the reaction of most of us to the realization that our society is ill, is to call for a series of surgical treatments. "Get rid of Petrillo", "Prosecute grafters", etc. This is all very well; but surgery is not medicine. It is a desperate resort. True, the situation calls for surgery. I would like to see a death penalty for grafting in war procurements.

A person who steals essential war materials from the people of the United States is a saboteur—and not a nobler one because his only motive is greed. He is guilty of aid and comfort to the enemy.

A person who stirs up race hatreds in the middle of a war in which race hatreds are a principal psychological weapon in the armaments of our enemies is equally guilty. And that the whole of our musical culture should have become a monopoly of a tightly organized group under authoritarian leadership working exclusively for its own immediate material interests is intolerable.

By all means let us get rid of them. Cut them out. But that will not heal us. They will grow again —unless we do something really curative.

At the root of our illness lies a fundamentally false concept of what a civilized society and a true democracy is.

At the beginning of what is called the liberal area, we had a belief in a pre-established harmony of all parts of society. The logic of this theory was: Let everybody do what he wants to do; let him follow his own interests— and everything will balance itself.

Then, when everything did not balance itself, we attempted to create a harmony by transferences of power. If industries or bankers became too powerful and rapacious we sought to offset them by more powerful and even more rapacious organizations of labor. Disillusioned in our concept of pre-established harmony, we developed a balance-of-power policy.

This policy has determined the role of Government to be a negotiator, arbiter, and transferer of power, between groups, and has created a public opinion whose expressions are "objectivity" and "tolerance". "Labor is crooked, but one must also think of what the industrialists have done"—or vice versa.

But in time of war we see that this balance-of-power idea does not create unified strength. On the contrary, every strength is counterbalanced and weakened by another strength—in opposition to it. In the very moment when society, considering the strength in all its parts should be strong— we find it, as a whole, weak.

Even without any symptoms of disease appearing in any of its parts, the body social is weak because its parts are all fighting each other. But, of course, this constant friction does create illnesses in all the parts.

Standards Destroyed

Now there is another result of this: All standards are destroyed. For there are no common standards. Labor demands standards for industry—and vice versa. But no one demands equal standards for every one — every one and every group.

We have gone through the epoch of "pre-established" harmony. We are at the end of the era of domestic balance of power. And what we are looking for is a consciously created harmony — which is, the function of statecraft.

Now an approach to such a consciously created harmony is the realization of a simple religious truth —namely, that we are all members one of another, and that our individual and corporate lives are justified according to a single test: Does our activity contribute to the welfare of the whole social body?

I don't think that Mr. Petrillo's activities are good for his own musicians — but even if they were, that is no criterion of them. The judgment must be: What do they do for or against musical culture in the nation?

And what must be the function of the Government? Not to be an arbiter and horse trader between groups, but to establish standards and create laws compelling obedience to them.

And what is the function of public opinion? It is not to tolerate everything for which an excuse can be made on a balance-of-power theory, but to develop public opinion into public conscience.

BADMINTON

The game of badminton, which is becoming increasingly popular in America, has been a favorite sport in England for more than 50 years.

Badminton is a sort of cross between lawn tennis and the old English game of battledore and shuttlecock.

This game has been played in India under the name "poona" since ancient times and it is still popular in that part of Asia.

The British learned the game in India and introduced it into England in 1873.

It received the name badminton from the fact that it was first played in that year at Badminton Manor, the countryseat of the Duke of Beaufort in Gloucestershire about 23 miles from London.

In these first games of poona at Badminton Manor champagne corks equipped with feathers were used for shuttlecocks.

Although the game was at first known by its Indian name poona, "badminton" was soon substituted and became the official name.

The Badminton Association of England, the governing body of the sport, was founded in 1895 and since then it has issued a yearbook.

Badminton is similar to tennis but is a faster game.

The battledore or badminton racket is only about as third as heavy as the regulation tennis racket.

A feathered cork shuttlecock or "badminton bird" takes the place of a ball.

Badminton, like tennis, is played on a court with a net between the opposing players.

It is played in singles or doubles on covered or open courts and by natural or artificial light.

The court for singles is 17 by 44 feet and that for doubles 20 by 44 feet.

Badminton House, the Duke of Beaufort's estate, gave its name not only to the Indian game of poona but also to a drink.

A claret cup, made of claret wine, sugar, spices, soda-water and ice, was first served by the Duke at Badminton and has been known as badminton since 1853.

In pugilistic parlance blood is sometimes called "badminton" from the color of this claret cup.

SCHOOLGIRL NURSEMAIDS

LONDON, Aug. 7. (CP)—Schoolgirls are going to help solve the nursing problem for Health Minister Brown. Recently he announced 12,000 nurses were needed and now it is planned to train 1,000 school girls to work in 200 approved wartime nurseries where women on war work may leave their children.

Canterbury Was Not Hit

LONDON — Canterbury cathedral itself, cradle of Anglican Christianity, was not hit in the recent air raid though the planes, in the words of the dean, Dr. Hewlett Johnson, "singled it out and dive-bombed it." It had a narrow escape. A bomb demolished the adjacent cathedral library. Fragments of stone strewed the cloisters and the quadrangle lawns, and the crash of falling masonry hours after the raid interrupted the afternoon service in the nave.

Though the library housed one of the oldest collections of books in the country, it was a comparatively modern structure. Its greatest treasures were in places of safety. Bombs shattered the deanery and destroyed chapter residences. The Cathedral itself was saved from extensive burning by the forethought of the dean. He had organized a network of connecting ladders leading from the ground to the roof and all over the exterior of the building.

Firemen scrambled up these ladders attached to the flying buttresses and flung incendiary bombs off the roof for more than an hour at the rate of dozens a minute. The fabric of the cathedral was shaken by the shock of close bombs. Hundreds of windows were blown out. Damage done by blast is estimated at thousands of pounds.

Only the twelfth century tower of St. George the Martyr remains. This was the oldest church in England dedicated to St. George. Payne-Smith's girls' school was one of the two which were destroyed. The recently completed infants' department of the main council school was also demolished King's school, the oldest public school in England, and the old foundation school of Simon Langton were seriously damaged. Also disfigured were the St. Augustine Monastery, a mediaeval building, and a 13th. century tithe barn.

5 Listed Missing Are Now Reported Safe, Slightly Injured

Victoria, Aug. 6. —(CP)—Western Air Command disclosed today that five members of the Royal Canadian Air Force previously reported to be missing after flying operations had been found safe although injured slightly, while two companions were dead.

Western Air Command gave no details beyond stating: "On July 21 an R.C.A.F. aircraft was unreported. Subsequently the aircraft was found to have been involved in an accident in the mountains".

The seven reported missing in an R.C.A.F. casualty list issued at Ottawa last Monday.

The dead are: Cpl. Thomas Brown Donald, whose widow lives at New Westminster, B.C., and AC1 John McIntosh, whose widow lives at Penticton, B.C.

Injured slightly in the crash were FO. Peter Hamilton Gault of Baltimore, Md.; Sgt. Francis Martin Baily of Vancouver; Sgt. Richard Bush Roberts, North Bend, Wash.; AC. Edward Woodroffe Naylor, London, Ont., and AC. Samuel Silberman, Port Kells, B.C.

RECTAL SORENESS AND PILE TORTURE
QUICKLY RELIEVED.

If you are troubled with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not delay treatment and run the risk of letting this condition become chronic. Any itching or soreness or painful passage of stool is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once.

For this purpose get a package of Hem-Roid from J. S. McKeown or any I.D.A. or other drug store, and use as directed. This formula which is used internally is a small, easy to take tablet, will quickly relieve the itching and soreness and aid in healing the sore tender spots. Hem-Roid is pleasant to use, is highly recommended and it seems the height of folly for any one to risk a painful and chronic pile condition when such a fine remedy may be had at such a small cost.

Gathering Honors Frankford Newlyweds

GATHERING HONORS .. ..ly-eb

Frankford — About fifty friends and neighbours of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Spencer of Murray township gathered at their home on Saturday evening in honor of their daughter, Mrs. Leonard Reid and her husband who were married just a week ago. A short program was presented with Rev. H. H. Lackey acting as chairman for the evening. Readings were given by Mrs. Percy Locklin, Miss Alva Locklin, Mrs. Frank Rose and Mr. Murney Bell. Miss Ruth Coskey played an instrumental solo and Miss Verna Mikel contributed a vocal solo. A contest put on by Mrs. A. Caskey was very much enjyed, Miss Laura Moran read an address and presented the young couple with a miscellaneous shower of very lovely presents. Among the presents was a table lamp given by the church and Sunday School at Zion where the bride had been organist for a number of years. Mr. and Mrs. Reid graciously replied thanking all of their friends for the gifts they had received.

A fitting climax for this enjoyable evening was the appearance on the scene of a charivari crowd.

On the occasion of his recent marriage the co-workers of Mr. Jerry Stajan presented him with a forty-two piece cabinet of silver flatware and a four piece silver tea service.

At the Bata Munitions where Mrs. Stojan worked previous to her marriage the employees made her the present of an electric grillette, waffle iron and a chenille bedspread.

The W. A. Group of which Mrs. Harry Slingerland is the leader held their meeting in the Tourist Park on Wednesday, Aug. 5th in the form of a picnic. At twelve o'clock noon the tables were spread with lots of good things to eat and were thoroughly enjoyed by every one present. After dinner a recreation time was spent in playing games, playing ball and running races. A three-legged race was won by Mrs. Lackey and Mrs. Parrish.

It was decided that this would be the last meeting for the summer.

A Great Canadian Tournament

THAT WILL HELP

A GREAT CANADIAN CAUSE

● This year, the Canadian Open Golf Championship has a significance far beyond its status as a major sport event. It will again present a spectacular struggle for the Open Championship and the Seagram Gold Cup; it will again foster international goodwill by bringing together famous golfers from Canada and the United States; but, in addition, the entire net proceeds of this year's tournament will be donated to the Canadian Red Cross Society.

The House of Seagram is especially glad to be associated with the 1942 Open, which will be held at the Mississauga Golf & Country Club, Toronto, August 6th, 7th and 8th. And, as donor of the Seagram Gold Cup, the House of Seagram welcomes the golfers of both Canada and the United States to the fairways of international friendship.

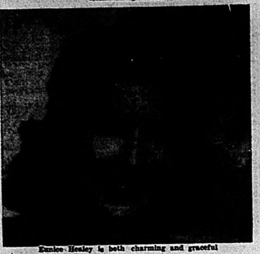
Grace Depends on Posture



Eunice Healey is both charming and graceful

By HELEN FOLLETT

WOMEN seem to have ideas of their own as to correct carriage. Some, desiring to look utterly-utterly feminine and soft, let the arms flop forward, lose the neat in-curve at the back, assume an arty dress model pose. Some go to the other extreme. They throw the head and shoulders back, heave up the chest to the limit, keep the neck and legs stiff. They assume a belligerent attitude that is far from pretty. They're standoffish. Nobody feels like giving them a nice big bear hug.

Correct carriage is vibrant and graceful. The body is kept tall, shoulders assume a normal pose, the head is balanced, abdominal muscles kept close to the backbone, or as close as one can get them. There is no rigidity or tension. Movements are easy.

Posture Creates Poise

Good posture creates poise and poise is an element of charm of no small value, let me tell you. The slouchy figure belongs to the slow poke, the self-conscious girl, or the one who feels sorry for herself. We judge individuals by the manner in which they stand, sit, move. The woman who is like a freshening breeze, gay and courageous, steps quickly and lightly.

The deluded lady who drags around without regard for appearance is doing herself an injustice. Her musculature will be weakened, digestive organs handicapped in their work.

Give the subject a thought, pretty one.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Joint Mother-Daughter Cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My mother and I live together, and most of the gifts and greeting cards (including Christmas cards) we send, we send jointly. When we sign the cards enclosed with the gifts, or when we sign the greeting-cards, what is the correct form for our names? We are especially confused about signing the cards, greeting-cards or cards with gifts, sent to relatives.

Is it correct for us to use both first names? That seems queer to me, but I can't figure out any other correct way of doing. Will you please put us straight about this?

R. D.

Apparently your problem comes from the fact that you are trying to find one form that covers all circumstances. As a matter of fact, the form of signature for you and your mother should be adapted to the person to whom you are sending the card. Unvarying, however, is the rule that your mother's name should be written first. The signature to a relative might be "Aunt Mary and Roberta". To an acquaintance or a not-very-close friend, the signature would be "Mary Duncan and Roberta Duncan". To those who call your mother by her first name, the signature would be, "Mary and Roberta".

Wedding Guests Entering Church

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My mother and I are soon to attend my niece's wedding, and we are perplexed about just how we should enter the church. We are to arrive together, and there are to be four ushers. Does an usher take us to our places one at a time or does he take my mother and do I follow after her?

Janet

If you and your mother arrive early, when there are not many guests waiting to be seated, an usher will offer his arm first to your mother, escort her to her seat, and then return to escort you to your seat with your mother. But if there are many guests waiting in the vestibule to be seated, he will, probably offer his arm to your mother and ask you (or expect you) to follow.

Since you and your mother are so closely related to the bride, you (and the ushers) will probably be informed about special places reserved for you. If the usher doesn't know you and doesn't inquire about the seating-arrangement for you and your mother, you should tell him of your relationship to the bride, and he will show you to seats directly behind the places reserved for the members of the bride's immediate family.

WEDDINGS

PANTING—MACDONELL

A marriage of local interest was solemnized on Monday, August 3, 1942, at the Holy Rosary Cathedral, Richards Street, Vancouver, B.C., by the Rev. Father J. Miles, when he united in marriage Marion A. MacDonell, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. MacDonell, Kingston Road, Belleville, Ont., to Cpl. Jas. Delbert Panting of the R.C.A.F., eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Panting, Hillier, Ont.

The bride was attired in turquoise blue sheer with white accessories and wore a corsage of gardenias and lilies-of-the-valley.

The bride's mother wore navy blue with white accessories and wore a corsage of Talisman roses.

The wedding breakfast was held at Eden Cafe on Granville Street, Vancouver.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Father Receives Emancipation From Auto's Overlordship

No, he isn't downright crazy, or even underobservation, nor is he a houlier-than-thou patriot rejoicing in prospective universal rationing.

Father is just an average citizen with a modest income in the middle brackets. He's a suburbanite whose wife has bossed him to the extent of influencing him to push the lawn-mower and taking her out once or twice a week. Here's father's paean of joy concerning the rationing of gas and tires:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"I belong to a School of One. No violent language escapes my lips concerning rationing of gas or tires. I feel like a college professor enjoying a Sabbatical year.

"Married twenty years, my little woman is Grade A. We have three children — average, spoiled, plenty of good points, wouldn't swap any of them for a million dollars. For sixteen years we've supported an automobile dynasty of increasing splendor. We couldn't afford it, but just had to keep up with the Jones.

"The Little Woman likes a Wednesday and Saturday outing—Wednesday it's likely to be movies. I don't see as well as formerly and I hate night-driving, especially in a crowded city. But I submitted. Saturday night means dances—white coat like a barkeep—though my joints have begun to creak. The rest of the week the kids had the car. George, 19, had become girl conscious and demanded the car, Friday and Sunday nights. Sister had it the rest of the time; while Junior, not yet of licence age, had to be bribed constantly with loose change because he couldn't run the car.

"Then came rationing, and we drew an A-1 card. To preserve the peace, I railed and bawled along with the family. But in my secret heart I rejoiced. No driving into the bright lights Wednesdays, no creaky-joint dancing Saturdays. The kids couldn't run risks over which I stayed awake in dread.

"Our A-1 card is just enough to let the Little Woman do her marketing and church-going on Sunday. Now that we stay home, I broil a steak in the backyard. I do a lot of reading I never had time for, and I'm really becoming acquainted with my children.

"The older boy has signed up. That had a sobering effect on all of us. I'm thankful that the lack of gas and tires is helping me to really know my son. He's a fine boy.

"Just Dad".

Girl-Made Eyes For Old Land's War Implements

News of Women of United Kingdom — Centenarians "Stay Put" — Wedding Breakfasts Go Wartime Simple

By FOSTER BARCLAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Aug. 7. (CP) The keen, sensitive eyes of Mary Reed, 26-year-old former theatre usherette, and the deft eyes of a handful of eager girls are helping construct in a Midlands factory the "eyes" of Britain's war implements.

In the only factory of its kind in the United Kingdom they make the lens glass for airplanes, tanks, warships and anti-aircraft guns—an industry Germany virtually monopolized before the war. The accuracy of these weapons depends on the sharp eyesight of Mary, and her companions.

Mary's job is to test the gloss in its crude state before it goes to the lens grinder. The slightest flaw or impurity she overlooks might result in a defective periscope or a gunsight off the mark. She sits at a bench with a miniature magic-lantern at one end and a small white screen at the other. In the dark the beam from the later projects a circle of light on the screen, revealing any defects.

Tiny Flaws

Sometimes the flaw is a particle of dust which entered the glass when it was in liquid form. Sometimes it is a tiny reef, known as a "feather" or a "vein". The flaw is ringed with soft blue pencil and the piece of glass is passed to the grinding department where girls cut away the imperfection.

Grinding flaws from the glass is 19-year-old Lillian Wishard of Stanley, Durham. In an adjoining room other girls are constructing prism lenses. Each prism starts as a four-inch cube of solids, unpolished.

Come What May

Two centenaries, Mrs. Louisa Tasker and Miss Harriet Trigg, 100 and 101 respectively, haven't been scared by air raids on Britain. Miss Trigg, who has lived all her life in Portsmouth, has refused to be evacuated although high explosives and fire bombs have destroyed property close to her house. Mrs. Tasker, who celebrated her 100th birthday in London with a cake and traditional candles, would rather recall how she rode on the first horse tram than talk about the war.

Boom Land Army

Women shoppers and window gazers near Oxford Circus, centre of London's shopping district, are being invited to join Britain's toughest girls—The Women's Land Army. A recruiting office with two shop windows filled with display pictures and posters has been opposite a big departmental store. Shoppers can't fail to spot the slogan, "They Fight in the Fields", boldly painted across the office.

Cutting the Cost

Austerity was the keynote at the wedding reception for L.A.C. Norman Ely and his bride, Miss Helen MacMillian, at Swindon Wiltshire. The cost of all the food for twenty guests didn't exceed the equivalent of $1.75. The menu: tea, tomatoes, cheese and lettuce sandwiches—and fancy cakes.

QUEBEC TO PRODUCE SUGAR FROM BEETS

Quebec, Que., August 7 — Beet sugar will be produced in Quebec, as a war measure, when the proposed new beet sugar plant gets into operation at St. Hilaire. Construction will probably be completed in three weeks. Difficulties in obtaining the necessary materials, however, may retard the work. An excellent beet-root crop is expected this season. The enterprise has been sponsored by the Quebec Ministry of Agriculture.

Breaking the Ice With Party Games

"Weather Report" Slays 'Em!

When you can make bashful guests lose their self-consciousness in the first five minutes of your party, you're a brilliant hostess—an artist!

You can do it! Start by playing "Weather Report." Your friends not only TALK about the weather but hilariously ACT IT!

Guests divide into teams and each team acts out a word like "cloudy," "fair," "downpour." Dignified Jill and Jack look pretty funny—hurrying about in the "rain" with newspapers on their heads.

But the fun skyrockets when you play "King's Commands"! The "valet" cries, "The King wishes his crown!" And up from his chair leaps the player who is "crown," shouting "Crown!" Or the valet may cry, "The King wishes his brush!"—and up jumps "Brush!"

When "The King wishes his uniform!" everyone jumps up to change seats, the valet scrambles for one, and whoever' left is the valet. Breathless—and fun!

Our 32-page booklet, the answer to a hostess prayer, describes dozens of gay ice-breakers, games and amusing stunts. Has special bright ideas for costume parties.

Three Times as Many Women As Men Have Gallstones

Here are some interesting statistics about gallstones and gallbladder disease. Three times more women than men have gallstones. Gallbladder disease is a trouble of middle age and old age, but is not so common in youth. Chronic gallbladder inflammation can be present without any gallstones. Persons with chronic gallbladder inflammation may have pain in the right upper part of the abdomen and in the back. Vomiting is not a common symptom, but may be present in some patients. Usually the patient complains of indigestion, belching, and a bitter taste in the mouth. Fatty foods, particularly, seem to produce pain. Often the indigestion is accompanied by pain in the back which is annoying but not severe. There may be no relation of the pain or indigestion to eating or to the kind of food taken.

Insofar as the treatment for chronic gallbladder inflammation is concerned, usually the use of proper diet, rest, exercise and the reduction of weight will help to bring about improvement. If stones are present, as shown by the X-ray, removal of the gallbladder and stones may be necessary.

Acute inflammation of the gallbladder requires a different sort of treatment. In this disorder the pain begins suddenly in the right upper part of the abdomen. Sometimes the pain may be felt on the left side. The pain is constant and steady. There is also tenderness over the liver and, in some instances, fever. The number of white cells in the blood is increased, and vomiting and sickness to the stomach are also present.

The patient with acute gallbladder inflammation should be put into a hospital at once, if possible. He must be kept quiet and his nutrition kept up by giving injections of glucose into a vein. Since vomiting and sickness to the stomach are present, the nutrition of the patient is often interfered with. He must be kept under constant observation until operation and removal of the ball-bladder can be most satisfactorily carried out. The best time for performing the operation varies in different patients. In all cases of acute inflammation of the gallbladder operation will be needed. Too long delay in carrying out the operation may permit the gallbladder to rupture, leading to peritonitis. This is a serious and dangerous condition.

On the other hand, with chronic inflammation of the gallbladder, operation can be avoided in many instances. If the disease develops in a younger patient, he should be informed that his symptoms may persist for many years and interfere greatly with his activities, so that operation may be the means of preventing much discomfort. In older patients chronic gall-bladder disease may be mild and easily controlled by medical treatment.

Fashion Flashes

SEEMS BUT YESTERDAY that we were viewing summer collections and now we're knee-deep in autumn clothes. We note that many of the new clothes have sequined pockets in place of fabric pockets on suit jackets and that there are full and pleated fur sleeves to offset fabric sleeve limitations.

Just the thing for now is an afternoon dress of dark green silk jersey made with a low, curved and draped neckline, caught-up sleeves, modified front fullness with peg top pockets and drapery.

Easy to wear hats are a feature of the new season. As for instance a large beret worn well back on the head fashioned of navy felt all-over quilted and mounted on red grosgrain.

Never so many new blouses as will be seen this season. A grand new suit number is of black and white checked silk with an overplaid in red and blue. Made with a waistcoat front and a small bow neckline.

It seems that the so-called "cocktail suit" will take place of the "after five" dress this autumn. Black wool is used for a smart suit with collarless high neckline and an elaborately embroidered jet and sequined yoke either side of the molded closing, which has jet buttons.

Just looking at a group of winter coats we noticed that everyone liked a coat of beige woollen with extended shoulder line, yoke and sleeves of mink. Shown with tiny barrel muff of mink with beige velvet ruffles.

WILL QUESTION YOUTH ON STADIUM FIRE

Montreal, Aug. 7.—(CP)—Police said yesterday that a youth was being detained for questioning in connection with the Ontario Stadium fire and panic where three persons lost their lives Monday.

Chief of Detectives Armand Brodeur said that the name of the detained youth was being "withheld for the moment."

At the fire commissioner's inquiry, held Wednesday, Elisee Julien, co-proprietor of the stadium, testified that a youth had been ejected just before the fire, and that the youth said: "You'll never finish your show tonight. You'll remember me!"

The fire was labelled "of criminal origin" by Fire Commissioner Emile Massicotte at the inquiry.

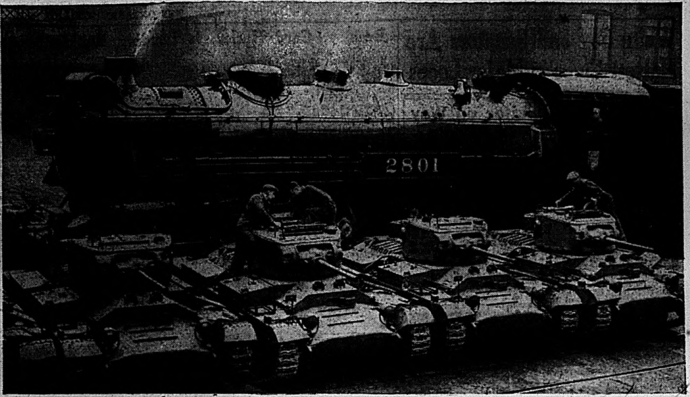
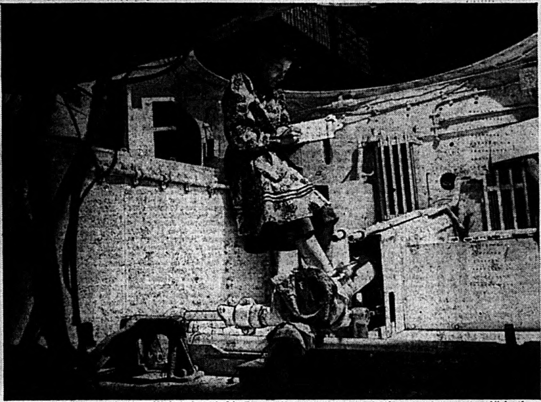
Off to the wars. Hundreds of Canadian-built Valentine tanks are fighting the Nazi horde in Russia, where this trainload of 18-ton monsters is heading. As big as a living room in an average home, the Valentine travels at 20 m.p.h.



Out of a famous locomotive works which a few months ago produced its first tank, a steady stream of Valentines is going out every day to the world's battlefronts. Swift conversion of the plant to a tank arsenal is an adventure in wartime industry. This line-up of completed Valentines contrasts strikingly with the locomotive giant in the background. The plant is meeting a rigorous schedule.



A trick of the camera gives the interior of this Ram tank a cavernous appearance. By the time all armaments and fittings are installed there will be just enough elbow room to permit the crew to operate efficiently. Rotary turret on a Ram tank gives gunner a maximum range. The girl is checking installation of equipment.

Among toughest army jobs is that of this commander. He directs tanks in action.

These stacks of Ram tank treads are one example of many wartime uses for rubber which dictate the policy of conservation of auto tires, other rubber products.

These heavy infantry tanks of a bilingual battalion from Quebec are part of the Canadian Army Tank Brigade, photographed during intensive manoeuvres in England. The outfit has been built into a powerful, effective striking force.

Part of the production line in the Ram tank factory, second largest arsenal for tank production in the world. Heavily armed with machine guns and cannon, the Ram is powered with a Wright Whirlwind engine, a versatile war machine.

White Sox and Senators Are Hottest Clubs in Major Loops

Bobo Newsom Sets Back Yankees, While Pale Hose Beat Tigers Handily

Mel Ott Hits for Circuit as Giants Beat Ancient Rivals in Brooklyn

With practically no fanfare two of the American League clubs suffering from sleeping sickness as the result of staying too near the contagious cellar zone suddenly have shown unexpected signs of life.

Chicago White Sox have won half-a-dozen games in succession in recent days and Washington has won seven out of nine in the last couple of weeks for what amounts to a sizzling spurt for the Senators.

Last night, led by the irrepressible Bobo Newsom, they set down New York Yankees 6-3 in a free-hitting affair in which Washington made 14 blows and the Yanks 11. In addition the usually flawless Yanks contributed a couple of errors to rookie Hank Borowy's second defeat of the season. It was Newsom's sixth victory against 14 defeats.

The White Sox whipped Detroit Tigers 4-1 with Edgar Smith pitching six-hit ball and losing a shutout because Jim Bloodworth belted a home run in the eighth.

In the only other American League game Boston Red Sox scored their second straight shutout as Bill Butland, ordinarily used for relief chores, pitched four-hit ball to beat Philadelphia Athletics 2-0.

Cleveland's doubleheader at St. Louis was postponed.

Only one game was scheduled in the National League and in this New York Giants released all the pent-up fury of their last three days to overwhelm Broklyn Dodgers 8-0 with five home runs and a steady seven-hit pitching performance by Prince Hal Schumacher.

Mel Ott hit two of New York's circuit blows, bringing his total for the season to 18, and Bill Werber, Mickey Witek and Buster Maynard accounted for the others.

Lifer on Way To Majors?

Salem, Ore., Aug. 7 (AP)—Considering that he's a lifer in the Oregon State Penitentiary, Keith (Big Luke) Crosswhite was doing right well today toward realizing his ambition to be a major-league pitcher.

He's a long way from Yankee stadium and Warden George G. Alexander still has plenty of strings attached, but "Big Luke" is now a full-fledged member of the mound staff of the Salem Senators in the western International Baseball League.

Crosswhite, a model prisoner during the 11 years he's served since being convicted of the murder of a state policeman at La Grande, Ore., signed on the dotted line last night with business manager Al Lightner—and with Warden Alexander's consent.

The Warden didn't go all the way, however. Crosswhite will be permitted outside prison walls just long enough for the Senators' home appearances.

Beazley, Card Hurler, Is Leading Rookie Flinger

(By Central Press Canadian)

Without much fanfare, John (Nig) Beazley, tall rookie right-hander of the St. Louis Cardinals, has pitched himself into the National league sports picture as "the" rookie hurler of the year.

Beazley was just another Cardinal hurler in the spring. Harry Brecheen, Murray Dickson and Howard Pollett were the big minor league names. But given a chance to make good, Beazley has come along until today he stands as the leading Cardinal twirler and one of the five top flingers in the senior circuit.

Beazley, 23 years old, pitched for New Orleans last year. He won 16 games before Cardinal scouts spotted him and brought him up to the St. Louis club near the tail end of the season. He did get in one game and hurled a victory on closing day.

Beazley, a Nashville, Tenn., product, has a terrific fast ball and ranked second in the Southern association in strikeouts last year. He gives Ray Blades, ex-big league manager, credit for developing him into a pitcher.

The tall right-hander has won 12 games this season. He could be a 20-game winner with a little extra work and some breaks.

LEAFS LOSE TWO TO BALTIMORE; ROYALS SPLIT

Rampaging Orioles Capture Both Ends Bargain Bill by 4-0 and 9-7 Scores

GIANTS SPLIT

Dusak and Triplett of Red Wings Look to be Major League Timber

Although Rochester Red Wings are mired in the International League cellar there still are a few members of the team who are likely candidates for the major leagues.

Among them is Ervin Dusak, hard-hitting infielder - outfielder who is on option from the parent St. Louis Cardinals. Dusak and Hopper Triplett represent virtually all the team's punch.

Dusak has been going at a terrific clip the past few weeks, bringing his average over the .300 mark to be one of the few batters in the circuit in the charmed circle.

The Wings split a doubleheader with Syracuse Chiefs last night, winning the first game behind the five-hit pitching of Jean Roy, 3-2, and losing the second, 3-1. Nate Andrews turned in a five-hitter in the nightcap, with the only run being Dusak's 13th homer of the campaign.

Buffalo Bisons put on a storybook finish to capture the opening game of a twin bill from Jersey City Giants, 4-3. Trailing, 3-0 in the last frame and with one out, Mayo Smith hammered a home run with the bases loaded to give Andy Sierra his 14th conquest of the year.

The Giants took the aftermath behind the six-hit pitching of Dave Koslo, 4-0.

The rampaging Baltimore Orioles captured both ends of a bargain bill from Toronto Maple Leafs, 4-0 and 9-7. Elmer Burkart, in the opener gave up only six hits. Ted Sczephowski led the eight-hit attack against Bill Brandt with a three-run homer, double and single. The wind-up was a nightmarish affair, especially for Eddie Leip of the Leafs.

Leip made four errors, three of them in the fifth inning which gave the Orioles four runs. Leip partly made up for this by getting four hits in four trips to the plate. Hank Edwards and George Staller cracked out homers for the Orioles. The double triumph placed the Orioles in a virtual tie with the Leafs for third place.

The league-leading Newark Bears split a twin feature with Montreal Royals, winning the opener, 13-4 and losing the closing encounter, 2-0. Russ Derry and Bud Metheny led the 13-hit attack in the first game with four-masters. Chet Kehn turned back the hard-hitting Bears with six hits in the nightcap.

CORBINS WIN FIRST LEAGUE PLAYDOWN

Defeat Zellers 17 to 15 in Free-Hitting Contest That Was Called in 8th by Darkness

PITCHERS HIT HOMERS

Pounding out hit for hit and scoring run for run the Corbin "lockmakers" who squeezed into the Ladies' Softball League playdowns by winning three of their last league scheduled games, rose to more dizzy heights at the Exhibition Park when Barney Smith's nine surprised all and sundry with a 17 to 15 victory over the league leading Zellers in the first game of the league play-offs. The game was called in the top half of the ninth on account of darkness and with Corbins scoring several, but the count reverted back to the full inning giving Corbins first blood in the league playdowns.

The Corbin lassies scored early and were leading by a 13 to 5 count when the bottom half of the seventh rolled around. Chuck Barnett's twice league champions, rose up in their half of the seventh to score eight and tie the score. Coming back strongly Corbins pushed over four in their half of the eighth, while the best the Zellers could do was count two. Corbins were again on a batting spree when Umpire Eddie Schrieder decided it was too dark for further competition and terminated matters to assure Corbins of victory.

Plenty of Errors

Ev. Fitzgibbon hurled for Corbins while "Pee Wee" Colden labored off the Zeller mound. Both pitchers were hit hard and frequent, but managed to help their own cause as each hit the only circuit blows registered in the score book. The fielding of both clubs was poor, neither pitcher getting what might be termed play-off support from their teammates. Cook and the Zebedee sisters wielded potent bats for the Corbins while Gwen Bennett and Boyle collected the majority of hits for the Barnett-led nine. In the next league semi-final play-off game SWACO meets Deacons Tuesday.

The lineups:

Corbin "Lockmakers"—Kyle lf; Barnhardt cf; Cook rf; Elliott 1b; Fitzgibbons p; Baylx 2b; M. Zebedee c; Hill ss; and B. Zebedee 3b.

Zellers—Bennett 3b; Clarke rf; Garrow ss; Donovan and Flindall c; Douglas cf; Boyle lf; Haslip 2b; Colden p and Sherry 1b.

Score by innings:

Corbins	130 050 44	—17 runs
Zellers	102 011 82	—15 runs

Umpires: Schrieder and Bawden.

Canadian Boxer, Patsy Brandino, Scores Sixth K. O.

Fall River, Mass., Aug. 7 (CP)—Canada's former amateur featherweight champion, Patsy Brandino of Hamilton, Ont., was marked today by ring-wise veterans as a promising newcomer to United States fistic ranks.

Brandino last night scored his sixth consecutive victory via the knockout route since turning pro a few months ago by gaining a technical knockout over Jimmy McLarnin of New Bedford, Mass., in a scheduled six-round bout in the Casino here. He weighed 130 pounds to McLarnin's 131.

The Hamilton youngster smothered McLarnin with lefts and rights in the first two rounds and continued his attack in the third. Just before the bell ended the round, McLarnin went down for a count of nine and was unable to answer the call for the fourth round. It went into the books as a technical knockout in the fourth.

Brandino now makes his headquarters at Providence, R.I., where two other Hamilton battlers, Jackie and Angelo Callura, are established.

PROTEST GAME WON BY I.T.S. SOFTBALLERS

No. 5 Flyers Advance to R.C.A.F. Provincial Semi-Finals at Toronto by Beating No. 6 R. D.

SCORE 11 to 0

Al Bell Pitches Four-Hit Ball as Team Mates Blast Two Repair Depot Pitchers

Protests mean nothing to the No. 5 ITS Flyers, they say their softball on the diamond. Last Tuesday Archie Green's No. 5 Flyers trounced the No. 6 Repair Depot boys from Trenton to win the district Air Force softball honors and earn the right to advance to the provincial R.C.A.F. softball semi-finals in Toronto on Saturday. But the No. 6 R.D. moguls weren't satisfied and protested, getting much material and committee room help from the Mountain View "Bombers" and Trenton R.C.A.F. with the result Tuesday's game was ordered played over again and proving their superiority the local No. 5 Flyers beat the "Repair Boys" much more badly last night, winning 11 to 1.

Two Home Runs

Although the ITS clubbed two of the No. 6 moundsmen for 15 base hits, to Pitcher Al Bell goes the lion's share of advancing the local Flyers into the R.C.A.F. softball semi-finals at Toronto Saturday. Bell pitched a four-hitter and blanked the Trenton "repairmen" for the last eight innings. Russell started on the hilltop for the homesters, but was derricked in the seventh when the No. 5 ITS staged an uprising and scored seven runs. Beattie, a former Toronto softball moundsman, finished the losers' pitching chore, but the damage had been done.

Eddie Conway and Jones hit home runs for the local Airmen, as Conway added a double, and single to lead the Greensters on the attack. Bell helped his own cause with a double and single while Conley has a triple and double and Green, a double and single.

The line-ups—

No. 5 ITS—Conway 2b, Green rf, Forman c, Weir 1b, Parry cf, Conley ss, Jones lf, Gleason 3b, and Bell p.

No. 6 Repair Depot—Lanriault ss, Harnden 2b, Bullard c, Paggart rf, Gluskin cf, Thompson b, Smith lf, Hastings 1b, Russell and Beattie p.

Sport Short

(By SCOTT YOUNG)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Mississauga Golf Club, Port Credit, Ont., Aug. 7. (CP)—Freak of the week: Montreal's Stan Horne banged a long two-iron tee shot into the left hip pocket of Sheriff Fred Graves, St. Catharines, Ont., on the third hole of his first round in the Canadian open yesterday. . . .It was a cushion shot—off the umbrella the Sheriff was carrying, then off a program he had jammed into his pocket and finally to rest. . . The way Horne played his first nine yesterday, it's no wonder the ball wanted to get away from it all. . .He recovered brilliantly after an out-going 40 to score 33 coming in for a 73.

Only important pros missing from the open field are Sam Snead, Jug McSpaden, Jimmy Demaret, Dutch Harrison and Byron Nelson . . . . Maybe after looking at yesterday's scores they're glad they stayed home . . . .The first hole here, only 325 yards long, was hard for the boys to birdie. ... Roland Huot of Ottawa Chaudiere was one of the few to do it. . .Brother Jules Huot of Quebec City made one of the best putts of the day on the third—a 15-footer along a slope calling for plenty of something the pros call borrowed speed, whatever that is.

Bill Ezinicki, the Winnipeg hockey player who recently took up residence at Oshawa, Ont., shared the nine-hole honors with Clayton Heafner and Ben Hogan . . . Heafner had the best first nine, 31, and Hogan and Ezinicki each had a 32 on the second nine to lead the field.. . . .Ezinicki finished with five threes, a par and four birdies. . . . His total of 73 puts him in a good spot to catch Skee Riegel and Frank Stranahan, the two leading amateurs (71's), if they can be caught . . . . Len Jones, Windsor amateur, had the doubtful honor of the highest score on the first nine, a 49 . . . Amateur Bob Barringer of Timmins, Ont., and Bill Freeman, Toronto York Downs pro, had their scores mixed on the official board. . . .Barringer was horrified when he noticed it, and was heard to wonder out loud: "The people back home will think I've gone crazy."

Stan Leonard, the steady Vancouver pro, impressed the gallery although his 74 was far off the pace. . . . The wise men believe he'll get close yet. . . . There was terrific confusion around the score board all day, with about 20 cancellations and 25 post entries. . . In addition, some of the post entries didn't turn in cards. . . .wouldn't know there was gasoline rationing or a tire shortage by the crowd—the same old prosperous group of blonde, tanned babes and miscellaneous tanned men.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

IT IS TO BE HOPED the base lines, coaching boxes, batter's box and foul flags at the Exhibition Park diamond will be properly in place before Reliance and No. 5 ITS tangle in their second meeting tonight. Upon whose shoulders the responsibility of marking the softball diamond lies we are not exactly clear, but one thing is certain—the clubs are paying for such a service.

Archie Major's Reliance mushballers are slightly better off for pitching strength tonight than are Archie Green's Flyers Skipper Major has Mike Power, Freddie Vasil and even Bill Anderson, who hasn't pitched since Monday, to select from, while Spike Pryka will be back at third for Reliance, permitting Chuck Barriage and Tilly Donihee to return to their respective positions at short and second while Pete Horeck will doubtless start in right field. The other night we saw Don Bowen sitting in the stand while the Reliance nine was in dire need of hitters. Strange.

A LOSS FOR RELIANCE tonight means elimination, while Skipper Green can afford to gamble on his pitching staff as the Flyers already have one victory, in a best-in-three series, tucked under their proverbial softball belts. With Jack Weir returning to his first basing duties for the Flyers his presence in the line-up gives Green's scrappers additional power. Then again Skipper Green returns to right field to give the Flyers the strongest trio of ball hawks in the loop, ie Doidge, Parry and Green, all fleet-footed outer gardeners who can cover more ground than is appreciated by their opposition. For pitching the Flyers have Ray Smith and Al Bell with the latter being decidedly the better bet. However, the Airmen have taken part in three league games, one in the city loop and two in their Air Force regional finals, already this week and Bell has been on the mound every time out, but there's definitley a limit to human endurance.

THE No. 5 FLYERS are really giving their district air force contemporaries the Bronx cheer today. The ITS. Flyers were ordered to replay their game with the No. 6 Repair Depot last night and what a job Green's charges did as they trounce the "R. D." nine 11 to 1 last night with Al Bell hurling a four-hitter. Jones and Conway hit home runs as the ITS. blasted two of the No. 6 R. D. pitchers for 15 safeties. In winning the No. 5 ITS. squad won the regional championship of the Air Force and earned the right to advance to the semi-finals of the provincial R.C.A.F. softball playdowns in Toronto on Saturday. Green's charges meet the Niagara Peninsula Air Force champions in Toronto on Saturday afteroon and if success play in the finals at night. If they advance to the Air Force finals it will mean the local Flyers will have taken part in six championship softball games this week, two of which were played in our City League series.

NOW IT CAN BE TOLD. About ten days ago the Corbin "lockmakers" were just out of the cellar position and skating on thin ice, insofar as a play-off berth in the Ladies Softball League was concerned. The pressure was brought to bear on Barney Smith, former manager of the Corbins, who consented to come out of retirement and coach the "lockmakers," who won three of their final four scheduled league games to cinch a play-off berth, but that wasn't anything. Last night in the first girls' softball play-of versus the top-notch Zeller's, Barney Smith's charges continued their winning ways and serves, by beating Chuck Barnett's Big-Z lassies 17 to 15 and were mounting their score when the game was called on account of darkness. They do say Skipper Barnett is still wandering around in a quandry trying to assure himself he isn't dreaming. Yes, there's definitely a new threat on the gal's softball horizon today.

REMEMBER WHEN JOE LOUIS registered his 20th knockout in 24 professional fights seven years ago today when he knocked out King Levinski, Chicago fish peddler? Two years later he won the heavyweight boxing championship of the world and still rules the division. Earlier in the year, he joined the United States army as a buck private, but today has advanced to the rank of a corporal and is expected to put up another stripe soon.

SOME OF THE MAJOR Baseball league clubs are proceeding with their 1943 spring training and exhibition game schedules, the curtailment suggestion of Detroit's Jack Zeller notwithstanding. It now appears the first and talented St. Louis Browns, a first division probability for the first time in years, will supplant the Philadelphia Athletics in the Southern California foursome. The Pirates have indicated they will return to San Bernardino, if possible. The White Sox are sure to go to Pasadena and may share what they claim is the best training site in America, with the Cubs. The Cubs, if Catalina is not available, have several other spots in view, including their own Wrigley Field in Los Angeles.

WITH SO MUCH BALLYHOO about negroes being included in the major ball loops, Leroy (Satchel) Paige, top-ranking negro pitcher, wasn't a bit backward recently when he said: "It just couldn't be." Of course Paige was thinking somewhat of finances, as he receives more cold cash than any major league pitcher, getting somewhere in the neighborhood of $40,000 last year while pitching as a free lance. Satchel points out that colored players wouldn't be able to train with white folk down south, nor could they eat with them in the larger hotels, all of which would make the mingling of negroes in the major leagues far from harmonious. "It just wouldn't work out successfully, at least as far as I'm concerned," the top-ranking negro in the United States admitted recently. (And Landis knew it all the time.)

THIS AND THAT—THE BOYS are really shooting "hot golf" in the qualifying rounds of the Canadian Open....Several of the boys were among the cancellations yesterday, including Bill Little of the Bay of Quinte Country Club here....Tot Pressnell has been strictly a relief pitcher since joining the Chicago Cubs and hasn't started a game ....Jimmy Foxx says he won't ride the bench in the majors, it's either a regular position or he'll retire, says Jimmy....He would appreciate a managerial shot, however....No National League batsman has won the National League batting crown twice in succession since the days of Roger Hornsby....Pete Reiser seems well on the way to accomplish that little feat, however..... With Hal Schumacher blanking the Dodgers, the Giants proved real giant-killers yesterday by walloping the Brooklyns 8-0.....See Nugger Bennett, former Belleville left fielder went hitless for Frood the other night, the first game in a month that Nugger has failed to connect safely....The Leafs lost two to the Orioles yesterday and dropped back into fourth place....And they were doing so good until Syracuse kicked 'em around a week ago....get in step.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

(By The Associated Press)

Mel Ott, Giants: Hit two of his club's five home runs to wallop Dodgers.

Bill Butland, Red Sox: Pitched four-hit shutout against Athletics.

Edgar Smith, White Sox: Scored third victory of season with six-hit hurling against Tigers.

Roy Cullenbine, Senators: Made three hits and drove in two runs to lead assault on Yankees.

Former Stirling Couple Observes 54th Wedding Anniversary

Stirling —(Special)— Mr. and Mrs. John N. Duncan of Toronto, former residents of Stirling, were guests of honor at a dinner party held at the Elliott House in Toronto on Tuesday August 4th as they celebrated their 54th wedding anniversary amid a small group of friends and the immediate members of their family. Mr. and Mrs. Duncan, who moved to Toronto from Stirling about thirty-two years ago, still enjoy exceptionally good health and were the recipients of messages from many friends as they marked their anniversary. Married in Christ Church, Leicester City, Leicestershire, England, they came to Canada with their family in 1907 and after settling for a time in Deseronto and Stirling moved to Toronto where they have remained ever since. Mr. Duncan, who is now in his 82nd year, is a retired engineer and spends his days with his best-loved hobby in his flower garden specializing in dahlias and roses. This work in addition to a brisk walk each morning keeps him in excellent health. Keenly interested in present day war news he listens daily to broadcasts from his native London and is familiar with all places now prominent in the news.

During the festivities a message of congratulation was received from Rev. F. A. Robinson, M.A., D. Th., former minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling, who has maintained a close friendship with the honored couple since leaving the village. Guests present for the occasion included Arthur Duncan, Stirling; William Duncan, Toronto; Miss Doris Duncan, a granddaughter and Miss Mabel Duncan, the youngest daughter, also of Toronto. Mr. and Mrs. John Duncan, Jr., and their son were unable to join the family. All are well known in Stirling district and to Mr. and Mrs. Duncan go the good wishes of many friends from this district.

VOTES TO APPEAL

They had Gandhi's own word last night, on the eve of the conference, that now is the time for non-violent action and that time would show what strength the Congress could marshal from his masses of disciples. There was no hint of any wavering.

Neither was there any doubt that the committee would adopt the resolution from the party's smaller working committee calling for a vast movement under Gandhi's generalship unless independence were granted.

All Bombay was asking: When would mass disobedience begin? How widespread would it be? What would it take? Boycott? Highway stoppages? The shunning of dealings with foreigners? Even a general strike?

And Gandhi gave the word simply that a general strike is "not outside my contemplation."

Written Answers to Questions

His statement was issued last night in the form of written answers to questions from newspaper correspondents.

Before he would begin a mass movement he said, he would write to the British Viceroy "pleading for avoiding conflict" and that a basis for negotiations might be found in a favorable response.

He said bluntly that once India were freed he would, with the approval of the United Nations, be prepared to go as an emissary of peace to Japan—a project which he granted might be "the effort and optimism of a visionary."

His replies reflected his own assurance that the Congress would approve his long - contemplated movement for the removal of British rule from India in order, as the resolution put it, that India may put her soul into the United Nations' fight.

Gandhi Answers Inquiries

The first question, noting doubts in the United States over his attitude toward Japan, asked Gandhi whether he could give assurances that "even if there was a time when you thought of dealing with Japan you would not consider it now."

He replied:

"I can give no such assurance because if I deal with Japan and if I am allowed to do so by the contemplated free India, I should do so in the interest purely of the allied cause.

"It may be the effort and optimism of a visionary but it can do no harm to the war effort. It will discredit Japan if a friendly gesture on the behalf of groaning humanity is repelled . . . independence has first to come and then I must have permission of a free India government which will, as a new alley, seek approval of the united nations for my humanitarian mission."

The second question was whether any assurance of post-war freedom would be acceptable and Gandhi answered:

"1. . . waiting is harmful. The attainment of independence after the war would lose its charm. India would not feel that it had made any real effort to win independence and it must be humiliating for a big nation like India not to be able to help . . . ensure victory for the allied cause."

Question About Possible Steps

Answering question No. 3, whether he could divulge some of the non-violent steps to be taken, he said "wait and see."

Asked next how quickly he thought he could win and whether he regarded a total general strike as essential for speed, Gandhi gave this reply:

". . . in non-violent action God is the decisive factor . . . you are right, however, when you say that for a swift ending a general strike is necessary. It is not outside my contemplation."

He added that he would "move with utmost caution" because the struggle is conceived "in the friendliest spirit . . . but if a general strike becomes a dire necessity I shall not flinch . . . history will regard what amazing restraint will have been exercised now over forces which history would also record were within control of the congress."

It was in answer to the final question, whether he contemplated negotiating with Britain before initiating the movement, that Gandhi said he had planned an interval in which to write to the Viceroy, Lord Linlithgow, and await his reply.

German raiders also were busy over Britain again during the night, dropping high explosives and incendiaries — including a new type phosphorus fire bomb—at scattered points in East Anglia and on the east coast of Scotland.

DNB, the German news and propaganda agency, said Nazi raiders attacked Edinburgh and the university town of Cambridge.

The raids were not on a heavy scale, however, and although there were some casualties fire reports indicated the number was not large.

Phosphorus Bomb Fires Extinguished

Britons had been prepared for the new phosphorus bombs by a bulletin from the ministry of home security, which gave explicit instructions for dealing with these incendiaries. As a result fires were extinguished with a minimum of damage.

In one southwest coast town the Nazi raiders demolished a section of a hospital causing several fatalities and trapping a number of patients in the debris.

A coastal resort, crowded with vacationers, was attacked by a single low-flying plane which sprayed the streets with machine-gun fire. Several persons were injured.

No Alert at London

A few planes were heard over London and searchlights fingered the sky, but no alert was sounded and there was no gunfire. Apparently the planes were British aircraft, continuing a test of the capital's strengthened defences. The test was begun Wednesday night when R.A.F. bombers and fighters swept over the city single and in mass formation, dodging and twisting in an effort to escape searchlight beams.

"GENE AUTRY"

The top screen cowboy in top screen entertainment!

That's Gene Autry in Republic's "Home in Wyomin'," musical western previewed last night at the Capitol Theatre. And we are happy to report that the phenomenally popular Mr. Autry is as tuneful, entertaining and altogether satisfactory as ever.

If anyone questions the secret of Autry's popularity, let him but witness the pleasant, unassuming manner in which he portrays the ex-rodeo star who returns to his own outfit, when he learns it is in trouble, to pull it back on its feet again.

When there is evidence of foul play behind the rodeo's impending downfall, Gene goes into action, and soon the plains resound with the gunfire of pursuing cowboys and fleeing villains.

Smiley Burnette and Fay McKenzie again headline the supporting cast. Smiley is his usual hilarious screen personality, and Fay is lovelier than ever as the heroine.

An outstanding supporting cast includes James Seay, Chick Chandler, Forrest Taylor, Joe Strauch, Jr., George Douglas, Olin Howlin, Hal Price and James McNamara.

"Charlie Chaplin"

One great controversy, extremely important to countless lovers of entertainment, is settled for all time by "The Charlie Chaplin Festival." currently on view at the Capitol Theatre last night.

The question, asked by many youthful doubters, was: "Can Charlie Chaplin be as funny as we've always heard he is?" The answer, confirmed by his hilarious fun-making on the screen of the Capitol Theatre, and by the unrestrained shouts, yells and screams of laughter from the audience, is an emphatic and unqualified "Yes!"

A colored fun cartoon and the final chapter of "Dick Tracy vs. Crime Inc." completes another great week-end bill.

AT THE BELLE

"Fantasia"

The great news in the entertainment world is that Walt Disney's sensational full-length feature, "Fantasia" is at last coming to the Belle Theatre, this weekend, at regular prices, following a run of one year on Broadway, at advanced prices.

"Fantasia" released by RKO Radio has been hailed as the most exciting and important picture since "The Birth of a Nation." Critics and public alike have sung its praises in extravagant terms. No two persons ever describe it the same way: "Fantasia" has so many wonders that it apparently appeals to the taste of every man, woman and child who has seen it.

Comedy and charm together dominate "Fantasia." For instance Mickey Mouse makes his debut in his first full-length feature in a side-splitting characterization, the Sorcerer's Apprentice who can start mischief going, but can't stop it. There are also five-hundred-odd new Disney characters, and Mickey's shining eyes sparkle in the company of such new characters as Mlle. Upanova (pronounce it slowly and you'll get the gag!). The ostrich ballerina to end all ballerinas, and Hyacinth Hippo, as hilarious a character as Walt Disney ever drew.

Here are some facts about "Fantasia." It cost more than $2,200,000! The Disney artists drew more than 600,000 celluloid drawings and 1500 backgrounds, not counting hundreds of preliminary sketches. The Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leopold Stokowski, recorded more than 450,000 feet of music on film, played by the orchestra's full complement of 103 men. This music, of course, is the accompaniment for the seven exciting, beautiful and hilarious divisions of "Fantasia," each introduced by the genial Deems Taylor as master of ceremonies.

It all sounds fantastic—and that's how they describe "Fantasia", like nothing the entertainment world has ever known before! And it's pronounced to rhyme, appropriately enough, with "amaze you!"

"Mokey", Human, Appealing

Three little-known names will flash across the screen of the Belle Theatre in "Mokey," the added feature attraction. You can note each of them down in your little black book as having big things ahead. The three newcomers were eight year old Bobby Blake, Donna Reed and Dan Dailey, Jr.

Bobby, in the title role, proves a thoroughly lovable and talented youngster. It is his first role out of "Our Gang" pictures, and he makes the most of it.

Miss Reed, as his stepmother, and Dailey as the father, are equally impressive. In almost their first leading roles, they carry themselver like screen veterans.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Remember Pearl Harbor"

As timely as tomorrow's newspaper headlines and even twice as exciting is "Remember Pearl Harbor," the Republic action drama which opened yesterday at the McCarthy Theatre.

Magnificently enacted by a splendid cast which includes Donald M. Barry, Allan Curtis, Fay McKenzie and Sig Ruman, and brilliantly directed by Joseph Santley, this new motion picture is one of the most vivid and entertaining films produced in many years.

The battle scenes at the climax are, of course, entirely fictional. Nevertheless they have been splendidly staged and rank among the most spectacular ever filmed in Hollywood.

Barry, Curtis and Holmes are seen as three soldier pals stationed at a U.S. army post in the Philippines. Barry is the "rugged individualist" of the trio whose blithe disregard for rules and regulations keeps not only himself, but the other two as well constantly in hot water.

The second feature on this double program is the "Confessions of Boston Blackie" with Chester Morris.

Starting tomorrow is "Eagle Squadron', which will run continuously all day Saturday. Doors open at 1 p.m.

Reliance Cricket Team Loses Low Scoring Game

Becoming more proficient as they learn the finer points of the game, the Reliance Cricket Club played an exhibition test match versus the Trenton R.C.A.F. cricketers on their Exhibition Park pitch last evening with the visiting airmen winning with 63 runs against 21 with all out. On the R.C.A.F. eleven were several old country and experienced Australian players however.

The local bowlers for this low scoring match, included Messrs. Richens, Farnsworth, Morch and Godwin. On Wednesday night the Reliance Cricket Club lost an exhibition match to the Picton R.A.F. team 110 to 32 runs for seven out. On Sunday afternoon the Reliance cricketers will entertain a team from the Mountain View R.C.A.F. Bombing School to which the public is invited.

A MAN'S WOMAN

by JANE DIXON

CHAPTER 28
HOME AGAIN!

Kay did not wait to close her desk. She pulled on her hat. Her bag—where did she keep her bag?—oh, yes, here in the top drawer. Words danced before her eyes like flames. "Hurry." "Mother in bad shape." "Hurry! Hurry!"

But she couldn't leave this way, without notice, without explanation. She owed it to her employer to tell him she must hurry. There was Mr. Burge now. He'd just come in. Hurry!

"Mr. Burge," she said, white and breathless, "I must go. At once the message said . . ."

Burge fixed Kay with a cold stare.

"Wait a minute, Miss Kenyon," he said. "Sit down." He pulled a chair to his desk. "What's this all about?"

Kay said, agonized, "please don't ask me to sit down. I can't possibly. It's my mother. Something has happened to her. She's ill, hurt, I don't know. I must go to her. I can't lose a second."

"You don't make sense, Miss Kenyon," Burge said, suspiciously—"Is your mother ill or is she injured." Surely you know."

"The message didn't say," Burge's cold stare pinioned Kay. "It said she is in bad shape, for me to come at once, to hurry. But I can't stand here explaining. I must hurry."

Burge's jaw snapped.

"Take it easy, Miss Kenyon," he said. "You are in the midst of a promotion for National Candy. Only this morning one of your firms crawled out of their contract. We've spent money on your idea—plenty of it. What do you expect us to do? Throw it down the drain?"

"Oh, Mr. Burge," said said miserably, "it isn't as bad as you say. Really it isn't. Louisiana Belles is well under way. Only a few details to be ironed out. I've taken care of Nu-Novelties and the miniature kettles. They'll be delivered on time, within the ten-day limit. Mr. Ellis knows as much about the display as I do. He can take over, do a better job than I could do. I'm sorry, but my mother—she's all I have."

"Very well, Miss Kenyon," Burge said. "You're another proof of what I've always held—women have no place in business. Too emotional. Something breaks and they lose their heads. Sign off at the desk in the employees' office as you go out."

"Thank you," Kay said and made for the exit. Her feet kept pace with her racing heart. She caught a taxi. The subway would be intolerable. She stopped at the desk of her hotel for the message. She read it again. It was even more ominous, at first hand.

"I'll be leaving as soon as I can pack," she told the clerk. "Please have my bill ready."

"Bad news?" the middle-aged woman on duty asked, solicitously.

"I'm afraid—yes." Kay's lips quivered.

"That's too bad. Anything we can do for you? I could get off for say fifteen minutes. The cashier'd watch the desk for me. Maybe I could help you pack."

"Kay said, "I've only a few things. They won't take a minute. It's kind of you to offer." People were kind, working people. There was a fraternity in work.

On the way up in the elevator Kay thought, "I'll phone Ronnie. He'll know the short cuts, and the shortest way home. And pray heaven he's in."

"What is it, Red?" he wanted to know. "You sound like the roof's fallen in."

"It has," Kay said. "I had a wire from Aunt Cora. Something's happened to mother. I must get home. what's the quickest way?"

A brief pause then Ronnie said, "there's a plane at one o'clock this afternoon. La Guardia Field. I'll attend to everything. Pick you up at quarter to twelve.

"I'll be in the lobby, waiting. Don't be late. Oh, Ronnie . . ."

"Now—now, nothing's happened yet. Keep the chin up. I'll be seeing you."

"Flight No. 16. Flight No. 16," came from the loud speaker at the airport.

Ronnie said, "here we go." He walked with Kay toward the enclosure. Nice ship. The weather's right, too. Now up the gang-plank. Here we are. Seat four. And eight. As usual, I'm right behind you. Comfortable?"

"Ronnie," Kay said, aware that the plane was about to take off. "You're staying on? You're going with me?"

Ronnie said as casually as though they were on a city bus, "I most certainly am going with you. You don't think I'd let you roam around in the blue alone, feeling as you do Beside, flying's my dish. I never miss a chance to take off at the slightest excuse. Lean back and close your eyes. Fly with the ship. Don't try to buck it. We'll be up in the lane in a minute and zooming along as smooth as a ribbon."

A long silence, longer than Kay realized. She was exhausted, physically and emotionally. Time ceased to exist for her. Then suddenly, she was sitting erect, fumbling a piece of paper in her pocket. The telegram. That was why she was here, winging through the sky, hurrying, hurrying—toward what?

"Ronnie." Kay said, reaching back to pass him the piece of paper, "read this, will you? Tell me what you think it means?"

Ronnie scanned the message, then read it slowly.

"I don't know," he said, leaning forward. "Funny that she-wolf Cora didn't let you know what it's all about. She knew what this would do to you. It's like her though. God how that woman loves to put on the screws! Try to rest until we land. The stronger you are the more you can give to whatever you have to do."

"Ronnie, you've changed. You're so much more . . . more . . ."

"Substantial? High time. A fellow as far away from his rompers as I am ought to put on long pants. Try relaxing, Red It's what you need. I've a smack of news for you. May help you to take your mind off that S.O.S. from your Aunt Cora. Look Red, this is absolutely your last chance to become the wife of a future American hero. You're sure you won't marry me?"

Kay said, genuine regret clouding her eyes, "I'm sorry, Ron. You are such a grand . . ."

"Guy?"

"Um-huh. Such a grand guy. I like you so much, Ron. I'm terribly fond of you. But love—that has to be different, doesn't it? Love doesn't ask you for your heart—it takes possession of your heart, commands you to follow. There's no denying that command."

"It's that engineer fellow?"

"I'm afraid—that is, I think it is."

"I thought so." Ronnie squared his shoulders, shook himself like a puppy shaking off the rain. "But don't look so glum about it, sister," he said returning to his tone of banter. "He's a grand guy too. He's your sort, Kay. Me, I'm kind of a rover, have trouble keeping my feet on the ground. So what? So I'm taking myself for a ride. I've found myself a new sweetheart, sister. Airplane. I've got a date to fly for our Uncle Sam. You know I'm a pretty fair pilot, or do you Well, I am and I'm going to be a better one. I'm going to be tops on taking those birds through the air. Maybe it's just as well you gave me the 'No' sign, sister, because ever since I got that notice saying there's a place for me on the beam I've been suffering from a bad case of claustrophobia. You know, like I was shut in and had to batter my way out or bust.

"A gal like you wouldn't want to get a wire from her husband in Pernambuco saying he'll be home a year from next Christmas if his wings hold out. Hey, maybe I'll find me one of those senoritas down Rio way, one with rings in her ears and fire in her eye. It's worth looking into."

"Ronnie! You mean you're actually going to be a pilot—you're going to be in the Air Corps?"

"I don't mean nothin' else. And don't tell me you're changing your mind about taking me on a permanent fixture — remember I haven't won that pretty uniform yet. I'm just one of the birds who's trying to rate it."

Kay laughed, warmly. "I'm so glad for you," she said, "so proud you've the spirit to grow wings."

"Hold it," Ronnie warned. "I'm not Uncle Sam's little bird yet, but I will be—or else. Next to you, give me a plane. And now I think it over up here in this cloud bank we're bumping through, maybe you are second choice."

Ronnie's car met them at the airport. It was a fifty-mile drive from there to Somerset. Ronnie took the wheel. They tore through the night.

"They're expecting you?" Ronnie asked, taking a curve expertly, but dangerously.

"Why—why—no." Kay's mind was whirling again. "I—I—never even wired. It didn't seem important. The only important thing was to get home—to get to mother."

"Right. We'll be there in nothing flat. Light me a cigarette, will you, Red? I want to keep my paws on the wheel."

Kay lit the cigarette, placed it between Ronnie's lips. They were flying again—through countryside. Now, the old familiar road. The old familiar street. The houses she knew so well—in a blur.

Past the Sweet Shop. It had been the centre of Kay's universe. Now it was nothing more than a dash of light. Closer now.

"All set?" Ronnie took his foot off the gas.

Kay said, through the ache in her throat, through dry lips. "Yes, all set. Keep going."

A spurt. A turn. Into the worn drive, with the scuffed white house at the end of it. Around the curve. The car slid to a grinding stop.

There was a light in the hall. A dim light. No one was in sight. Kay was out of the car in a flash, racing up the steps.

"Daughter!"

A figure materialized in the shadows of the porch. Her mother! "Daughter."

"Mumsy!" Kay's arms were around the small figure, pressing it to her. "What is it? I came as fast as ever I could. Oh, Mums, what is it? I should never have left you. Mummy, Mummy!"

"Why daughter!" Ellen managed to extricate herself from the encircling arms. "What in the world? Aren't you well? Has something happened to you?"

TO BE CONTINUED

Little Benny's Note Book

I went an errand for ma and there was one cent change, and ma was sewing on her electric sewing machine and I said, Hay ma, can I keep the cent change?

Now listen, young man, there's an old familiar saying that possession is 9 tents of the law, but it doesn't happen to apply to other people's money, at least not in this house, so please get out of the habit of continually asking if you may keep the change. You get your regular allowance and if you were more frugal with it you would have your own change to keep without asking. Now where is that cent? she said, and I said, It went down a hole.

It what? ma said. The idea, if you had put it carefully in your pocket it couldn't of gone down a hole, she said, and I said, Sure it could, ma, because that's just the hole it went down, I mean the hole in my pocket.

Then that's 10 times worse, ma said. I warned you not to wear those trousers again without bringing them to me to have that hole mended, and now you see the proverbial result. Now you've gone and lost my good change. It's a glaring example of how you invariably make other people suffer by your own carelessness, she said, and I said. Well jimminy, ma, I didn't say the cent got really lost, did I? It rolled about 10 yards and tried its best to get lost, only I was too quick for it and I grabbed it just about an inch and a half from an iron grating. So I thought I better make sure it couldn't possibly get lost, so I put it in a chewing gum slot because a stick of chewing gum can roll even if it drops, and here's your chewing gum, ma, with the wrapper still on it and everything, it's spearmint, ma, I said.

Being my favorite flavor, and I put it down on her sewing table and ma just left it stay there, and after a while she said, Well, what are you waiting for? and I said, Who, me? Nothing.

And I went out without the chewing gum looking as if it was just what I expected to do, proving you cant fool your mother if she dont want to be fooled.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Aug. 7.— (CP)— Gold stocks recorded a sizeable decline today in the mid-day period.

Macassa was off 8 to a new low at 1.96 and Malartic Gold Fields eased 5 to 1.22. Losses of 3 to 5 appeared for Buffalo-Ankerite, Pickle Crow, MacLeod-Cockshutt, Preston, San Antonio, East Malartic and Chesterville. Dome and Kerr-Addison gained moderately.

Ford A, Page-Hersey, Massey-Harwere soft spots while Noranda and Ontario Nickel were slightly higher.

ord A, Page-Hersey, Massey-Harris Pfd and Dominion Tar and Chemical weakened small fractions.

WALL STREET

New York, Aug. 7.—(AP)—Further liquidating timidity redounded to the benefit of today's stock market and, after considerable early hesitancy, selected issues turned to the advancing side.

Gains of fractions to a point were fairly well distributed near the fourth hour but there were plenty of losers.

Prominent supported shares included Chrysler, General Motors, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Santa Fe, Sears Roebuck, U. S. Rubber, Du Pont, United Aircraft and International Harvester. Occasional laggards were Caterpillar Tractor, Texas Co., Montgomery Ward and U. S. Gypsum.

Canadian issues were quieter. Hiram Walker gained 1-8. Canadian Pacific and Distillers Seagrams were unchanged as were Canada 4s among bonds.

CONTRACTS LET FOR 12.000 HOMES

Ottawa, Aug. 7 (CP)—Wartime Housing Ltd., government-owned company, has awarded contracts for more than 12,000 houses and other buildings to relieve acute housing shortages in industrial centres, it was announced today by the Department of Munitions and Supply.

Located in nearly 50 centres, the total includes 12,052 houses, 57 staff houses, nine dining halls and 20 special buildings—at an estimated cost of nearly $52,000,000, including such services as sewers, water, roads and walks.

German 'Subs' Sunk by Ships Of Canada's Navy

By The Canadian Press

Canadian warships have sunk three of the 11 destroyed Nazi submarines whose numbers have been officially announced since the war began, it is shown in the war loss section of Jane's Fighting Ships, 1941, authoritative British publication on the world's navies.

H.M.C.S. Levis is credited with two of the sinkings and H.M.C.S. Chambly and Moosejaw are credited jointly with the third.

Jane's makes no attempt to estimate the number of German U-boats destroyed in more than two years of hectic Atlantic warfare, but says:—

"When war began, Germany had about 70 submarines available. Frequent announcements were subsequently made of the destruction of U-boats by British naval and air forces, and it is probable that few of the above 70 still remain in service. Russian naval forces claim to have sunk a number of the Baltic, Black Sea and Arctic, and U. S. naval forces have also accounted for a few."

The Levis got both her "name" submarines in 1941. The first was the U 26, a 512-ton craft built in 1936. The second was the U 556, 740 tons, built the same year she was sunk.

The U 501, another 740-tonner built in 1941, was sunk by the Chambly and Moosejaw Sept. 11 last year.

Weekly Livestock Report

Toronto, Aug., 7.—(CP)—Prices were steady with last week's close on all classes of livestock in trading on the market here this week.

Consignments to the Wartime Food Corporation were heavy, totalling over 4,000 head of cattle. These consignments included weighty steers, butcher steers and heifers, cows and bulls.

Cattle receipts totalled 6,700 head. Among receipts were some 1,200 head of western cattle. Weighty steers sold at $9.75 to $10.35. Butcher steers were mostly $9 to $9.75 with a few up to $10. Butcher heifers brought $8.75 to $9.85 with some tops at $10. Fed calves were $10 to $11.50. Export bulls brought $8 to $10.50. Butcher cows were $6.50 to $8 with canners and cutters down to $5. Stockers sold at mostly $7 to $10 with some light stock calves selling up to $11.15. Milkers and springers were $85 to $135 each.

Calves totalling 2,700 sold steady at $14 to $14.50 for those of choice quality with other grades downward to $8. Grassers brought $7 to $9.

THE WAR TODAY

By De WITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

As one reads Queen Wilhelmina's unadorned but inspiring address to the United States Congress, with its renewed promise of a free and better world under the Atlantic Charter, there comes the feeling that perhaps the course of history would have been changed if Her Majesty could have delivered this speech before the All-India Congress Committee now meeting in Bombay to consider ways and means of enforcing its demands for absolute freedom from Britain.

The Congress Committee is struggling with the greatest political problem that any people can face — their independence. There are few measures, no matter how extreme, which world sentiment would deny to any race to achieve its sovereignty, but in the present instance we have a unique situation in which rash action by the Committee might jeopardize the whole Allied cause.

A rash move by the Committee might not only wreck Indian chances of achieving independence but bring the entire Allied world under the bondage of the Axis. This is no exaggeration, for India is a vital strategic base for our cause.

Under those circumstances Mohandas Gandhi, the Nationalist leader, and the Committee might find inspiration for a new line of endeavor in the promises reaffirmed by Holland's Queen. They might find what they seek in the pledge of the Atlantic Charter that it respects the right of all peoples to choose the form of government under which they will live. They might recall that only a few days ago State Secretary Hull declared:

"We have always believed, and we believe today—that all the peoples, without distinction of race, color or religion, who are prepared and willing to accept the responsibilities of liberty, are entitled to its enjoyment."

In short, Gandhi and his followers might reach the conclusion that it would be better to trust the British promise of independence after the war than to precipitate a situation fraught with danger for the entire Allied world.

"But," the Nationalists demand, "why put the whole burden of concession on us? Why shouldn't Britain grant our independence immediately rather than make us wait?"

That's a legitimate query and it is the crux of the whole position. Why shouldn't the British government be the one to give ground?

Well, the answer is that no matter how the British government feels, it is helpless to make the sweeping change the Nationalists demand without precipitating even worse situation in India. Personally I feel very sure of this, having studied Hindustan's problems for 25 years, an ddiscussed them in India with the leaders of all sections.

There's nothing more certain than that if Britain suddenly for 25 years, and discussed them government, and without thoroughly preparing the ground, turn the rule over to a provisional government, it would create a chaos which would be as bad or worse than anything that can grow out of the Nationalist program of civil disobedience. The 560 native rulers would be at sixes and sevens, the great Moslem majority would defy the efforts of the Congress party to establish a government, and there would be other complications.

Washington Spotlight—

Capital Watches With Interest Struggle for N.Y. Governorship

By ELMER DULMAGE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, Aug. 7. —(CP) — Washington has entered the midsummer silly season in a large way over the New York State struggle for the governorship. While the fight goes on in New York, Washington is practically pop-eyed with excitement.

As the machine politics explain it, New York's squabble within the Democratic party is a titantic struggle for control of the machine between President Roosevelt and his former campaign chief and Postmaster-General, James A. Farley.

Actually, Mr. Roosevelt probably hasn't given ten minutes of his time to worry about New York. Mr. Farley wanted John J. Bennett State Attorney-General, as the Democratic candidate. Mr. Roosevelt didn't. He thought Bennett couldn't beat Republican Tom Dewey. So he suggested Senator James Mead.

The net result is that Farley is mad at the President, Mead is making a determined bid for the Democratic nomination with Roosevelt approval, Bennett is saying nothing and the anti-Roosevelt press is having a high old time begging on the combatants.

The few political authorities who are keeping cool about the thing believe Mead will achieve the candidacy over Bennett and then, with further Presidential support, defeat Dewey. But election day is three months away and the silly season has at least another six weeks to run, so anything can happen.

Empty That Platform

The beating up of Waldo Frank by pro-Nazis in Buenos Aires may result in the United States State Department discouraging Americans from making speeches abroad unless they are government spokesmen.

Brendan Bracken, British Minister of Information, clamped down recently on British speakers stumping the United States where they accomplished more harm than good.

Frank, 53 and author of 40 books, was provided with an airplane for his personal use by the Argentine government when he first visited that country on a speaking tour in 1929. The present government in Buenos Aires ordered him to leave the country. His song of democracy may have been welcomed by the majority of Argentinians but not by a fence-straddling government.

Second-front talk here always develops into a contest to guess who will be appointed supreme commander for the great offensive. And these three names always come up—Gen. George C. Marshall, United States Chief of Staff; Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, British Commander in India, and Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Commander of Canada's army in Britain.

Gen. McNaughton's often-stated declaration that Germany must be invaded by land forces has impressed Americans, who have been told many times that the Canadian overseas army is one of the best equipped and trained in the world.

The Negro Soldier

The negro problem keeps coming up in the news, even on the sports pages.

Senator John D. Bankhead, Alabama, proposes that negro soldiers from Northern States be quartered only in northern camps. Their presence in the South causes resentment, Bankhead says. There's no indication the army is listening to the Senators.

Only recently were negroes permitted to join the United States navy except as kitchen help.

Baseball's High Commissioner, Judge K. M. Landis, has announced there is no rule or understanding barring negroes from big league clubs. That's nonsense, of course, because there always has been such an understanding between club owners.

Now, however, the New York newspaper PM is leading a campaign to open the gates to negro ball players. There's much double-talk by such bosses as Larry MacPhail of Brooklyn Dodgers —and pretty clear indication already that baseball isn't likely to follow in the footsteps of the navy.

Capital Trivia

Jeff Dickson, who made millions promoting boxing and six-day bike racing in Paris between wars, is a captain in the United States Army. . . .A good part of the factual material in Time Magazine's story on the Canadian army in Britain was taken from stories written by Ross Munro, CP Correspondent attached to the troops. . . The two big British war relief organizations in this country, bundles for Britain and the British War Relief Society, have been feuding right along. Looks now as though the society will land on top with the job of correlating all relief work.

Tin Consumption Greatly Reduced

Ottawa, August 7. (CP)—Because of the tin shortage Canada must not only cut out non-essential civilian use of that metal but also reduce the tin content, "wherever possible", in guns, tanks, planes and other war supplies, metals Controller George C. Bateman said today.

Over-all consumption of tin in Canada now is 40 per cent less than before the war and the amount used for civilian purposes is 75 per cent less, said a statement issued by the Department of Munitions and Supply.

Low tin content babbits for marine use are now being tested on a Canadian Steamship Lines package freighter trading on the St. Lawrence River.

None Used in Foils

The controller said use of tin foils has been largely eliminated, except for the packaging of certain grades of cheese, in the making of condensers, and in the production of ammunition. Toothpaste and shaving cream tubes, once made entirely of tin, now contain only 1 1-2 per cent of this essential metal while other types of collapsible tubes have no more than seven per cent.

Mr. Bateman said that in peacetime three-quarters of the world's supply of tin came from Malaya and The Netherlands East Indies. Bolivia was next in importance and some also come from the Belgian Congo and Nigeria.

"Canada produces little tin, although in 1942 it will have a small production of refined tin as a by-product from certain lead-zinc ores", Mr. Bateman said.

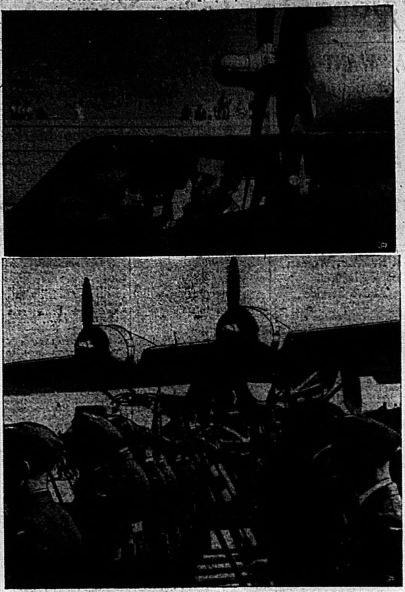
Successful Catalina Test Spurs Mass Production Line



When Test Pilot Pat Howard brought in his report on the first PBY Catalina flying boat produced in Canada he signalled full speed ahead on mass production of these magnificent flying juggernauts. Catalinas are now rolling along the assembly lines at Boeing's Sea Island plant, in British Columbia. In the UPPER photo Test Pilot Howard is shown at the controls of the ship; and BELOW is the scene at the ceremony preceding the test, photographed while Ralph Bell, director of aircraft production, was making his address. In the foreground is the R.C.A.F. guard of honor. The Catalina has the greatest range of any two-engined bomber in the world. Its maximum speed at 8,000 feet altitude is about 200 miles per hour. It weighs 14 tons and its wingspan is so great that 10 automobiles can be lined end to end along the length of each. The Catalina is propelled by two Twin Wasp 1,200-horsepower engines and it has gun pits and rear fuselages, with installations for bombs and aerial torpedoes. — Photos — Public Information.

Gifts are Presented To Bride and Groom By Bonarlaw Friends

Bonarlaw—On Friday evening about 200 friends and neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John S. McKeown and presented their daughter, Marjorie, and her husband Russel Rowe, R.C.A.F. with many beautiful and useful gifts. Rev. Canon W. G. Swayne acted as master of ceremonies. An address was read wishing the happy couple a long and happy wedded life and expressing the esteem in which both are held by their many friends. Both Mr. and Mrs. Rowe replied thanking all for the beautiful gifts and their good wishes.

A beautiful lunch was served by the ladies and a very pleasant evening was spent in social entercourse and music.

Lieut. J. A. Bell, of Petawawa Camp visited his father Donald Bell on Friday of last week and on Saturday both left by motor for Toronto and other Western Ontario points.

On Sunday evening after the service in St. Marks Church the members of the Women's Auxiliary gathered at the Rectory and presented Mrs. Quarterman with a silver cake plate. In making the presentation Mrs. A. V. Brown, President of the W. A., expressed the regret of the W. A. members and of the entire community that Mrs. Quarterman and family are leaving and wished them success and happiness in their new home. Mrs. Quarterman in a few well chosen words thanked all for the beautiful gift and their kinds words. They left early Monday morning for their new residence in Portsmouth, Ont.

Mr. Isaac Brown who suffered a slight stroke several days ago is very much improved. He received a pleasant surprise on Tuesday morning of this week when a committee of two, Mr. Jas. Whisk Roadmaster C. N. Rys., of Trenton, and Mr. J. F. Baker, local agent C.N. Rys. called on him and on behalf of the employees of the division. Presented him with a purse of money. In making the presentation Mr. Risk spoke of the esteem in which he was held by all the employees with whom he had associated before his retirement on pension several months ago and wished him health and happiness for many years. Mr. Brown replied feelingly thanking them for the generous gift and expressions of friendship.

Mr. Brown completed 24 years with the C. N. Rys. this year and retired on account of ill health.

British Source Says Situation Increasingly Grave

London, Aug. 7. (CP)—The new German thrust to Kotelnikovski, southwest of Stalingrad, and the continued drive toward the Caucasian foothills have resulted in an increasingly grave situation in southern Russia, a British military source said today.

This source said the Germans apparently were attempting to take Stalingrad in an assault from Kotelnikovski after having been stopped by fierce Russian resistance west of the big city of the Volga.

To the south, Field Marshal Ewald Von Kleist's drive toward the Maikop oilfields appeared to be meeting little opposition, he said. The deep-driven German salient toward Armavir and Voroshilovsk (the Germans claim the latter town), northeast of Maikop, was described as more than 100 miles long and 40 to 50 miles wide.

Such a salient, it was pointed out, would be extremely vulnerable to counterattack, particularly from the east.

Although there was no sign that such a counterattack was imminent, this source said it was clear that Marshal Semeon Timoshenko, Russian commander, could not wait much longer to strike back.

The possibility was cited that before pushing on to the foothills of the Caucasus Mountains, Von Kleist might swing west to seize the Black Sea coast opposite the Crimea in a move to ease his supply problem.

Diphtheria Epidemic In Quebec Stopped By Prompt Action

Quebec, Que., August 7 — Prompt action by the Ministry of Public Health and Social Welfare in Quebec stopped an epidemic of diphtheria which had already caused 15 deaths among Abitibi Indians and threatened to ravage the whole community.

There are about 2,500 Algonquins in the Abitibi region, descendants of a tribe once indigenous to the Quebec region before the days of Champlain. In summer, many of them camp at the mining town of Senneterre, make their purchases and disappear into the wilds for the autumn and winter.

A serious epidemic of diphtheria broke out among them a few days ago. Medical supplies were rushed to them, and medical assistance, by plane.

No Immediate Prospect Of Clothing Rationing

Ottawa, Aug. 6—(CP)—The Wartime Prices and Trade Board today assured the Canadian public that rationing of clothing is not an immediate prospect.

The board's assurance was issued to put a stop to rumors that such rationing could be expected, and took the form of a statement by M. W. Mackenzie, chief of the supply, distribution and rationing division. It said:

"There is absolutely no foundation for the rumor which is reported from various parts of Canada that clothing will be rationed.

"Anyone circulating mischievous rumors of this kind is hampering the country's war effort. The only ones who could benefit would be unscrupulous sales-people using such rumors to move stocks which

Group of Canadians to Return To Join New Paratroop Formation

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

Somewhere in England, Aug. 7—(CP) Cable — A select group of officers and non-commissioned officers from the Canadian army in Britain will return to Canada to join the new paratroop force being organized there.

The majority will be from infantry battalions although some will come from armored units. All will be volunteers and probably will be under 30.

Asking for men from field units, senior officers stressed the qualifications of youth, determination, energy, initiative and skill with weapons.

The paratroops will have to know how to live under primitive conditions and must be robust, sturdy soldiers who can endure the worst physical ordeals. Their jobs will be tougher even than that of the commandos.

It is probably the new unit will receive extra pay.

GERMANS DRIVE CLOSER TO MAIKOP FIELDS SAYS U.S. AID FAILS TO REACH FRONTS IN TIME

Situation Grave As Germans Cross Kuban River

Swarms of Enemy Tanks Stab at Red Army Ranks In Armavir Area

COSSACKS IN ACTION

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, Aug. 8—(AP)—German columns are smashing at the approaches of the Maikop oil fields, first major goal of their Caucasus drive, from both the north and east after a major break through in Red Army defences and the situation is "very tense," front line dispatches said today.

The army newspaper Red Star said Soviet defenders had made a heroic but unsuccessful attempt to stem the Nazi tide in the loop of the Kuban river above Maikop, in the Armavir area and east of Krasnodar.

Krasnodar is 45 miles northwest of Maikop at a point where the Kuban curves northward and Armavir is 60 miles northeast, at the bottom of the river's loop.

Cross Kuban

This indicated the Nazis had swept across the Kuban on a wide front, although today's mid-day Soviet communique said only that fighting during the night was above Armavir and south of Kushchevka which lies farther north.

Red Star itself emphasized the gravity of the situation faced by the Russian forces as German troops pounded closer to the Derrick-dotted Maikop fields which produce seven per cent of Russia's oil supply.

The mid-day communique said of the overnight action: "Our boys fought the enemy in the area of Kletskaya (75 miles northwest of Stalingrad), to the north of Kotelnikovski (95, miles southwest of Stalingrad))and Armavir and south of Kushchevka."

With the fighting spreading to the north of Kotelnikovski, the Germans thus were matching their Caucasus gains with a push that brought them closer to Stalingrad, but the extent of their progress toward the big Volga steel centre was not disclosed.

Swarms of German tanks and automatic rifle men were reported stabbing into Red army ranks in the Armavir area while Nazi planes dive bombed and strafed the hard-put Soviet defenders fighting gallantly under great odds.

The Germans moved upon Armavir after one break-through below Belaya Glina, some 75 miles to the north, and another below Kushchevka.

Spurred by these successes, the Nazis threw still more tanks and bombers into the action as they hampered their way southward toward the Kuban.

Red Star said that a serious situation had developed in the Armavir district. It reported that in one sector the Nazis knifed into the Russian positions, forcing the defenders back to new lines.

Don and Cuban Cossacks bore the burden of massive enemy attacks south of Kushchevka and at one place the attackers broke through. The Cossacks reached new lines and warded off subsequent assaults.

IN STATE OF ALERT

Stockholm, Aug. 8 —(AP)— The entire Norwegian coast is being held in a state of alert under orders of German occupation authorities and arrangements have been made to evacuate the civilian population at short notice, the newspaper Social Demokraten reported today. The Germans were said to have warned all Norwegians that persons aiding any Allied invasion attempt would be executed summarily.

STRIVE FOR BLACK SEA CONTROL

Ankara, Aug. 8 —(AP)— In conjunction with their overland drive into the Caucasus, the Germans were reported today to have launched a campaign to gain complete control of the Black Sea with a fleet of new motor torpedo boats. The Nazis were said to be aiming particularly at the destruction of Russian submarines now operating in that area.

Small Scale Raid Made by Nazis In East England

London, Aug. 8 (CP).—German air raiders dropped bombs during the night at scattered points in eastern England and the eastern midlands but the attacks apparently were on a small scale and first reports indicated casualties were light.

A lone enemy raider also dropped a stick of bombs before dusk last evening on the northeast coast of Scotland, killing three persons and injuring ten others.

One of the night raiders was reported shot down.

Bad weather kept the R.A.F.'s big bombers at home for the night.

MANY TON BOMBS FALL ON RABAUL IN HEAVIEST RAID

15 Tons of Destruction Rained on Jap Invasion Base and at Lae

DARING ASSAULT

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Aug. 8 —(CP)— Striking their mightiest blow yet at Japanese-held Rabaul, Allied airmen unloaded 15 tons of bombs on that New Britain invasion base yesterday and churned up destruction at Lae, New Guinea, with 2,000-pound demolition bombs.

Seven of 20 challenging Japanese zero fighters were reported shot down over Rabaul at a cost of only one Allied plane, although other raiders were damaged and there were some casualties.

This daring and destructive assault, by heavy bombers in daylight, was aimed at Vunakanau Airdrome, the main enemy air base in New Britain. An Allied communique said every one of the bombs hit the target area.

Medium bombers carried out the attack on Lae, also by daylight, and the communique's reference to the use of 2,000-pound bombs was the first disclosure that such potent explosions were being dropped on the Japanese.

Direct hits were reported on the Lae airdrome. The daylight raid there was coupled with extended harassing raids at night against enemy positions.

Activity in the northwestern sector was limited to reconnaissance activity on both sides. Allied scouts presumably extended their operations to include the islands of Kei, Aru and Tanimbar, which the Japanese now have occupied.

A headquarters spokesman said the situation in the Bun-Gona area of New Guinea, where Japanese land forces now are within 60 miles of the Allied base at Port Moresby, is unchanged.

CAN BUY NO SNACKS

London, Aug. 8 (CP) — British soldiers will have to endure those long route marches without a snack here and there along the way. The War Office has forbidden them to buy food from local shops when they fall out for a rest because of complaints they had caused an acute shortage in some areas of bread, cakes, tobacco and other unrationed foods.

BASE AT CANTON IS TWICE RAIDED BY U.S. PLANES

Second of Raids In Three Days—Japanese Planes Destroyed In Air, on Ground

DROME DAMAGED

Chungking, Aug. 8 —(AP)— United States army warplanes raided the Canton area again early this morning, shot down two Japanese planes and destroyed several more on the ground, Lt.-Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's headquarters announced today.

Still another enemy aircraft was listed as probably shot down in combat, though its destruction could not be confirmed.

The raid was the second on the Japanese air base at Canton in three days. Thursday American fliers were credited with destroying 10 grounded enemy planes in a surprise assault without loss to themselves.

The communique said extensive damage was done to the "White Cloud" airdrome as well as to docks and harbor buildings in this morning's raid. The bombers operated with a fighter escort.

At least nine Japanese fighters rose to challenge the raiders, but only after they had dropped their cargoes of high explosives in the target area, the bulletin declader.

U.S. Fliers Highly Praised

The exploits of the American army fliers, who have been nicknamed the "Sky Dragons" by the Chinese, brought a glowing tribute from the newspaper Ta Kung Pao.

"They are sowing the seeds of hope in the people in occupied areas," the paper said. "They provide a stimulus for Chinese soldiers at the front and heighten the morale of our people behind the firing line.

"The American government and people can well recognize the fact that the United States army air forces in China represent the maximum gain for the smallest price."

Berlin Claims U. S. Destroyer, Seven Ships Sunk From Convoy

Berlin (from German broadcasts), Aug. 8 (AP).—The German high command claimed today in a special communique that an American destroyer and seven ships, totalling 49,000 tons, had been sunk from a convoy in the North Atlantic.

(There has been no confirmation of these reported sinkings from any allied source.)

"Among the ships sunk (elsewhere than in the North Atlantic) was a large vessel carrying munitions and another ship laden with tanks and aircraft bound for Alexandria," the communique asserted.

The communique said German submarines in sinking the fifteen cargo vessels listed in the communique, had struck a "severe blow" to American supply shipping.

WoodenMinesweepersRecommended For Construction in B.C. Shipyards

Vancouver, Aug. 8 — (CP) — Three British Columbia shipyards and possibly a fourth, have been notified by the negotiating division of the director-general of shipbuilding, Ottawa, that "We are recommended that authorization be given immediately" for placing of orders for wooden minesweepers.

The order, if placed, would be for 105-foot minesweepers, costing $200,000 each, E. Mercer of Star Shipyards, New Westminster, said Friday.

Other yards which are expected to share in the orders are the A. C. Benson Shipyard and Vancouver Shipyards of Vancouver and a Vancouver Island shipyard.

Mr. Mercer said that the shipyards will build two of the boats each under a total contract of $1,600,000. The vessels are expected to be constructed within 15 months.

Mr. Mercer said that the engines for the boats would be constructed by the Vivian Engine Works plant of Vancouver.

The wooden minesweepers, if ordered, will be the first built in this part of Canada since the First Great War.

Gandhi Appeals to U.S. To Intervene in Dispute

By PRESTON GROVER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Bombay, Aug. 8 (AP)—Gandhi appealed to the United States today to act "while there is yet time" to bring about recognition of Indian independence and permit Indians "to use their liberty in favor of the Allied cause."

Gandhi made his appeal in a letter "to American friends" before the All-India Congress convened for a session which may give the Indian leader the "go-ahead sign" to launch a campaign of civil disobedience designed to end British rule in India.

The letter which will be published in Gandhi's newspaper tomorrow, was delivered exclusively to American correspondents today. Although Gandhi had said earlier that he would give Britain time to make further proposals before launching the campaign, little hope of such intercession was held after yesterday's meeting.

Gandhi appealed to Americans to accept as sincere his statement that the request for Britain to withdraw from power and grant freedom to India was done with the purpose of vitalizing Indian defence.

"I would not have asked my country to invite Great Britain to withdraw her rule over India," he said, "....Had I not seen at once that for the sake of Great Britain and the Allied cause it was necessary for Britain boldly to perform the duty of freeing India from bondage.

"Without this essential act of tardy justice, Britain could not justify her position before world conscience, which is not vocal, but which is there nevertheless."

Weekly War Commentary

By Maj.-Gen. Sir Charles Gwynn

London, Aug. 8 — (CP Cable) — The German drive in the Rostov region is still unchecked, at least in the centre where the thrust southeast towards the upper waters of the Kuban River has made rapid progress.

The position of the left wing of Marshal Semeon Timoshenko's army also is very critical. The Germans claim to have reached the river at several points and to have captured Voroshilovsk.

On both sides of the river progress has been much less marked and the Russian rearguard evidently is offering stout resistance. The German advance has therefore created a pronounced salient and it seems probable that the deepest penetrations have been made by panzer formations. It remains to be seen whether the salient will be broadened by a fanning-out process of the slower-moving main bodies before it is pushed further.

Timoshenko's Tactics

So far, the main achievement of the Germans has been the capture over a wide front of the Novorossisk-Stalingrad railway, leaving the left wing of Timoshenko's army without rail communication except to the Caucasus. From Voroshilovsk even that line is threatened.

Timoshenko has kept the left wing of his army intact, to a large extent, and he does not appear to have commited it to a decisive battle, hoping to wear down the strength of the Nazi drive by rearguard action, before it reaches his main defensive line, which appears to be in the Kuban River.

It seems probable that he is husbanding his reserves to make a determined stand for the naval base at Novorossisk, the oil refinery at Krasnedar and the oil fields at Maikop.

SAW SERVICE IN FRANCE, WON CROIX DE GUERRE

Now Graduates at Brockville From Officers Training School

WILL REJOIN UNIT

Brockville, Ont., Aug. 8 (CP)— John James of Cambridge, Mass., is a lieutenant in the Canadian army today after serving with the French army in the battle of France, winning the Croix de Guerre and rising from the ranks of the Canadian forces overseas.

James, a tall husky lad in his early twenties, graduated from the Officers' Training Centre here and will return to England shortly to rejoin his unit, the 17th. Duke of York's Royal Canadian Hussars, once a cavalry regiment but now part of the armored corps.

He said he was just "loafing around" in France with a friend when the war broke out and so joined up with the French army.

He got a place as an ambulance driver in a unit largely composed of Americans and attached to the French army. The Croix de Guerre was for work in the evacuation of wounded from Amiens during the fighting around that city but James brushes off his efforts as "not" very much.

After the Armistice he and his fellow Americans quickly got into civilian clothes. He still had his passport and so escaped the attentions of the German authorities.

He lived for months at a boarding house near Biaritz while that resort was used by the Germans as a rest spot for troops and finally came out through Spain and Portugal to return to the United States and enlist at Montreal.

CURFEW MODERNIZED, RINGS HOUR LATER

North Bay, Ont., Aug. 8 (CP).— When the curfew starts ringing here in a few days the bells will toll at 10 o'clock instead of nine because civic legislators thought an earlier curfew would not meet with the approval of modern people.

SHANGRI-LA'S THORNS ON COAST POINTED AT JAPAN

Lots of Shangri-Las Being Built Along Pacific Coast Others to be Constructed

IN WILDERNESS

(Editor's Note:—Stuart Underhill, Canadian Press Staff Writer, has just returned from a visit to a West Coast Canadian air base. In this story last of a series, he tells how he saw another big air station being established.)

(By STUART UNDERHILL)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in British Columbia, Aug. 8.— (CP)— I've just been Shangri-la building.

That's as closely as President Roosevelt identified the takeoff base for the United States bombers that raided Japan and it's as close as military authorities will permit identification of this big new airfield.

There are lots of these Shangri-la's along the Pacific Coast—built, building and as yet on paper. They are thorns pointed at the side of Japan.

Royal Duke Completes 42,400-Mile Tour

London, Aug. 8 (CP).—The Duke of Gloucester has returned to Britain, ending an unprecedented four-months' tour of a dozen countries on three continents, it was announced here today.

During his trip he inspected hundreds of military centres and hundreds of thousands of troops.

His tour took the Duke 42,400 miles by airplane, automobile and train through—Gibraltar, Libya, Egypt, Palestine, Cyprus, Syria, Iraq, Iran, India, Ceylon, Eritrea, Aden, Somaliland Kenya, the Sudan and British West Africa.

5,000TH CADET GRADUATES FROM TRAINING SCHOOL

369 Young Men Qualify Today as Officers From Brockville Training Centre

TO BE EXPANDED

Brockville, Ont., Aug. 8 (CP)— Out of the officers' training centre here today marched the 5,000th cadet to qualify for a commission at the school.

Along with 368 other young officers went Lieut. Byron E. Fowler of Brockville, who held certificate No. 5,000 from the training centre commanded by Col. Milton F. Gregg, V.C., Lieut. Fowler was one of the first large batch of men who rose from the ranks to a commission in the army overseas who returned to Canada to take their officer's course.

Thus today was an important milestone in the history of the school which was established in 1941, has grown slowly and is now in the course of further expansion as a result of the recent decision to enlarge its capacity from 1,000 to 2,000 cadets.

Formerly men chosen from the ranks for commissions overseas qualified at a Canadian officers' training centre in England which was commanded by Col. Gregg before his return to Canada. Now all return to Canada and today the first large group received their coveted diplomas.

Maj.-Gen. F. F. Worthington, commander of the 48th Armored Division, presented certificates to today's graduating class, among whom were a number of men who served under him overseas when he commanded an army tank brigade.

101 French-Speaking Officers.

Emphasizing the bilingual character of the officers' school was the presence of 101 French-speaking officers in the graduating class.

Of the 5,000 graduated to date, 1,315 are French speaking and Lt.-Col. Edmond Blais, chief French instructor, hopes to maintain or better a recent average of one-third in each class as French-speaking.

French-speaking Cadet Boisseau of Quebec who drew certificate No. 5,007 is an artilleryman who came up from Military District No. 5.

At their last parade before graduation Friday night Col. Gregg told his class "You are just starting on this business of becoming an officer". He advised them to display the same keenness and eagerness to learn in their future posts that they showed at the training centre.

"Don't let it be said of you as I have heard it said of others in the past that you are willing to let your non-commissioned officers do your work," he said. "It is your responsibility and your N.C.O. is your partner."

NAZI BOMBER SHOT DOWN

Moscow, Aug. 8 —(AP)— A German bomber was shot down on the distant approaches to Moscow as Admiral H. Standley, United States ambassador to the Soviet Union, and Maj.-Gen. Follett Bradley of the United States Army Air Corps conferred here, Red Star reported today. Gen. Bradley arrived in Moscow Wednesday to discuss American war aid for the Red army.

Small Vancouver Girl With Key In Throat Is Rushed to Philadephia

Vancouver, Aug. 8 (CP). — A Trans-Canada Air Lines plane roared east toward Montreal today, bearing four-year-old Sharon Bell toward a hospital where an emergency operation can be performed to remove a key lodged in her gullet.

Daughter of a Vancouver policeman, the child swallowed the key, of the type that opens tins, last Monday. Specialists here said that only at Dr. Jackson Hospital in Philadelphia can be found instruments delicate enough for a successful operation. The key is an inch across at the handle.

The T.C.A. plane is due to arrive at Montreal at 11.55 a.m. E.D.T., where transfer will be made to another aircraft.

However, T.C.A. officials at Toronto said the plane was two hours late due to "poor flight conditions".)

In the meantime the child is being fed by a tube through her nose.

Sharon is making the trip seated on the lap of her aunt, Mrs. A. Murchison, who obtained a seat in the filled plane after a group of army officers drew lots. One of them, 2nd Lieut. H. Soule, of Hamilton, Ont., volunteered his seat and then in the draw that followed drew the only marked ship that meant he had to stay behind.

Soule was en route east after having received his commission at Gordon Head, near Victoria, earlier in the day.

The departure of the child and her aunt was so hurried that they boarded the plane with little more than the clothes they wore. Today the father, Constable Gordon Bell, plans to follow by plane with baggage for the trip.

Allies Have Borne Most of Load Says U.S. Review

Office of War Information Says Output of U.S. in June Behind Schedule

MUST WORK HARD

Washington, Aug. 8 (AP) — A gloomy picture of America's war effort to date was laid before the country today in a warning by the office of War Information that materials are failing to reach the fighting fronts in the time and volume needed to win the war.

Reviewing the military and production situation, O.W.I. asserted last night that output of fighting planes, tanks, most types of artillery and naval vessels fell behind schedule in June and expressed doubt that "all of us realize how hard we are going to have to work to win."

(A similar tone was expressed in Australia where War Correspondent Norman Stockton of The Melbourne Herald asserted "our Allies have got to realize the grim fact that we are still fighting a losing war and that there is no possibility of an offensive from this country until real material aid is forthcoming."

Aid Needed for Offensive

(Stockton declared Gen. Douglas MacArthur as an "offensive-minded" leader who apparently could not take the offensive because of a lack of material aid.

("Australia has been told too many rosy stories about United States military aid," he said. "The American press has fed the American public similar lines.").

O.W.I. cautioned that "we could lose this year", and declared that while some individual Americans had made great sacrifices, "as a nation we are not more than ankle deep in the war."

"Too many people," it continued, "seem to feel that we are fighting this war out of a surplus—a surplus of resources and productive capacity, a surplus of time. That is not true. We have plenty of some resources; in others we are a have-not nation."

Agitation For Second Front.

The review referred indirectly to demands for a second front in Europe by asserting that "popular pressure for action on this front or that of the many possible fronts can serve no useful purpose."

"Our forces are being disposed as and where the military commanders believe they get the maximum of results according to the best professional judgment," O. W. I. added. "When we cannot be strong and hit hard everywhere, we must be able to hit hard where it counts most even at the price of leaving other areas inactive."

Allies Carry Most of Load.

The review asserted that our allies have carried most of the load and "we have not given them as much help as we had led them to expect". It added, however, that it was expected 1942 would be "largely a year of preparation" and "our allies would have to do most of the fighting during most of the year".

"We are deep in what may be the decisive year of the war," O. W. I. observed, "but 1942 will be the decisive year only if our enemies do not succeed in inflicting crippling blows on our allies before the year is out."

The review asserted that if Russia's striking power is paralyzed, British power in the Middle East broken or China's endurance ended, "the war will be decided in some later year not now foreseen and, victory will be far more costly."

R.A.F. Airmen Sink Two Axis Ships, Damage Others

Cairo, Aug. 8—(AP)—R.A.F. airmen sank two Axis ships and damaged others off the occupied Egyptian Port of Sidi Barrani, a joint general headquarters an R.A.F. communique reported today.

Announcement also was made here that United States air force bombers sank a 10,000 ton ship in the Mediterranean during an attack on a big convoy.

The communique reported an increase in air activity and the shooting down of a Messerschmitt 109 by a British fighter.

On the land front the communique reported artillery activity in the northern and central sectors and increased aerial operations over the entire battle line.

Aussies Attack Jap Strong Point After Arduous Trip in Jungle

Melbourne, Aug. 8 —(CP)— An overland raid in which Australian troops struggled through waist-deep mud to the north coast of New Guinea and scored 38 hits out of 40 shots with a mortar on a Japanese strong point was reported here today by informed sources.

The attack was made at 3 a.m. one day recently after a long advance through a nightmare of mosquito-plagued jungle swamps in which some men sank to their armpits before being dragged out.

After the successful surprise attack, the Australian force had to break through thick jungle up a 1,500-foot mountain, under the fire of a six-inch Japanese gun and the machine-gunning of seaplanes that the Japanese called up.

Clothes for American Workmen Will Have Fewer Pockets, Buttons

Washington, Aug. 8 (CP)—From now on American workmen will wear clothes with fewer pockets and buttons and no unnecessary material. The War Production Board issued an order yesterday setting the styles for workers to save needed materials. At the same time, W.P.B. set a minimum yardage "to prevent skimping which would interfere with a worker's freedom of action." W.P.B. predicted the order would result in a yearly saving of 21,000,000 yards of cloth.

First Jap Hint Japan Might Attack Russia in Siberia

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—The Tokyo radio last night broadcast Japanese editorial comment containing the first hints from there that Japan herself might open a second front with an attack on Russia in Siberia.

The broadcast noted reports of the arrival in Moscow of allied representatives and said the moves in the Russian capital were "indicative of further Anglo-American machinations aimed to open up a second front to save the Soviet Union from collapse."

The Japanese press, the radio added, pointed out that formation of a second front was not necessarily restricted to Europe or to western Asia or Africa.

INTEREST IS SHOWN IN FAG FUND DISPLAY

Considerable interest was being shown on Front street today towards the Kinsmen Club's "Fag Fund" display at the Metropolitan Store. Goodly contributions have resulted throughout the week as the public response has been gratifying, announced Chairman Matt Currie today. The fund provides, at no cost whatsoever, 300 cigarettes per month to Belleville boys serving overseas. The Kinsmen urge parents and relatives of local boys going overseas to contact the club and list the names of all such members of the armed services in order that none may be forgotten. As the Kinsmen Club pays all administration costs connected with the fund the public donations received go directly towards the purchase of smokes only. The "Fag Fund" campaign will continue through Saturday.

FRACTURES HIP

Mrs. Ellen Byrne, 80-year-old Marmora woman, was admitted to the Belleville General Hospital on Friday afternoon suffering from a broken hip sustained, it is reported, as the result of a fall on the lawn at a summer cottage at Crowe Lake. The aged lady was attended by Dr. H. Crawford, of Marmora, and by Dr. R. Flynn, of Belleville, who reduced the fracture at the hospital.

MAILING OF PAPERS, PERIODICALS OVERSEAS BANNED AFTER AUG. 10

In order that vital shipping might be conserved for essential war materials, postal authorities are asking for a reduction in the volume of newspapers and periodicals sent to civilians and the armed forces in the United Kingdom and other trans-Atlantic destinations as well as to places in Central and South America, Bermuda and the West Indies.

Complete newspapers or periodicals in the future cannot be mailed to these destinations and authorities are asking that only clippings of special interest be sent instead of the complete newspaper or magazine. Commencing August 10th posters to this effect will be distributed to all post offices in Canada for lobby display.

BELLEVILLE BOY IN OFFICERS' CLASS

One Belleville boy, 2nd. Lieutenant F. P. Clarke is among the graduates in the class of officers in training at the officers' training centre at Brockville who will receive their officers' certificates in graduation ceremonies today. Officers from all parts of Ontario are included in the graduating class.

EARLY RESPONSE FOR MORE BLOOD DONORS FAIRLY GOOD

Ten blood donor clinic booths made their appearance on city business thoroughfares early today with Red Cross nurses and members of the Belleville Kiwanis Club in attendance.

At an early hour, the response was said to be fairly good, and it was felt that the blood donor list will be swelled to an appreciable extent through the medium of the booths.

The need for donors is great, and the Red Cross and Kiwanis Club here urge all to assist as quickly as possible by volunteering their services in a donor capacity.

The booths will be in operation all day and in all possibility part of tonight.

VETERANS TO OBSERVE DECORATION DAY

War veterans of the city and district will pay tribute to their fallen comrades Sunday afternoon when they will observe with fitting ceremonies the annual Decoration Day.

The veterans, under the auspices of the Army and Navy Veterans of Canada, Belleville Branch, will assemble at the Armouries at 2.00 p.m. and march to Highland Ave. where special transportation will convey them to the Belleville cemetery. Special services will be held at this point, and the graves of departed veterans will be decorated with flags and flowers.

Many civilians will, as in other years, avail themselves of the opportunity to witness the veterans ceremonial rites

STORE PROPRIETOR APPREHENDS TRIO STEALING FRUIT

Intrigued with the appealing appearance of fruit placed on display in front of Johnnie Baker's Front street fruit market Friday night, three Stirling youths boldly walked off with a basket of fresh plums as they strolled past the establishment. However, Mr. Baker was on the alert and running outside apprehended the trio before they reached Bridge street corner, later turning the boys over to the police. The fruit was returned and today Acting Chief Harman stated charges were pending.

HARRY MEIKLEJOHN (Campbellford)

Campbellford, Aug. 8 (Special)—Harry Meiklejohn, Campbellford garageman, died suddenly just before noon Friday following a heart attack. An expert welder, he had been out to a near-by farm to repair a binder when taken with a weak spell, was driven to his home but died before the arrival of medical aid.

Youth on Parole Just Cannot Keep Out of Trouble

Some folk just can't remain out of trouble and 15-year-old Donald McCrea, of Toronto, is the No. 1 in this category.

A few months ago he was committed to the Bowmanville Boys Training School from Toronto. Only a fortnight ago he was apprehended in a Coleman St. lodging house here when found in possession of a small arsenal, consisting of two revolvers, a loaded .22 calibre rifle and ammunition. Following his apprehension here the youth admited he had stolen the fire arms from Mr. F. Thompson, Ameliasburg Township, where he had been placed in parole. Later McCrea was returned to the custody of the Bowmanville School

In the meantime the lad promised to reform and was returned to employment on Mr. Thompson's farm early this week. On Friday afternoon Mr. Thompson reported that young McCrea had broken parole again and ran away. There were $75 missing from the Thompson household as well, so young Donald is in trouble again as police are searching diligently for him today.

Plan New Route Across Upper Michigan

Washington, Aug. 8 (AP) — The United States War Production Board announced yesterday it had approved the spending of $20,000,000 to $30,000,000 to provide an alternate route across the upper peninsula of Michigan for iron ore shipments in order to provide a second traffic route and insure against possible closure of the locks at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.

The big project calls for immediate construction of ore yards and docks, as well as the possible dredging of new channels, at Escanaba, Mich.

Also to be started immediately are improvements of the railroads operating between Superior, Wis., and Ironwood, Mich., on Lake Superior, and Escanaba, on Lake Michigan, through ballasting, tying and the strengthening of the bridges.

The project will make it possible, the office of Defence Transportation estimated, to handle up to 100,000,000 tons of iron ore annually without using the Soo locks, which it said are vulnerable to sabotage or accidental damage.

Approximately 84,000,000 tons of one will pass through the Soo locks this year and a larger tonnage will be moved in 1943.

O. D. T. estimated that 40,000,000 tons could be moved annually when the new project is completed, from the Duluth area to blast furnaces in Pennsylvania and Ohio by railroad.

Cannery Tries Experimental Pack of Young Turnip Tops

Trenton (Special)—For many years past spinach has been a favorite vegetable with both old and young, especially since Pop Eye the Sailor did so much to put it in the limelight for the children. Now it is possible that this little green leaf may have to take a back seat to a brand new green being canned in Canada, in fact right here in our own town by the Stokely-Van Camp Co. What is this new product? Just turnip tops, the nice green succulent top of the little white turnip.

This vegetable product has been canned for some time now in the plant of the Stokely-Van Camp in the United States but not until today has it ever been canned in Canada. Americans have found that this green is exceedingly rich in vitamins, iron and other minerals, and by a special cleaning process is very easily freed of any sand which might adhere to the leaves.

Only two fields of this special little white turnip are being grown by the company this year, as an experiment in this part of the country, but it is expected that another year will see his one of the leading vegetables canned. The turnip this year will see this one of the leading harder on the second concession of Sidney and by Mr. Clifton Rush on his farm just east of the airport station. The turnip itself is not used by the canning company, but turned back to the farmer for feeding purposes, but the top is cut while it is young and tender and it immediately sprouts again and again making a considerable crop from the one field. Another advantage of this product is that it can be grown and canned during the slack time between the pea and corn season.

This canning company canned a record crop of peas and is expecting to start before long on its corn, but in the meantime, Canadians are to be given a chance to sample turnip greens which are indeed a new vegetable to most people. Most of the output from this factory is consumed in Canada but it is expected a certain amount of products will still be exported to Great Britain this year.

When the representative of the press visited the Stokley-Van Camp one was impressed with the cleanliness of the buildings and the abundance of Trenton's good spring water which was being used for the purpose of keeping the factory in an immaculate condition, as well as thousands of gallons used in the cleaning of the vegetable products, and in cooking them. It is understood that this factory uses more water, while in operation, than any other factory in Trenton.

Personals

Sergeant-Observer Leonard A. McGaughey, who just recently graduated at Rivers, Man., has left for Halifax after visiting his parents Mr. and Mrs. I. McGaughey.

Dr. and Mrs. G. F Wright, Lorne Ave, have returned home after spending several weeks at their cottag on Lake Kamiskeg

Sergeant Pilot Tom Berry, who recently received his wings at No. 14 Service Flying School, Aylmer, Ont., is visiting his father Mr. Fred Berry, Henry Street, after which he will report for duty at Halifax.

Congratulations to Pilot Officer Donald Wright who has just recently received his commission at Dauphin, Man. After a short holiday in town with their parents Dr. and Mrs. H. V. Wright and Mr. and Mrs. Claude Wallace, Pilot Officer and Mrs. Wright are returning to Dauphin.

Mr. and Mrs. Murray Dixon and Miss Ruth Dixon are spending three weeks in Montreal, Ottawa and Owen Sound.

Police Court

Thomas Clairmont appeared in Trenton Police Court on Friday afternoon on a charge of assault, inflicting grievous bodily harm on one Thomas Gray. Clairmont who had damaged Gray's nose and three teeth, was given a severe lecture by the Magistrate J. L. Lloyd, and told that apparently because he was a man of good physique he had taken advantage of it to beat up this other boy. The Magistrate also warned him that if it were not that he was to join up with the navy next Monday he would be sent to jail but in view of the fact that he had been called for duty he was taking a lenient view of the case and ordered him to pay $8 costs, as well as being given suspended sentence and ordered to pay $20 as compensation to Gray. Clairmont was defended by Robert Smithrim while Assistant Crown Attorney Gordon S. Robertson acted for the Crown.

Andrew Cox for obtaining $13 board bill by fraud was given three months suspended sentence and ordered to pay the $13 bill and $15.75 costs.

P. D. Beer for fraud, taking a car out of Graham's garage with a mechanic's lien against it for $58 was ordered to make restritution, pay costs of $26.35 and was given suspended sentence. Beer had asked for the car to take it out to the front of the service station to get gas and had driven away.

Walter Carr, found in a gambling house paid $10 and $8.75 costs as did also G. J. Brundage and John J. Yurek, on the same charges.

K Shoniker was assessed $5 and $8.75 costs for breach of the H.T.A. No. 27. Shoniker hit a light standard on Dundas St. East.

John Schriver for theft of an army battle dress, uniform cap, boots and socks from a locker at the Crosse & Blackwell plant, case was enlarged for one week. John Woods for breach of Section 38 S.S. 15 of the Highway Traffic Act, failed to appear in court.

John Bolster, on a charge of non-support, case enlarged one week.

Robert McLaughlin, on a charge of failing to attend military parade. In view of the fact that he had spent two weeks' at Military Camp for drill the case was dismissed.

R. McKeown, for having liquor, paid $13 and costs.

Bryce Patrick, Frankford, for taking $52.55 from his employer was ordered to make restitution and pay costs of $13.85 as well as being given one year's suspended sentence.

Gordon Hay and Clarence Cooper, for breach of the L.C.A., being drunk, paid $10 and costs, default fourteen days.

Y.M.C.A. War Services

BELLEVILLE

The servicemen's dance tonight at the Y.M.C.A. gym will start about 8.30 p.m., hostesses being provided, and a warm welcome awaits the first seventy-five chaps who seek admission. The hostesses would appreciate it if the young ladies who are acting as dancing partners would arrive at the "Y" by 8.30 wherever possible.

Tomorrow the Red Triangle Club will be open all day for any of the boys wishing to either use the lounge for reading or writing, play table tennis or have a swim.

Dancing class is held every Monday night from 8 until 9 p.m. and the hostesses will be glad to assist any of the servicemen wishing to learn to dance.

The dance at the Quinte Golf Club on Tuesday this week will have the Belleville Hospitality Club as hosts, and another very enjoyable evening is assured airmen from Trenton, No. 6 R.D. and No. 5 I.T.S. stations.

Today we received a fine supply of English and other periodicals from local ladies and recently were given two albums containing some interesting post-cards of the Old Country. All of these kindnesses are greatly appreciated by the chaps who drop into the Red Triangle Club to pass away a few hours and on their behalf we'd like to say 'thanks'.

Some fifteen men from No. 5 I.T.S. enjoyed a fine cruise and picnic last Monday through the kindness of Dr. Locke and family.

Last Wednesday evening our regular Wednesday night dance was held in the "Y" gym. Yesterday several chaps told us that they enjoyed themselves more at that party than at any since coming to this district, so we pass the bouquet along to the young ladies who were responsible. With so many fellows tied-up with their studies it is sometimes difficult to get more than a few to attend the nightly activities at the Red Triangle Club but thanks to the regular attendance of these ladies we are always able to provide some music or games for the boys when they appear. Last Thursday, members of both local Hospitality Clubs helped put on a fine dance at Mountain View station.

CONTACT CLUB

As usual on Thursday afternoon the Airmen's wives and children met at the "Y" Swimming was popular with a number while a ball game in the gym was substituted for bowling while the alleys are being fixed up for winter use.

Some Red Cross work was done and Mrs. Farni and Mrs. Martin appointed to promote this department. Airforce wives who are free Wednesday morning are urged to go to the Red Cross rooms between 10 and 12 o'clock. Provision for minding children has been made for mothers who would like to help but who have small children to look after. Mrs. Collier, Mrs. Sargent and Mrs. Sills are planning interesting programs at the "Y" for the children for Wednesday mornings and Thursday afternoons.

Registration cards are being prepared by Mrs. Spencer and Mrs. McCallum. Because of the urgent need of help in many lines all members of the club will be asked to register, listing their previous training and business experience.

TRENTON R.C.A.F.

The great excitement in sport this week was the inter-station League play-offs in Softball for the right to represent this district in the Softball Tournament to be held in Toronto to-day.

On Monday night No. 6. R. D. won over Trenton by the score of 7-2. On Tuesday night a very exciting game was played between No. 5 ITS and No. 6 RD with arguments holding the spotlight, the game was called in the seventh innings with No. 5 ITS in the lead. No. 6 RD protested the game and the committee upheld the protest and ordered the game replayed on Thursday night and No. ITS came out on the long end of the final score and will represent the R.C.A.F. Quinte League for No. 1 Air Training Command Championship.

For some time the area behind the Officers Mess has been looked upon as a fine place for Sports and after a great amount of work the Officer's Sports Field was officially opened by the Commanding Officer Air Commodore Frank A. McGill. The latter was instroduced by H. J. Goodman the Y.M.C.A. Supervisor who acquainted the Officers with all the facilities at their disposal such as tennis courts, a softball diamond horse-shoe pitches, volley-ball court and a clock-golf course. Air Commodore McGill in his remarks stated this is the first official Officer's Sports Field in Canada. Following softball games between "Linkletters Little Lovelies" (Headquarters) vs. "Norm Numms Nymphs" (Senior Officers) and "Chesters Chestie Chestnuts" (Administration Course vs. "Alcorn's Ascending Aces" (C.F.S. Pilots) a weiner roast was held with a sing song and special entertainment from the various sections. It was a great night and we are proud of the accomplishment in turning swamp land into the first official R.C.A.F. Officer's Sports Field.

On Tuesday evening of this week the St. Michaels Hospitality Club in co-operation with Y.M.C.A. held an airmen's dance at the Quinte Golf and Country Club. The R.C.A.F. band supplied the music. At intermission refreshments were served. On Wednesday evening the music appreciation promenade concert was very well attended. The programme was directed by LAC Eric Hawkins, of London, England.

Invitations for airmen to visit Niagara Falls and Cambellford, Ont., were received this week. These invitations are always filled without difficulty, and the men look forward for these planned week-ends.

Small games in the recreation centre are only fairly well attended, this drop off in attendance being due to the warm weather.

SITUATION GRAVE

The Soviet communique said that Russians fighting a German group which broke through in the Armavir area destroyed 17 enemy tanks and 48 trucks.

Red Counter-Attacks Near Stalingrad

On the northern wing of the German drive upon Stalingrad, counterattacking Red units were credited with occupying a populated place, while in another sector 1,500 Germans were reported killed in three days. There the Russians said they were stopping German tanks with point-blank artillery fire.

In the Don River elbow Red Star said both sides captured and lost several populated points in shifting and violent battles.

Below Voronezh, at the northern end of the blazing front, the communique said Soviet forces which crossed the Don had captured several additional points.

Brisk fighting of a local nature broke out on the Leningrad front and in the Bryansk sector. 200 miles southwest of Moscow, the communique said, resulting in the killing of 280 Germans and destruction of 10 tanks.

100 Nazi Tanks Destroyed

One Soviet unit was credited with destruction of more than 100 tanks in throwing back 17 separate German attacks south of Kletskaya.

At the northern end of the flaming Don River front, the Russians reported Red Army units forced a crossing south of Voronezh and then repulsed three German counter-assaults. Hand-to-hand fighting developed in the initial attack and the Germans were reported put to flight by bayonets and hand grenades.

In another battle in this sector Hungarian troops were declared routed. The Russians said a large number of Hungarian officers and men surrendered.

GANDHI

Recognition as War Measure

The Nationalist leader said that "Singapore, Malaya and Burma taught me that disaster must not be repeated in India."

"I want you to look upon the immediate recognition of India's independence as a war measure of first-class magnitude," he said.

Gandhi's appeal came after the British government already had taken steps to assure the flow of essential commodities to India's millions in the event of a general closing of stores by Gandhi's followers in a non-violent revolt. The Congress' approval of the resolution authorizing the disobedience campaign by the Congress was regarded as certain.

Gandhi said a repetition of the disasters of Malaya and Singapore could not be averted in India "unless Britain trusts the people of India to use their liberty in favor of the Allied cause.

"By that supreme act of justice," he said, "Britain would have taken away all cause for the seething discontent of India . . . I submit that it is worth all the battleships and airships that your wonder-working engineers and financial resources car produce."

Blames False Propaganda

Asserting that "false propaganda has poisoned American ears," he added: "You have made common cause with Great Britain. You cannot therefore disown responsibility for anything that her representatives do in India."

The letter ended with the salutation: "I am your friends."

An order, prohibiting the closing of shops and restaurants during a hartal (days of mourning), empowered district magistrates to operate stores if the owners refused to open and to sell at fixed prices a number of products including grain, sugar, milk, vegetables and meat.

The British action came a few hours after 8,000 Indians heard Gandhi, addressing the Congress convention in support of a resolution demanding India's immediate independence from Britain, declared:

"Now is the occasio when we will have to rise."

OFFERS REWARD FOR APARTMENT

Tacoma, Wash., Aug. 8 —(AP)— A newspaper's classified section carried this ad: "$10 reward to party finding suitable furnished, three-room apartment, close in, $40-$45, for young couple, by Aug. 15."

Accidental Death Found by Jury At Hart Inquest

Jas. Whalen, Driver of Car, Exonerated at Probe Into Highway Fatality

A coroner's jury probing the circumstances surrounding the death of 56-year-old Joseph Hart, Trent Road, killed instantly by an automobile near Jones' Creek on August 2nd, returned a verdict of accidental death and exonerated the driver of the car, James Whalen, St. Charles Street, Belleville from any blame.

The inquest held in the County Buildings last night was presided over by Coroner Dr. J. J. Robertson, with Acting Crown Attorney Gordon Robertson conducting the probe, and County Constable Thomas Thorne in charge of the jury.

Whalen told the jury he was driving in a westerly direction about 9.35 on the night of the accident and had pulled out to pass a car driven by PO. J. R. Hensler, R.C.A.F., Trenton, when he felt his car strike something. He thought he had struck the airman's vehicle and had immediately pulled to the side of the road and stopped. Going back he found the body of a dead man.

He was driving at approximately 30 miles an hour, he testified, and had followed Hensler's car for two miles before attempting to pass. He had met an eastbound car some time previous to the time of the accident.

Hensler stated that he was driving about 30 miles per hour on the night of the accident and had noticed the Whalen car following him. He saw Hart walking on the highway about four feet inside the travelled part of the road. He was well off the shoulder on the highway. Whalen's car had attempted to pass him, and as the car drew level with his rear wheel, heard the sound of the impact.

Dark, Foggy

Traffic Officer William Milton, who investigated the accident stated that the night was dark and foggy. The body of Hart was found about seven feet off the highway and about twenty feet southwest of the point of impact. E. G. Green testified to the mechanical condition of the Whalen car. "It was good," he said.

Thomas Munro, Jones' Creek resident told the jury he had seen Hart walking along the highway just previous to the accident. He was off the shoulder and on the travelled portion of the road. He had turned towards the witness on two occasions as if to speak. Both cars involved in the accident, he testified, were travelling at approximately 30-35 miles an hour. He had heard no warning sound from any car, and the lights appeared to be alright. In his opinion, the road at this point is too narrow to pass in safety.

Dr. F. Ross, testified that the cause of death was due to cerebral hemorrhage and lacerated brain due to depressed fractures of the skull.

The jury which deliberated about ten minutes was composed of Messrs. Bruce Smith, foreman; Clarence Gibson, Morley Ward, Herbert Belsey and William Parrish.

Napanee Shoeman Suffers Heart Attack

Napanee, Ont., Aug. 8 (CP)—Stricken with a heart attack F. James Roblin, 63, connected with the shoe business in Napanee for 48 years, died at his late residence here yesterday. He was born in Napanee a son of the late Frank Roblin and spent his whole lifetime here apart from a few boyhood years in Vancouver.

His merchantile career started with the firm of Haines and Lockett being in charge of the local store for some time and 15 years ago he took over the business and continued under the firm of F. J. Roblin and Son.

He was a charter member of the Napanee Rotary Club a Mason and Oddfellow, besides his widow two daughters Mrs. G. A. Freeman and Mrs. C. Kinnear both of Belleville and one son Donald P. Roblin of Napanee survive.

WEEKLY WAR

SATELLITE TROOPS

The failure of the Germans to make progress in the Don Elbow has made it more necessary for them to exploit their footing at Tsimlyansk. Since the Nazis have failed thus far to disrupt Marshal Timoshenko's army or destroy any large part of it, it must be somewhat of a problem for them whether to concentrate on gaining their objective in the northwestern Caucasus or to endeavour to obtain control of the lower Volga.

The latter would appear the more urgent objective, especially as the Nazi failure at Voronezh has made it easier for the Russians to reinforce their armies protecting the lower Volga.

The resistance of the Russians at Tsimlyansk and in the Don Elbow coming after their success at Voronezh might have caught the Germans in two minds. The fact that the Kuban River, fed by melting snow, now is at high water may have an influence on the German decision for it must be an obstacle as formidable as the Don.

One curious feature of the recent fighting has been the extensive use the Germans are making of troops of satellite countries. That, combined with the fact that no strong diversionary operations have been opened on the northern sector of the front, makes it appear as if Germany may either be feeling the strain on her manpower or that a considerable part of her army may not have recovered from the effects of the winter war.

There have been no indications of failure of the Satellite troops to fight well but it may be doubted that they have the staying power of the German army.

The Calendar

The calendar soon will bear watching if the Germans fail to maintain the impetus of their offensive. Last year the first phase of the final offensive opened Oct. 2 and was brought to a standstill by autumn rains and mud by the third week of the month. We may be certain that the German General Staff will not consent to repeat the second phase which opened when frost had hardened the ground and was stopped by sheer cold.

The Nazis, therefore, have not more than two months in which to gain decisive results this year.

In Egypt, the lull has been practically unbroken for the last week. Reports of strenuous efforts being made, with considerable success, to reinforce Field Marshal Erwin Rommel may be accepted as true. There is, however, a definite limit to the size of the force he can employ; a limit imposed by the nature of the country and his land communications.

When that limit is reached and he has accumulated reserves of material in the forward areas he may be expected to strike.

Although Gen. Sir Claude Auckinleck may be slower to develop his maximum strength, with shorter communications he ultimately could maintain a larger force than his opponent. For offensive action, Gen. Auchinleck, with further to go to produce decisive results, needs a numerically-superior force if he is to maintain his momentum after starting.

Glancing Back 25 Years

British troops in Flanders Aug. 4, 1917 marked the third anniversary of their nation's entry into the First Great War by fighting through another progressive phase in the battles of Ypres.

Prime Minister Lloyd George renewed and strengthened Allied confidence when he linkened the war's progress to mountain climbing.

He said, "No one has any idea how near the top we may be. A mere crag may hide it from our view and we are staggered for a moment into a crevice (current Russian reverses). But we will climb again, climbing with strong limbs and firm purpose and together we shall reach the summit of our hopes."

LAND ON YOUR TOES, SOLDIER

By the time these Canadian Army men have completed the physical training schedule set for them they are a tough body of men. This 10-foot leap is only part of a grueling obstacle course at Camp Borden which men in training are expected to cover in record time. They climb poles and swinging ropes, leap streams, clamber over hazardous frameworks and stone walls — in fact, prepare themselves for operations under any conditions and over any terrain. Many of these Canadians may be chosen for commando work after they reach Great Britain.

WELCOME TO

Your oldest sister province warmly welcomes you to a "good neighbour" holiday in old Québec—it's economical, too, because just next door! Though our people and factories, like the rest of Canada, are toiling night and day producing vast streams of war weapons for our common Victory, Québec is still your ideal vacation land. Her old-time charm and scenic beauty remain unchanged, her hospitality as cordial as ever; overseas and in Canada, her sailors, soldiers and airmen gallantly share in Canada's battle.

Enjoy a complete change of scene this summer or fall, with every sport (seabathing) and relaxation; old-time customs, famous cuisine in Canada's finest hotels, inns, "pensions", camps.

You can easily reach almost every part of Québec by rail, steamer, plane, bus and by good roads. No tolls on provincial bridges, no individual liquor permits required.

Changes in Living

The piping times of peace before the war brought many things which transformed many aspects of living. All this is going to change under the demands of war which claims metals and foods, the labor of men and women and the service of soldiers, sailors and airmen as well as the economic co-operation of the people even when it eliminates many luxuries. The things which were taken as granted will not be so available. Man's ingenuity will be tested and his ability to adapt himself to the restricted conditions of life will no doubt please him more than the easy satisfaction he has had with so much of luxury about him for the mere wanting.

Some of the things that used to be done are not being done because one does not drive the car so much as he did a year ago. Thought insists on moderation in the use of luxuries and care in conservation.

So well has this thought been implanted that it is more easy than expected for people to drop some of their customs and habits, to go to work to do some more things for themselves.

Persons who have machinery and electrical devices will be very careful in their operation for the very good reason that it will be difficult to replace worn out parts and impossible to replace many appliances should they wear out.

In all this there is a helpful influence, the thought that it is for country's sake which includes that of the individual as well as that of every one else and the recognition of the fact that the restrictions really strengthen. There is satisfaction in self-denial and in accepting restrictions with a goodwill.

Accidents in U. S.

Over twice as many persons were killed last year in accidents in the United States as the United States lost in killed in the First Great War. Figures published the other day show that in that country one person in fourteen was killed or disabled through accident. In fact the figures are 102,500 killed, 350,000 permanently disabled and 8,950.000 lesser casualties bringing the total well over nine and a third million.

Those are peacetime accidents and show what a burden accidents lay upon the individual and state. The loss of time in those accidents in the United States could have built 23,000 flying fortresses.

But what can be done about accidents? No one wants them. Figures have proven that more accidents take place in the home than elsewhere and this fact shows how difficult it is to meet a situation like this and bring a lowering of the toll. Yet industries have shown that by constant reference to care workers can reduce the incidence of accident very materially.

However it be, it would be a mistake to look upon accidents as bound to happen, because many are due to carelessness and because stressing of caution does save many from accident.

Russia Resolute

The news on Friday that on the Stalingrad front the Russians hurling their mighty tanks against the Huns checked the enemy advance in one of the greatest battles of the war was good news though the news from the Caucasus front is not so assuring.

The Russian armies are undefeated and the Russian people have every confidence and trust in their men and in their general staff.

Throughout the Hitler campaign for the past seven or eight weeks the Russians have exacted a toll of dead and wounded Germans and Italians that must have appreciably weakened the Hitler armies. The Germans are not fighting on the extensive front they fought on a year ago and the change in policy of limitation of front is taken by many as showing that the Germans have not the men to spare for such extended attacks as those of a year ago.

With the reserves which Russia has carefully held in waiting far in the rear Marshal Timoshenko has been able and will be able to smite the Huns hard.

The spirit of Russia is the finest in its history, and it is this spirit that brings victory. Russia has always stood by her commitments great as they may have been.

OURSELVES AND OTHERS . . .

BY

TEN COMMANDMENTS OF FRIENDSHIP

In a world that at times borders the jittery with the tension of the times, people are prone to forget the finer points of life. In these hectic times, with warclouds hovering ominously over the nation, Canadians would be well-advised to read the following ten commandments of friendship which were clipped from somewhere.

1—Keep the brakes on your tongue.. Always say less than you think. How you say a thing often counts for more than what you say.

2—Make promises sparingly. Keep them faithfully, no matter what it costs you.

3—Don't pass up an opportunity to say kind and encouraging things to or about another. Praise good work done, regardless of who did it. If criticism is needed, do it helpfully, never spitefully.

4—Show interest in others — their work, welfare, homes, families, hobbies. Everyone likes to be made to feel important. Rejoice with them that rejoice and weep with them that weep.

5—Be cheerful. Wear a smile even if you had burnt toast for breakfast. Hide your grouch, worry, disappointments. Laugh at good stories and learn to tell them.

6—Keep an open mind on all debatable questions. Discuss, don't argue. It's the mark of superior minds to be able to disagree and yet be friendly.

7—Let your virtues, if you have any, speak for themselves, and refuse to talk of another's vices. Avoid gossip like you would poison. Make it a rule to say nothing of another unless it is good.

8—Be careful of the feelings of others. A joke at the other fellow's expense is rarely worth the effort, and often hurts where least expected.

9—Pay no attention to ill-natured and catty remarks about you. Live so nobody will believe them. Disordered nerves, bad digestion and lack of sleep are common causes of irritability and back-biting.

10—Don't be too anxious about getting your just dues. Do your work, be patient, keep your disposition sweet and forget yourself.

A TIP TO SHOPKEEPERS

A clever short-change artist has been operating with more or less success in the western part of the province, according to news despatches from that area. In all likelihood, the slick gent, looking for greener and more lucrative pastures, is headed this way, and it would be well for merchants to be on the lookout for him.

This is how he worked the trick in other towns, and it will be noted that confusing the clerk is the chief idea.

The customer makes a small purchase and hands the clerk a $20 bill. In the change returned to him is usually a ten dollar bill which the customer picks up from the counter and asks that it be changed into smaller bills.

Without taking the $10 bill from the customer's hand, the clerk takes 10 $1 bills from the cash register, counts it carefully and lays it on the counter with the other money.

At this point the customer reaches into his pocket with the hand still holding the $10 bill and pulls out change amounting exactly to the purchase price.

The change from his pocket is laid with the money on the counter. The customer then asks that the $20 bill be returned to him.

As the customer walks out of the store, the clerk is still counting the money left on the counter. He counts exactly $20 but what of the $10 bill he should have received for the ten ones?

By that time the customer is out of sight and the clerk recounts the money and then attempts to explain to the boss what happened.

Knowledge of Physical Therapy Greatly Needed Now

During the last war when sick and wounded men were recovering, it was found that those who were encouraged to walk, take light exercise, hot and cold baths, massage, and some definite line of work (occupational therapy) recovered more rapidly and returned to the front of to civilian work in a short time. For a few years after the war ended, massage, baths, exercise—physical therapy—was prescribed by physicians to hasten physical and mental recovery.

Unfortunately, physical therapy has been allowed to fall back, and with this present war upon us there is a great lack of trained physiotherapists.

The trouble, of course ,is that our medical colleges have not given this method of treatment a place on the program or curriculum of the college and physicians when they graduate know little or nothing of this branch of medical treatment.

In pointing out the great need for the teaching of physical therapy in medical schools, Dr. Eben Carey, Dean, Marquette University School of Medicine, in the Journal of the American Medical Association, states that there is a great lack of trained experts in physical therapy today. For this, physicians are greatly to blame because they have not given it the thought or study it deserves. Not knowing its value they have not prescribed it, in fact, some have condemned it because so many non-medical, or ill trained individuals have been using it. "A men is usually down on that which he is not up on".

What is included in Physical Therapy?

The Surgeon-General, United States, in 1917 stated "physical measures such as are employed under physical therapy include hydrotherapy (baths), electrotherapy, mechanotherapy (muscles manipulated by machines or by another person), active exercise, indoor and outdoor games, and passive exercise in the form of massage".

Man is covered with muscles from the top of his head to the bottom of his feet. These muscles were meant to work or exercise. In so doing they call on the heart to pump blood to part exercised (or massaged), the lungs to purify the blood, the bloodvessels to be elastic enough to receive the blood and push it onward and return the blood to the heart and to the lungs again to be purified. Without this stimulation by exercise, heat, electricity, massage, the organs and tissues of the body became weak instead of becoming strong. Those of us who are well should take some active exercise daily to stimulate body processes.

2nd Front's Many Problems

The ultimate objective in war is always political — the accomplishment of the national purpose for which the war was begun. The military objective at any particular time, or in any particular theatre of operations, is only a means to the end. It is the means by which, having had to resort to force to accomplish a political objective not otherwise attainable, the defeat of the enemy's purpose or the accomplishment of our own is being sought.

It is generally a mistake to have more than one military objective at a time. Against a major enemy, few nations have the resources to maintain more than one main effort under the drains and stresses of modern war. It was the necessity, even intermittently, of maintaining two major efforts which finally bled Germany white in the war of 1914-1918, and it has been the German object in this war to concentrate against one enemy at a time. The fact that this has so far been possible is one of the major underlying reasons for the degree of success which the German war effort has enjoyed.

Moreover, division of resources between two or more military objects tends to division of counsel in the high command, to dispersion of force, and, when difficulties arise may result in such delays and dissensions as to produce only weakness everywhere, instead of strength at least in one place. Obviously, if one has to deal with—let us say—six widely separated theatres or operations, and lacks the means to achieve success in all, it is better to be victorious in one theatre, and unsuccessful in the other five, than it is to be beaten in all six. Like many obvious facts, however, this one has not always been appreciated by statesmen or even by soldiers.

When a nation possesses command of the sea, and is operating overseas from a central and secure base, as we are going today, the temptation to scatter forces among various theatres, and objectives is very great. The mobility, which command of the sea gives to the national power, may lead to wide disposal of force unless those charged with the direction of national strategy keep constantly in mind the main political object of the war, and concentrate their thinking on the most promising military means of attaining that object.

At this moment, we do not possess the strategical initiative in Europe in the larger sense. That is to say, the enemy is still on the offensive; he is still trying to win; we do not yet possess the military means to seek a decision ourselves, and our objective is therefore to hold the enemy fast, to prevent him from defeating us or any of our Allies decisively, to force him to use up more of his diminishing resources in the effort to do so, and to maintain the blockade by which he is prevented from increasing his resources, thus gaining time while we increase the scale of our preparations.

In the European theatre of war, the main military effort for the remainder of the year must, in the very nature of things, be made by our Russian Ally. The Russian armies intact and to keep open communications with the outside world, so that Russian losses of territory, can be supplied from British and American sources. It follows that any military effort in Europe, which Britain or the United States may make, must have a direct bearing on and contribute directly to the main effort of the Russians. Otherwise it is an unjustifiable dispersal of force.

This is the real meaning of the so-called second front in Western Europe. Its purpose is to divert German forces from the Russian front. Bearing the foregoing considerations in mind, is clear that such an effort should possess the following characteristics:

(1) It should be on a sufficient scale so that it can not be met and defeated by the security forces which Germany normally stations in Western Europe; it must compel the Germans to divert forces from Russia, or from the main German strategic reserve.

(2) It should threaten a German interest of such vital importance that its loss can not be ignored, or its recovery undertaken later on when the Russian campaign has been completed.

(3)) If possible, it should, in addition to requiring the diversion of forces, directly and immediately interfere with the German needs for carrying on the campaign in Russia.

(4) In time, place and method it should be thoroughly and completly co-ordinated with the efforts of the Russian forces in order to obtain the maximum effect for a given and limited expenditure of force.

(5) Bearing in mind all the factors of time, space and weather, the effort should be such as to be well within the means available for its execution.

We should remember, however, that we are dealing with a subsidiary and not a main effort. We do not have the strength to seek a decisive victory in Western Europe this year. Our purpose there is diversion, not decision. Hence even military defeat of the diversionary force might actually represent success for the main object, if, in order to defeat the diversionary force, the Germans had to detach enough force from the East to enable the Russians to attain their 1942 objectives. — By Major Geo. Fielding Eliot in New York Herald Tribune.

MOTHER EXCUSE

"No one to stay with the children," she said;
"No one to see them tucked safely in bed.
No one to trust for the time we'd be gone.
No one to leave worth depending upon.
So give up the pleasure and write them to say
We're sorry, but really we can't get away.

"Invited to dinner. 'Twould surely be nice,
But not," she remarked, "at anxiety's price;
There's no one to come with the children to stay
With their aunts out of town and their grandmas away.
So write them we can't and the reason they'll know.
When the children are older to parties we'll go."

She'd rather stay home and be satisfied quite,
That her babes were in bed and asleep for the night
Than to go to a party and pass the hours by
And wonder if Jennie downstairs heard them cry.
So wait till they grow awhile longer we must,
For there's no one to stay with the children she'll trust.

SKIMBLE SKAMBLE STUFF

Napoleon Bonaparte was taller than Hitler, Mussolini and Stalin.

The Little Corporal was squatly built and looked short, but actually he was probably taller than the average Frenchman of his day. Hitler is five feet six inches tall, Mussolini is about the same height, and Stalin is only five feet four, while Napoleon, even in his latter years, was five feet six and a half inches.

After Tamerlane, the fourteenth century Tartar conqueror, had captured the walled city of Takrit he had the heads of all the enemy soldiers cut off. The skulls, cemented with clay, were used to build two pyramidial towers, on which was placed the inscription: "Behold the fate of lawless men and evil doers."

Like several other conquerors and rulers of Egypt before him, Tamerlane dreamed of constructing a ship canal across the isthmus of Suez. In his "Tamburlaine the Great," supposedly written about 1590, Christopher Marlowe pictures the Scourge of God and the Emperor of the East as asking for a map just before his death to see "how much is left for me to conquer of all the world." Then "Tamburlaine" is represented in the tragedy as saying:

"Then marched I into Egypt and Arabia;
And here, not far from Alexandria,
Whereas the Terrene and the Red Sea meet,
Being distant less than full a hundred leagues,
I meant to cut a channel to them both,
That men might quickly sail to India."

The phrase "fellow traveller" is a translation of the Russian "poputchik," which is from "po," along, "put," road, and "chik," a Russian suffix indicating agent or doer and corresponding to English "or" and "er." A "poputchik" is one that goes along a road with another—"a fellow traveller."

Psychologists say that only a person with a good mind can go crazy.

In the United States a small railroad car at the end of a freight train and used for workmen, the crew and occasional passengers is called a caboose.

This term, which is not used in England, was introduced into America from the Dutch through the French. Centuries ago the Dutch, who were a great seafaring people, applied the term "Kabuse" to the galley or cook-house on the deck of a merchantship. This word, corrupted into "caboose," was applied in the United States to a cooking-oven or fire-place on the land before it was to a railroad car.

Man has always honored the eye more than he has the ear. When he thinks he understands something he says "I see," but when he repeats a rumor he says "I hear." "Seeing is believing," runs the proverb.

Dashing Cossacks Bearing Brunt Of Battle in Regions Dear to Them

Famed Horsemen of Don and Caucasus Wear Bizarre Costumes, But Fight as Ably As Ancestors Did for Czars

Moscow, Aug 8—Beside the dusty roads of the Kuban steppes a traveler today would see strange, irregular black heaps. Their jet blackness strikes the eye with a shock in this landscape of yellow corn, whitewashed cottages and golden sunflowers.

What is more surprising is to see these mounds heave. These emerges a spurred boot, a silver, curbed scabbard and suddenly a dozen men shake themselves clear and, drawing around them the black woolen burkas under which they had been sleeping, strike dramatic and arresting attitudes, silent, still and vivid as crested plovers beside their nests.

They are Cossacks. In this gentle landscape they look as if they had strayed out of some medieval illuminated war history. Their artificially stiffened shoulders are dramatic and archaic, like sharp-visored helmets or the prows of Byzantine brigs. Their red and blue bashlyks — hoods that usually lie carelessly over their shoulders—are something southern, like the costumes of the Druses in the markets of Aleppo or the monks in Seville's Easter Day processions.

But Arms are Modern

Suddenly the scene jumps into modern focus as the Cossacks swing back their cloaks, revealing the ugly shapes of tommy guns. From the near-by cover light field guns trundle past and pack animals are led by with long-barreled anti-tank rifles and mortars strapped on their backs.

"The Cossacks are coming," is a cry heard in many Kuban villages today, and scarcely before it has died down the dry clatter of hoofs sounds on the cobblestones. How many Cossacks the Red Army disposes cannot be disclosed, but since the war began the regular detachments have been greatly extended by the arrival of volunteers from the arrival of volunteers from the main centers of Cossack life—the Don, the Urals, the Kuban and the Terek in the Northern Caucasus foothills.

Wearing their natioal costumes, which differ little from military uniforms, and bringing with them their own horses, the Cossacks at the front change into regular Red Army uniforms, but keep their cloaks and sabers and usually wear scarves given to them by their sweethearts before they leave for the front.

The Cossacks are men of many races. The modern Cossack derives from communities formed by runaway slaves, serfs and outlaws who gathered for self-protection on fortress islands in the Zaporozhe rapids of the Dnieper River. It is significant that their name gave the Persian language its word for raiders. Savage expeditions sent by Catherine the Great captured their fastnesses and the Cossacks were transplanted. Thenceforth it was Czarist policy to use the Cossacks as an instrument of autocracy.

Traditional Garb Restored

Since the mid-nineteenth century a rigid class distinction has appeared amog the Cossacks, driving wedge between officers and men in the ranks tended to fraternize more and more with the non-Cossack population. A French diplomat in Petrograd during the 1917 March revolution observed that though the Cossacks often went through all the motions of suppressing the rioters, they sometimes winked at the workers.

Six years ago the Soviet Government restored to the Cossacks full rights to wear their traditional uniform in the army. Indeed, the Kuban and Terek Cossacks received uniforms even more decorative than before the revolution. These are vivid, dramatic uniforms, with full-cuffed, long-skirted tunic and colored choker collars. They are not used in action, but are donned for mess. The usefiil cloak, when its wearer is mounted, falls in long folds, enveloping the saddle and masking the horse's back as far as the trial.

The Red Army's Cossacks mainly derive from troopers' camps, though there are men serving with great distinction whose fathers were senior officers in the Czarist army and who attended the Czarist Military Academy. Others, who from a special volunteer regiment, are veterans of Marshal Semyon Budenny's mounted army, who swept from Rostov in three weeks' hard riding to defeat the Poles in the Western Ukraine in 1920 and drive the White from the Ukraine.

But most of the Cossacks are sons of the free Don, born since the revolution and brought up in its schools. Loyal as ever to the government, they are strongly disciplined, ruthless and ingenious in battle and fearless.

Secret Press Worries Huns In Poland

By a Correspondent of the Manchester Guardian

Poland, the first country to be invaded and partly destroyed by Hitler's armies and the very first to put up a fierce resistance to the invader, shows persistent and, indeed, increasing spiritual resistance after almost three years of Nazi terror, hardship and ruthless oppression.

Copies of the underground Polish press, which have reached this country by ways which for obvious reasons cannot be disclosed, confirm the intensification of the anti-Nazi campaign in the teeth of the heavily armed army of occupation.

The number of these clandestine papers is surprising. There have appeared so far about 72 secret newspapers published within close range of firing squads and concentration camps. They cause apprehension and nervousness among the occupation authorities, and the sum promised to anybody who betrays either staff or distributors has recently been increased.

In spite of this the Nazis only occasionally get hold of anyone connected with the underground press whose net is spread all over the country.

The actual number of clandestine sheets varies constantly. Some papers are traced and closed down, others cease to be published either for lack of paper or because the whole staff have been arrested and executed or have had to leave the country. Other new papers are started. But since the destruction of the official Polish press by the Nazi authorities more than 150 underground publications of various sorts have appeared.

The usual form is the weekly paper or the pamphlet; the average weekly or fortnightly paper has about sixteen octavo pages of small print. The monthly publications are mostly technical and contain statistical material about the situation of Poland under Nazi occupation, economic and educational matter, and advice to farmers—as well as to saboteurs.

Five daily bulletins are circulated in Warsaw giving news from abroad. Some papers have two and four daily editions. And many of these papers have appeared regularly, without interruption, throughout the war, even if members of the staff have been shot or members of the distribution squads traced. "We might be one or two hours later than usual, but we shall come to you," proclaimed one of the most popular papers.

As in the other invaded countries the young are eager and courageous helpers in the distribution though they know that detection may bring not only their own death but that of their relatives, or concentration camp and prison for the duration of the Hitler regime.

The secret press tries to stir up doubt and unrest among the Nazis. Regularly, to the fury of the occupation authorities, officers and soldiers find copies of a German monthly, "Der Hammer" ("The Hammer"), in their mail or on their desks—distributed by the vast unarmed army of anonymous helpers.

In one of these the Nazis are asked a few embarrassing questions, such as whether they know why they are here, and what they expect for themselves if this war goes on for many more years. "Der Hammer" is simply and clearly worded, without violence, and brings out many facts which may well give its Nazi readers some thing to think about. I have just seen number 22 of "Der Hammer." So far as is known neither editor nor staff has been traced; its circulation has reached about ten thousand copies monthly.

Recently the notorious "Gauleiter of the Wartheland," Greiser, complained that the Germanization of Poland has made little progress. According to the "Polish Commonwealth," which reported his speech, Greiser announced a new decree forbidding marriage between Poles if the man is under 28 and the woman under 25.

Situation Along Kuban R.

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

A grave possibility that the left wing of the Russian Army of the Caucasus, which Moscow says is still battling Nazi invaders south of Kushchevka, has been trapped was indicated by Berlin versions of the South Russian battle.

The Germans claimed also capture of important Armavir Junction, more than 100 miles to the south, and penetration of Russian lines across the Kuban to within thirty miles of the Maikop oil field.

It still seems possible, however, that the fighting along the Yeya River, south of Kushchevka, is a rearguard action to cover Red retreat below the Kuban in the sector between the Azov Sea coast and the line of the Rostov-Baku Railway.

German claims of the capture of Yeisk, Azov Sea port seventy miles due west of Kushchevka on the lower end of the Bay of Taganrog, tends however, to confirm the impression that the main body of the Russian forces in the northwest corner of the Caucasus above the Kuban may have made good its escape to the Yeya River line.

Gleam of Encouragement

If that be true, it seems obvious that the front the army of the Caucasus still hoped to hold on the left was the Kuban-Laba line, backed by the foothills of the northern end of the Caucasus Range. This front would cover all approaches to Maikop and the oil pipeline from Maikop to Tuapse on the Black Sea, important as an advance fueling base for Russian Black Sea warcraft.

Berlin asserts, however, that Nazi units not only are approaching Krasnodar on the Kuban, seventy miles northwest of Maikop, but have puhsed to within thirty miles of Maikop in that sector. If that is true it means the Kuban defence front has been breached east of Krasnodar as it has already been crossed from Armavir northward to Kropotkin.

Dark as the outlook is on the Russian left flank and in the centre, where the deepest Nazi spearhead is reported astride the Black Sea-Caspain railroad below Armavir, there is one gleam of encouragement. Berlin admits that heavy Red reinforcements have entered the battle in the sector between the Don and the Sal Rivers. That Nazi thrust northeastward up the Krasnodar-Stalingrad railroad gravely menaces the great Volga industrial centre of Stalingrad. It is a Nazi attempt to turn from the south the Russian Don bend front through which Germans have failed to crash in repeated attempts.

Conference In Strategy.

Moscow indicated several days ago that Red army reserves, withheld from action for a crucial moment, were being thrown in west of Stalingrad. It is from that sector, too, that London military observers seemed to anticipate a Russian counter-attack aimed at pinching off the narrow wedge driven into the centre of the line up the Kuban above its great bend to Vorshilovgrad and beyond.

German admission of heavy defensive fighting between the Don and the Sal with Russian "new forces" confirms the Moscow advices. The situation to the southwest seemed too critical for a Red counterattack southwest of Stalingrad to relieve it greatly.

There is no discernable defensive front behind the Kuban-Laba line except the Causasian foothills. If German forces are within thirty miles of Maikop to the northwest, they have already thrust deeply beyond the Kuban into that tumbled, peak-dotted terrain.

The only other comforting aspect of the war news from Russia were reports of an Anglo-American-Russian high strategy conference in Moscow. These reports lacked authoritative confirmation although London buzzed with whispers that Prime Minister Churchill was in the Russian capital and that second front plans were nearing completion.

Uuquestionably Russian-American conversations regarding increased aid for Russia or plans for meeting the rising threat in the Caucasus to the Persian Gulf-Caspain supply line are in order if not in progress in Moscow. British participation would be essential.

Who Hit This Nazi Sub? Who Cares! As Long As Someone Got Him

From the Ports of Little Ships Canada's Fighting Seamen Sail Out to Hunt Down the Foe

By LIEUT. E. H. BARTLETT, R.C.N.V.R.

The Ports of the Little Ships are busy.

They are the ports from which sail the Hunters of the Atlantic—the destoyers and corvettes, trawlers and sloops, the little ships which spend their days and their nights in ceaseless forays against the submarines with which Hitler is trying to cut the ocean life-line between the new world and the old.

Canada has her Ports of Little Ships. So have America and England and Ireland, Scotland, Newfoundland and Iceland. One day, perhaps, their full story may be written, a story of the transformation of the ports into miniature naval bases. And in the telling of that story will be told, too, the story of the little ships themselves. Some of their stories can be told now, although all the details cannot be printed. Some stories can be told as they were told to this writer one night in the Crow's Nest, in one of the Ports of the Little Ships.

First, perhaps, the Crow's Nest should be introduced.

Officially it is listed as the "Seagoing officers' Club" in the port where it is the main centre of relaxation for those officers whose little ships visit this port.

It is far from Canada, this port, although it is now a Canadian naval base. Ships of the navies of Britain, Free France, Poland and Norway use it, for the war at sea has proven that the phrase "United Nations" is a fact and not merely a fanciful joining of words. To provide a common meeting place for these officers of the United Nations a senior Canadian officer started the Sea-Going officers' Club.

It is not to put it mildly, exactly pretentious. It is the top floor of a warehouse building, reached by three steep flights of wooden stairs which climb the outside walls of the warehouse itself. The use of the top floor was donated by the warehouse owner. A friend of his added a setee, another friend gave a couple of wooden chairs, yet another presented the club with a kitchen table. There is a fireplace with a wooden settle around it, and a "juke box" which grinds out the tunes of the day at five cents per tune. For entertainment there is the inevitable dart board and, for the devotees, a chess board with an excellent set of men.

A small bar and an equally small kitchen (the cook specializes in fried sausages and eggs) complete the furnishings. As was said before, as a club it is not exactly pretentious. But it has atmosphere . . . the atmosphere of the Little Ships. Boat lanterns give it illumination. The crests of the Little Ships, painted on plaques around its walls, provide its decoration. And the sea-going officers are unwittingly writing its history as, relaxed, off-duty, they tell of the waging of the war at sea.

They don't tell their own tales, for that is not the way of the Silent Service. But, in telling of the exploits of some of their numbers, the story gradually unfolds.

"It's a lot of luck, you know", said one of the officers. "Some ships go out time after time, and never get a chance to go after a sub. They might feel upset about it, but after all, as long as they are getting the merchant ships through, they are still doing their job. Other ships walk into a spot of glory right away. It's all luck."

There was the luck which befell a Canadian corvette. She was, and is, commanded by a lieutenant in the volunteer reserve, and her crew is almost completely drawn from the ranks of that body. In action with a submarine, however, they handled their craft and their weapons like veterans of the permanent fighting force.

HERES A CANNED MESSAGE THAT REACHED ITS DESTINATION

Closing in on her victim, the corvette shown in this photograph dropped her depth charges at well-spaced intervals (described in the navy as a "depth charge pattern"). From beneath the surface came a shattering, powerful explosion and minutes later the tell-tale oil slick spread slowly across the water. In the background is the huge geyser thrown up by the depth charge explosion. R.C.N. Photo.

They were returning from a patrol when they ran into a submarine attack upon a convoy. More, they ran into a surfaced submarine waiting to launch her torpedoes into the merchantmen. The corvette attacked, swiftly and competently.

They Don't Like Corvettes

A submarine on the surface has a very healthy turn of speed. The Nazi commander, with a corvette bearing down on him, used his speed and fled. Merchantmen, yes. Armed corvette, no thank you. The chase lasted more than an hour, with the ocrvette gradually closing the distance between them. The corvette's forward gun was in action whenever it could be brought to bear, which was not very often in the moderately rough sea which was running. A submarine is a small target in the best conditions and as the action was in the middle of a dark night it is not suprprising no hits were registered.

The corvette captain was not perturbed about the facts; his joy was that he had the submarine where he wanter her . . . under attack.

Four torpedoes, from the sub's stern tubes, were launched at his ship. One passed within 15 feet, its white wake bubbling impotently. Then, to avoid being rammed the submarine crash-dived.

Oil Slick Tells Story

Close on her dive the corvette dropped a full pattern of depth charges. Their explosions shoot the corvette. Then, from beneath the surface, came a powerful shattering explosion which was certainly not caused by any one depth charge or any combination of them. There was no further sign of the submarine, her face remained a mystery of the sea and the darkness of the night. Hours later when day had come, a patrolling aircraft reported a huge slick of oil and bits of wreckage.

The corvette feels she has a submarine to her credit, but the proof is not quite conclusive enough for the powers that be.

"It's hard," an officer broke in, after the telling of this tale, "to decide sometimes who really makes the kill. Now take the case of . . . ."

His story was of two R.N. corvettes who joined forces to wipe out a sub.

The first corvette had a full load of depth charges and was just itching to use them. Unfortunately, her submarine detecting device had, as the teller of the tale phrased it, "developed a pain in its tummy" and was not operating. While she was mournfully returning to base to effect repairs, she got a signal from a sister ship to come along and help.

The sister ship had a perfectly operating detecting device and had located a sub lying on the bottom. But, unfortunately having had rather a busy day, the sister ship was without one depth charge to drop.

The combination was perfect.

The one who could listen led the one who could attack over the submarine and a couple of patterns were dropped.

There was no immediate reaction and a rather querulously bored signal came from the "deaf" corvette.

"Are you sure", it read, and a pained English accent could almost be heard in the flickers and flashes of the signal lamp, "that you aren't wasting my time?"

No Time Wasted

The answer, according to the teller of the tale, was quite peremptory, and the attack continued, so successfully that the next pattern brought the submarine to the surface. "Where," the teller of the tale concluded, quietly grim, "she was disposed of".

"But," he asked, "who got her? The listener or the depth charge?"

His listeners chuckled.

"Who cares," one retorted, "so long as they are got?"

That's the job of the little ships, and it's' a job they are doing very effectively, as their ports could tell. . . . if they would.

No Heart-Stealer Like A Vigorous Puppy Dog

Hamilton Spectator

No domestic experience is perhaps quite so fraught with trials and uncertainty as the rear of a vigorous pup. It is an adventure that seldom ends until the juvenile stage has been passed, and sometimes not then. So long as the mischievous rascals peer from behind the piano and show the white of their eye and a pink tip of tongue, it can be taken for granted that they still have that streak of Peck's Bad Boy in them.

There is no accounting for what they do, or what fresh quest their rebellious minds will lure them on to. Millinery and fine footwear are that is no more than a pocket edrage, or even a satin cushion can be made to serve in a pinch.

Their growth is also often most disconcerting, and the little fellow tha is no more than a pocket edition at six weeks may be almost as large as a pony at twelve or fifteen months

They are a problem. Ask the woman who has to put up with one, day after day, without respite, who fears to go as far as the grocer's lest she come back and find the living-room curtains in tatters and the chesterfield explored to its last spring and webbing for bones that once were slyly hidden there.

A housewife in Manhattan, Kansas, is just about ready to give up and let Diane have the house. Diane is four months old, and getting to be quite a girl; so big for her age, and all that. You see, she's a Great Dane — and also a great headache, if you ask her mistress. Diane has been slow to learn and hard to break in. She longs for a home on the range and the open spaces, rather than a compact and well-kept bungalow. She wrecked a lovely robin-blue comforter in the guest room the other day, and her owner, more in desperation than confidence, decided to buy a book on the care and training of dogs. It was guaranteed to teach better manners to the most unruly pup—and Diane certainly stood in need of obedience. But, the 'phone rang during the first lesson, as 'phones will, and the book was left for a moment on a chair. Diane got hold of it instantly and chewed its cover and pages into pulp within three minutes. And that was that.

IF IT'S ABOUT YOUR EYES . . . SEE McFEE

At a recent Medical Association Convention, according to the New York "Times," a Dr. Post is reported as telling his fellow oculists that extremely near-sighted persons should not marry. Of course experience and reasoning stamps such stuff as medical "bunk." But, that nearsightedness in children is the most dangerous of visual errors is common agreement.

And frequently the very worst treatment of such cases is the use of glasses. Proper care when a child first enters school would eliminate probably half of all visual defects and a lifetime use of glasses.

Sales of War Savings Certificates Drop Sharply After Budget Day

(By JOHN DAUPHINEE)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Aug. 8 (CP)—Finance Minister Ilsley's budget seems to have been a bit too "tough" for some Canadians and the National War Finance Committee is worried.

Before budget day, June 23, sales of War Savings Certificates were running between $6,500,000 and $7,000,000 a month, with redemptions between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000. In the month after the budget—up to July 22—sales dropped to $4,791,920 but the value of certificates redeemed held near the highest level at $1,439,320.

This means that every time a certificates was sold for $4, more than $1 of the money had to be paid right out again to somebody who was cashing in a certificate bought previously.

To help build up certificate sales—they were over the $8,000,000 mark last January—the War Finance Committee has turned to three new revenue channels. There are "over-the-counter" sales in banks and post offices, sales in retail stores and the "Miss Canada" campaign from coast to coast.

Over-the-counter sales have just started and there's no report on how they're going. But the stores sales of savings stamps are progressing nicely and the "Misses Canada" are officially described as "the best of the lot."

Showroom Helps Manufacturers

A bulky white figure slouched on an operating table spends the day in one of Ottawa's temporary office buildings staring blankly at 3.7 anti-aircraft shell.

It's part of a new showroom set up by the Munitions and Supply Department's purchasing branch to give manufacturers a quick look at some of the things Canada is buying to fight a war.

The big white figure is a heavy Royal Canadian Air Force asbestos suit. Around the walls are uniforms, pots and pans, gas masks and skiis. Drawers and cupboards store other articles—1,600 altogether.

At the rate of three or four a day manufacturers' representatives,—many of them from firms which have had their business curtailed by material shortages, visit the exhibition. Looking over the exhibits they can determine quickly just what articles their plants can make.

The showroom was opened only a few weeks ago and is growing rapidly. The purchasing branch is pleased. And there's talk that the display may become a permanent record of the equipment supplies to Canadian forces.

ODDS AND ENDS

Agriculture Minister Gardiner practices what he preaches .. for two years he has been urging farmers to grow less wheat .. he owns two farms himself and hasn't grown a bushel in that time .. Finance Minister Ilsley is another and his family doesn't run the car any more .. his young daughter's candid opinion "Daddy's pretty touch."

What with all the new taxes on things we buy we thought the run on pennies would be pretty terrific .. looking for a paragraph we telephoned the Bank of Canada .. "Oh, no," said the expert, "there hasn't been any demand for extra bronze." .. that's the way they say it down there.

Carillonneur Robert Donnell plays everything well but the piece which really takes the fancy of the crowds on the lawn in front of the Centre Block is his arrangement of "Jeannie With the Light Brown Hair."

In this day of war financing the treasury board gets lots of mentions but its members don't get much individual publicity .. in case you've ever wondered, here's the board's makeup: Finance Minister Ilsley, Trade Minister MacKinnon, Resources Minister Crerar, Revenue Minister Gibson, Justice Minister St. Laurent and Agriculture Minister Gardiner.

Declares U. S. Equipment Sent To Australia is Just a "Trickle"

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Aug. 8 (CP) — United States equipment sent to Australia is a "trickle" which could be replaced by three days of American war production, according to an authoritative source who cannot be specifically identified.

He was unable, he said, to disclose the exact figures because of military secrecy, but he declared Australia is carrying her own load and any view that great sacrifices are being made in war areas elsewhere for Australia's defence are unwarranted. Other areas are not being stripped of war goods for her benefit, he said.

The Australian and American public has been somewhat confused concerning the situation because of necessary secrecy, he continued, but he said he could disclose that the greatest part of the defence forces of Australia are Australian. The addition to this defence from abroad would scarcely compensate for Australian troops that are in other war theatres, he added.

Although in the air a much greater relative percentage of strength in the southwest Pacific is American, it is "insignificant" when compared with American potentialities, he added.

Ships Supply Balances

As to United States ships, he said these would little more than balance the loss of services of Australian ships abroad.

Norman Stockton, the Melbourne Herald's war correspondent, asserted today that the time had come for some very plain speaking on the subject of military aid to Australia.

"We do not want another Malaya, another Java, yet I say all the potentialities are here," he declared. "Our capacity to defend Australia depends upon the aid we receive from the United States.

"For the time being, at least, MacArthur, the most offensive-minded of all Allied generals has been placed in the position where apparently he cannot take the offensive.

"The United States has considererd that this country, in the wider strategy of global war, must play a secondary role for the balance of 1942—perhaps longer."

WEDDINGS

FROST—GAY

Gladioli and summer flowers adorned St. John's Church, Stirling, for the wedding at two o'clock this afternoon of Marion Florence, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hubert G. Gay, Foxboro, and Reginald George Frost, Frankford, son of Mrs. May Frost and the late Thomas Frost. Rev. L. Harding officiated and wedding music was played by Miss Theda E. Foster, Bloomfield, cousin of the bride.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was charming in her floor length gown of white chiffon with long full sleeves, shirred bodice and quilted yoke. Her long veil was caught to her hair with orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of red roses. Mrs. Gordon Demille, Foxboro, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, wearing a floor length gown of blue chiffon with quilted bolero jacket, white picture hat and accessories. Her bouquet was of pink roses. Miss Helena Frost, Frankford, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid, in a floor length blue chiffon dress with white picture hat and accessories and bouquet of roses. Mr. Gordon Gay, Foxboro, brother of the bride, was groomsman, and the ushers were Mr. Bob Gay, brother of the bride, and Mr. Hugh Burkitt, cousin of the groom.

A reception was held at the home of the bride, Foxboro, Mrs. Gay in navy and white printed sheer with white accessories and corsage of roses, and Mrs. Frost wearing black sheer with touches of white, and corsage of red roses, received with the bride and groom. Misses Helen Ketcheson, Trenton; Marion and Marjorie Tummon, Foxboro, Euna Foster, Wellington, Verna Sherry, Foxboro, and Mrs. James Reynolds, Foxboro, assisted in serving.

The groom's gift to the bride was a three-strand pearl necklace, to the pianist, a compact, to the bride's attendants, white French kid gloves, to the groomsman and ushers, tie sets.

Mr. and Mrs. Frost left on a wedding trip to Kingston and points east, the bride travelling in turquoise blue with white accessories. Upon their return they will reside in Frankford.

Out of town guests included Mr. and Mrs. MacLaren Longwell, Port Colborne, Miss Hulda Miller, Preston, Dr. Wm. J. Gay, Antioch, Ill., Mrs. Fendley Pollard, Unionville, Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Foster, Wellington and Mr. and Mrs. A. Jandrew, Bloomfield.

Exercise For Fatted Calves

Laraine Day recommends bicycling for slenderizing the legs

By HELEN FOLLETT

FATTED CALVES won't stay fatted if they are given plenty of vigorous exercise. Make the muscles tight and strong and away fly the adipose cushions. Don't expect results immediately. That's the trouble with the would-be slimmers. They don't stick long enough at the reducing job.

Take measurements of ankles, calves and thighs and then you'll know if you are really getting any place. Have a time for your exercise; if you haven't a regular arrangement in the daily schedule you won't do it. You know that.

Body tall, hands on hips, lift on the toes. Keep on your toes while you count ten. Then walk on your toes, taking short steps. You won't get far at first, but don't be discouraged. Every day the muscles will be stronger you'll be able to travel farther.

Join up with the bicycle girls. As you pedal, lift the body slightly, so the legs will have more work to slenderize.

If a woman has money she can seek the help of a masseuse who will fatten down adipose cushions by force—pounding, slapping and kneading. If the budget is limited you can do something along these lines yourself. Get a small rolling pin and press it over the flesh.

After exercising or massaging, lave the flesh with cold salt water to form it. Make a fairly strong solution, rinse it away with clear water, dry briskly, apply alcohol.

It is just as well to watch the diet, so that more fat cells will not appear when the present ones have been annihilated. Cut down on cream, butter, cereals, sweet foods, fat meats.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Doctor-Husband in Service Brings About Problem

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have always made a point of sending greeting and congratulatory cards to all my friends, and many acquaintances, too, on their birthdays and other special occasions. It is quite a hobby of mine, and those to whom I send these cards seem very much pleased that I have remembered the dates (secret . . . I keep a little red book!)

About five years ago I married a doctor and then, naturally, I signed all cards either Dr. and Mrs. John Smith or John and Mary. Now my husband is in the army, and expects to leave the country in the very near future.

When I send the cards after he has left, should I continue to sign both our names?

If you tell me to sign both our names, should I sign Dr. and Mrs. Smith or Lieutenant and Mrs. Smith?

Many of the receivers of these greeting cards are friends of my husband's. I know them all, but only a few of them do I know well. Others are nurses, friends of mine from the days when I worked in that field; they all know my husband, either from working with him or from meeting him at our home. Others are patients of his, with whom we have become well acquainted.

For many reasons, Mrs. Beeckman, I would very much like to keep sending these greeting-cards, and I'd like to keep signing both our names. First, I like "remembering" people by sending them cards. Besides this very personal reason, I must admit that I'd like to keep my husband in their minds, for professional and business reasons. Also, I feel that if I continue to sign my husband's name he will not seem so far away. However, this may seem out of order, since these friends and acquaintances will know that he is not with me. Please help me!

—L. D.

I completely understand your wish to continue sending these greeting cards, and your reasons for continuing to sign both names. Your professional reason is entirely logical; it's a serious fact that must be faced practically, as many wives of doctors in the Service very well know.

Don't let the signature be a hurdle for you. Send your cards, as has been your pleasant habit. Sign them with your informal name -- Mary to close friends; Mary Smith or Mary Robinson Smith, to not-so-close friends, or acquaintances.

Then, on the cards, write a friendly or informing little message about your husband. For example: "I know that John (or to his less close friends 'my husband') would want me to send his devoted wishes (or 'congratulations' or whatever the idea of the card) with mine. Or "I know you will want to know that John (or 'my husband') has sent me word that he has arrived at his overseas station: that he is well, and that he has been assigned to just the kind of service in which he specialized.

This would be a real build-up, for your friendliness and for his, and for his future professional contacts.

Presentation Made To LAC J. Boyd, Highlights of Dance

Mountain View, Aug. 8.— The gaily decorated drill hall at Mountain View was the scene of a large enthusiastic gathering on the occasion of the airmen's monthly camp dance on Thursday evening.

Stirred on by the charming young ladies from the St. Michael's and Belleville Hospitality Clubs and by groups from Wellington and Mountain View as well as the Station's own Women's Division, the flyers soon had the party moving at a fast pace.

Arranged by a committee including F./Lt. Mulcahey, the masters of ceremonies for the evening were the K. of C. Supervisors, Tom Rathwell and Bob Sutherland.

The tickets for the door prizes were drawn by Mrs. Kennedy and the lucky prize winners were Mrs. Booth of Vancouver, Miss Mabel Russell, LAC. Hamer and LAC Jamieson. The spot dance was won by Miss Pelott and LAC. Lackford.

The highlight of the evening was the presentation by F./Lt. Somerville of a memorial loving cup to LAC. Jack Boyd for Meritorious Service.

During the intermission, refreshments, arranged by Miss McNeill, were served in the Mess Hall.

Music for the occasion was supplied the Trenton [illegible] and while swing music played its part, by far [illegible] popular were the moonlight waltzes.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Unpopular With Girl He Likes

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 18 years of age and graduated from high school this past June. I can't seem to find a girl that I can go steady with. All the girls I knew in school seemed to like me. They told me they liked me because I am quiet and shy and act more sensible than most boys. There are two girls I like, but they don't pay a bit of attention to me, merely recognise me when I pass.

I don't smoke, drink or gamble and I'm beginning to wonder if this is the type of men that girls prefer. Those of my friends who have all these bad habits have no difficulty in finding a girl friend. They invite me to go with them, but I don't want to meet a girl in a beer garden or such places. I always refuse to go with them. Do you think I should?

In the Dark

Give yourself time before you decide with which type of girl you're popular or unpopular. Perhaps the two you admire are wondering why you're not more friendly.

Husband Won't Make Will

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I love my husband dearly, and I am sure he loves me also. But the man has never seen the necessity of keeping or putting our personal affairs in order.

We are middle-aged and neither one is very well, and it worries me a good deal. If anything should happen to him I would be left quite helpless, as our savings account and checking account are in his name. What we have, we have saved since our marriage, and I've scrimped and done all my own work.

How can I broach the subject to him, and have him see and understand the necessity of having our personal affairs in order? We have no property. He does not have a will.

A Reader and Admirer

It's amazing how many letters like yours come to this column. Husbands calmly see their wives face a future for which they have made no provision. The best results are achieved, I believe, in bringing up the question tactfully and talking it over without resentment or nagging.

Chart a Quick Way to Learn the Piano

How To Join The Magic Circle?

Not enough attention? One way to get attention is to deserve it! Playing the piano you always have admirers.

Not that the piano is hard to learn; it isn't. You can learn to play entertainingly with the aid of a keyboard chart that shows at a glance which keys to play for which music notes.

So that from the very start you know how to read music! And our diagram shows how you can play popular pieces without long hours of practice. Just simplify by playing the melody line with your right hand and with your left some easy harmonizing chords.

Yes, those numbers below our melody line represent chords. Each number corresponds to a numbered key on your chart. Look at your chord numbers, then at your chart —and play.

You soon learn all the basic chords you need this way—and you know so many pieces that people think you've played for years!

Our 24-page instruction book has tables of chords and full-size keyboard chart. Gives lessons in rhythm, elements of music; has three pieces for practice.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of "Quick Course In Piano Playing" to The Ontario Intelligencer, Home Service, 166 Front Street, Belleville. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of instruction book.

RUNAWAY PIG IS PROBLEM

Chatham, Ont., Aug. 8 (CP) — Police here wonder what to do with a runaway pig, settled temporarily at the farm of John Kosik near here. After farrowing, the pig started charging at tractors and any person who came near. Officers don't want to shoot it because then they'll have to nurse the young pigs.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was looking at the bridge problem with an absent expression, saying to pop, Let others lose their temper and make coarse insulting remarks, is that any excuse for you to lower yourself to the same sunken level?

Not the slightest, and I hope all automobile drivers are listening in by remote control, pop said, and ma said, That's the motto of my philosophy, and I successfully put it to the concrete test at the bridge game this afternoon when Nora Landers went off her high horse to say the most awful things to me simply because I got a little absent minded while she was my partner.

Did you trump her ace? pop said, and ma said, Just once, it's libel to hapen to anybody and it was certainly no excuse for her immediate outpouring. "Well," she remarked with the coldest look I ever saw in any woman's eyes before or since, "if you're capable of a thing like that after all the years you've been exposed to bridge, you ought to give up the game and stick to gin rummy where your boners cant hurt anybody but yourself."

And you mean to say you refrained from pinning her ears back after that blast? pop said, and ma said, I never remained calmer in my life. "Now listen, Nora, I told her with a smile that would of done credit to a saint, "I have no intention of becoming abusive merely because I've been abusive to. Suffice it to say, you remind me of mushrooms on toast." That was the full extent of my words to her, ma said.

I'm afraid I dont get it, pop said, and ma said, Nora Landers got it, I'm quite sure, because there were several ladies there who know that mushrooms on toast are my favorite abomination, and as soon as I left I'm positive they lost no time in telling her.

It's still slightly confusing, excuse me if I retire to think it over, pop said.

HEALTH CHATS

By Dr. Herman N. Bundesen
President, Chicago Board of Health

In Transfusions, Each Part of Blood Has Special Use.

Blood donors save lives. There is no question about that. Blood contains substances for which there is no substitute.

For many years fresh blood has been used for transfusions from one person directly to another. The development of blood banks, by which blood may be had at a moment's notice, is one of the great life-saving advances of recent years.

It would appear, according to Drs. Mark M. Ravitch and Alfred Blalock of Johns Hopkins University, that in the treatment of most conditions requiring transfusion, whole fresh blood is the best for each of the separate parts of the blood has a special use. The red cells of the blood carry oxygen. Other parts of the blood help to promote coagulation or clotting. Others have to do with nutrition.

Fresh blood is the only substance which is capable of carrying oxygen. The older the blood the fewer are the number of red blood cells present and it is these red blood cells that carry the oxygen. Blood serum, or the fluid part of the blood, when given by injection into a vein speeds up the circulation for a time but does nothing to aid in the carrying of oxygen.

After sudden loss of a large amount of blood, the serum may improve the ability of the cells which are left to carry oxygen and also bring up the total volume of the blood. However, unless the cause of the bleeding is promptly stopped and shock or collapse is overcome, it will be necessary to give an injection of whole blood into a vein in order to save the patient's life. In persons with shock, collapse and chills, which follow severe injury, the giving of blood plasma or blood serum may be helpful.

Plasma contains certain parts of the blood not found in serum. One of these is fibrinogen, which has to do with the blood clotting. It is believed that plasma is less likely to cause severe reactions than serum.

To improve the clotting power of the blood, fresh whole blood is the best substance to use. Plasma may also be helpful. Whole blood plasma of serum will furnish elements which help to combat infections. Hence, in the treatment of severe infections, all three of these things may be employed.

In deciding just what part of the blood should be used in treating a disorder, the physician must consider what function of the blood has been disturbed and then use the preparation which he feels will most quickly overcome the trouble. Of course, many times whole fresh blood is not available and in such instances the best substitute on hand should be employed.

Running A Book Store

The selling of books at retail is, as viewed from a safe distance, such agreeable work that it is a little surprising not to find a book shop on every corner in every town. We are sure that a great many persons enter the business who find very soon they can't make a go of it, but if one must starve it would be more pleasant to do it while looking at rows of books than in most other places.

Thousands of persons must at some time in their lives have wished they could run a book store, and some go all their lives dreaming of it and looking forward to an old age so spent. Many of these are of course of a most impractical nature, just the kind one would like to find selling books.

The ideal kind of book shop is one where the emphasis is not on the selling of books but on talking about them. There was one such shop in which the books were mainly kept on the first floor, while upstairs was a room with a few easy chairs, low tables and ash trays scattered about, in which the proprietor spent most of his time sitting around talking to customers who seemed to have not the slightest intention of ever buying anything. Some terrific arguments developed on matters that didn't make a great deal of difference to the welfare of the world. Occasionally some tea was served.

From time to time the proprietor would have to go downstairs, when some chance customer got it into his head that he wanted to buy a book, but this was incidental and regarded good-naturedly as an interruption that must be put up with if one were to be in trade at all.

Nothing is less necessary about a book shop than to have somebody in it who is consciously trying to make a smashing success of the business and sell things. He is good for dealing with only one type of customer, the man who knows exactly what he wants before coming in, and who wants to have it wrapped up and get out without delay. Anybody could sell this customer a book. There is no salesmanship involved.

It is the customer whose mind is not made up, who comes in aimlessly — to browse, to handle fine bindings admiringly, to marvel at a tasteful job of printing, to leaf through illustrations of a long-familiar text — who offers the real challenge to salesmanship. But he must be carried along subtly, in the most roundabout fashion. The direct approach is worthless.

Everything about the shop should be unhurried; if there is a clock at all it should be running slow. The shop should be open evenings, and if feasible at all the owner should sleep in it.

An unfortunate custom has grown up of selling things other than books in book shops. This is a distraction to the real lover of books. The space might much better be used for a fireplace, or two or three good pictures.

A book-rental department is no doubt necessary, but it is a tail that should not be permitted to wag the dog. It is at least debatable whether anything should be included among the rentals other than detective yarns. If other fiction isn't good enough to reread with pleasure at a later date, it probably isn't good enough to read in the first place.

It is a tremendous mistake to have nothing available but newly published books. What discovery can one ever make in such a shop? The real lover of books is always looking for a discovery, a bargain, a rare find that has been dug out of somebody's attic. The main trouble with many shops in our metropolitan suburbs is that they contain nothing that can't be ordered more conveniently by mail from a New York department store. There is no thrill in going into them.

How different the case would be if these suburban booksellers made a practice of going out to buy great lots of second-hand books every time a near-by collection was broken up. Their shops would be bursting with curiosities.

Of course, if there were plenty of these well-mellowed treasures on the shelves it might be hard to find buyers for the new books, and the booksellers might find it hard to keep from starving, but this is where we came in. — New York Times.

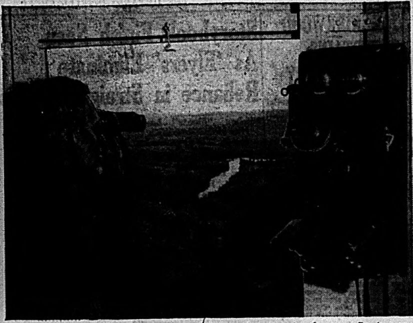
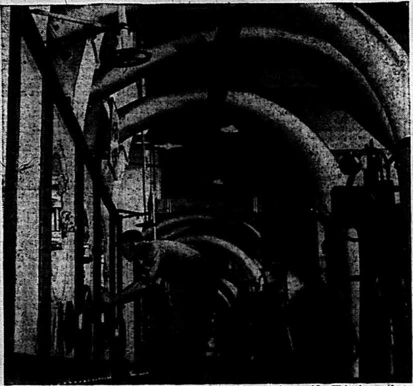
Since start of the war Canada has again become the world's major source of pulp and paper. The log driver in this photo has enlisted junior's help in fixing the caulks in his boots. They give him a better grip when he's riding a log.



The industry spends millions yearly fighting fire, insects, fungus. In towers like this one rangers guard vast timber limits, report fires to headquarters. Flames consume 404,000,000 cubic feet of timber yearly, despite precautions.

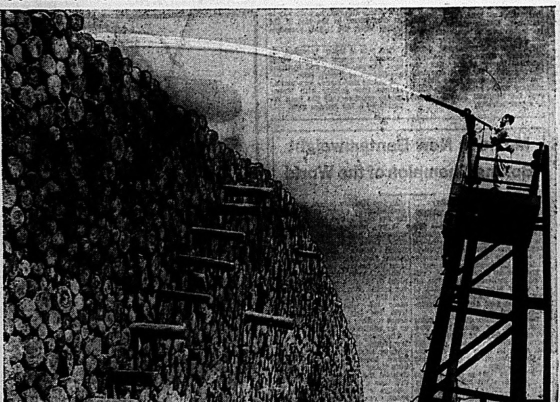
Overhauling a boat which cruises the lakes and rivers, drawing huge booms of logs to main waterways. Chutes of northern streams are fine, natural conveyor belts.



Pulp plants in northern Ontario are among largest in world. This is section of power plant. From standpoint of number employed and wages paid, pulp and paper industry is greatest in Canada. It supports a half million Canadians.

At the end of the drive. These logs were cut 150 miles north of the sorting gap through which they are being run. Identified by paint marks, the logs are claimed by the several companies, whose men cut them, and floated to the mills.

A logger can lose his job for doing this. Prevention of fire is every logger's responsibility. Canada has 1,200,000 square miles of forest, mostly accessible.



Massive piles of logs are sprinkled daily to prevent fire, check fungus growth and to facilitate handling, as wet logs slide freely. Canada has 103 firms making pulp and paper, with invested capital of $642,979,942. Sales of newsprint in the United States bring over $107,000,000 in U.S. exchange, its greatest source.

Tons of paper roll off the presses hourly in mills, providing material for many uses. When other sources of paper cut into Canada's markets after war, science should have many more uses for wood to keep production up. Wood is used in munitions, many materials of war. Cellulose and plastic products are being developed.

Pittsburgh Runs Winning Streak to Five Consecutive Games by Downing Cards

Pirates Garner 16 Hits and Beat St. Louis 13 to 6 Behind Pitcher Wilkie

BROWNS BEAT TIGERS

(By JUDSON BAILEY)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Just when Pittsburgh fans were becoming resigned to having their Pirates finish in the second division of the National League and friends of Manager Frankie Frisch were feeling fluttery about his future, the Buccaneers have launched a five-game winning streak. However, they still are a good stone's throw from fourth place— five games to be meticulous.

Last night they bumped off St. Louis Cardinals 13-6 with one devastating eight-run blast in the second inning. The Redbirds were scrambling, using five pitchers themselves and making Frisch remove Hank Gornicki in the third during a three-run rally.

But there never was any doubt of how the game was going to end because the Pirates made 16 hits and Lefty Aldon Wilkie pitched winning ball in relief.

This kept Brooklyn Dodgers from losing any of their ample first-place margin, although the champions were nosed out 2-1 in 11 innings by the lowly Boston Braves. The trick was turned through a triple by Nanny Fernandez after two were out. A few moments after Fernandez had perched on third, shortstop Peewee Reese fumbled Max West's grounder for the only error of the game to let in the deciding run.

Giants Win

New York Giants downed Philadelphia Phils 6-4 with a 14-hit attack that had plenty of authority. However, the fans' interest in the game centred around Carl Hubbell, veteran southpaw star of the Giants. He pitched perfect ball for 5 1-3 innings, allowing no hits and no runner to reach first. Then he tired and was touched for a two-run homer by Tommy Livingston in the seventh and another two-run circuit clout by Elbie Glossop in the ninth, after which Ace Adams was called in to relieve him. Hubbell got credit for his seventh victory.

In the only American League game St. Louis Browns beat Detroit Tigers 3-2 with Chet Laabs' 20th homer of the year helping provide the impetus.

Weather forced postponement of the other games on the schedule, which originally called for one two-night and six night engagements without a single daytime game.

Former Red Sox Pitcher Murdered

Chicago, Aug. 8 —(AP)— A coroner's jury decided yesterday Gordon McNaughton, 32-year-old former Boston Red Sox pitcher, had been murdered and recommended that his former sweetheart, Mrs. Eleanor Williams, be held for the grand jury.

While the inquest into the love triangle shooting was in progress Police Commissioner James P. Allman suspended Policeman Barney Towey whose service pistol was believed used in the killing.

Mrs. Williams told police she took the pistol from Towey as he slept in a hotel room after they had been to a night club together.

McNaughton, a postal clerk, was shot to death Thursday after Mrs. Williams traced him to the hotel room of Mrs. Dorothy Moos, blond with whom McNaughton had been keeping company in recent weeks.

Mrs. Williams told police she had lived with McNaughton for almost three years after her husband obtained a divorce.

Sports Roundup

New York, Aug. 8 (AP)—Although most of last year's young big league players are in the service, Madison Square Garden is definitely counting on having hockey this winter... "Hasn't been explained yet how teams will be rounded up, except that there will be plenty of 18 and 19-year-old Canadian boys in the lineups...Anyway, the boys who make the arrangements have been given the go-ahead signal...And what goes for the Garden probably goes for the other National League cities...Minor League rinks likely will have to depend on those profitable skating shows.

JOE KIRKWOOD ENTERTAINS GOLF GALLERY

Champion Trick Shot Artist Says 'Baloney' to Certain Golf Theories

BUT THEN?

Mississauga Golf Club, Port Credit, Ont., Aug. 8 —(CP)— The natural thing for people to do after watching Joe Kirkwood of Abington, Pa., go through his amazing routine of trick golf shots is wander over to the scoreboard and find out where Mr. Kirkwood is in tournament. It takes them quite a while to find him if they start at the top and work down. The best idea is to start in the middle, because in most major tournaments that's where Trick-shot Kirkwood winds up.

You'd think a golfer who can hit two balls at once with a standard iron and make them cross in mid-air by putting a slice on one ond a hook on the other should be able to do something better than average in actual competition. But Joe is only average playing straight golf. He bears down like everyone else, misses iron shots and putts, drifts along well out of the big money.

At the halfway mark in the 72-hole Canadian Open Kirkwood was 72-75-147. After he shot that 75 he went out and did things with a golf club no other golfer in the world can do. He hit 325 yards down the middle with a driver that weighed 10 times an average club's weight. He hit a ball straight and long with a rubber-handled club. He stood one ball on top of another hitting one along the fairway and the other up in the air. Then he took one step and caught it.

The payoff, as far as S. Young is concerned, was when he lined up five golf balls, turned his head away and bopped all five straight down the fairway. His head was turned so far he couldn't have seen the balls with a rear-vision mirror. But he hit every one right on the nose, and told the crowd of 1,500 persons watching that obviously this stuff about keeping one's eye on the ball is a lot of baloney.

That was last night. Today he'll be out on the course with the rest of the boys, keeping his head down, watching his feet, playing serious golf. And he'll probably wind up with another 75.

Ki-Y Notes

Last night at the Y.M.C.A. the winners of the 1942 Ki-Y Softball Leagues were honored by the members of the Governing Committee.

Mr. Frank Folwell, chairman of the Kiwanis Club Sponsoring Committee, and Mr. Fred Rawson, chairman of the Kiwanis Club Boys' Work Committee made presentations of crests to the members of the teams winning the groups. Mr. Ed. Shortt, of the Y Staff introducedq the Kiwanians.

Following the presentation, ice cream and cake were served and the boys on the winning teams were the guests of the Kiwanis Club at the theatre.

The appreciation of the boys was expressed on their behalf by Bob Bunton, manager of the Midget Champions.

The teams were: —Midget Champions — Knickerbockers— G. Donovan, D. Doyle, John Rollins, Donald Adams, Clarence Culkin, Allen Kelleher, Harry Wardough, Bill Hurst, Robert Lucy, Bev. McTaggart, Mike Hogan, Bob Bunton, Manager.

Bantam Champions: Red Wings — Dave Lockyer, Manager; Earl Gardiner, Captain, Philip Drumm, Herbert Ford, Jack McBride, John Penn, Ross Empey, Tommy Nickle, George Baldwin, Jack Milligan, R. Nickle, Art Empey.

Appreciation of the services of the Umpires, and the suggestion that such leagues as this were made possible only by the co-operation of the sponsoring, directing and planning organizations and the players themselves was part of Mr. Folwell's message, and the thought of achievement and progress through competition was the leading thought in the short talk given by Mr. Rawson.

Storybook Finish Seen As 'Flyers' Eliminate Reliance in Straight Games

Pitcher "Monty" Lamour Hits Home Run With One On to Win Own Game

SCORE 11 to 10

Flyers Came from Behind After Reliance Gained Mid-Game Advantage

"Give us a hit to win your own game," has often been the plea of players on the bench when their pitcher strutted to the bat with his team in arrears.

That's exactly the picture that occurred at the Exhibition Grounds last night in the lucky (?) old seventh when "Monty" Lamour, the I.T.S. Flyers' hurler picked up his cudgel and faced Bill Anderson on the Reliance mound with one aboard in the seventh inning last night with the Flyers trailing by one run.

The rest is history. Lamour satisfied his team mates when he caught one of Anderson"s slants and drove it into right field where Pete Horeck ran after, got his finger-tips on the fleeting spheroid only to see it ease off for a circuit blow that was productive of two runs and ultimate victory. Thus for once a pitcher delivered that much-needed hit to win his own game.

Not Many Hits.

Last night the No. 5 I.T.S. Flyers defeated the Reliance 11 to 10 in what might be termed as a rather far-fetched game, as both teams scored more runs than they collected hits, but ultimately the Flyers won by an 11 to 10 score and everybody on their side of the fence was most happy about the whole thing. In winning the airmen eliminated the Reliance in the Belleville and District Softball League championships and now await the winner of the Vets.-Bombers series for the finals for the city title and the right to represent Belleville in the provincial O.A.S.A. playdowns.

Before passing further credit must be given to relief pitcher Al Bell who was rushed to the Flyers' mound in the ninth inning after the Reliance had placed two aboard by virtue of walks by Lamour. Bell rose to the occasion and with one out forced the next two batters to pop to Conway at second to assure a victory and demonstrate some fine relief tossing.

Take Early Lead.

Archie Major's Reliance nine took an early game lead by grabbing two runs in the initial frame on hits by Labonne and Barriage, coupled with Green's bobble of a ground ball in right. Vasil's single and Barriage's second one-base blow along with Horeck's double and a walk gave the Reliance four more in the third, as the Flyers had garnered three between times.

The blow-off came in the fourth when Vasil struck out Jones, but Chipman muffed the third strike and Jones arrived at first safely. Vasil whiffed Gleason but Lamour came to his own assistance with a base knock and Conway strolled. Then Skipper Green doubled scoring two and Conway raced home on Forman"s fly to centre, Green subsequently scoring off Weir's single and the Flyers went ahead.

Back came the Reliance in the top half of the seventh to score four and forge to the front once again. Vasil singled, but was forced at second by Wilkins, Barriage strolled and Labonne went down swinging. Chipman waited Lamour out for a walk and Pryke singled scoring two. Horeck hit to Gleason at third, who threw wild and two more scored, Gleason ejecting himself from the game on the play. Donihee made a third out, but Reliance were one up.

Skipper Major pulled Vasil and waved Bill Anderson to the Reliance mound as the Flyers went to bat in the bottom half of the seventh and Connelly struck out. Jones drew a walk and Smith went down swinging. Then came the picture play— "win your own game", pleaded the Flyers as Lamour stepped to the plate. He didn't pull a "Casey at the Bat" but promptly hit a home run to score Jones also and after walking two in the ninth, with one out, Lamour was replaced by Al Bell who abruptly put a halt to the Reliance uprising by retiring the final two batters without trouble.

Green's catch of Barriage's drive for the first put out in the ninth and Barriage's pick-up of Connelly's grounder in the fifth were the fielding tip bits of the game.

Calder Hopes N.H.L. May Function

Ottawa, Aug. 8—CP)—The National Hockey League representing a Conservatively-estimated $1,250,000 stake in the world's fastest sport, stands better than a gambler's chance today to survive the greatest crisis in its 25-year history.

President Frank Calder still isn't talking, except to say that any comment would hurt the league, but the National Selective Service officials who will decide its wartime fate strongly hint the N.H.L. will be allowed to continue, for the 1942-43 season at least.

Selective Service Director Elliott M. Little, fresh from a Thursday conference with Calder, reduced the issue to a straight decision between morale and manpower requirements when he disclosed yesterday that Calder is preparing a list of Canadians playing in the league, their age, marital status and eligibility for armed service, for submission to the Selective Service office.

Stressing that no decision has been made on how deeply war requirements will dip into manpower available for the professional circuit which was organized in 1917, Little said it may be necessary "to give some consideration to maintaining the N.H.L. in some form, or on some basis, or else we would face the problem of replacing what it at present means to hundreds of thousands of Canadians in entertainment and maintenance of morale."

Sport items were popping like firecrackers all over the landscape yesterday. Little's statement that he is "entirely sympathetic with the repatriation to amateur standing by teams in the armed forces of hockey players from the professional teams" looked like the opening wedge for what everybody has been expecting some kind of military service set-up beside which even the National League would be a poor relation.

WOOD, GULDAHL ARE LEADERS IN CANADIAN OPEN

Ben Hogan Drops Behind, Falling Off With a 71 Score

(BY SCOTT YOUNG)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Mississauga Golf Course, Port Credit, Ont., Aug. 8.—(CP)—The Canadian Open Golf Championship field of 120 golfers was narrowed today to 61 who qualified with 36-hole scores of 156 or better for the final 36 holes of the 72-hole annual classic.

Leaders in the $3,600 tournament as it swung into its last day were two men as opposite as the poles— Craig Wood of Mamaroneck, N.Y., and Ralph Guldahl of Santa Fe, Cal. Wood is tall but heavy, a long-hitting, impatient golfer. Guldahl is the lad the gallery goes for, an easy-going southerner with a temperament that can stand hard going, but would rather not.

Wood and Guldahl shot 66's Thursday and 69's yesterday for their 36-hole deadlock a 135. One stroke back was Ben Hogan, whose record-cracking 65 in the first round was not good enough to stand up under all the bad golf he played yesterday. He fell off to a 71 in the second round, one under par, for a 36-hole total of 136.

BUFFALO SAYS IT WITH CIRCUIT BLOWS

Home Runs and Merriwell Finishes Are Featured by Bisons

TORONTO WINS

"Say it with home runs." That's the slogan of Buffalo Bisons for the 1942 International League season, and now they have added a Frank Merriwell touch.

In the first game of the Thursday twin bill with Jersey City the herd was trailing, 3-0 going into the last inning, when Mayo Smith, with the bases loaded, hit a game-winning homer.

This scene was almost duplicated last night. With the score tied at 2-2, Jim Levey drove one out of the lot in the last frame to give the Buffs a 3-2 triumph in the first game of a doubleheader.

The Bisons also won the nightcap, 7-2, to advance to within half a game of fourth place. Frank Heller led the 11-hit attack on Adrian Zabala with a homer and two singles. Smith also clouted one for the distance to bring his total to 11.

After an absence of one year, Gene Lillard returned to the mound as a starting hurler for the last-place Rochester Red Wings. Lillard hurled a 4-1 two-hit victory over Syracuse chiefs in the first game of a twin feature.

In the finale, Red Barrett, ace of the chief staff, shut out the Wings, 2-0, for his 16th conquest. Barrett gave up only four hits, struck out seven and didn't grant a walk. Barrett retired 16 of the last 17 Red Wings he faced.

Harry Shuman broke a five-game Toronto losing streak by scattering seven Baltimore Oriole hits, for a 2-1 victory. The former relief specialist struck out nine and lost his shutout on an error.

A five-run uprising in the eighth inning, highlighted by Aaron Robinon's triple with the bases loaded, gave the league-leading Newark Bears a 6-4 triumph over Montreal Royals.

Steve Roser was credited with the victory although he gave way to Al Gerheauser in the last of the eighth when the Royals threatened.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

..MINUTE NOTES—Recently Ab. Bob Mills, of the Canadian Navy and son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mills, was present at the official opening of the Wanderers Recreational Field in Nova Scotia. Among the celebrities present was Babe Ruth, king of the swat when Harry Mills was collecting circuit blows in the old C.O.B.L. over a decade ago. Bob obtained The Babe's autograph and sent it home to his dad, who placed it among his baseball souvenirs, which are many.

You've no doubt heard many fish tales emanating around fish stories, but for local waters Walter Douglas, local C.N.R. agent, has the tallest one yet. Walter doesn't exactly believe in "flying bass," but then he says his eyes don't altogether deceive him. Seems he hooked and landed a fine large Black Bass down around George Wallbridge's favoured angling haunts in the bay recently. Walter had Mister Bass hooked well and landed the finny beauty into his boat safely, when the fish apparently took on wings and flew out of the boat—at least Walter says it "sailed by him in mid air into the bay."

Local softball fans will remember F. L. "Tiny" Davis, who tossed such good softball for the Trenton Flyers a couple of years back. Well, F. L. Davis is now stationed as sports officer at the Edmonton, Alta., R.C.A.F. base, and is back at his old love, pitching softball. Tiny barely missed hurling a perfect game in a senior league game the other night when he pitched a no hit, no run game. Only one opposing batter reached first base, that being via the four ball route. Tiny struck out 15 and we can readily understand why, as the big fellow always possessed plenty of the old zip and mazpoka on his fireball. Too bad Tiny wasn't around these parts to help "Buff" Horton round out something that might resemble a softball team near Trenton.

In a recent magazine article written by Bill Weber of the New York Giants, the baseball-author put the blast on major league umpires claiming they were collecting salary under false pretences. In reply a National League umpire, who still remains anonymous, wants Weber to write another article entitled—"How to Stay in the Majors while Hitting .197"—by Bill Weber, as told to Mel Ott. We'd like to meet up with the umpire who could come back with sueh a quickie.

Do you remember when Bill Kerr, Toronto Hunt Club golfer, and Slammin' Sam Snead tied for the lead in the first round of the Ontario Open golf tournament at Fort Erie two years ago today? Snead ultimately won the title with a hot 36-hole score of 139, while Kerr finished a bad seventh.

..F. L. BOB HUNTER, WHO IS in charge of sports at the No. 5 ITS., is rightfully proud of his softball team today. Not only did the local Airmen vanquish everything before them in their drive towards a provincial R.C.A.F. softball title this week, but the No. 5 ITS. mushballers surprised all and sundry by taking the Reliance A.C. in successive games in the City Softball playdowns last night when they eliminated the Reliance in a clutch 11 to 10 photo finish, with Pitcher 'Monty' Lamour in the spotlight by hammering out a home run in the seventh to score the tying and winning runs. Actually on paper last night's game was far from practical, as both nines scored more runs than they collected hits. Four times during the nine inning the tide of battle changed with either nine moving into an advantage in a game that kept the patrons on edge.

It was somewhat of a Merriwell finish for the Flyers in two ways— Pitcher Lamour blasted a homer, with one aboard in the seventh and then when the Reliance placed two on base in the ninth, relief pitcher Al Bell came to a perfect rescue. However, in the meantime, Archie Major's Reliance nine ran into some really tough breaks. There were a couple of errors around the keystone sack that didn't help, but when Pitcher Freddie Vasil flew up and off string, as Red Chipman muffed a third strike on Jones in the fourth, that was the decidig measure. In defence of Chipman records show it was his only error of such a nature this season, but apparently the miscue un-nerved Vasil, as he was never the same and ultimately had to be removed. However, the truth of the matter is—Skipper Green's nine had what's known as a "fighting spirit." (Something that just can't be beaten.)

THURSDAY IT WAS "BLASTIN' Ben" Hogan, in the Canadian Open golf tourney, but Friday it was Craig Wood and the likeable Ralph Guldahl who stole the limelight. Yesterday Hogan fell off to shoot a 71, one under par, while Wood and Guldahl shot 66s on Thursday and tied with 69s (how those boys get together) on Friday. The field has narrowed down from 120 to 61 for Saturday's go at the $3,600.00 purse that goes with the Seagram Gold Cup and the Canadian Open title. Frank Stranahan, an amateur from Toledo, isn't doing bad by himself with a 71 and 67 on the two days' play. Joe Kirkwood gave the gallery some real thrills yesterday demonstrating his bag of golf tricks, which made folk wonder why "Genial Joe" isn't further up in the financial hunt.

THIS AND THAT — A FEW years ago Kingston Scribe Bill Walshe was quite satisfied with City league puck chasing in the Limestone City....Came the light of day —Kingston returned to the O.H.A. wars and won a senior "B" puck title and last year branched out into senios "A"....In the meantime Scribe Walshe, who was never a believer in Horace Grealey's theory, has been championing the cry — "get Kingston into Ottawa Valley hockey circles"....Well, it looks as though Mister Walshe's hopes are at least nearing the stage of realization because the latest story out has the Ottawa Senators moving away from the Quebec Senior loop and into a new group that may embrace Cornwall, Petawawa and Kingston ...Congratulations Mr. Walshe.... With so many former N.H.L. stars in Ottawa and Cornwall, the Limestone City management may find the sledding rather rough in the newly proposed loop, however .... Far away fields look green — remember last winter, Willie?...More hockey—look for a drastic change in the major hockey realm also....All seven major ball games saw play under artificial light sometime Friday, which shows the trend of the times....Don't we all?

Mexican New Bantamweight Boxing Champion of the World

(By ROBERT MYERS)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Hollywood, Aug. 8 —(AP)— The new bantamweight boxing champion of the world is a 25-year-old Mexican who a few years ago picked beans in his native Imperial Valley of California for $2 a day.

The ex-bean picker, Manuel Ortiz lifted the bantamweight bauble off the weary brow of Lou Salica of New York last night in a 12-round match that kept 6,000 fans alternately excited and bored.

The El Centro lad won going away, but the game little New Yorker, a veteran of more than 10 years in the prize ring, gave his best when he knew from the outset that his crown was slipping away from him.

He tried to fight in close and got whipped. He stood off and let fly from long range, and the long-armed Mexican boy slapped him across the ring. Some of the rounds were close, but Referee Abe Roth gave Salica but one round, the first.

The Associated Press card, along with two ringside judges, was more charitable. It scored three rounds for the dark-haired Italian.

It was revenge for Ortiz. Salica outpointed him in 1939, two years after Ortiz, winner of the National Golden Gloves title at Boston as a flyweight, had emerged from the amateur ranks.

Salica almost won the bout last night in the first round. He walked out at the gong, missed a cautious left, fell into a clinch and Ortiz came out with blood streaming from his left eye. There was doubt whether it was from a punch or an unintentional butt.

The going was rough for the next few rounds. The boys stood inside, clipping away. The partisan Ortiz crowd booed Salica. Both boys were tiring at the finish. Salica finished the stronger, but Ortiz by this time was in no danger.

Salica earned his guarantee of $6,000, Ortiz got $250, the card netted $17,298, and some $10,000 will be turned over to buy athletic equipment for army camps in this region.

Salica weighed 12?, Ortiz 116½.

Longacres to Stay Open Unless Closed By Some Authority

Seattle, Aug. 8 (AP).—Longacres, only major race track operating on the west coast since the outbreak of war, will remain open "unless closed by some authority", Joseph Gottstein, president of the Washington Jockey Club, declared today after a heated conference with Gov. Arthur B. Langlie.

Langlie had requested the track operators to end their racing season as soon as possible in the interest of the conservation of gasoline and rubber.

Gottstein reported that "if he state wants to close the track they'll have to do it" after Langlie rejected his counter proposal that the season be cut 40 per cent, with the racing days reduced from five to three a week.

Gottstein's legal counsel advised him against closing the plant voluntarily because of commitments which might lead to damage suits.

Hockey League Head Dies

Cornwall, Ont., Aug. 8 .—(CP)—J. Gurdy Miron, 51, past president of the Ottawa and District Hockey Association, vice-president of Cornwall Flyers Hockey Club and a director of Cornwall Community Arena Company, died at his home here last night after a long illness.

A native of Cornwall, Mr. Miron entered the employ of Chevrier Brothers, wholesale and retail grocers as a youth, later becoming associated with Canada Packers as a travelling representative in Eastern Ontario and Quebec.

Survivors include his widow and three sons.

Two Hawaiians Are Expected to Do Record-Breaking

New London, Conn., Aug. 8 (AP)—The annual revision of the record book for swimming reaches its midway point today with two new figures already posted.

A pair of Hawaiians Keo Nakama and Billy Smith, Jr., started the 1942 National A.A.U. outdoor tank meet off on the right tempo last night by rubbing out one world and one American record.

And today, Smith and Adolph Keifer of Chicago, are expected to do the record reaking.

Smith, a son of a Honolulu policeman and a student at Ohio State University, sped through 220-yards of blue-green water in the Ocean Beach Park pool in 2:10.7 last night to erase the 2:13.1 clocking by Otto Jarets of Chicago in 1940.

Nakama, now also a student at the Buckeye School, made a ghost of Jack Medica's eight-year-old mark in the mile, lowering the figures from 20.57.8 to 20:29.

Today Smith will focus his aim on the 440-yard free style standard with Nakama as a foe while Keifer will strive to retain his 110-yard crown. Smith is the defending champion in the quarter mile event.

Football Moguls To Meet Tuesday

Ottawa, Aug. 8 (CP).—Secretary George F. Perley of the Ottawa Football Club said last night he has been notified that the Eastern Rugby Football Union's four teams will meet in Toronto next Tuesday to decide on 1942 operations.

Perley said he was informed of the meeting by J. J. (Jimmy) Dolan, league secretary. James P. McCaffrey, business manager, and Eddie Emerson, Ottawa representative on the union executive, will represent the Rough Riders at the meeting.

Earlier, Dolan sought a wire vote from club officials on the advisability of carrying on this season and Rough Riders replied that so important a matter should be decided at a league meeting.

The E.R.F.U. was created in July, 1941, as the wartime counterpart of the 29-year-old Interprovincial Union, which had to be disbanded for the war's duration because of the withdrawal of Hamilton Tigers. Toronto Argonauts, Toronto Balmy Beach, Montreal Bulldogs and Ottawa Rough Riders are the four teams now in the union.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Eagle Squadron"

Walter Wangner's new Universal production, "Eagle Squadron" the first screen story of American fighter pilots in the Royal Air Force, is the big attraction at the McCarthy theatre starting today.

Heading a long and imposing cast are Robert Stack and Diana Barrymore, youngest member of America's celebrated "royal family" of stage and screen, who is making her motion picture debut in "Eagle Squadron."

Story is Authentic

The authentic, behind-the-scenes story of "Eagle Squadron" tells of actual experiences of many American aviators who preceded their own country's entrance into the war by joining the RAF's Eagle Squadron in October, 1940. Flying their famous Spitfires, the Eagle Squadron since then has written many memorable chapters of the modern war in the clouds.

In addition, "Eagle Squadron" brings to the screen for the first time scenes showing the widespread activities of British women in wartime, which include flying transport planes, operating radio directional apparatus and firing anti-aircraft guns. The fabulous British Commandos, the daring night raiders who have terrified the enemy, are shown in action in an exciting sequence of "Eagle Squadron."

The authenticity of "Eagle Squadron" was assured by many thousands of feet of film taken by a camera crew sent to England by Producer Wanger, on permission granted by the British Ministry of Information.

"Eagle Squadron" is now in its third big week at the Uptown theatre, Toronto.

AT THE CAPITOL

"ALWAYS IN MY HEART"

"Always In My Heart", which starts a local engagement Sunday midnight at the Capitol Theatre, is, according to critics who have previewed it in Hollywood, just the prescription for chasing away your blues. And the young lady who will do it for you is Miss Gloria Warren, the fifteen-year-old singing star who is the latest star discovery of the Warner Bros. studios which has a consistent record for building up new star personalities.

For her debut, Gloria has been cast in a heart-warming story of family life, comparable to another famous hit from Warner Bros., "Four Daughters". Two of Hollywood's most talented mature players, Kay Francis and Walter Huston, play the leading adult roles in the story, and the supporting cast is headed by Frankie Thomas, six-year-old Patty Hale (another promising young screen newcomer), Una O'Connor, and Sidney Blackmer, with Borrah Minnevitch and His Rascals giving out with the harmonica harmony.

"U-Boat 29."

Out of Europe's blackout of peace flames the inside story of submarine warfare! Timely as this newspaper you're reading! Terrifying as a U-boat to starboard! Overwhelming as a world crashing about your ears!

The whole shocking story of submarine warfare filmed by Columbia before the headlines are dry! It's "U-boat 29", the most astounding screen achievement, coming to the Capitol Theatre Sunday midnight.

"U-boat 29" features Conrad Veidt, Valerie Hobson and Sebastian Shaw in a mighty epic of undersea terror and undercover spies plotting charts of doom!

The new film, which was directed by Michael Powell and produced by Irving Asher, producer of that other sensational Columbia production, "Clouds Over Europe" presents Veidt as an enemy submarine commander ordered to invade English territory as a spy.

AT THE BELLE

"Fantasia"

More than five hundred new characters were created by Walt Disney for his new full-length production, "Fantasia," the resolutionary motion picture acclaimed as the most important news in the entertainment world for many years.

Pegasus and his flying horse family; Melinda, a shy centaurette; Brudus, a bashful centaur; Bacchus, with Jacchus, the little unicorn he rises; thistle boys, orchid girls, Mlle Upanova (pronounce it slowly and you'll see!), an ostrich ballerina; Hyacinth Hippo, Ben Ali Gater, and all breeds of prehistoric creatures are among the new starring cast in "Fastasia."

The only familiar character in the entire production is Mickey Mouse, who makes his debut as a dramatic actor in "The Sorcerer's Apprentice," one of the seven sequences of "Fantasia."

Lots of people think that the biggest hit is made by the bashful Sound Track, which is with difficulty persuaded by Leopold Stokowski, whose Philadelphia Symphony orchestra of 103 is also starred in "Fantasi.," to appear and perform.

It's all a part of the astonishing innovations marking "Fantasia."

"Mokey" Human, Appealing

"Mokey," the story of a misunderstood boy who just can't seem to avoid trouble, is the companion feature on the same program and will prove a delightful mixture of tender drama and comedy.

Little Bobby Blake, in the title role, looks like Hollywood's next child star. "Mokey" is his first feature after playing for three years in the "Our Gang" comedies, but he handles himself like a veteran.

As his father, a man who neglects his son because of a job that keeps him on the road, Dan Dailey, Jr. gives a convincing portrayal. Donna Reed, who will be remembered as Mickey Rooney's new screen sweetheart in "The Courtship of Andy Hardy," is equally effective as the stepmother who lacked experience necessary to handle an eight-year-old son.

The Belle latest news digest and a new chapter of "Sea Raider" serial will also be exhibited.

MARMORA—Mr. David Williams who has been spending a two weeks holiday at the rectory, returned to Toronto on Thursday.

Mrs. K. Fobert and young daughter of Toronto are visiting the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James A. Rice at Crowe Lake.

AT THE McCARTHY

Diana Barrymore, Jon Hall and John Loder in Walter Wanger's Universal production "Eagle Squadron" new at the McCarthy Theatre.

AT THE BELLE

Dan Dailey, Jr., and Donna Reed in a scene from the new M.G.M. picture, "Mokey", featuring Bobby Blake, now on view at the Belle Theatre, with "Fantasia", Walt Disney's full-length feature in Technicolor.

AT THE CAPITOL

Song and Sunshine — Walter Huston, Gloria Warren, Hollywood's new fifteen-year-old singing star, and Borrah Minevitch and his Harmonica Rascals in a scene from the Capitol's forthcoming film, "Always in My Heart", starting Sunday midnight with the added thriller "U-Boat 29".

HEPBURN URGES PEOPLE TO AWAKE OUT OF 'APATHY'

Wants Dominion Government to 'Forget Political Considerations'

WORLD SITUATION

Fergus, Ont., Aug. 8 —(CP)—Premier Hepburn of Ontario wants the Dominion government to "forget political considerations" and the people of Canada to awake from "apathy."

"I don't know what will awaken the people from their apathy short of bombing," he declared here yesterday at the official opening of the $2,000,000 Shand Dam, key point on the Grand River conservation project.

"Paid propagandists at Ottawa conceal the truth," he asserted. "We are not told the true facts. I say to the bigoted leaders of our country, forget political considerations. This is not a political battle you are fighting. It is a fight for our very existence."

Mr. Hepburn, speaking at the big dam, a few miles from Fergus, warned also that Canada faces a two-ocean attack "in the near future."

"I believe we are going to have an attack on the Atlantic coast very soon," he declared. "There will be a two-ocean attack in the near future. I believe our fate depends on the disposition of the French fleet in the Mediterranean and the German drive into the Caucasus."

Greatest Threat in History

Premier Hepburn said the white people of the world were faced with the greatest threat in history and urged a crowd of 4,000 persons "don't listen to these men at Ottawa, these men with Vichy minds, who tell you we are winning the war comfortably."

"Let the men at Ottawa talk in straightforward language and act the same way," he continued. "All this discussion about post-war policies merely detracts from the vital problems of today."

One successful bombing of the Sault Ste. Marie locks, through which passed 90 per cent of steel shipments, would halt all shipping and the railways would not be able to carry more than 50 per cent of the ore, he said, adding that a successful air raid on Niagara Falls "would put us in darkness."

Continuing his criticism, he said, "Let these political bigots, these autocrats with their stupid drifting, become a little more broad-minded and try to fight this war on a national and not a partisan front."

Premier Hepburn said Ontario already had done a great deal for the war effort and "there is nothing we won't give them if it will help win the war."

Hitler had boasted he would conquer the world and "he is making a pretty good job if it", he said.

"We Must Arouse Selves"

"We must arouse ourselves from this state of apathy, this fool's paradise . . . I ask you to view this situation with great solemnity. The greatest power in the land is public opinion, once it becomes aroused; it must demand an end to half-measures. Ottawa boasts of the money it is spending on the war. I don't doubt money is being spent lavishly. But it is not how much is spent, but how it is spent."

The premier criticized "armchair generals" and "land admirals" who obtained high rank through political favors, and said he had been informed at a Hamilton, Ontario, training school there were 43 commissioned officers and only nine pupils at the beginning of the course. The number of pupils had grown to 19 since then, he said.

LOSES A FUR HAT

Toronto, Aug. 8—(CP)—The temperature was soaring here yesterday afternoon when a man, dressed in a heavy, roll-necked sweater and overcoat stepped off a street car to transfer to another tram. A few minutes later he hurried back. "Have you seen a fur hat around? I lost one."

SHANGRI-LA'S

The base I visited is in the building stage. A few months ago virgin timber pressed in solid ranks over the rocky ground. But the big "cats" have been busy and today it's a sea of churned-up dirt and roots on which broad flat runways already are appearing.

In Wild Wilderness

Step into the forest a few hundred yards off the airfield and you wonder how they did it, so wild and rugged is the wilderness. All supplies had to be freighted in by boat to the nearest landing-point several miles away, and then brought over a dirt road which itself had to be built as the first step in construction.

A miniature town to house the construction workers has sprung up—row on row of neat wooden shacks on one flank of the field. Most of them are men who have been in this work since boyhood, building railways and highways, or cutting logging roads through the timber. They draw good pay for their labor in this isolated spot.

An advance party of the Royal Canadian Air force already is on the scene, living in a cluster of tents beside a gravelled runway on which aircraft stand in readiness night and day.

Surprisingly, they enjoy living in this outpost, despite its necessary hardships.

Lots of Fun

"I haven't had as much fun since I was a kid", remarked a red-headed flight-sergeant, gazing around at the barren scene with a grin.

For diversion there's a canteen where beer and soft drinks are kept cool in a hole in the ground. There's a gramophone that grinds out popular music and there's a dart board on which the boys are becoming skilled marksmen. They have to be—if they miss the target and puncture the tent with their darts, they're stuck for a round of drinks.

Graduates included M. M. Comstock, Trenton.

CHAPTER 28

A CRUEL HOAX

Standing on the porch in the dim light from the hall, Kay thought, "am I dreaming? Is this a nightmare I've been having? The urgent telegram— the flight from New York — a frightful dream? But no! I'm here. Me in the flesh. Mother in the flesh. She's like she always is, dear and sweet and lovable. There's nothing wrong with mother. There can't be unless—"

Kay demanded, taking her mother's hands, searching her mother's face for she knew not what, "have you been ill darling? You haven't been in an accident or some sort of trouble? You must tell me, mother. You must."

"But there's nothing to tell, daughter." Obviously, Ellen Kenyon was bewildered by Kay's intensity. "I'm the one who should be asking questions. Why are you here, without even letting me know you were coming? Why are you so excited, as if something dreadful had happened? Has it dear? What is it. You frighten me?" Ellen was trembling.

Kay fought to clear her mind of its clouds of doubt, of terror. A flash of light, and in it, a revelation! Aunt Cora. The telegram was a hoax. Aunt Cora had sent it deliberately to bring her back to Somerset. Aunt Cora knew such a message would be answered in person, without question, without a moment's delay.

But why? Why would Aunt Cora want her here, at home, when she was a constant thorn to the embittered woman, and to Elsa? Elsa . . Ronnie! Of course. Here was the answer. Aunt Cora and Elsa knew Ronnie was in New York. Would they dare use such a base ruse to get him back within their own orbit? Reason told Kay they would dare. The prize was worth the risk.

"I'm here because I'm here, darling," she said in relief, rubbing her firm young cheek against her mother's withering one. "I'm fit to fight and raring to go. Ronnie was flying home so I came along for the ride. We're starved. Anything in the icebox?"

She knew the problem of whisking together a bite of supper would divert her mother's mind from Kay's sudden arrival.

"There's baked ham for sandwiches." Ellen was a happy motherbird, chirping. "And fresh doughnuts. I made them this afternoon. I'll have the coffee ready in no time."

Kay turned to see Ronnie leaning against a porch pillar, watching this inexplicable scene as though he too were escaping a dream.

She said, in a rush of apology. "I'm sorry, Ron. Seeing mother well and safe drove everything else out of my mind. She's all right. Ron. Mother's all right. She's fine! . . . Are they really your own home-made doughnuts, Mummy? Let's taste."

Ellen Kenyon went smiling to her task. The moment she was gone Ronnie said, shaking his head as though he had just come out from under water. "Well, I'll be—"

"Sash," Kay put her fingers to her lips. Then, gaily, "Come in, chum. We eat, at last."

Kay kept up a running fire of chatter while supper was being placed on one end of the big dining room table. Back of the lightness and laughter she was thinking, thinking. What would she do now? Turn around and hurry back to New York as fast as she could get there, hoping National Candy would forgive her precipitant departure and take her on again? Mr. Burge was not one easily to forgive an offence. Then, too, there was the matter of the misleading telegram. There was a score to settle with Aunt Cora. If Aunt Cora dared go to such length, what next?

Kay and Ronnie were making swift inroads into Ellen's plate of doughnuts when Cora marched into the dining room, battle flags flying.

"So you're here,'" she said, stopping beside Kay. "It's high time, my lady. Every tongue in town wagging about the way you got Ronald Farnsworth to follow you to New York and your mother acting like she's crazy half the time.'"

Ronnie said, with so much suppressed violence behind his words that even Cora Kenyon drew back before it.

"You can skip the crack about me. I don't lure easily. Going to New York was my own idea. I went there to try to persuade Kay to marry me. Put that in the town bulletin for the busybodies to lick their lips over."

"You—you—asked her to marry "Don't you speak to me like I was you?" Cora gasped. Then rallying, dirt under your feet, Ronald Farnsworth. You're in my house and I'll thank you to treat me like a lady."

Ronnie said, his lips gone white, "Be a lady and you'll be treated like one."

"Please, please—" Ellen Kenyon quavered.

Kay said, with a quiet purpose, "Ronnie, if you don't mind, there's something I must discuss with Aunt Cora now . . . alone."

Ronnie rose. He said, "Yes, of course. I'll run along. Sure you don't want me to wait, outside? Or come back later, just in case?"

"No,'" Kay said. "I'll manage. And thanks—for everything."

"See you in the morning then. Meantime I'll be home. A ring will bring me here in five minutes."

Kay waited until she heard the screen door close. Then she took the crumpled piece of yellow paper from her pocket and handed it to her mother. "Read it, dear," she said gently. "It's my reason for being home."

In Ellen's hand the paper was shaking anr rustling like a dry leaf in the wind.

"Cora!" Her voice was no more than a whisper. "Oh, Cora —you sent this—to my daughter?"

"Yes, I sent it," Cora said defiantly, almost boastfully. "I'm glad I did. It's time somebody with enough spunk to keep 'em took hold of this family."

"But why Cora, why? It isn't true. It's a lie."

"So I'm a liar, am I?" Cora said loudly. "Well ain't that too bad? I got a right to look out for my own, ain't I? You and your dotter lordin' it over us like we was trash. You, handin' out Kenyon pennies like they was gold pieces, selling the very roof from over our heads. I warned you I'd never let you put us out in the street. This house belongs to the Kenyons. It's ours as much as it's yours, even if Jim Kenyon did cheat his own brother out of it. I" show you . . ."

"That will be all!" Kay faced the infuriated Cora. She must control herself. But how could she, with this unspeakable woman bandying her father's name? Steady, steady. "Kindly keep your voice down, Aunt Cora. If we must brawl, let's brawl in private. Now then, mother, what is this all about?"

"Yes, tell her." Cora taunted. "Tell her what you're aimin' to do to us? Tell her how you want to put your own people out on the street."

"Cora." Ellen said plaintively. "How can you say such cruel things? You know I don't want to put any of us out. I want all of us to stay here under our own roof. How can we? We can't keep it up. We haven't the money. The place is falling to pieces. We can't have Kay taking care of all of us four grown people.

"Daughter, your father's cousin, Richard Kenyon, came to see me last week. He lives in Chicago. He spent a great deal of time here as a boy and as a young man when his grandparents lived in this house. He's getting on in years. He'd like to come back here again, to live here part of the time. He's a very wealthy man. He'd buy the place or lease it, just as I please. He'll fix it up as good as new and pay us whatever we ask. I didn't think we could afford to overlook such an offer. Goodness knows if we'll ever have such a chance again."

"Don't risk a next time. Take Dick Kenyon's offer, Ellen."

It was Asa Kenyon speaking. He had entered the room unnoticed by the three women lost in the clash of reason and right against selfishness and fear. He stood by the door. A steady light burned in his eyes that no longer shifted.

"S—s—so it's you!" Cora stuttered. Could she believe her eyes, her ears? This rag of a man, this puppet of her will and whim was baring his teeth. He was setting himself against her. Fool! She'd have to shut him up, to stop him. "Get out of here!" she shouted. "Get out before I—before I—"

Asa Kenyon came forward, slowly; he seemed to increase in stature with every step.

"Before you—what?" he asked. The familiar quaver was gone from his voice. "It's no use Cora. I'm through. I'm through being cuffed and kicked and driven. I'm through sitting on the river bank watching the days drift by while you eat away my life, your life, the life of our daughter with your stupid envy, your hate, your malice. I turned out to be a pretty poor club for what you thought you'd take when you married me, didn't I Cora?

"I failed you. You found it took more than a name to get you where you wanted to go. You got a Kenyon, but not your kind of a Kenyon. A weak, sapless sprout of a sturdy old tree. So you bent me over. You broke me. But somebody came along and picked me up. Dick Kenyon. He"s giving me a place in one of his plants in Chicago. I'm taking it."

Cora went toward her husband with outstretched arms. "Asa dear, you mean we're moving to the city, to Chicago? We're being taken up by the rich Dick Kenyon?"

Asa Kenyon stepped aside so that Cora's hands were clutching at empty air.

"I'm moving to Chicago," he said. "You"re staying here, with Elsa. I"m going to a small job wtih small pay. I'll be living in a workman's quarters provided by the plant, for men only. I'll send you what I can; it'll be enough to put a roof over your head and feed you, provide a few necessary clothes. Nothing fancy. What fancy things you want you'll hav to earn yourself—you and Elsa. That's the best I can do, for the present."

"Asa dear," Cora said, in tearful supplication. "You wouldn't desert us, your wife, your darling child. You wouldn't leave us in this dirty little hole of a town to be pointed at, people laughing at us, treating us like dirt, Asa, your wife and child!"

"I'm leaving tomorrow, on the noon train." The ring in Asa Kenyon's voice was new and strange. "The job is open now. It won't wait for me. I"m pretty well along in years to try a comeback, but no man yet ever lost by trying. This is the way it's got to be. This is the way it IS."

Kay said, "Mother, have you cousin Richard Kenyon's address?"

'Why yes, daughter. He left his card. It's in my purse."

"Good." Kay moved toward the telephone. "Get it for me, will you, darling? We'll send him a night letter. We'll tell him we accept his offer."

(To be continued.)

A bag to hang a folded card table on a wall or in a closet and protect its surface has been invented by a Chicago woman.

WHY ARE WE GOING TO A RESTAURANT FOR SUPPER, MAMA?
BECAUSE I SHELLACKED THE KITCHEN FLOOR AND WE CAN'T GO INTO THE KITCHEN UNTIL TO-MORROW
BETTER PUT A NOTE ON THE KITCHEN DOOR, SO PAPA WON'T COME IN THERE
THAT WON'T BE NECESSARY-- HE ALWAYS COMES IN THE FRONT DOOR
JUST TO GET A LITTLE VARIETY INTO MY LIFE, THIS EVENING, I'LL GO IN THE BACK DOOR
YOU DON'T SEEM GLAD TO SEE ME, DEAR!

Eggs Up 2 Cents On the Market; Butter Scarce

Fresh eggs firmed two cents in price over last week's quotations of 35 cents per dozen with vendors asking straight 37 cents for grade "A" large on the largely attended market. Attendance on the market was the largest seen this summer, with all varieties of seasonal vegetables being freely displayed.

Dairy butter was scarce with vendors for the most part having supplies only for their customers at prices ranging from 40 cents the pound to 85 cents per two-pound roll. Broilers were quoted up to $1.50 per pair with roasters bringing a slightly higher figure. Good fowl sold up to $1.75 each with the average bringing $1 to $1.25 while a few ducks were offered at $1.40 to $1.50 each.

The apple display on the outside market was the largest seen this summer with Transparents, Duchess and Astrachans being freely offered. Price for the first two varieties was 50 cents the peck while extra good quality Astrachans brought 40 cents per half-peck.

Peaches were offered quite freely at prices ranging from 90 cents the six-quart basket for specials and 75 cents for No. 1's and down to 45 cents for No. 3 grades. Montmorency cherries sold at $1 to 1.10 per basket, raspberries at 25 and 30 cents the box, blackberries at 30 cents and huckleberries at 25 and 30 cents the quart. Currants brought the usual 15 cents and two boxes for 25 cents, and Shiro plums 75 cents the basket.

On the vegetable market cauliflower were offered up to 30 cents each, tomatoes at 75 cents the six-quart basket and potatoes at 50 cents the peck. Muskmelons brought up to 25 cents each, corn on the cob 35 cents the dozen and bunched vegetables the usual nickel each.

Colorful displays of gladioli brightened the market with vendors doing a brisk business at 25 cents the bouquet.

White fish were quoted at 25 cents the pound by fish vendors while young porkers were being held at from $7 to $10 each, according to age and quality.

Airgunner Tells Graphic Story Of "Shaky Do" Flights Over Reich

Editors Note: In the following story a 25-year-old wireless airgunner from Quebec City tells his impressions of bombing flights over enemy territory. He has made sufficient trips in the front turret of a big bomber to have earned a breather—six months instructing at an operational training unit.

* * *

(Written for The Canadian Press)
(By Flt. Sgt. Roger O'Brien)

With the R.C.A.F. Somewhere in Britain, Aug. 8 —(CP)— We lost "Fudge," our rear-gunner, one night coming back from Emden.

It had been a "shaky do" — things don't always go just right— and we hadn't been able to take things easy until we were well on our way home and out of the colored flak.

Just as we relaxed, we ran into a balloon barrage. Wireless noise was interfering with the inter-com but we could hear the captain swearing. At one moment we heard him say "we'll have to get out of here."

He did get us out of it and when we landed and crawled out of our kite one after another, there was no "Fudge."

The next morning a weary looking "Fudge" staggered in carrying his parachute. He explained his disappearance. When we were caught in the balloons, he had heard the captain's words ". . . get out of here . . ." through the wireless noise and taken them for an order to bail out.

No. 13 Flight Lucky

My No. 13 flight didn't worry me particularly because I'm not superstitious. It was a lucky flight. A flak shell went through the wing of our Wimpey and it was lucky it didn't explode.

My first 'shaky do" was a trip to Essen. A "shaky do" is a trip when things have a tendency to go wrong. Our engines cut out twice that night just when the captain was putting us through violent evasive action to get away from searchlights and flak.

The first time the engines went dead we dropped 5,000 feet. We were glad to get out of there, I can tell you.

Another night when we were out to Kiel we got caught in a box barrage. It took us a half-hour to break our way through those walls of lights and flak hemming us in on four sides.

One of the most recent trips was also one of the easiest. I didn't have to worry because the squadron commander was at the controls, the squadron gunnery leader was in the rear turret, the squadron signals officer was on the wireless and the squadron navigation officer was our observer.

We were bombing Bremen and four night fighters came after us. The squadron commander easily got us away from them. During one attack he twisted the kite around to put the Jerry kite in my sights and give me a crack at him.

Four of the crew with whom I've flown during my trips have been lost. I just didn't happen to be with them on those flights. Once it was because I was grounded with an attack of 'flu. Another time I happened to be away on a short course.

I guess I'm lucky to be able to go on this instructing job.

'Breathing Space' Makes Big Difference, Forde Declares

Sydney, Aug. 8 (CP)—The Australian Army Minister, Francis M. Forde, said in a speech today "we are face to face with a great crisis in our history" and warned that the Japanese would try to knock Australia out of the war by invasion.

"Fortunately we have been given a breathing space to prepare which will make a big difference when the battle is joined," he said.

HOGS

Toronto, Aug. 8 — (CP) — Dressedweight were up 15 cents at Barrie and prices were unchanged at other bacon-hog markets reporting early today.

Liveweight: Chatham $10.75.

Dressedweight: Barrie $15.90, Hull $15.40 plus transportation, Stratford $15.50 plus transportation.

THE WAR TODAY

By De WITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

What guarantee stands back of the Allied war aims as thus far expressed?

Daily the Atlantic Charter, designed by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill last August in their dramatic conference somewhere at sea, grows in importance as representing the probable fundamental principles upon which the new world order will be built after tha wer.

This new bill of rights for man, endorsed by 26 other nations, is a pillar of fire to lead the Allied armies. It is likely to form the basis of any peace treaty. If any of the Axis peoples should decide to break away from their leaders and make a separate peace, they certainly will be drawn to considerable degree by this magnet.

Of more immediate concern, should a compromise be reached between Britain and the Indian Nationalists in the great crisis which now threatens the security of the whole Allied cause, it doubtless will involve some guarantee to the Nationalists that they will receive the freedom which Britain promises to give them after the war.

There's no indication at this writing that a compromise is possible, but the Atlantic Charter certainly offers encouragement to the Nationalists when it says that the United States and Britain "respect the right of all peoples to choose the form of government under which they will live."

Still, we are told that the Atlantic Charter isn't bonded. Lord Bennett, one-time Prime Minister of Canada, has raised this question by telling the House of Lords that the charter "is nothing more than the expression of hopes and aspirations on the part of the President of United States and our Prime Minister."

Lord Bennett pointed out that American legislation giving force to operation of the charter declarations could only become effective after Senate approval, and he called attention to the Senate's refusal after the First Great War to accept the League of Nations which President Wilson had sponsored and included in his famous four points. Lord Bennett added:

"Nothing could be more fatal than to make a declaration of views with respect to peace and then have our enemies, defeated, saying they relied upon statements which we made but to which we could not give effect because they were our declarations and not the declarations of everyone concerned with us.

"Here the prime minister could bind the government and country or else go out of office in the endeavor to give effect to his conclusions. In the United States this is not so."

Lord Bennet didn't explain the unusual circumstances surronding the rejection of the League of Nations was to the famous article 10 ions was to the famos article 10 under which members undertook to "preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all members of the league." Coupled with that far-reaching commitment was the fact that the British Empire had six votes as against one for the United States. Furthermore, opponents of the league charged that Mr. Wilson had approved the league covenant without proper consultation with Senate leaders.

However, Lord Bennett has created in the public mind the question of why, if the Atlantic Charter is merely an "expression of hopes and aspirations," the legislatures of both the United States and Britain don't consider the charter formally and vote their approval or disapproval of it. That would be calculated to clear up any doubts.

Obituary

LATE HARRY DAFOE

(Hillier Township)
(Contributed)

The funeral of Harry Dafoe took place from his late residence at Niles' Corners, Hillier Township, Prince Edward County, on Saturday, July 25. The service in the home and at the graveside in Wellington Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. J. F. Lane of Wellington.

Review of Position Canadian Bacon In Britain and How to Hold Market

One of the important contributions being made to the war effort by Canadian farmers is the production of increased numbers of hogs for the purpose of providing bacon for the United Kingdom. Before the war Canada supplied not more than about 15 percent of the total quantity of bacon and ham consumed in Britain, writes G. R. Paterson, Animal Products Trade Commissioner, in London, England, in a recent issue of the Commercial Intelligence Journal. Out of a total pre-war consumption of approximately 10,500,000 long cwts. (of 112 lb.) per annum, Canada provided in 1938, 1,507,656 cwts. Following the outbreak of war, it seemed reasonably certain that increased quantities of bacon were likely to be required from Canada. When the European countries were overrun by the enemy, Canada immediately became the principal source of supply. The Dominion has increased her production to the point where during the present year she is supplying 5,357,143 cwts., the equivalent of approximately 5,000,000 hogs, in the form of Wiltshires, hams and a small amount of other cuts.

Recently questions have been asked in various quarters, both in Canada and the United Kingdom, that would indicate that some thought is being given not only to the future. Some of these questions and answers thereto are as follows:

"1. What part of all the bacon now consumed by the United Kingdom originates in Canada?

"Official statistics have not been published since the beginning of the war, but conservative estimate is 67 per cent.

"2. Prior to the par it was repeatedly emphasized in some quarters that, if Canada wished to participate in the British market to a greater extent than she was then doing, she must produce more bacon similar in type to that supplied by Denmark. If, in its broadest sense, that was the real situation at that time, what is the position now that she is the principal supplier?

"Danish bacon was favored owing to a number of factors, chief among which were the following: the proximity of Denmark to the United Kingdom market; the high degree of uniformity in quality of Danish bacon; continuity of supply of a product that suited the taste of the majority of the people.

"The geographical disadvantages affecting Canadian supplies in peace time have been accentuated as a result of wartime shipping problems. Nevertheless, with minor exceptions, the Canadian product has arrived in the United Kingdom in first-class condition. In general it is of uniformly better quality, butchering methods have been improved, deliveries have been made as required within the limits of wartime shipping irregularities, and the trade and consumers have expressed general satisfaction with the Canadian product. This may suggest that much of the pre-war preference for Danish bacon was over-emphasized. As a matter of fact, during the first Great War, when Canada also ranked first in importance as the United Kingdom supplier, too little attention was paid to quality. Therefore the British trade and consumers welcomed the return of the then superior Danish product. A recurrence of this situation must not be allowed to interfere with Canada's continuing to occupy her rightful place in the coming post-war period.

"3. Is it true, as some seem to advocate, that Canadian producers would be better advised to increase the weight of hogs delivered to the Canadian packing plants for processing and shipment as bacon to the United Kingdom at the present time?

"No. While it may be reasonable and correct to say that the average weight of hogs might be increased slightly in order to prevent light-weight and unfinished pigs being delivered for processing, at the same time it must be borne in mind that once a hog has been finished at around 200-220 pounds live weight it should, if it is the right type and has been properly fed, have attained the best weight at which it can be converted into the most desirable kind of Wiltshire. United Kingdom consumers have a very definite preference for bacon from a Wiltshire of the proper weight. When selecting bacon, they also give the most careful consideration to the best proportion of lean to fat to suit their needs. Contrary to the somewhat prevalent opinion, consumers in the United Kingdom do not favor overly fat bacon; not only is it less palatable, but it is also less economical to purchase. To produce hogs of heavier weights than have been suggested would in no way save shipping space so far as total volume is concerned, but it would necessitate shipping a higher proportion of fat in an undesirable and uneconomical form. Aside from these points, the post-war potentialities of this market as an outlet for a substantial volume of Canadian bacon must remain uppermost in the minds of all concerned."

The Experts Say . . . .

By MARGARET ECKER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Aug. 7.—(CP)—Hints for wartime living from folk who ought to know:

Fruit

The variety of canned goods is likely to be reduced next winter and the home product will be in greater demand than ever. . . Here are some ideas from Laura Pepper of the Agriculture Department's consumer service. Uniformity of size and maturity make a more attractive product so sort your fruit carefully. . . .To prevent discoloration of peaches, pears and apples drop them into a brine of one teaspoonful of salt to a quart of water as soon as they are peeled. . . .Prevent fruit from floating in the jar by not overprocessing and not using too heavy a syrup.

Rayon

The staff of S. G. Dixon of Montreal, who is administrator of rayon has some hints for ironing rayon without injuring the cloth. . . . Use a warm—not hot—iron and press when dry, on the wrong side. . . Use a slightly damp cloth between iron and material. . . .If the material is a mixture of rayon and other fibres, except wool, iron when slightly damp. . . .Crinkly rayon is best ironed over a Turkish towel to help retain the crinkle.

Butter

There's no shortage of butter yet but the government pays a subsidy of five cents a pound to producers so the retail price stays under the ceiling . . . The Wartime Prices and Trade Board urges housewives to cut consumption. . . The home economists say meat fats can be used to advantage in frying, for sauces and even for baking. . . The nutritionists admit butter is a good source of Vitamin A but green and yellow vegetables are being advocated as a substitute.

Fuel Saver

Marion Harlow of the Pensions and Health Department's nutrition department had this fuel and labor-saving tip: Serve raw vegetables as appetizers or in salads. . . "It means", she says, "more vitamins for the family, more fuel diverted from home use into war industry—and more time for mother to spend in war work"'.

Corned Beef

Byrne Hope Sanders, "Mrs. Consumer" of the prices board, is asking housewives not to use corned beef—even if they know a grocer who still has some in stock. . . "Remember that the lads in the services and our Canadian prisoners of war need it more than you do"', she says. . . That's why more than 60,000 food retailers and 800 wholesalers are co-operating with the government to bring back to central points as much as possible of the corned beef distributed all over the country.

Father's Suit

The clothing administration in the prices board, trying to save material for more vital uses, is urging that the best possible care be taken of men's suits. . . .The better they're kept the longer they wear. . . . . Two or more suits worn in rotation will outlast the same number if each is worn constantly until it is worn out. . . Proper hanging cuts down on pressing. . . Street dust is harmful to fabrics and careful brushing to dislodge it pays dividends. . . .Guard suits from shabbiness by keeping up minor repairs. . . .And remove spots or stains while they're fresh, because it's easier on the material then.

Survivors Of Torpedoed Ship Are Landed

An East Coast Canadian Port, Aug. 7 —(CP)— More than 50 survivors of an Allied ship have been landed here by a Canadian warship and reported their vessel was ambushed and sunk by three submarines.

The survivors said a fourth submarine was shelled by a Canadian warship but escaped in fog. Ten members of the crew were lost in the sinking, but the others were adrift in lifeboats for only a few hours before they were picked up.

Only Canadian among the rescued was Able Seaman Percy Lambert, who moved with his family from Halifax to Newfoundland three years ago.

Girl is Rescued From Deep Water

Fort Erie, Ont., Aug. 7—(CP) — Annie Hunt, 17, and Lila O'Brien, 17, yesterday rescued a girl who was in difficulties some 150 feet of shore in deep water. The name of the rescued girl was not available.

The two girls were swimming at a spot known as the "baby hole" near the Buffalo-Fort Erie Ferry landing, and had to make a wide detour in the rapid current after reaching the distressed swimmer to avoid the Buffalo ferry boat.

This is the third time in six years that Miss Hunt has figured in rescues in this section of the Niagara Peninsula.

Who's Who In R.A.F.

The sports pages of America would be sadly impoverished if robbed of that rivalry of national groups which is reflected in the emphasis on the nativity of players. American politics without its perpetual agonizing over "proper representation" of the myriad American tribes would be a humdrum game. Accustomed as we are to this sort of thing—and it is rife in all literature including the Old Testament — it is surprising how little has been said of its importance in army communiques and war news.

We have called attention to the fact that British publicity and censorship have combined to give a depreciated picture of the military prowess and performance of the population of the United Kingdom by the consistent playing up of the colonials. However, this is good stuff for the Home market. It warms the cockles of colonial hearts, and it also hops up the folks at home, and throughout the Dominions overseas, the capital H on Home means that one is speaking of "this island" as Churchill says it.

Because so much of its fighting was done in the Home skies, the impression that the R.A.F. is "true blue" British has not been seriously impaired, although there was a time in 1940 when one great New Zealand ace seemed to be fighting the Luftwaffe single-handed, so far as the despatches went. At other times the R.A.F. as represented in the news, seemed eo be a Canadian outfit, and just now, the American Eagle squadron is the stuff.

Well, we like that last phase a whole lot. But in the interests of plain news, as distinguished from agreeable reading matter we believe it is timely to analyze the composition of the R.A.F.

The crews of combat aircraft serving in the skies of the British Isles are composed of 67 percent Home born and raised airmen, 27 percent natives of the Dominions overseas, and 7 percent boys of the Allied nations, among whom are many Poles who have hung up great fighting records.

The crews of R. A. R. aircraft flying on overseas fronts such as Libya, India, Ceylon, Syria, Iran and Irak, are composed of 83 percent Home British, 15 percent natives of the Dominions, and two percent sons of the Allied nations.

The male ground personnel of the R.A.F. at home is composed of 97 percent Home British, two percent natives of the Dominions and one percent Allies. Ground crews on overseas duty are 99 percent Home boys, and one percent colonial. Of the aircraft of "operational type" in service "at Home," 87 percent are of British make, 13 percent American. In overseas service, the aircraft are 75 percent of British manufacture, 25 percent American.

The figures on aircraft indicate clearly that Britain has not been getting a disproportionate share of our production, and probably not the greater part of our exports. — From the Chicago Daily News.

$2,000,000 Dam On Grand River Has Been Completed

Brantford, Ont., Aug. 7 (CP) — The $2,000,000 Shand Dam was to be formally opened this afternoon by Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn. Completion and formal opening of the huge storage dam brings to fruition plans which have been put forward from time to time for some 40 years, proposing Grand River conservation.

Erected across the Grand three miles upstream from the village of Forgus, and completed after almost three years' work, the Shand Dam is designed to store up flood waters of the river in the spring, hold them in a man-made lake, and release them gradually during the dry summer months to provide a more adequate flow of water for sewage disposal than is at present available in summer.

MARTIN IS PUZZLED

Toronto, Aug. 8 —(CP)— Martin Burton can't quite figure out why he keeps receiving summonses from the Toronto police department. He is in receipt of his second for failure to stop at an intersection.

Bruton's car has been dismantled, he has no ration book, and has been going around on crutches as a result of a broken hip since a year ago February, but is unable to convince police.

His first "offense" was speeding.

5 LAKE BOATS REQUISITIONED

Toronto, Aug. 8 —(CP)— Five Lower Lake canal-sized freighters from Toronto and other Great Lakes ports have been requisitioned and will sail shortly for deep-sea service, shipping officials said yesterday.

All five ships, officials said, will join other lake freighters in the coastal trade for the duration of the war. Since the war began more than 50 Lower Lake freighters have seen service in the war zone.

RABBITS EAT VEGETABLES IN VICTORY GARDENS

Brockville, Ont., Aug. 7 (CP)— Victory gardens on Hartley Street here have a look of defeat because of the ravages made by rabbits, which have eaten most of the choice vegetables.

STEPHAN BEGINS LAST 68 DAYS

Deputy Marshal Says Condemned Man Boasts He Won't Hang

Detroit, Aug. 7 —(AP)— Max Stephan began today in closely-guarded confinement the 68 days of life that remain to him before he must go to the gallows for treachery to America in time of war.

Guards of the federal prison at Milan, from which Stephan was brought yesterday to hear his death sentence, resumed their 24-hour watch over the man for whom time is running out because a court of his adopted government found him guilty of treason.

That was the only word from the prison. True to a custom of years standing during which little has ever been said of prisoners at Milan officials of the institution gave out no advices about Stephan.

Say Stephan Boasts He Won't Hang

A deputy federal marshal, however, said that Stephan still boasted that he would not hang.

"I'll bet all the tea in China I won't hang," Deputy John W. Ingram quoted the prisoner as saying on his way back to Milan.

Thus the 50-year-old German-born tavern keeper, a naturalized American, returned to the cell-life which has been his since he broke into headlines last April for having aided Lieut. Hans Peter Krug, a prisoner of war who escaped from a Bowmanville, Ont., prisoners' camp, in his attempts to get back to Germany. For this he was sentenced to hang on Friday, November 13.

Judge Tuttle, in pronouncing the historic sentence, declared that Stephan's "entire interest was to aid Germany's cause" when he provided food, drink, lodging and transportation to Krug, who escaped April 16 and was recaptured in Texas after having visited in Detroit April 18.

An appeal from the death sentence is permissible. Verne C. Amberson, Stephan's attorney, said he had made no decision on an appeal, adding: "remember, attorneys sell their services, not themselves."

SAYS FINNS OFTEN DISCUSS PEACE WITH RUSSIA

London, Aug. 7 (CP)—BBC said today that Dr. Julio Passikivi, former Finnish envoy to Russia, told Danish journalists in Copenhagen that in Finland the question of peace with Russia is often discussed.

In October, 1939, Passikivi went to Moscow to prevent a flare-up between Finland and Russia.

"I do not think my mission is finished", Passikivi said.

3 German Officers Steal Norwegian Boat And Set Sail for Eng.

Montreal, Aug. 8 —(CP)— All Germans in occupied countries are not confident of victory or of the justice of the Nazi cause according to a strange story reaching the Norwegian information bureau here yesterday.

Last April three German officers boarded the schooner "Luna" at a quay in Bergen. They offered the crew spirits containing a sleeping draught, the bureau said, and ordered the skipper to sail for a spot where more Germans were taken aboard and they put out to sea. Subsequently the Norwegian crew of the schooner was ordered into a small boat and sent back to Norway.

The schooner then set a westward course—for England.

Says War Prisoners In Germany Are Guarded by Cripples

New York, Aug. 7—(CP)—Prisoners of war in Germany now are guarded by cripples and old men and the camps are administered by women, France Forever said today in a summary of information collected from liberated prisoners of war.

The organization, United States centre of the Free French movement, said Russians, most of them civilians, were said to be the greatest sufferers in German camps. Liberated prisoners said the interned Russian aged from 18 to 65 were brought across Germany in cattle cars opened only twice a week for hygienic purposes and to give the prisoners food.

Among 2,800 who arrived alive at one camp, France Forever said, the majority weighed from 90 to 100 pounds. In each car, holding 50 men, 30 arrived dead. In camp, they died at the rate of 50 a day for the first eight days and 20 daily thereafter.

French prisoners, of whom 1,256,0000 were said still still to be in German custody, were given the job of burying the bodies in a common grave. They had no way of disinfecting themselves and an outbreak of typhus developed.

LOU SOMERS INJURED

Toronto, Aug. 7 (CP)—PO. Lou Somers, former member of Varsity football teams and winner in 1940 of the Cody Trophy, is reported seriously injured following an air raid over enemy territory, according to word received here by his parents, Mr. and Mrs Joseph Somers.

Reports say Somers was injured by shrapnel when anti-aircraft hit his Wellington bomber, killing one member of the crew and injuring three others.

STERN ACTION TAKEN IN INDIA, GANDHI INTERNED

ALLIES HURL OFFENSIVE AGAINST SOLOMON ISLES

Step Follows as Civil Disobedience Campaign Begins

Raids Break Out, Strikes Threaten as Result of All-India Party Action

RIOTERS DISPERSED

By PRESTON GROVER

Associated Press Staff Writer

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Bombay, Aug. 10 (AP).—The All-India Congress Party's campaign of mass civil disobedience gained momentum today as workers left their jobs in eighteen mills and rioting flared anew in Bombay, where police fired into a large and turbulent crowd which refused to disperse.

Disorders broke out in various parts of the city, with demonstrators stoning suburban trains in one area and burning a government grain shop in another.

22 Sent To Hospital.

Twenty-three were sent to hospital with bullet wounds after police fired twice into groups in the Dadar district of Bombay, in Poona police fired on a crowd, mostly of students, near Parsurambhau College and two were removed to a hospital. Schools and colleges were closed. Goondas, the Hindu name for hoodlums threw bottles through windows.

Work stoppages in some Bombay mills were in response to Mohandas K. Gandhi's "do or die" call for a "complete deadlock" by strikes and all other non-violent means.

As the campaign entered its second day amid shootings, showers of bottles and shouts of demonstrators, there were portents of even greater trouble ahead.

Bands of Hindus stoned some Moslem shops in the "trouble area" of south central Bombay. Police have the greatest fear of repetition of the communal Moslem - Hindu riots which have followed previous civil disobedience campaigns. These riots often were the bloodiest and the most difficult to suppress.

Throughout the city troops were stationed in groups ranging from a dozen soldiers to a full platoon.

They evidently were being shown largely for moral effect, however, for they were not participating with police in breaking up disturbances. They carried rifles, however.

Curfew and Rain Keep City Quiet.

The curfew from 7 p.m. to daylight plus rain kept the city quiet last night, but the mid-morning saw a renewal of the disturbances.

In a two-hour drive through the troubled area my car was shot at several times. Rowdies threw bottles, pots, rocks and anything they could seize from stands of nearby shops.

The windows of the automobile were smashed and I was showered with glass fragments. The car was dented in a half dozen places but I received only a few stinging pelts from the broken glass.

The police finally managed to force the car through the crowd and I escaped by racing down side streets amid catcalls, shouting and further attempts to halt the automobile by throwing human or other barricades across the road.

Though deprived of leadership by the swift arrest of Mohandas K. Gandhi and his chief lieutenants, the rank and file of the party responded eagerly to a call for "do-or-die" resistance to British rule, forgetting or ignoring Gandhi's own admonitions against violence.

Potentially more serious than the violence done by mobs which surged through the streets of Bombay and other cities Sunday, burning buses, looting stores and stoning police, was the threat of strikes in vital war industries.

Organizing of Walk-Outs Reported

While the executive committee of the Indian Federation of Labor denounced Gandhi's disobedience campaign as a "sinister move" and gave assurance of its intention to co-operate with the government, reports were current that walkouts already were being organized.

Cotton mill workers in Ahmedabad, where some of the worst disorders took place, were said to have decided on a general strike.

In an attempt to break up any organized movement, the government of Bombay banned all assemblages of five or more persons, prohibited the carrying of weapons

London Confident Gov't of India Able to Deal with Grave Situation

PROMPT ACTION PRAISED

London, Aug. 10. (CP)—Confidence that the government of India would be able to deal with the grave situation confronting it was exhibited today in London, where the arrest of Mohandas K. Gandhi was endorsed by a British spokesman as an act of political courage necessary to protect the United Nations from "a stab in the back".

This characterization of Gandhi's mass campaign of civil disobedience came from L. S. Amery, secretary for India, in a broadcast to the United States last night.

"What India is up against," he said, "is nothing less than a deliberate campaign to sabotage her war effort and the war effort of all Indians, British, Americans or Chinese who are on Indian soil".

India Saved

In another broadcast, directed to Britons at home and abroad, Mr. Amery declared:—

"Prompt and firm action by the government of India has, I believe, saved India and the Allied cause from grave disaster".

The Press for the most part found no fault with the government's action in arresting Gandhi and other Congress leaders, although editorial writers expressed regret it had been necessary to resort to force.

A dissident note came from The London Daily Herald, Labor newspaper, however, which said the "precipitate imprisonment" of Gandhi seemed "evidence of weakness rather than strength in the mind of the government of India".

The Glasgow Herald said the whole situation was "a grim and sorry reflection on British-Indian relations' and the London Daily Mail said Britain was "paying for past weakness".

Strong criticism came from the Communist Party, from the Leftist International Party and the India League — which said it represented the All-India Congress Party in Britain.

Object of Movement

At the press conference Mr. Amery expressed confidence that athorities will be able to cope with the situation developing in India "without undue difficulty." That observation was made before London had heard of Gandhi's arrest and of disorders in Bombay.

The Indian Civil Disobedience Movement, Mr. Amery said, contemplated fomenting of strikes, stoppage of the functioning of government by calling government servants of their duties, interruption of rail traffic, cutting of telegraph and telephone wires and the picketing of recruiting stations. "Bitter experience," Mr. Amery said in his broadcast to the United States, has shown "how soon non-violent mass demonstrations degenerate into terrorism and bloodshed.

Novorossisk is Powerful Fortress Surrounded by Caucasus Foothills

By FRANK L. MARTIN

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Ankara, Turkey, Aug. 10 (AP).—A battle far more costly and fierce than the siege of Sevastopol will break out if the Germans invest the Russian Black Sea naval base of Novorossisk, naval observers predicted Saturday as the Germans stood within 60 miles of that port.

These naval men said they believed Novorossisk would be a harder nut to crack than Sevastopol because the foothills of the Caucasus reach to the Black Sea coast and surround the stronghold.

The fate of the Russian Black Sea fleet, said here to be composed of 35 submarines, two or three cruisers and eight to eleven destroyers but no battleships, was a topic of much speculation in Turkey.

It was agreed that Russia has three choices if the Germans seize all Soviet bases in the Caucasus:

1. Sail into a Turkish sea port, probably Samsun, for internment.
2. Scuttle the fleet at sea.
3. Make a break for it through the Sea of Marmora and the Dardanelles.

A break by the fleet through the Marmora Sea and the Dardanelles was considered most unlikely here because of treaty restrictions.

Should the fleet decide to shoot its way into the Mediterranean, it would be forced also to pass through the Aegean Sea dotted with numerous islands harboring German air bases.

Some circles advanced the possibility that the Russian fleet might take a suicide dash into Varna, Bulgaria, or some other axis port on the Black Sea and do as much damage as possible before being destroyed.

RAILWAY CENTRE OF OSNABRUECK HEAVILY ATTACKED

Most of Rail Traffic For Rhineland And Ruhr Passes Thru The City

6 PLANES MISSING

LONDON, Aug. 10 — (CP) — A strong force of British bombers, returning to the offensive against Germany after two nights of bad weather, attacked the railway and industrial centre of Osnabrueck and other objectives in Northwest Germany last night, the Air Ministry announced today.

Docks at Le Havre, France, and air fields in Belgium and the Netherlands also were bombed.

Six bombers were missing from the night's operations and one fighter from offensive patrol yesterday, the Air Ministry said in its communique.

In scattered light attacks by the German air force on Britain during the night, three invading bombers were reported shot down.

Osnabrueck is a centre of great railroad yards through which virtually all the traffic from the Rhineland and Ruhr is shunted. It has been mentioned in R. A. F. communiques 39 times previously, but some of the raids were light. It was last mentioned on the night of June 19.

Light Nazi Attack

The Germans' new phosphorus fire bombs were among hundreds of incendiary missiles which fell near a town on the Southeast coast of England. They fell on fields but little damage was done as crops had been harvested.

As the R.A.F. methodically pounded German targets, the Air Ministry news service said photographs taken after recent British raids on Western Germany disclosed damage "which is certain to have far-reaching effects on the enemy's production of armaments and munitions."

Specifically, the news service reported, 150,000 square feet of roofing were damaged in the centre of the rolling mills of the great August Thyssen steel works in the Ruhr valley, works which still were under repair for bomb damage suffered last March.

Five other steel works in the Hamburg-Duisburg-Ruhrot area also were shown to have been hit heavily by the R.A.F., it added.

High Grade Manganese Discovered in Urals

Moscow, Aug. 10 (AP)—The newspaper Pravda said today that Russians had discovered large deposits of high-grade manganese ore in the northern Urals. It said they were not inferior to the ores found in the Caucasus, one of the Soviet Union's chief sources.

DISNEY'S IRON DEER GO TO WAR

Washington, Aug. 10 (AP)—Walt Disney's two iron deer are leaving his front lawn in Hollywood for the war front. The deer, which weigh a ton, contain enough scrap for one 75-MM. field piece or 10,000 incendiary bombs.

Red Army Defences Before Maikop Fields Appear To Be Yielding

Tremendous Explosions Over Broad Area Seem to Indicate Russians May be Carrying Out Scorched Earth Policy in Oil Regions

By EDDY GILMORE

Associated Press Staff Writer

By EDDY GILMORE

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Aug. 10 (AP).—Driven back by relentless, hard thrusts of German motorized troops and Alpinists, Red army defences before the oil fields of Maikop and in spurs of the Caucasian foothills appeared to be cracking today.

Front line dispatches telling of tremendous explosions roaring over a broad area seemed to indicate the Russians were carrying out with ruthless abandon the scorched earth policy in the first oil regions the Germans have been able to penetrate in their Caucasian thrust.

(The Germans, suddenly extending their drive eastward along the Baku railway toward the Caspian, claimed the capture of Pyatigorsk, 110 miles southeast of Armavir and midway between the Black Sea and Caspian. They already had claimed to have reached the Caucasian slopes on a 250-mile front and captured Maikop and Krasnodar in the northwest Caucasus.)

Counter-Attack With Some Success.

In large-scale tank battles in the Kotelnikovski area of the Don elbow, southwest of Stalingrad, the Soviet machines appeared to be as strong as the Germans, and the Red army was counter-attacking with some success.

Five hundred miles north of the Caucasus, in the Voronesh flank, the Russians were making further headway, expanding their bridgeheads on the west bank of the Don, taking several populated places in violent fighting, and repulsing German counter-attacks between the Don and Voronezh.

The Germans were bringing up reserves and still maintaining communications with their groups before the city, however.

Great Clouds of Dust and Smoke

In the oil-bearing Maikop-Krasnodar area of the northwest Caucasus, said today's communique, the Germans were "striving hard to advance," and dispatches from the front said great shrouds of dust and smoke were draped over a broad landscape already baked by a broiling summer sun.

Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, said roaring blasts seared a wide area, and it was reasonable, observers said, to believe that the Russians would destroy the oil installations before the Germans reach them. The Maikop fields produce about seven per cent of Russia's petroleum.

As the battle spread southward dispatches of burning wheat fields too, indicating that in some sectors the Russians had not been able to harvest the grain before the approach of the enemy, as they were able to do farther north.

There was no report here indicating whether the Russians who had been battling along the Black Sea and Sea of Azov coasts had been cut off by the German advance south of Kushchevka. But it was possible most of them were giving battle along the Kuban.

Cossacks Sabde German Alpinists

As fresh German alpinists drove from Armavir, dispatches said sabre-swinging horsemen of the Cossack villages defeated them in the first encounters in the Caucasian foothills.

Ambushes on the roads along which the Germans were pressing were the favorite Cossack trick.

(A Berlin broadcast asserted the Germans were advancing fan-like from Krasnodar toward the Red fleet navy base at Novorossisk on the Black Sea, from Maikop and Nevinnomyskaka toward the upper course of the Kuma River.

(The Kuma River flows eastward into the Caspian. It thus appeared that the Germans, after having penetrated the oil regions north of the Caucasus, were swiftly trying to drive a wedge from the Black Sea to the Captain where they could cut the Allied supply line from the Persian Gulf.)

ELECTRIC STOVE SALES BANNED; PERMIT NEEDED

Freezing Order Will Prevent Hoarding — Second-Hand Stoves Are Not Affected

CONSERVE SUPPLIES

Ottawa, Aug. 10 (CP). — The Department of Munitions and Supply announced that stocks of electric stoves in the hands of retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers were froezn under an order effective at midnight Saturday, and that no further sales may be made except under special permit.

"Rationing regulations now are being formulated by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board and will be announced shortly," Supplies Controller Alan H. Williamson said in a departmental statement.

"In the meantime, the freezing order will prevent hoarding, and will assure delivery of available supplies of stoves to those who really need them."

Munitions and supply officials said the action was taken to preserve metal supplies and assure a fair distribution of available stoves.

The new order, issued by Mr. Williamson, affects stoves sold and not yet delivered, but does not affect second-hand stoves. All new electric stoves and ranges of more than 35 amperes, all new combination coal and electric ranges, and all new electric rangettes come under its terms.

The order provides that, without a permit, no person may manufacture after Aug. 31 any electric cooking stoves or ranges of more than 35 amperers, any combination coal and electric range, any , electric rangette or electric cooking plate, grill or heater.

Production of these items until Aug. 31 may continue up to 75 per cent of the monthly average during 1940.

Mr. Williamson said permits may be issued to manufacturers who wish to clear up inventories of parts fabricated before Aug. 31.

N.Y. Press Claims Case for Freedom Immeasurably Harmed

New York, Aug. 10 (CP)—The New York Herald Tribune, commenting editorially upon the arrest of Mohandas Gandhi and other leaders of the Indian Congress Party, said today the British authorities took "the only course which the realities of the situation permitted."

It continued:

"In this complex war, with a world at stake, courage in facing the avowed enemy is not all that is required. Courage is necessary in dealing with political questions; tough-mindedness is needed to get to the heart of a problem that may be, as in the case of India, covered by a haze of good intentions and obscured by high-sounding catchwords. These qualities the British have demonstrated in moving against the Congress Party."

The tabloid Daily Mirror, in an editorial captioned "A Stickup!" said Gandhi has taken the step which may result "eventually in utter slavery for the India he seeks to free." It added:

"Thus he becomes in reality the most potent fifth columnist that Japan —and the Axis have found aligned gratuitously on their side since the outbreak of World War II.

"It is difficult for western minds to understand the motives of the small diapered saint, whose very footprints are kissed by worshipping rabble...

"Gandhi, Nehru, the All-India Congress Party choose this time to strike.

"We cannot help but feel that the case of Indian freedom has been immeasurably harmed; we cannot help but exclaim, in surprise and sorrow:

"This is a stickup!"

A GOOD EFFORT

Brantford, Ont., Aug. 10 —(CP) —When it comes to an all-out effort, it's hard to beat Douglas Hamlin of Brantford, who earned $1.60 delivering groceries and selling baskets. He gave 75 cents to the Red Cross, 25 cents to the Prisoners of War Fund and 60 cents to help crippled children. Total, $1.60.

SIX SABOTEURS DIE IN ELECTRIC CHAIR SATURDAY

Two Escape Death For Their Help in Preparing Case Against Others

PERFECTLY JUSTIFIED

Washington, Aug. 10. (AP)—The United States government was "perfectly justified" in showing leniency to two of the convicted eight German saboteurs by sending them to prison because "they helped considerably" in preparing the case against the six who were electrocuted, Attorney General Francis Biddle said yesterday.

This strategy of sparing the lives of the men who turned tale bearer to disclose activities of their confederates in international conspiracy who came by submarine to launch a two-year sabotage campaign here, was seen as a government bid for aid from any member of other enemy bands.

The BBC broadcast the news of the execution of Heinrich Harm Heinck, Richard Quirin, Edward John Kehling Herbert Hans Haupt, Werner Thiel and Hermann Otto Neubauer to the Nazi-dominated continent in several languages Saturday night.

Those spared by presidential commutation were George John Dasch, sentenced to thirty years, and Ernest Peter Burger, to serve the remainder of his life in prison.

Arrives in Canada With 3-Day-Old Egyptian Newspaper

Ottawa, Aug. 10 (CP). — Wing Cmdr. John McNab, principal Protestant chaplain of the Royal Canadian Air Force, is back in Canada after a visit of several weeks with the Candin irmen serving overseas.

Returning by air, he brought with him as a souvenir of the speed of air travel a copy of a daily newspaper published in Egypt three days before his arrival home. He got the paper when a plane from Cairo landed just before he took off from a British airport.

LEAFLETS, BOMBS DROPPED

London, Aug. 10 (CP).—A German pilot dropped a bundle of leaflets along with a load of high explosives and incendiaries near a southwest town last night.

The leaflets were some which British pilots had dropped previously over Northern France, referring to the treatment by the axis of fighting French prisoners.

STARTS 21ST TERM FOR MISDEEDS

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 10 (AP)—Lee Contz has paid a heavy penalty for hih misdeeds. Coontz has just started his 21st term at the State Penal Farm where he already has spent 10 years. Most of his sentences were for petty thefts involving not more than $15 worth of merchandise.

First Parachute Unit Will Organize And Train at Shilo Camp, Manitoba

Ottawa, Aug. 10 (CP).)—Canada's first parachute battalion will be organized and trained at Shilo Military Camp in Manitoba, Brig. E. G. Weeks, Deputy Chief of the General Staff, announced at a press conference today.

Since only fully trained soldiers are being taken into the parachute formation it is expected the unit should be fully trained and ready for action in five or six months.

Maj. H. D. Proctor, 31, of Ottawa, has been designated commanding officer of the paratroops and will head a group of six officers and twenty non-commissioned officers who will be assmbled in Ottawa and sent to Fort Benning, Ga., for paratroop training with the United States army.

This group will return to Canada in October to act as instructors and officers for the unit which will then be organized.

Another group of officers and non-commissioned officers is being selected from the army overseas and some, if not all, of these will go through a parachute training course with the Royal Air Force in England.

The overseas group will return to Canada, bringing with them experience in overseas service and knowledge of British methods.

Group of Experts.

"So we will have a grouop of experts not only in United States methods but in British methods," said Brig. Weeks. "We propose to pick out the best features of the two methods and adopt them as the Canadian system."

Consideration is being given to a special rate of pay for paratroops. Maj. Proctor has under study the designing of a special badge for the battalion. A study is also being made of the uniforms and other equipment used by both British and American paratroops, with a view to deciding on Canadian equipment embodying the best features of both.

"The Department of National Defence believes that Canadian soldiers in the last war and in this one have shown that they have the guts, the intelligence and the endurance needed for this type of

Attack By Sea, Air And Possibly Land Is In Full Swing

Initiative Remains in Hands of United Nations in Four Days of Fighting

MAJOR ATTACK SEEN

By C. YATES McDANIEL

Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Aug. 10 — (AP) — The United Nations' first powerful offensive of the Pacific War flamed into its fourth day today by sea, air and possibly lang against savagely resisting Japanese in the Solomon Islands with supporting assaults by Allied airmen on enemy positions in New Guinea and the Bismarck Archipelago.

Latest word on the continuing action in the Solomons, while scant, indicated the initiative remained in the hands of the Allied fleet and other Allied forces which joined the battle Friday.

This information was relayed from Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, late Sunday by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, United States Pacific Naval commander. He gave no details as to the scope of the area under attack or the extent of the operations but all signs were that the drive might be developing into a major offensive operation.

Favorable Allied Progress

Admiral Nimitz said the attack, on the Tulagi area in the southeast part of the Solomons, 600 miles off Northeastern Australia, was being pressed by sea and air against Japanese land-based planes and garrisons and that "The operations are profressing favorably" despite enemy opposition.

A brief communique issued in Washington late yesterday said "considerable enemy resistance has been encountered and it is still too early to announce results or to estimate either our own or enemy losses."

The Japanese — without confirmation from any Allied source — broadcast claims from Tokyo that they had sunk 22 Allied warships and transports and damaged more than six others. These enemy claims were considered fantastic in the light of their fanciful reports on results of the Midway and Coral Sea battles — both stunning Japanese defeats.

3 WHEELS AND SPARE TAKEN AS OWNER SLEEPS IN CAR

Cleveland, Aug. 10 (AP)—While Richard J. Pearse, 26, slept in his car the other night, thieves removed three wheels and the spare wheel, filched his wrist watch from his arm, lifted a wallet from his inside coat pocket, and extracted a second wallet from his hip pocket.

Allied Bombers Raid Bengasi Make Direct Hit

Cairo, Aug. 10 (AP)—Allied heavy bombers made a sharp attack yesterday on the Axis supply port of Bengasi, scoring a direct hit on one ship and registering near misses on others, British headquarters reported today.

British light bombers simultaneously attacked enemy shipping off the North Africa coast and bombarded grounded Axis warplanes at airdromes in the El Daba area west of El Alamein.

A slight increase in enemy fighter plane activity was noted.

There were no developments on the land front yesterday, British headquarters said, though patrols were active during the preceding night.

Two German fighter planes were reported shot down yesterday during minor activity over Malta.

Russians Stand All Thrusts In Stalingrad Area

London, Aug. 10 (CP).)—The Russians are holding all thrusts at Stalingrad and have taken the offensive at Rzhev and Voronezh, but the scale of their counter-attacks is not yet known here, British military sources said today.

The surprise German drive at Stalingrad through Kotelnikovski a few days ago has been slowed, these quarters said, and the enemy has been checked "throughout the Don bend in bitter fighting".

In the extreme south, it was said, the Russian position "has still further deteriorated".

Extensive Damage Done at Haiphong By U.S. Bombers

Chungking, Aug. 10 (AP)—United States planes delivered a concentrated bombing of the waterfront at Haiphong, French Indo-China, yesterday without loss to themselves, the Chinese reported today.

There was extensive damage, it was said, and steamships in port were hit. It was the first raid on Haiphong by aircraft bases in China.

Haiphong has been used by the Japanese as a port of entry into the French colony since September, 1940, when Vichy made its first accord with Tokyo. It is located in the north, on the Gulf of Tonking.

36 SURVIVORS LANDED

Georgetown, British Guiana, Aug. 10 (CP).—Thirty-six survivors of a merchant ship torpedoed in the Atlantic have been landed here after spending seven days in a lifeboat.

International at a Glance

(By The Canadian Press)

RUSSIA—Soviet defence appears to be cracking in Caucasian foothills; Germans claim capture of Pyatigorsk, midway between Black Sea and Caspian.

PACIFIC — U.S. naval offensive against Solomon Islands in fourth day; fighting also in progress off Aleutians.

AIR WAR—R.A.F. makes strong attack on Osnabrueck and other northwestern German targets.

INDIA—Civil disobedience in full swing; Gandhi, Nehru and other leaders jailed; police fire on rioting crowds.

EGYPT — Allied bombers raid Bengasi; land situation quiet.

CHINA—American bombers attack French Indo-China port of Haiphong.

Step Follows as Civil Disobedience Campaign Begins

Raids Break Out, Strikes Threaten as Result of All-India Party Action

RIOTERS DISPERSED

Bombay, Aug. 10 (AP).—The All-India Congress Party's campaign of mass civil disobedience gained momentum today as workers left their jobs in eighteen mills and rioting flared anew in Bombay, where police fired into a large and turbulent crowd which refused to disperse.

Disorders broke out in various parts of the city, with demonstrators stoning suburban trains in one area and burning a government grain shop in another.

22 Sent To Hospital.

Twenty-three were sent to hospital with bullet wounds after police fired twice into groups in the Dadar district of Bombay, in Poona police fired on a crowd, mostly of students, near Parsurambhau College and two were removed to a hospital. Schools and colleges were closed. Goondas, the Hindu name for hoodlums threw bottles through windows.

Work stoppages in some Bombay mills were in response to Mohandas K. Gandhi's "do or die" call for a "complete deadlock" by strikes and all other non-violent means.

As the campaign entered its second day amid shootings, showers of bottles and shouts of demonstrators, there were portents of even greater trouble ahead.

Bands of Hindus stoned some Moslem shops in the "trouble area" of south central Bombay. Police have the greatest fear of repetition of the communal Moslem - Hindu riots which have followed previous civil disobedience campaigns. These riots often were the bloodiest and the most difficult to suppress.

Throughout the city troops were stationed in groups ranging from a dozen soldiers to a full platoon.

They evidently were being shown largely for moral effect, however, for they were not participating with police in breaking up disturbances. They carried rifles, however.

Curfew and Rain Keep City Quiet.

The curfew from 7 p.m. to daylight plus rain kept the city quiet last night, but the mid-morning saw a renewal of the disturbances.

In a two-hour drive through the troubled area my car was shot at several times. Rowdies threw bottles, pots, rocks and anything they could seize from stands of nearby shops.

The windows of the automobile were smashed and I was showered with glass fragments. The car was dented in a half dozen places but I received only a few stinging pelts from the broken glass.

The police finally managed to force the car through the crowd and I escaped by racing down side streets amid catcalls, shouting and further attempts to halt the automobile by throwing human or other barricades across the road.

Though deprived of leadership by the swift arrest of Mohandas K. Gandhi and his chief lieutenants, the rank and file of the party responded eagerly to a call for "do-or-die" resistance to British rule, forgetting or ignoring Gandhi's own admonitions against violence.

Potentially more serious than the violence done by mobs which surged through the streets of Bombay and other cities Sunday, burning buses, looting stores and stoning police, was the threat of strikes in vital war industries.

Organizing of Walk-Outs Reported

While the executive committee of the Indian Federation of Labor denounced Gandhi's disobedience campaign as a "sinister move" and gave assurance of its intention to co-operate with the government, reports were current that walkouts already were being organized.

Cotton mill workers in Ahmedabad, where some of the worst disorders took place, were said to have decided on a general strike.

In an attempt to break up any organized movement, the government of Bombay banned all assemblages of five or more persons, prohibited the carrying of weapons

London Confident Gov't of India Able to Deal with Grave Situation

PROMPT ACTION PRAISED

London, Aug. 10. (CP)—Confidence that the government of India would be able to deal with the grave situation confronting it was exhibited today in London, where the arrest of Mohandas K. Gandhi was endorsed by a British spokesman as an act of political courage necessary to protect the United Nations from "a stab in the back".

This characterization of Gandhi's mass campaign of civil disobedience came from L. S. Amery, secretary for India, in a broadcast to the United States last night.

"What India is up against," he said, "is nothing less than a deliberate campaign to sabotage her war effort and the war effort of all Indians, British, Americans or Chinese who are on Indian soil".

India Saved

In another broadcast, directed to Britons at home and abroad, Mr. Amery declared:—

"Prompt and firm action by the government of India has, I believe, saved India and the Allied cause from grave disaster".

The Press for the most part found no fault with the government's action in arresting Gandhi and other Congress leaders, although editorial writers expressed regret it had been necessary to resort to force.

A dissident note came from The London Daily Herald, Labor newspaper, however, which said the "precipitate imprisonment" of Gandhi seemed "evidence of weakness rather than strength in the mind of the government of India"".

The Glasgow Herald said the whole situation was "a grim and sorry reflection on British-Indian relations' and the London Daily Mail said Britain was "paying for past weakness".

Strong criticism came from the Communist Party, from the Leftist International Party and the India League — which said it represented the All-India Congress Party in Britain.

Object of Movement

At the press conference Mr. Amery expressed confidence that athorities will be able to cope with the situation developing in India "without undue difficulty." That observation was made before London had heard of Gandhi's arrest and of disorders in Bombay.

The Indian Civil Disobedience Movement, Mr. Amery said, contemplated fomenting of strikes, stoppage of the functioning of government by calling government servants of their duties, interruption of rail traffic, cutting of telegraph and telephone wires and the picketing of recruiting stations. "Bitter experience," Mr. Amery said in his broadcast to the United States, has shown "how soon non-violent mass demonstrations degenerate into terrorism and bloodshed.

RAILWAY CENTRE OF OSNABRUECK HEAVILY ATTACKED

Most of Rail Traffic For Rhineland And Ruhr Passes Thru The City

6 PLANES MISSING

LONDON, Aug. 10 — (CP) — A strong force of British bombers, returning to the offensive against Germany after two nights of bad weather, attacked the railway and industrial centre of Osnabrueck and other objectives in Northwest Germany last night, the Air Ministry announced today.

Docks at Le Havre, France, and air fields in Belgium and the Netherlands also were bombed.

Six bombers were missing from the night's operations and one fighter from offensive patrol yesterday, the Air Ministry said in its communique.

In scattered light attacks by the German air force on Britain during the night, three invading bombers were reported shot down.

Osnabrueck is a centre of great railroad yards through which virtually all the traffic from the Rhineland and Ruhr is shunted. It has been mentioned in R. A. F. communiques 30 times previously, but some of the raids were light. It was last mentioned on the night of June 19.

Light Nazi Attack

The Germans' new phosphorus fire bombs were among hundreds of incendiary missiles which fell near a town on the Southeast coast of England. They fell on fields but little damage was done as crops had been harvested.

As the R.A.F. methodically pounded German targets, the Air Ministry news service said photographs taken after recent British raids on Western Germany disclosed damage "which is certain to have far-reaching effects on the enemy's production of armaments and munitions."

Specifically, the news service reported, 150,000 square feet of roofing were damaged in the centre of the rolling mills of the great August Thyssen steel works in the Ruhr valley, works which still were under repair for bomb damage suffered last March.

Five other steel works in the Hamburg-Duisburg-Ruhrot area also were shown to have been hit heavily by the R.A.F., it added.

High Grade Manganese Discovered in Urals

Moscow, Aug. 10 (AP)—The newspaper Pravda said today that Russians had discovered large deposits of high-grade manganese ore in the northern Urals. It said they were not inferior to the ores found in the Caucasus, one of the Soviet Union's chief sources.

DISNEY'S IRON DEER GO TO WAR

Washington, Aug. 10 (AP)—Walt Disney's two iron deer are leaving his front lawn in Hollywood for the war front. The deer, which weigh a ton, contain enough scrap for one 75-MM. field piece or 10,000 incendiary bombs.

Novorossisk is Powerful Fortress Surrounded by Caucasus Foothills

By FRANK L. MARTIN

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Ankara, Turkey, Aug. 10 (AP).—A battle far more costly and fierce than the siege of Sevastopol will break out if the Germans invest the Russian Black Sea naval base of Novorossisk, naval observers predicted Saturday as the Germans stood within 60 miles of that port.

These naval men said they believed Novorossisk would be a harder nut to crack than Sevastopol because the foothills of the Caucasus reach to the Black Sea coast and surround the stronghold.

The fate of the Russian Black Sea fleet, said here to be composed of 35 submarines, two or three cruisers and eight to eleven destroyers but no battleships, was a topic of much speculation in Turkey.

It was agreed that Russia has three choices if the Germans seize all Soviet bases in the Caucasus:

1. Sail into a Turkish sea port, probably Samsun, for internment.
2. Scuttle the fleet at sea.
3. Make a break for it through the Sea of Marmora and the Dardanelles.

A break by the fleet through the Marmora Sea and the Dardanelles was considered most unlikely here because of treaty restrictions.

Should the fleet decide to shoot its way into the Mediterranean, it would be forced also to pass through the Aegean Sea dotted with numerous islands harboring German air bases.

Some circles advanced the possibility that the Russian fleet might take a suicide dash into Varna, Bulgaria, or some other axis port on the Black Sea and do as much damage as possible before being destroyed.

Red Army Defences Before Maikop Fields Appear To Be Yielding

Tremendous Explosions Over Broad Area Seem to Indicate Russians May be Carrying Out Scorched Earth Policy in Oil Regions

By EDDY GILMORE

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Aug. 10 (AP).—Driven back by relentless, hard thrusts of German motorized troops and Alpinists, Red army defences before the oil fields of Maikop and in spurs of the Caucasian foothills appeared to be cracking today.

Front line dispatches telling of tremendous explosions roaring over a broad area seemed to indicate the Russians were carrying out with ruthless abandon the scorched earth policy in the first oil regions the Germans have been able to penetrate in their Caucasian thrust.

(The Germans, suddenly extending their drive eastward along the Baku railway toward the Caspian, claimed the capture of Pyatigorsk, 110 miles southeast of Armavir and midway between the Black Sea and Caspian. They already had claimed to have reached the Caucasian slopes on a 250-mile front and captured Maikop and Krasnodar in the northwest Caucasus.)

Counter-Attack With Some Success.

In large-scale tank battles in the Kotelnikovski area of the Don elbow, southwest of Stalingrad, the Soviet machines appeared to be as strong as the Germans, and the Red army was counter-attacking with some success.

Five hundred miles north of the Caucasus, in the Voronezh flank, the Russians were making further headway, expanding their bridgeheads on the west bank of the Don, taking several populated places in violent fighting, and repulsing German counter-attacks between the Don and Voronezh.

The Germans were bringing up reserves and still maintaining communications with their groups before the city, however.

Great Clouds of Dust and Smoke

In the oil-bearing Maikop-Krasnodar area of the northwest Caucasus, said today's communique, the Germans were "striving hard to advance," and dispatches from the front said great shrouds of dust and smoke were draped over a broad landscape already baked by a broiling summer sun.

Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, said roaring blasts seared a wide area, and it was reasonable, observers said, to believe that the Russians would destroy the oil installations before the Germans reach them. The Maikop fields produce about seven per cent of Russia's petroleum.

As the battle spread southward dispatches of burning wheat fields too, indicating that in some sectors the Russians had not been able to harvest the grain before the approach of the enemy, as they were able to do farther north.

There was no report here indicating whether the Russians who had been battling along the Black Sea and Sea of Azov coasts had been cut off by the German advance south of Kushchevka. But it was possible most of them were giving battle along the Kuban.

Cossacks Sabde German Alpinists

As fresh German alpinists drove from Armavir, dispatches said sabre-swinging horsemen of the Cossack villages defeated them in the first encounters in the Caucasian foothills.

Ambushes on the roads along which the Germans were pressing were the favorite Cossack trick.

(A Berlin broadcast asserted the Germans were advancing fan-like from Krasnodar toward the Red fleet navy base at Novorossisk on the Black Sea, from Maikop and Nevinnomysskaka toward the upper course of the Kuma River.

(The Kuma River flows eastward into the Caspian. It thus appeared that the Germans, after having penetrated the oil regions north of the Caucasus, were swiftly trying to drive a wedge from the Black Sea to the Captain where they could cut the Allied supply line from the Persian Gulf.)

ELECTRIC STOVE SALES BANNED; PERMIT NEEDED

Freezing Order Will Prevent Hoarding — Second-Hand Stoves Are Not Affected

CONSERVE SUPPLIES

Ottawa, Aug. 10 (CP). — The Department of Munitions and Supply announced that stocks of electric stoves in the hands of retailers, wholesalers and manufacturers were froezn under an order effective at midnight Saturday, and that no further sales may be made except under special permit.

"Rationing regulations now are being formulated by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board and will be announced shortly," Supplies Controller Alan H. Williamson said in a departmental statement.

"In the meantime, the freezing order will prevent hoarding, and will assure delivery of available supplies of stoves to those who really need them."

Munitions and supply officials said the action was taken to preserve metal supplies and assure a fair distribution of available stoves.

The new order, issued by Mr. Williamson, affects stoves sold and not yet delivered, but does not affect second-hand stoves. All new electric stoves and ranges of more than 35 amperes, all new combination coal and electric ranges, and all new electric rangettes come under its terms.

The order provides that, without a permit, no person may manufacture after Aug. 31 any electric cooking stoves or ranges of more than 35 amperers, any combination coal and electric range, any electric rangette or electric cooking plate, grill or heater.

Production of these items until Aug. 31 may continue up to 75 per cent of the monthly average during 1940.

Mr. Williamson said permits may be issued to manufacturers who wish to clear up inventories of parts fabricated before Aug. 31.

N.Y. Press Claims Case for Freedom Immeasurably Harmed

New York, Aug. 10 (CP)—The New York Herald Tribune, commenting editorially upon the arrest of Mohandas Gandhi and other leaders of the Indian Congress Party, said today the British authorities took "the only course which the realities of the situation permitted."

It continued:

"In this complex war, with a world at stake, courage in facing the avowed enemy is not all that is required. Courage is necessary in dealing with political questions; tough-mindedness is needed to get to the heart of a problem that may be, as in the case of India, covered by a haze of good intentions and obscured by high-sounding catchwords. These qualities the British have demonstrated in moving against the Congress Party."

The tabloid Daily Mirror, in an editorial captioned "A Stickup!" said Gandhi has taken the step which may result "eventually in utter slavery for the India he seeks to free." It added:

"Thus he becomes in reality the most potent fifth columnist that Japan —and the Axis have found aligned gratuitously on their side since the outbreak of World War II.

"It is difficult for western minds to understand the motives of the small diapered saint, whose very footprints are kissed by worshipping rabble...

"Gandhi, Nehru, the All-India Congress Party choose this time to strike.

"We cannot help but feel that the case of Indian freedom has been immeasurably harmed: we cannot help but exclaim, in surprise and sorrow:

"This is a stickup!"

A GOOD EFFORT

Brantford, Ont., Aug. 10 —(CP) —When it comes to an all-out effort, it's hard to beat Douglas Hamlin of Brantford, who earned $1.60 delivering groceries and selling baskets. He gave 75 cents to the Red Cross, 25 cents to the Prisoners of War Fund and 60 cents to help crippled children. Total, $1.60.

SIX SABOTEURS DIE IN ELECTRIC CHAIR SATURDAY

Two Escape Death For Their Help in Preparing Case Against Others

PERFECTLY JUSTIFIED

Washington, Aug. 10. (AP)—The United States government was "perfectly justified" in showing leniency to two of the convicted eight German saboteurs by sending them to prison because "they helped considerably" in preparing the case against the six who were electrocuted, Attorney General Francis Biddle said yesterday.

This strategy of sparing the lives of the men who turned tale bearer to disclose activities of their confederates in international conspiracy who came by submarine to launch a two-year sabotage campaign here, was seen as a government bid for aid from any member of other enemy bands.

The BBC broadcast the news of the execution of Heinrich Harm Heinck, Richard Quirin, Edward John Kehling Herbert Hans Haupt, Werner Thiel and Hermann Otto Neubauer to the Nazi-dominated continent in several languages Saturday night.

Those spared by presidential commutation were George John Dasch, sentenced to thirty years, and Ernest Peter Burger, to serve the remainder of his life in prison.

Arrives in Canada With 3-Day-Old Egyptian Newspaper

Ottawa, Aug. 10 (CP). — Wing Cmdr. John McNab, principal Protestant chaplain of the Royal Canadian Air Force, is back in Canada after a visit of several weeks with the Candin irmen serving overseas.

Returning by air, he brought with him as a souvenir of the speed of air travel a copy of a daily newspaper published in Egypt three days before his arrival home. He got the paper when a plane from Cairo landed just before he took off from a British airport.

LEAFLETS, BOMBS DROPPED

London, Aug. 10 (CP).—A German pilot dropped a bundle of leaflets along with a load of high explosives and incendiaries near a southwest town last night.

The leaflets were some which British pilots had dropped previously over Northern France, referring to the treatment by the axis of fighting French prisoners.

STARTS 21ST TERM FOR MISDEEDS

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 10 (AP)—Lee Contz has paid a heavy penalty for hih misdeeds. Coontz has just started his 21st term at the State Penal Farm where he already has spent 10 years. Most of his sentences were for petty thefts involving not more than $15 worth of merchandise.

First Parachute Unit Will Organize And Train at Shilo Camp, Manitoba

Ottawa, Aug. 10 (CP).)—Canada's first parachute battalion will be organized and trained at Shilo Military Camp in Manitoba, Brig. E. G. Weeks, Deputy Chief of the General Staff, announced at a press conference today.

Since only fully trained soldiers are being taken into the parachute formation it is expected the unit should be fully trained and ready for action in five or six months.

Maj. H. D. Proctor, 31, of Ottawa, has been designated commanding officer of the paratroops and will head a group of six officers and twenty non-commissioned officers who will be assmbled in Ottawa and sent to Fort Benning, Ga., for paratroop training with the United States army.

This group will return to Canada in October to act as instructors and officers for the unit which will then be organized.

Another group of officers and non-commissioned officers is being selected from the army overseas and some, if not all, of these will go through a parachute training course with the Royal Air Force in England.

The overseas group will return to Canada, bringing with them experience in overseas service and knowledge of British methods.

Group of Experts.

"So we will have a grouop of experts not only in United States methods but in British methods," said Brig. Weeks. "We propose to pick out the best features of the two methods and adopt them as the Canadian system."

Consideration is being given to a special rate of pay for paratroops. Maj. Proctor has under study the designing of a special badge for the battalion. A study is also being made of the uniforms and other equipment used by both British and American paratroops, with a view to deciding on Canadian equipment embodying the best features of both.

"The Department of National Defence believes that Canadian soldiers in the last war and in this one have shown that they have the guts, the intelligence and the endurance needed for this type of

Attack By Sea, Air And Possibly Land Is In Full Swing

Initiative Remains in Hands of United Nations in Four Days of Fighting

MAJOR ATTACK SEEN

By C. YATES McDANIEL

Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Aug. 10 — (AP) — The United Nations' first powerful offensive of the Pacific War flamed into its fourth day today by sea, air and possibly lang against savagely resisting Japanese in the Solomon Islands with supporting assaults by Allied airmen on enemy positions in New Guinea and the Bismarck Archipelago.

Latest word on the continuing action in the Solomons, while scant, indicated the initiative remained in the hands of the Allied fleet and other Allied forces which joined the battle Friday.

This information was relayed from Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, late Sunday by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, United States Pacific Naval commander. He gave no details as to the scope of the area under attack or the extent of the operations but all signs were that the drive might be developing into a major offensive operation.

Favorable Allied Progress

Admiral Nimitz said the attack, on the Tulagi area in the southeast part of the Solomons, 600 miles off Northeastern Australia, was being pressed by sea and air against Japanese land-based planes and garrisons and that "The operations are profressing favorably" despite enemy opposition.

A brief communique issued in Washington late yesterday said "considerable enemy resistance has been encountered and it is still too early to announce results or to estimate either our own or enemy losses."

The Japanese — without confirmation from any Allied source — broadcast claims from Tokyo that they had sunk 22 Allied warships and transports and damaged more than six others. These enemy claims were considered fantastic in the light of their fanciful reports on results of the Midway and Coral Sea battles — both stunning Japanese defeats.

3 WHEELS AND SPARE TAKEN AS OWNER SLEEPS IN CAR

Cleveland, Aug. 10 (AP)—While Richard J. Pearse, 26, slept in his car the other night, thieves removed three wheels and the spare wheel, filched his wrist watch from his arm, lifted a wallet from his inside coat pocket, and extracted a second wallet from his hip pocket.

Allied Bombers Raid Bengasi Make Direct Hit

Cairo, Aug. 10 (AP)—Allied heavy bombers made a sharp attack yesterday on the Axis supply port of Bengasi, scoring a direct hit on one ship and registering near misses on others, British headquarters reported today.

British light bombers simultaneously attacked enemy shipping off the North Africa coast and bombarded grounded Axis warplanes at airdromes in the El Daba area west of El Alamein.

A slight increase in enemy fighter plane activity was noted.

There were no developments on the land front yesterday, British headquarters said, though patrols were active during the preceding night.

Two German fighter planes were reported shot down yesterday during minor activity over Malta.

Russians Stand All Thrusts In Stalingrad Area

London, Aug. 10 (CP).)—The Russians are holding all thrusts at Stalingrad and have taken the offensive at Rzhev and Voronezh, but the scale of their counter-attacks is not yet known here, British military sources said today.

The surprise German drive at Stalingrad through Kotelnikovski a few days ago has been slowed, these quarters said, and the enemy has been checked "throughout the Don bend in bitter fighting".

In the extreme south, it was said, the Russian position "has still further deteriorated".

Extensive Damage Done at Haiphong By U.S. Bombers

Chungking, Aug. 10 (AP)—United States planes delivered a concentrated bombing of the waterfront at Haiphong, French Indo-China, yesterday without loss to themselves, the Chinese reported today.

There was extensive damage, it was said, and steamships in port were hit. It was the first raid on Haiphong by aircraft bases in China.

Haiphong has been used by the Japanese as a port of entry into the French colony since September, 1940, when Vichy made its first accord with Tokyo. It is located in the north, on the Gulf of Tonking.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

WEEEKEND RAINS DELAY STOOK THRESHING

Stook threshing will be held up for a day or so as the result of the rainfall over the weekend which at various times saw approximately three-quarters of an inch of rain. On Saturday afternoon 0.11 inches of rain fell to put a stop to threshing—operations for the balance of the day, while early Sunday morning 0.49 inches fell and early Monday morning during the sharp electric storm which visited the district, 0.13 inches of water fell.

Thunder and lightning in the Belleville district was exceptionally sharp for a short period around two o'clock this morning but no reports of any damage had been heard up to noon today.

Threshing of wheat and oats was under full swing in the district prior to Saturday afternoon's shower which put an abrupt halt to operations. Wheat threshing is now well-advanced with reports of an average crop being received, olthough less than average according to the amount of straw. Oats thus far threshed have turned out at approximately 40 bushels to the acre, with some fields falling to reach this return and others considerably exceeding the 40 bushel yield. Oat straw is also particularly heavy with farmers reporting tying up record amounts of twine.

Impressive Service Held by Veterans At St. James' Cemetery

War veterans of the city and district paid tribute to fallen comrades in an impressive parade and service yesterday when they observed with fitting ceremony their annual Decoration Day.

Led by the pipe band of the Argyll Light Infantry Regiment (Tank) and the Salvation Army band of the Belleville citadel, the parade moved off from the armouries shortly after two p.m.

The colored berets of Canada's fighting divisions of the last war swung behind the bandsmen followed by a aetachment of the Canadian National Railway veterans, and members of the Canadian Legion Auxiliary in their blue and white uniforms.

The parade marched to Highland Avenue where waiting buses conveyed the marching vets to the Belleville cemetery. Here an impressive but brief service was conducted by Adjutant Smith of the Salvation Army with the musical part supplied by the band.

Following the service, the veterans placed wreaths of remembrance and Union Jacks upon the graves of their departed comrades. C.N.R. veterans paid similar tribute to veterans lying in St. James' cemetery.

16th Annual Reunion Of Grills Family

The sixteenth Grills Family Reunion was held on Thursday, Aug. 6th., at Sarles Beach, Oak Lake. The weather was fine for the event and about eighty were present for dinner with a number coming later. After dinner the president, Douglas Rutherford, addressed the gathering and a short period of business followed. Officers for 1943 were elected as follows:

President — Mr. Harry Grills, Thurlow.

Vice President—Mr. Cliff Anderson.

Secretary Treasurer—Mrs. Walker Grills.

Sports Committee — Mr. Harry Townsend, Mrs. Stanley Grills, Mrs. Murney Jeffrey.

The prizes for the oldest member present went to Mr. Will Grills, Belleville; the youngest member present, Diane Hooper; for the one who came the farthest that day, Cliff Anderson.

After the business was finished the sports committee conducted a fine program, also peanuts and candy scramble. The picnic for 1943 is to be held on the first Thursday in August at Searles Beach.

Obituary

MRS. MARTHA FARLEY

In failing health for some time, Mrs. Martha Farley passed away late on Sunday evening, August 9th, at her residence, 50 Everett Street. A resident of this city for the past forty years, Mrs. Farley's death will be sincerely regretted by her many friends.

A daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Farnham, Mrs. Farley was in her eighty-second year. Before coming to Belleville she resided for many years at Cannifton. She was a member of the teaching profession and taught at Plainfield and in Thurlow Township. In Belleville she was a member of Tabernacle United Church and was an ardent church worker, taking an active and devoted interest in all phases of church activities. She was a life member of the Woman's Missionary Society, of which she was secretary for fifteen years. For many years Mrs. Farley was a successful Sunday School teacher.

She is survived by one son, Jack Farley, who resided with his mother, and one brother, Henry Farnham of Cannifton.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home. (Funeral notice appears elsewhere in this edition.)

DAVID MANLEY BELNAP (Rossmore)

David Manley Belnap, residence, Rossmore, Prince Edward County, was seized with a heart attack at the Stephens-Adamson plant in this city on Sunday, August 9th., and died shortly after being admitted to the Belleville General Hospital. When he left home in the morning he was apparently in good health.

Being in his 53rd year, Mr. Belnap was born at Rossmore and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. David Belnap. All his life was passed in the district and he was well esteemed. To many friends his sudden death has brought much regret. For some time Mr. Belnap was employed as a machinist with the Stephens-Adamson Company. In religion he was a member of the Rossmore United Church. Surviving him are his wife, who prior to her marriage was Miss May Alyea; four daughters, Miss Verna Belnap, Miss Laura Belnap, Miss Ferne Belnap and Miss Joan Belnap, all at home; one son, Mr. William Belnap, Northport; one sister, Mrs. J. L. Simmons, Thorold, Ontario, and one brother, Mr. William Belnap, Rossmore.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street; the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

JOHN JOSEPH DONOVAN (Thurlow Township)

John Joseph Donovan died Saturday evening, August 8th., at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Elmer Kingsbury, Second Concession of Thurlow Township, after an illness of one year's duration.

The late Mr. Donovan, who was in his 82nd year, was born in the Second Concession of Thurlow Township, and he was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Donovan. All his life was passed in the Belleville district and during his active years he was a well known contractor and builder. In religion he was a member of St. Michael's Church and was highly esteemed. Fraternally he was an honor member of the Knights of Columbus.

His wife, who was Annie Craig, died some years ago. Surviving him are two daughters, Mrs. Elmer Kingsbury, Thurlow Township, and Mrs. Archie Ward, Belleville; three sons, Mr. John Harold Donovan, Mr. Dennis Donovan and Mr. Hugh Donovan, all of Belleville; one brother, Mr. James Cornelius Donovan, Prescott, Ontario.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street; the funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this paper.

LATE HIRAM VANCE

The funeral of Hiram Vance took place Saturday afternoon, August 8th., from the residence of his son, Mr. Gerald Vance, 42 Murney Street. The service in the home and at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. J. D. P. Knox.

The bearers were Messrs. Nelson Dafnard, Ernest Bunnett, William Reid, Miller Armstrong, Jacob Mattis and Edmond Fitchett.

There was a large attendance of friends and the floral tributes were beautiful and many in number. Fire Chief William Lynch and members of the Belleville Fire Department of which Mr. Gerald Vance is assistant chief, attended as a token of respect to the deceased.

LATE MRS. WILLIAM T. WANNAMAKER

Sunday afternoon, August 9th, the funeral of Mrs. William Thomas Wannamaker, late residence, Stirling, took place from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Alfred Roper, 33 Howard Street, Belleville. After a brief service in the home which was conducted by Mr. Richard Irving of Hamilton, the funeral cortege proceeded to Grace Chapel in Stirling where service was conducted by Mr. R. Irving and Mr. W. E. Belch, who also conducted the service at the graveside in Stirling Cemetery.

There was a large attendance of friends, the chapel being filled to capacity.

The bearers were all grandsons of the deceased and were as follows: Messrs. Clifford Wannamaker, Ross Wannamaker, Earl Wannamaker, Milton Wannamaker, Elvin Wannamaker and Claude Roper.

LATE WILFRED HEBERT

The funeral of Wilfred Hebert, who died at Dauphin, Manitoba, on Monday, August 3rd., took place this Monday morning from the home of his mother, Mrs. J. Hebert, 57 Church Street, to St. Michael's Church where Requiem Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father C. E. Baker, who said also the committal prayers at the graveside in St. James' cemetery.

The bearers were Messrs. Maurice Callaghan, Michael Connell, Frank Weir, William Whalen, Ernest Bunnett and William Nicholson.

ROBERT Y. WEMYSS (Trenton)

Trenton, August 10 (Special)—On Sunday afternoon, August 9th., Robert Y. Wemyss, prominent business man of Trenton, died suddenly of a heart attack at Bigwin Inn, Muskoka, where he was spending a short vacation in company with Dr. J. E. Renton of Trenton and Col. F. L. Reid of Kingston. The announcement of his sudden death has brought deep feelings of regret to a host of friends here and in the district, and much sympathy is entertained for the family in their bereavement.

The late Mr. Wemyss was born in England and on coming to Canada he resided in Western Ontario for a time, before coming to Trenton about twenty years ago. He established the Selrite department and novelty store here which he successfully conducted for a considerable time. In religion he was a member of the Presbyterian Church and was held in high esteem.

Surviving him are his wife; two sons, Mr. Angus Wemyss, Mr. Victor Wemyss, and a sister, Miss Minnie Wemyss, all of Trenton. A number of relatives in the Old Country also survive him.

The funeral announcement will be made later.

MRS. MARY MOON (Madoc)

Madoc — (Special) — The funeral of the late Mrs. Mary Moon took place on Friday afternoon at the residence of her son Mr. C. Moon. Her pastor Rev. A. Poulter conducted the service. During the service Mr. C. I. Ross and Mrs. Hulin sang a duet "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere". Many friends and neighbors attended to pay their respect to a kind friend. Interment took place in Lakeview Cemetery. The pall bearers were: Messrs. F. Dafoe, S. S. Ashley, Robt. Bristol, Geo. West, C. I. Ross and L. Ashley.

CAN BUY NO SNACKS

London, Aug. 8 (CP) — British soldiers will have to endure those long route marches without a snack here and there along the way. The War Office has forbidden them to buy food from local shops when they fall out for a rest because of complaints they had caused an acute shortage in some areas of bread, cakes, tobacco and other unrationed foods.

FIRST PARACHUTE

work," said Brig. Weeks.

"The department is not going to leave any stone unturned to see that our paratroops get the best possible training and equipment. And we are satisfied the Canadian parachute troops will be second to none."

While the first group is getting training at Fort Benning the Department will proceed with erection of a jumping tower and installation of other training equipment at Shilo. It is hoped everything will be ready when the group returns from Georgia in October, but should any delay occur the United States army has agreed to train another group.

Men Alert, Aggressive, Supple

"The men must be alert, aggressive, supple and hard of muscle," said Brig. Weeks. "They must be capable of development into individual fighters of great endurance."

They must not weigh more than 185 pounds, must have no recent bone fractures, must have almost perfect eyesight, and good strong feet and ankles.

A parachute battalion is not a large force, said Brig. Weeks, and the taking of the small number of men required is not expected to disturb any army unit. The battalion will be representative of all Canada and selections will be made from men whose homes are in all provinces.

French-speaking Canadians will comprise 30 per cent of the battalion and their presence may be an advantage should the battalion land in France.

"French and English-speaking soldiers get along very well when they are in the same unit — a lot better than the general public seems to think," he said.

While no special attempt will be made to get men who speak other languages into the battalion, other things being equal the man who can speak one or more foreign languages would get the call over one who speaks only english or French or both.

Weekly Allotment of Mn.

A weekly allotment of men will be fed into the school at Shilo after it opens and the battalion will be organized soon after.

"We have a complete understanding with the Royal Canadian Air Force and thy will have their side of the show ready as soon as we have ours," said the brigadier.

He said the air force has to carry the paratroops and so must be in complete control while the troops are in the air. One of the advantages of the Shilo Camp is that there are two airdromes nearby.

"Although foreign armies have been using paratroops for some time," he said, "there is still much to be learned about their use.

"We propose to experiment because we believe Canadians may be able to improve on the experience and developments of others."

Progressive Training.

Training of paratroops is progressive. The men first go through a hardening course. Then they learn to jump, land and tumble from walls. Next comes jumping from the tower which is 250 feet high. The first tower jumps are "controlled"—that is, the parachute is guided by guy wires. Then come free jumps, then individual jumps from aircraft, and finally unit-training or mass-jumping from aircraft.

Paratroops' work is strictly coluntary. Not only are the men volunteers when they join the force but if, after getting in a "man even suggests he does not like jumping, he is immediately removed, segregated and sent back to his former unit," said Brig. Weeks.

The top age limit for majors and officers of higher rank is 35 and captains and lieutenants must not be older than 32. Other ranks may be between 18 and 32.

Report at Red Cross Meeting Indicates Active Month's Program

The regular monthly meeting of the executive of the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society was held on Friday, August 7, with Mrs. Lazier, vice-president in the chair.

Upon request from headquarters a local officer was appointed to deal with any matter concerning the next-of-kin in enemy countries. Miss Lynch was named Investigating Officers for this branch.

The Acting Treasurer Mr. Zeran of the Royal Bank, reported for July:

Donations	$201.45
Blanket Fund	11.36
Refund for Uniforms	5.34
Refund for Sales' Tax.. ..	83.94
Total Receipts..	$302.09
Accounts to be paid..	$142.22

Two cases of honey have been sent to headquarters thus far.

The purchase of a used electric sewing machine at $50 for use in the Red Cross Rooms was authorised.

The report of the Women's War Work Committee was presented by Mrs. Lazier, as follows:

Report—Women's War Work Committee—July 1, 1942.

Mr. President, Members of the Executive, Belleville Branch:

During the month of July the Red Cross building has been in use almost morning, night and noon, in the effort to do the hospital supplies requested by the Russian Red Cross. In addition various auxiliaries in the city and country have added their share to our work. The result of this has been the shipping of 29 cartons of supplies to headquarters. These contained 486 articles, knitted comforts for army, navy and British bombed victims, 629 articles for hospital use and 193 garments including quilts and afghans for British bombed victims, in all, 1308 articles.

This committee is very grateful to The Ontario Intelligencer for their assistance in asking for workers. A large number have reported most readily to the call for help. Expert knitters are still required for the many comforts our services will need next fall.

Respectfully submitted,
Florence M. Lazier,
Chairman W.W.W.C.

Annual Rotary Carnival Week In Aid of Crippled Children Starts Aug. 17 at Victoria Park

Since the inception of the club 22 years ago, the treatment and care of crippled children of the city and district has been one of the main service projects of the Belleville Rotary Club.

During that time over 650 children have received the benefits of much-needed treatment with some reported as 100 per cent cures, through the medium of the Crippled Children's Committee of the club.

This humanitarian work, naturally has entailed much effort and finances on the part of the club and its members. With the increasing number of children needing treatment the drain on the club exchequer is also reaching greater proportions.

To obtain these much-needed funds the Rotary Club is again sponsoring its popular week-length Carnival which has met with the approval of the city and district public for the past two years. This year the dates have been set from August 17th to 22nd inclusive and committee officials state that the carnival will be bigger and better than ever before.

In these days of war tension, a few minutes relaxation is of inestimable value to people engaged in all phases of industry and business. The Rotary Club is providing this, as well as the opportunity to assist a worthy cause

The Carnival will be held in Victoria Park, a few minutes' walk from the city's main thoroughfare, and some outstanding attractions have been engaged for the event. Featuring the Carnival will be Charlie Symons' well known Dollar Doll, an enchanting young miss gaily garbed in one-dollar bills. Tickets are being sold and the proud owner will not only receive the handsome doll but a lucrative addition in her garb of currency.

Rotarians feel sure that the general public will once again support their annual project, and assist in contributing funds that will bring life-long happiness to many children and parents of the city and district.

U.S. Preparing the Way For Possible Rationing

Washington, Aug. 10—(AP)—The United States was paving the way today for possible inauguration of a universal rationing system under which the government could determine the war-time allotments of all citizens for scarce commodities and articles.

The Office of Price Administration disclosed it is preparing a general ration book, applicable to any article, which would enable the start of rationing "almost overnight."

Paul M. O'Leary, Deputy O.P.A. Administrator in charge of rationing, explained the plan was designed to put rationing into operation immediately after the need arose.

Defence Mimister Ralston's Mother Dies at Age of 84

Amherst, N.S., Aug. 10 (CP)—Mrs. B. W. Ralston, 84-year-old mother of the Defence Minister, Hon. J. L. Ralston, died Sunday after suffering a stroke.

She had been in failing health for some time, though her condition did not grow critical until recent weeks. Col. Ralston and two other sons were with her when she died.

Mrs. Ralston was the wife of a former Mayor of Amherst. She was a daughter of the late James M. Layton of Amherst.

Surviving sons, besides the Defence Minister, are Norman of Saint John, N.B., and Mac, of New York.

Alcohol Stove Explodes in Boat 3 Badly Burned

Windsor, OnOt., Aug. 10 (CP).—When an alcohol stove aboard their small boat exploded several miles off shore in Lake Erie Sunday afternoon, three Detroit men were badly burned, one of them critically. They are Seymour Saunders, Paul G. Jones, both Chrysler officials, and Bruce Tappan, Detroit, president of the Detroit Boat Club.

Dr. E. D. Hutchinson of Amherstburg said that Saunders' burns are considered "extremely critical" and are cause for "grave concern". The three are in Grace Hospital.

STEP FOLLOWS

An announcement last night said casualties in Bombay included two rioters killed and 19 injured, one police officer killed and 46 policemen injured.

Unofficial reports put the number of dead in Bombay at five and said 20 had suffered bullet wounds.

Say Work in Some Mills Reported

(Reuters reported in a Bombay dispatch that 10 persons died from bullet wounds received in yesterday's rioting. Work in some mills was interrupted today, it was said, and students walked out of several colleges. Street railway service was reported suspended on many routes after cars were held up and stoned by crowds.

One rioter was reported killed and another wounded in an Ahmedabad cotton mill.

The most serious disorder in Bombay occurred last night when police broke up a mass meeting of some 30,000 persons in Shiva-Ji Park. Tear gas, employed for the sixth time since dawn in this city, finally dispersed the gathering, but not before speakers had read and distributed to the crowd this message from Gandhi: "Every man is free to go to the fullest length under Ahimsa (non-violence) for complete deadlock by strikes and all other possible means. Karenge Ya Harenge (do or die)!".

Gandhi — who originally had planned to address the meeting — was said to have scrawled the message just before he was arrested at his home at 5 o'clock yesterday morning and hustled off to Poona, 65 miles away, for internment.

Gandhi's Wife Arrested

Gandhi's wife was arrested last night when she insisted on addressing the Shiva-Ji Park meeting and was taken to Poona to join him.

Other leaders arrested included Maulana Abdul Kalan Azad, president of the party; Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru; and a faithful disciple, Madeline Slade, the daughter of a British admiral.

Azad, Nehru and many of their followers were held in Yeravda jail, six miles from Poona.

Moslems Aloof from Campaign

The Moslem minority, representing 80,000,000 of India's nearly 400,000,000 population, remained generally aloof from the disobedience campaign.

Mohammed Ali Jinnah, leader of the Moslem League, which is to meet Aug. 16 to discuss its policy, expressed his regret at the "dangerous mass movement" launched by the Congress party, and clamped down a strict curfew on troubled areas.

Unlawful Organizations

The All-India Congress and its Provincial Committees were officially designated as unlawful organizations dangerous to the public peace and police seized party headquarters in Bombay, New Delhi and elsewhere.

At least 149 persons were arrested yesterday in Bombay, where police resorted to tear gas and revolvers to quell disorders after they had failed to disperse rioters with bamboo staves. More than 30 were arrested in New Delhi and numerous arrests were made in other cities.

SIX SABOTEURS

Snug in iron-barred safety, George John Dasch and Ernest Peter Burger continued to live today. The help they gave the Government in sealing the fate of the other six brought commutation of their death sentences—Dasch's to thirty years and Burger's to life, both at hard labor.

Attorney-General Francis Biddle, chief prosecutor, said the leniency shown the two was "perfectly justified" because "they helped considerably" in preparing the case against the other six. It also was evident that the mercy granted the two would be of value in sowing seeds of distrust in any espionage, sabotage or fifth-column group that still might be in existence. The publicity given the Dasch-Burger commutations was a bid for any member of enemy bands who might choose to turn tale-bearer.

Ten Held as Accomplices

With ten persons jailed in Chicago and New York, charged with being the saboteurs' American accomplices, this point took on a new import.

The first of the saboteurs to pay with his life was led from a cell at the District of Columbia Jail to its execution chamber at noon Saturday. In grim succession, the five others followed.

Just before 1:30 the White House, several miles away, announced that President Roosevelt had approved the findings and recommendations of the military commission, and that the six had been executed. The record of the case, containing much information of an important military nature, it was said, would be sealed until after the war.

So, nearly two months after the arrival of the eight men on American shores, their cases were ended. They were closed, however, only after exhaustive legal proceedings, undreamed of in the dictator-ridden land from which they came. At one point an appeal for writ of habeas corpus was taken to the civil courts, and the Supreme Court, meeting in special session, upheld the legality and constitutionality of the method of trial which President Roosevelt had established.

The military commission finished its work last Sunday. On Monday the record of the case, the sentences imposed and the recommendations for leniency to Burger and Dasch were placed in the President's hands for review.

Activity at Jail.

It became apparent early Saturday that he had affirmed the commission's verdict and sentences, and that at the jail preparations were in progress for the executions. Reporters waiting outside the soldier-guarded building saw army chaplains and the District of Columbia coroner enter. After 11 o'clock all possible lights in the jail were kept extinguished.

Outside the jail a small crowd saw army ambulances enter the jail yard, presumably to remove the bodies. A group of young women huddled under umbrellas on a nearby roof, could see over the wall.

On the sidewalk an elderly grey-haired woman waited for four hours. She told reporters she had one son in the army and one in the navy. When she learned that the men had been executed, she said:

"I'm glad. I don't see why they waited, though. Of course this is the United States, but they would not have waited all that time over there."

Later the coroner, Dr. A. Magruder MacDanald, left the jail with a military escort refusing to say what disposition would be made of the bodies. Brigadier - General Robert L. Cox, Provost Marshal for the District of Columbia left soon afterward. Reporters attempted to question him, but he placed a finger on his lips and would say only:

"All mum."

The ambulances bearing the bodies left the jail at midafternoon bound apparently for a morgue and burial preparations. A score of soldiers, armed with sub-machine guns, guarded the prison entrance holding back a lingering crowd of 100 or more. Inside the walled yard the bodies had been carried to the ambulances on stretchers borne by soldiers.

Meanwhile, Stephen Early, the President's secretary, called White House reporters to his office and gave them copies of the announcement.

Text of Announcement.

"The President completed his review of the findings and sentences of the military commission appointed by him on July 2, 1942, which tried the eight Nazi saboteurs," it said.

"The President approved the judgment of the military commission that all of the prisoners were guilty, and that they be given the death sentence by electrocution.

"However, there was a unanimous recommendation by the commission, concurred in by the Attorney-General and the judge advocate-general of the army, that the sentence of two of the prisoners be commuted to life imprisonment because of their assistance to the Government of the United States in the apprehension and conviction of the others.

"The commutation directed by the President in the case of Burger was a confinement at hard labor for life. In the case of Dasch the sentence was commuted by the President to confinement at hard labor for thirty years.

"The electrocutions began at noon Saturday.

"Six of the prisoners were electrocuted. The other two were confined to prison.

"The record in all eight cases will be sealed until the end of the war."

The electric chair is located in a chamber on the top floor of the jail. The chair itself, newly cleaned, stood in the middle of the room. Two dozen shiny aluminum chairs had been placed in the adjoining witness room, separated from the death chamber itself by a partition of glass and screening.

In advance it was said that a crew of four from the regular staff of the jail would manage the executions.

The four, their names not announced, were an executioner and an assistant executioner, who receive $50 for each person put to death, and two assistants, each getting $25.

All eight of the would-be saboteurs, although German-born, had spent considerable periods in this country, and one Haupt, was a naturalized American citizen.

Four of them, Dasch, Burger, Heinck and Quirin, came ashore on June 13 at Amagansett Beach, Long Island. They wore, it was revealed later, uniforms of the German Marine Infantry, donned, the government contended, so that if captured as they landed, they could claim the rights of military prisoners. They quickly changed to civilian garb.

Guardsman's Tip-Off.

In landing they encountered an unarmed coast guardsman, John C. Cullen, on beach patrol. They attempted to buy his silence with a bribe of $300, for his death or disappearance would have unleashed a determined hunt. Taking the money, he went to his station and reported the event. Then he discovered that he had been short-changed by $40.

The four others landed three days later on a beach near Jacksonville, Fla. By what method they were apprehended has never been revealed, but in June 27, a week to ten days later, Federal Bureau of Investigation agents had arrested all eight in New York and Chicago.

Announcing their seizure, the F.B.I. said the men brought with them enough explosives for a two-year campaign of destruction. These they had buried on the beach. The caches included quantities of T.N.T., incendiaries, time fuses, acids, and bombs disguised as lumps of coal.

They had a list, too, of the plants, railroads, waterways and bridges which they had been instructed to destroy.

ATTACK BY SEA, AIR

Operation Likely Amphibious

Allied sources failed to mention the presence of any transports in the attacking fleet but Admiral Nimitz' reference to enemy land garrisons was interpreted as intimating that the operation was amphibious. This suggested the possibility that land fighting might be in progress on the Solomons.

Or the Allies might have beat the enemy to the draw to thwart another invasion attempt aimed at Australia. It was at Tulagi, on the fringe of the Coral sea, that the Japanese assembled the invasion armada subsequently smashed in those waters.

Today's communique from Allied headquarters, without mentioning the Solomon Islands battle itself, reported Sunday attacks by Allied planes on three enemy bases in New Guinea and New Britain.

A spokesman said these raids, which were heavy in the last 24 hours, were aimed at tying up Japanese aircraft and preventing them from engaging in the action in the Solomons.

Allied Airmen Strike by Night and Day

The Allied bombers struck both by day and night at the key Japanese base Rabual, in New Britain, shooting down five enemy Zero fighters with the loss of one Allied bomber; raided Gasmata, also in New Britain; and inflicted new and heavy destruction at Salamaua, New Guinea.

At Salamaua, Allied medium bombers set a supply ship aflame with two direct bomb hits, blew up several buildings, hit haror installations and silenced anti-aircraft positions, it was announced.

Salamaua is the enemy's most important base in New Guinea while Rabual is the chief Japanese base in New Britain, a part of the Bismarck Archipelago.

The absence of Japanese bombing activity in the northwestern sector and the limiting of activity in the northeast to defensive aerial fighting emphasized the effectiveness of the Allied attacks in support of the Solomon Islands battle.

Casualties Inflicted on Japs in Kokoda

The communique said Allied patrols inflicted casualties upon the Japanese in the Kokoda area, on the Papuan Peninsula, but this action was believed here to have been light.

Coinciding with the attack of the Solomons, a task force of the United States Pacific fleet went into action thousands of miles to the north, bombarding Japanese ships and shore bases at Kiska, one of three enemy-occupied Aleutian Islands stretching southwest of Alaska.

A Washington communique indicated this attack was over but results probably will not be known until the attacking force returns to its base, possibly two weeks.

(Japanese headquarters claimed today that Japanese naval units "beat off a strong enemy naval force which appeared Aug. 8 in Aleutian waters," a claim that was without any confirmation.)

REDS ANNOUNCE

The Russians, in their midnight communique, said they were fighting heavy engagements in the region of Armavir, 60 miles northeast of Maikop, but admitted being forced back at Kropotkin, still farther north. There was no mention of fighting at Krasnodar, a vital rail junction.

(The Germans claimed last week they had captured Kropotkin and Armavir.)

The newspaper Pravda reported that Kuban Cossacks were in action in the Armavir area and said that "in a series of vigorous cavalry attacks in co-operation with attack planes they cut up over 1,000 Rumanian cavalrymen and put others to flight."

As the Germans forced back the Russians toward the Caucasus mountains and the Black Sea coast the defenders of the important Volga industrial city of Sta-invader in fierce engagements lingrad were reported holding the northeast of Kotelnikovski and in the area of Kletskaya.

German tanks and automatic riflemen were reported to have driven a wedge into the Russian defences northeast of Kotelnikovski, but the Red army was delivering counterblows and defending every foot of soil. Progress has been much slower for the Germans in the two-pronged drive on Stalingrad than in the bitter battles to the southwest.

Russian Aggressive in Voronezh

While the position of the Red army grew more critical hourly, the Soviet radi, told of aggressive moves in the Voronezh region of the Upper Don and said a new crossing of the Don had been forced in which the Germans had been driven back and two populated places retaken. This report said the Russians were "forcing their way forward."

In addition to Novorossisk, the Russians have a secondary Black Sea naval base at Tuapse, about 75 miles to the south. Both have protection against attack from the land side in the form of the Caucasus foothills. Should both be threatened, any units of the fleet based in the port could be moved to Batum, near the Turkish border.

The Russians reported that during the week ended Aug. 8, the Germans lost "about 400" aircraft in air fights and on the ground while Russian losses were 205 planes.

The mid-day communique reported that a number of populated places were retaken by Russian troops in the Voronezh sector and said more than 1,000 Germans were killed in the engagements. Russian troops fighting on the west bank of the Don at Voronezh were reported to have repulsed several enemy attacks, destroying 12 tanks.

Say Nazis Use Reserves

Pravda reported, however, that the Germans had brought up many reserves south of Voronezh and had recaptured the western approaches to a place taken by the Russians two days ago. The Red army was fighting for every house and every street in that unidentified town itself, the newspaper said.

Soviet bombers rained bombs on the massing German forces by night and during the day a ground attack by the Russians resulted in the killing of 200 Hungarians, it was said.

The Germans were reported using Alpine units in the fighting near the Caucasian foothills as they used them earlier in fighting around the heights of Sevastopol.

As the Cossacks withdrew southward before the German mechanized units, they were executing many anti-tank ambushes and littering the wheatfields of the steppes with wrecked German tanks, Pravda said.

The Red army was also taking a heavy toll of German mechanized equipment in the defence of Stalingrad. South of Kletskaya, the mid-day communique said, 15 German tanks were destroyed in the past 24 hours and more than 400 Germans killed.

HEARS GEN. GOTT KILLED IN LIBYA

Lt.-Gen. W. H. E. Gott was One of Britain's Ablest Desert Soldiers

London, Aug. 10 —(CP Cable)— The Daily Telegraph said today it has learned that Lt.-Gen. William Henry Ewartt Gott, one of Britain's most outstanding desert soldiers, was killed in action in the recent Libyan fighting.

Known affectionately to his troops as "Strafer," Gen. Gott was praised in the House of Commons by Prime Minister Churchill last June in recognition of his valor in combatting Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's advance.

The War Office once said of him:—

"He probably knows more about the desert than any other senior British officer."

And of desert fighting, he once remarked:—

"To him who knows it the desert can be a fortress; to him who does not it can be a death trap."

He won a companionate in the Order of the British Empire, the Distinguished Service Order and a bar to it by his Libyan exploits over the last few years.

Gen. Gott received his first commission in the 60th Rifles in February, 1915. In 1938 he was a major in the King's Rifle Corps. Less than a year ago he commanded a support group of the 7th Armored Division in the Middle East, then was given command of the division and was an acting major general until last Jan. 2, when he was gazetted a lieutenant general.

Hockey Executive Dies After Illness

Portage La Prairie, Man., Aug. 10 —(CP)—Hockey lost one of its staunchest supporters when Edward A. Gilroy, 61, Past President of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, died at his summer home at Delta Meach, Man., Saturday night after a lengthy illness.

Born at Carleton Place, Ont., Mr. Gilroy played hockey for home at Delta Beach, Man.; Sat-Ottawa before coming to Portage La Prairie in 1906 to coach the city's professional sextet Coaching in the old Western Canada professional circuit, which included teams from Winnipeg and Brandon, was no easy chore but oldtimers say he served faithfully until the team disbanded in 1909.

Players on the Portage La Prairie roster included "Newsy" LaLonde, "Cyclone" Taylor, Donald Smith, Art Sevriss and Hughie Ross, but the most famous of these was Taylor whose speed and wizardy still lives when followers of the game 40-odd years ago get together.

Mr. Gilroy took an active part in the formation of the Manitoba Amateur Hockey Association in 1914, held various executive positions, and was president for seven years. He retired as head of the M.A.H.A. to head the C.A.H.A. in 1934.

The following year he was re-elected and in 1936 he retired.

"Mahamatics"

Mr. Mohandas K. Gandhi is the world's prize obscurantist. When he says a thing nobody quite knows what he means. He does not intend they should. His purpose is to baffle his opponents and conceal from the public his real purposes. That he rarely succees in achieving the aims he tries to hide does not deter him. He returns with a new statement, a new formula, equally obscure. They have a word for these cryptic formulae all over India, Mr. John Gunther tells us. They call them "mahamatics."

In recent weeks we have observed a dangerous example of Mr. Gandhi's politics. It is worth while noting his statements against the recent admissions of the All-India Congress Party.

On June 29 the so-called mahatma said: "I could not be guilty of asking the Allies to take a step which would involve certain defeat. The abrupt withdrawal of Allied troops from India might result in Japan's occupation of the country, and China's certain fall."

On July 27 he tells the Japanese in an open letter that if they attempt to invade India "we won't fail to resist you with our might."

Less than a week later, on Aug. 2, he warned that unless India were given complete independence now, her "hidden discontent may burst forth into welcome for the Japanese should the latter land in India."

These statements, to people who hoped for the best, seemed to make sense. Gandhi disliked Britain, true, but he feared Japan more! But what are the facts, now revealed? While he was supposedly telling Britain, he wanted her armies to remain in India, while he was telling the Japanese he would resist invasion, there was lying in the archives of the All-India Congress a resolution which he had proposed as far back as April 27.

The resolution ran as follows: "Japan's quarrel is not with India. She is warring against the British Empire. India's participation in the war has not been with the consent of representatives of the Indian people. It was a purely British act. If India were freed, her first step would probably be to negotiate with Japan."

The All-India Congress rejected this resolution, but adopted a modification of it, but this substitute, according to the Government of India, is practically the same as the one submitted by Mr. Gandhi.

Ever since Pearl Harbor Japan has been trying through radio propaganda to weaken India's ties with the Empire. The Japanese propagandists have been telling the people of India what Mr. Gandhi has declared, secretly, in his resolution to the All-India Congress.

To excuse himself, Mr. Gandhi now says this resolution was adopted as a "bargaining item." If this is true, then to the tactics of the Congress there can be applied another word, more universally used than "mahamatics." It is the word already applied to the Congress by Sir Firoz Khan Noon, defence minister in the cabinet of the Viceroy of India, in relation to the civil disobedience movement: That word is "blackmail."

It is time that the people of the West began to see through the galmour of Mr. Gandhi, as many of his colleagues in India have already done. Although he wields power over millions of his superstitious countrymen, he is little more than a grandstand playing politician, of supple mind but limited vision, who, in the greatest crisis in the world's history, exposes his country to subjection by a tryannical foe, and who is already, in his greed in India which may reduce her people to misery comparable to what they suffered before the days of British rule—Hamilton Spectator.

HEAVIEST R. R. TRAFFIC IN HISTORY

Halifax, Aug. 10 — (CP) — Canadian rail traffic has increased by about 30 per cent over last year and Canadian National Railways are carrying the heaviest traffic in history, C.N.R. CROWLAND'S CHIEF OF POLICE FOUND DEAD IN BED

Welland, Ont., Aug. 10 —(CP)— Chief of Police Earl Stauth, Crowland, was found dead in bed this morning. His death was attributed to a heart attack. The chief, who was in his 30's, had been head of the Crowland department since 1935. His widow and son survive.

CURFEW ADVOCATED IN MONTREAL

Montreal, Aug. 10 (CP)—Judge J. G. Nicholson of the Montreal Delinquents' Court, in a radio address, urged that the City of Montreal inaugurate a curfew law. The Judge suggested that children under 14 years should not frequent streets and public places after nine o'clock in the evening.

OLD CANNON PUT TO USE

Pictou, N.S., Aug. 10—(CP)—The old cannon which once pointed their muzzles over Pictou harbor from Battery Hill are to return to Pictou on war service. Turned in as salvage a few months ago, the old guns are being made into 50 bending slubs at New Glasgow. The bending slubs will be used at the Pictou shipyard, which is building 4,700 merchant ships.

Scrap Copper

A call for scrap copper has been issued from Ottawa to meet the shortage in this metal. As Metals Controller Bateman states "the one comforting thought is that copper can be salvaged from almost every class of article containing it." This metal can be salvaged from wash boilers, copper tea kettles, water faucets, washing machines, name and address plates, electric fixtures, brass pipes, curtain rods and poles, beds and railings. Copper now ranks with steel at the top of the list of salvage metals needed for the war program.

Belleville citizens assisting the collection of salvage may consider these comments of the Metals Controller when they are collecting their contributions of scrap for the war effort.

In August 1918

Twenty-four years ago about this time was fought the battle of Amiens beginning the offensive which carried through the First Great War to the armistice, says the Montreal Gazette which recalls that on that occasion the Canadian Corps was the spearhead of the advance. "At 4.20 a.m., about an hour before dawn, the boys went over the top on a 7,500-yard line. Five Australian divisions took a front of the same breadth and the British Third Corps of three divisions had another mile. When night fell that day, the Imperial force had routed eleven German divisions, gained six miles of territory over entrenched defences, captured 16,000 prisoners and 373 guns." The Gazette quotes the London Times correspondent, "In structure it was chiefly a Canadian battle. It was their advance on the River Luce that was the core and crnx of the operation, and on their progress depended the advance of both the Ahstralians on their left and the successful French armies on their right, each of which was thrown in only as the advance above it prospered. The Canadians are right, I think, in claiming that the fighting of those first two days (August 8 and 9) was the biggest thing Canada had done in the war."

The comment of Ludendorff in his memoirs "of this black day of the German army" said after this reverse "to continue would be a gamble. The war would have to be ended." The Gazette remarks:—"It has been suggested that Hitler chose August 8, 1940, for the launching of his blitz against England, to wipe out the memory of the Amiens defeat. If so, he deluded himself. Canada on that day won a place in world history that no Nazi could erase by success, let alone by the greatest fiasco of the present war."

Dr. Grenfell's Works

A tablet has been unveiled at St. Anthony, Newfoundland, in honor of the fiftieth anniversary of the coming of Dr. Grenfell to the coast of Labrador. Commenting on this event the New York times says: "Dr. Grenfell's heart was moved by the plight of just one family in a poor hut, a dying fisherman, a destitute wife and children. In half a century this personal visit of one young physician has led to the establishment of five hospitals, five nursing stations, two boarding schools, one day school, a children's home, social services to improve the lot of the cast people ahd two hospital ships and a supply ship to serve them along a thousand miles of the wild shores of northern Newfounland and Labrador."

The paper comments that "we have many calls for help today. The groans of the dying, the cries of hungry children, the sound of women weeping, come up to us from half the earth. The needs of Newfoundland and Labrador are a small part of humanity's needs. Yet what Grenfell did there can be done throughout the world in better days to come; The pattern set by his warm heart and his professional skill in a thinly populated wilderness will serve continents."

I would be virtuous for my own sake, though nobody were to know it, as I would be clean for my own sake, though nobody were to see me.—Shaftesbury.

The virtues, like the Muses, are always seen in groups. A good principle was never found solitary in any breast. — Jane Porter.

The glamour queens of Hollywood
  Have decided for the duration
To become a bevy of gingham girls
  For the nation's edification;
Satins and silks, chiffons and tulles,
  Will be pretty much tabu,
While each of the sirens enacts the role
  Of good old Sunbonnet Sue.

Just fancy Lamour coming in from the fields
At the close of a long hot day.
I mean fields where alfalfa grows,
  Instead of a crop of "hey, hey;"
And when Hedy Lamarr trips along the lane
  To do her evening shore,
Her milk pail swinging merrily—
  Could anyone ask for more?

And Lana Turner neatly enthroned
  Upon a tractor's seat,
Won't the corn spring up a foot overnight

EXIT, THE TEA CUP?

Tea parties, hitherto an indispensable part of the city's social life, are waving a fond farewell and hand in hand in hand with cuffless pants and real silk stockings are slowly but surely vanishing over the horizon.

With the new tea rationing, milady fair who whiled away a pleasant hour in the afternoon over the tea cups chatting about the new styles, husbands, children, brides-to-be, Mrs. Jones' chickens and other sundry things, must either do her gossiping over the backyard fence, or quaff gentle drafts of iced water, buttermilk, milk or soft drinks.

But this procedure may not meet with the approval of mesdames who ordinarily have the chauffeur carry in Mimi or dry clean the mink furs weekly. It, perforce, may result in more or less drastic changes in milady's afternoon beverage. With more or less beneficial results to all concerned.

For instance the ladies whose avoirdupois has been made more noticeable since girdles were placed on the restricted list, may find themselves slimming after a few weeks of sugarless, tealess parties at which the main beverage is milk or buttermilk. The hourglass figure may become a thing of the past, and girdles and corsets things "I remember when."

Some hostesses may resort to a festive glass of sherry with cakes. There is no ration here, and who knows, the information value may be enhanced a thousandfold.

The more hardy could resort to the good old-fashioned biscuits and cheese and beer with parties scheduled to start an hour earlier. This might mean a wifeless dinner for a lot of the boys, but the report of the party might offset that disappointment.

Someone has suggested a concoction of maple syrup, lemon juice and rye as an afternoon reassurer, but Private Jack Canuck overseas might stare with amazed eyes at socks in which stitches had either been dropped or entirely eliminated.

But there is no reason why patriotic parties should be dropped entirely, or given special rations of tea and sugar, as one lady would desire. After all the patriotic part would be much enhanced if the ladies gave up both and quickened their sewing and social activities with the use of beverages that contain neither.

STOP ME IF YOU'VE HEARD—

A potential draftee, none too keen on army life, was called to take his physical examination. In the eye test the doctor asked hi mto read the letters on the chart, to which the young man replied, "What chart?"

"Why," said the doctor, "the chart on the wall."

"What wall?" asked the youth.

After the examination the young man thought he'd attend a movie. He had been seated five minutes when who should sit down next to him but the medical examiner. He nudged the doctor in the ribs and asked:

"Say, what time does this bus leave?"

FISHERMEN

Out fishing never more should be,
At any time, than two or three
And two were better, so that each
The other's inner mind may reach.
Blue stream and lake and sky and sea
Are partners of tranquility.
Away from life's continual brawl
True fishermen are thinkers all.

'Tis not for fish alone they rise
When dawn is early in the skies.
He'd be indeed a curious man
Who'd basely serve his frying pan
And make of day his dearest wish
An ordinary mess of fish.
I'm sure the fishermen I know
For something more than dinner go.

Our market fishermen are chaps
Who set for profit nets and traps
And they must early rise from bed
To earn their children's daily bread;
But those who fish for sport, delight
In all that happens, left and right,
In all things, beautiful and odd,
Which mark the handiwork of God.

Thus in the waters, two or three
Can drop their lines and happy be,
For round about them earth and sky
And stream will endless charm supply.
Magic and marvel will unfold.
Nature's great drama they'll behold
And, in the name of fishing, they Will find enchantment for the day.

The End of Domestic Nentrality

The sentence of Judge Tuttle upon Max Stephan on Thursday is the first clear expression in our domestic affairs that this war is a matter of life and death. As such it is immensely important. The failure of country after country to synchronize their domestic policies with their external situations has brought them to their doom. That failure could bring us to our doom. For the Nazi war has been fought from the very beginning by a combination of external aggressions and internal insurrections, brilliantly synchronized. The pattern has become so clear that it is boring to recapitulate it, yet it is well to recapitulate its chief features.

In many countries of the world Germany has large "minorities." They have lived in those countries not as "minorities", however, but as citizens. They enjoyed the full privileges of those states, including the rights of free speech, free assemblage, and freedom to organize.

Citizenship in the modern state is not based upon race. It is based upon fidelity to the laws. It is, in other words, a social contract.

The Nazi state repudiates this entire theory. The very first phrase in the famous twenty-six points of Nazi policy is that full citizenship in the Third Reich is accorded only to persons of German blood. The Nazi state substitutes for the social contract a tribal theory.

Now what does that mean for other countries? Anyone can dissolve a social contract. A person may change his citizenship. But from the Nazi standpoint that is irrelevant. The Nazis do not oppose the changing of citizenship, but they do not recognize it as a supreme act. For them the tie of the blood is the only essential tie. And they therefore claim every person of German blood for the Third Reich, in whatever country he may live, and whatever his citizenship may be.

Away back in 1937, at a meeting in Stuttgart, called by Herr Bohle, the chief of the Nazi organization of "Germans living abroad" (Bund der Auslandsdeutschen) Baron von Neurath, then foreign minister of Germany, announced that every German living abroad had a duty to the Fatherland, and that in all his business and cultural relationships, he must serve it. The very phrase "Auslandsdeutschen" is revealing. The citizen of a country other than Germany is not a Britisher, an American, a Pole, or a Czech, he is "a German abroad."

But the theory was not merely a theory. It was translated into tangible organization. These organizations, in every country where there were citizens of German extraction, were set up as cells in every branch of society. There were and are "German" i.e. Nazi—groups in universities, religious groups, industries, trade unions. They work in different functions. Some of them have merely to spread careful propaganda; others are to encourage Pacifism. Others are to commit actual sabotage. But there are connections between all of them.

In the Nazi theory every man of German blood who refuses to cooperate with the Third Reich, and maintains allegiance to the country of his citizenship is guilty of treason, and is subject to punishment for treason when the Nazis get around to execute or influence the laws. One function of the cell organizations is to prepare black lists of "traitors"; that is to say of people who are loyal to the nation of their citizenship. And these "traitors" live under the threat of eventual "justice."

The proof of this is in Article XIX of the German armistice terms with France, which compels the French government to deliver over to the Nazis every German whom the German government asks for. Citizenship is not stipulated.

* * *

The result of this is not only the spreading of a confusion in loyalties, but the spreading of a confusion in risks. This comes out in the case of Max Stephan, who, as his testimony shows, was both more afraid of the German than of the United States government, and more confident of being rewarded by the Germans for loyalty.

He was quite sure that Hitler would save him—and conversely that if he failed Hitler, he was in danger.

For the democratic countries, and especially America, had not enforced their own concept of contractural allegiance by adequate penalties. An individual, standing between these two theories of allegiance, and considering the risks in both, had an easy choice. What could happen to him as an American citizen? He might go to prison for ten years—a safer place than joining any demacratic army. The reward of a hero if Hitler should win, and an amnesty if we should win. "Heads I win, tails you lose."

The pattern I have described wrecked Austria, and Czecho-Slovakia and contributed to the wrecking of Holland, Norway, France and Poland. And at no point did any of the states based on the theory of social contract, recognize the reality of a totally new situation and revise their concepts of sedition and treason to fit an actual menace. Therefore sedition was organized legally under preposterously inadequate laws.

And the conspiracy was enlarged, and took into its fellowship the disgruntled of all classes, regardless of their racial origin. Persons, for instance, like Pelley.

The conviction of Pelley and the sentencing of Stephan indicates that at long last this country has waked up. Judge Tuttle's argument is unanswerable. You cannot let American boys die for this country and permit the agents of our enemies to run a lesser risk.

That the leaders of democracies did not immediately see that the concept of the racial state could not untimately exist in the same world as the concept of the contractual state was due to a lack of intellectual lucidity.

And of all the states in the world today, the United States is the most vulnerable. Because all other states have a certain race basis, modified by contract. But the United States of America is the contractual state purse and simple.

The convictions in the Stephan and Pelley cases are the first adequate steps to be taken in the jurisdictional sphere. They are only first steps. But their moral effect will go beyond the individual sentences. For the first time in this war it has become really dangerous to be an enemy agent.

NATIONAL WAR LABOUR BOARD

GENERAL ORDER

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics has found that the cost of living index number for July 2, 1942, of 117.9 (adjusted index 117) has risen by 2.4 points over the index for October 1, 1941, of 115.5 (adjusted index 114.6).

Accordingly, pursuant to the provisions of Section 34 (1) of the Wartime Wages Control Order P.C. 5963, and subject to the general provisions of the Order, the National War Labour Board orders that employers subject to the Order who are paying a cost of living bonus shall adjust the amount of such bonus payment, and employers who are not paying a cost of living bonus shall commence the payment of such a bonus, both effective from the first payroll period beginning on or after August 15, 1942, as follows:

(a) If payment of a cost of living bonus is being made pursuant to the provisions of Order in Council P.C. 8253 (now superseded by P.C. 5963):

(i) For employees to whom Section 48 (iii) (a) of P.C. 5963 applies, the bonus shall be increased by the amount of sixty (60c) cents per week,

(ii) For employees to whom Section 48 (iii) (b) of P.C. 5963 applies, the percentage of their weekly wage rates, paid to them as a cost of living bonus, shall be increased by 2.4 points;

(b) If no cost of living bonus is being paid, the payment of such a bonus shall be commenced:

(i) For employees to whom Section 48 (iii) (a) of P.C. 5963 applies, in the amount of sixty (60c) cents per week,

(ii) For employees to whom Section 48 (iii) (b) of P.C. 5963 applies, in the amount of 2.4% of their weekly wage rates;

(c) In no case shall the amount of a cost of living bonus adjusted as stated exceed a maximum of $4.25 per week to employees to whom Section 48 (iii) (a) of P.C. 5963 applies, and of 17% of their weekly wage rates to employees to whom Section 48 (iii) (b) of P.C. 5963 applies:

(d) (1) (i) For employees to whom Section 48 (iii) (a) of P.C. 5963 applies now being paid a cost of living bonus, not pursuant to the provisions of P.C. 8253, established prior to the effective date of that Order, in an amount exceeding $4.25 per week, the amount of the bonus shall remain unchanged,

(ii) For such employees now being paid a cost of living bonus of less than $4.25 per week, the amount of the bonus shall be increased up to sixty (60c) cents per week, but in no case to exceed a total weekly bonus of $4.25;

(2) (i) For employees to whom Section 48 (iii) (b) of P.C. 5963 applies, now being paid a cost of living bonus, not pursuant to the provisions of P.C. 8253, established prior to the effective date of that Order, in an amount exceeding 17% of their weekly wage rates, the amount of the bonus shall remain unchanged;

(ii) For such employees now being paid a cost of living bonus of less than 17% of their weekly wage rates, the bonus shall be increased up to 2.4 points, but in no case to exceed a total weekly bonus of 17% of their weekly wage rates;

(e) The adjustment or payment of a cost of living bonus calculated as ordered shall be to the nearest cent of any fractional figure;

(f) Employers in the construction industry shall adjust the amount of any cost of living bonus required by paragraph (a) of this order only for employees in respect of whom no special bonus arrangement has been made with the approval of a War Labour Board, pursuant to the provision of the Order for the conduct of the National Joint Conference Board of the Construction Industry

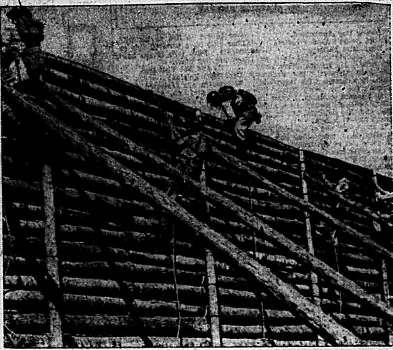
"The last was sunk very recently," he said. "They are justifying their action on the ground that the Russians were carrying American materials."

Officers of Canadian Army Undergo Rigorous Training at Camp Borden

Instead of the 8,000 officers a year previously planned, Canada is preparing 12,000 a year, Col. Ralston said. With rifle and packs trainees are learning the tactics commandos are using.



Integration of British assault methods with Canadian training was stressed by Col. Ralston. "We in national defence do not think we know it all . . . are not complacent about what is happening. We are endeavoring to make Canada's army all that Canada expects it to be." Training like that shown here makes athletes of all officers.

Rigorous training of Canada's greatly increased officer force assures that they will be as tough as or tougher than the men they lead. These pictures were made at the advanced training centre, Camp Borden, where candidates perform feats that would do credit to circus acrobats, under direction of Major R. H. L. Dinsmore, chief instructor.

ON THE AFRICAN FRONT

New Zealand troops battling the Axis forces on the Egyptian front made a successful attack on an Axis "leaguer"—a sort of corral of guns and motor transport — capturing the lot, and returning with their loot. In the UPPER photograph a New Zealand trooper examines a damaged 37-mm anti-air cannon which had been pressed into use as an anti-tank gun. The LOWER photograph shows some of the soldiers shooting at Stuka bombers after returning to their lines with their booty. The Stukas have learned to stay out of rifle range when attacking these men.

Restaurant Owner Sentenced to Hang for Treason

A closeup-character study of Max Stephan, 49-year-old Detroit restaurant owner, who was sentenced to be hanged under a 152-year-old federal law, after he had betrayed his adopted land by befriending Peter Krug, an escaped Nazi prisoner of war, Krug himself was the government's ace witness against Stephan.

Max Stephan, German-born Detroit restaurant owner, who aided Oberlieutenant Hans Peter Krug, Nazi air corps flier, in his escape from a Canadian prison camp, has been sentenced to die. He is shown hiding his face from the camera after sentence of hanging was announced.

Suggests Broadcasts May Close at 11 p.m. To Save Equipment

Ottawa, Aug. 7 (CP) — Possibility that radio stations which now operate until midnight may end their programs at 11 p.m. is seen in a suggestion by Donald Manson, chief executive assistant of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, that steps will have to be taken to conserve equipment.

Private broadcasters will meet shortly to consider what steps can be taken to avoid difficulties from equipment shortages, Mr. Manson said today. Chief difficulty being experienced by broadcasters is in obtaining transmitter tubes.

FALLS TO SIDEWALK CUTTING HEAD

Stricken by weakness while walking along Front Street shortly before noon on Saturday, Mrs. Flossie Hutts, 10 Donald Street W., fell to the pavement sustaining a nasty cut on her head. The injured woman was carried into Kresge's department store where first aid was rendered by employees before she was later sent home in a taxi cab by P.C. Arnott.

NAZI DENUDE HOME FRONT

Berne, Switzerland, ug. 8. (AP) —So many Germans have been called for military service that the Nazis have found it necessary to fill at least 20 per cent of homefornt jobs with foreign labor and the total soon may be increased to 25 per cent, the Basle National Zeitung said today in a dispatcn from Berlin.

HITLER BUILDS PIPE LINE

London, Aug. 8 (CP) — A Reuters dispatch from Stockholm quoted an arrival from Bucharest as saying 100,000 men were employed by the Germans on a pipeline from Constanta, on the Black Sea, to Cernavoda, on the Danube, to transport oil Hitler hopes to get from the Caucasus.

NETHERLAND'S QUEEN AT WHITE HOUSE

IT'S GOOD — IF IT WORKS

Inventor Andrew Sedlmeier, of Oakland, stands beneath movable engine of the low-winged monoplane which he has spent 12 years in constructing. When the pilot wants to go up, all he has to do (according to Sedlmeier) is move the motor until it points upward. This gives propeller more pull, inventor claims, and speeds rise. The tail flaps go up at same time, helping immediate rise. All of the plane is in his back yard; it has never been in air.

WEDDINGS

HUGHES—CUMMINS

St. Vincent de Paul Church, Toronto, was the scene of an interesting mid-summer wedding on Saturday morning, when Margaret, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Cummins, Toronto, became the bride of Lance-Corporal Thomas E. Hughes, R.C.O.C., son of Mrs. Hughes and the late William Hughes, Belleville. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Gerald J. Kirby and Mrs. John Crawford played wedding music. Rev. J. E. Ronan's choir boys sang during the Mass.

Given in marriage by her father the bride was charming in white printed organza over satin, fashioned with basque waistline and period skirt. Her shoulder length veil of French tulle was caught with a pleated headdress and she carried white bridal roses and swansonia. Miss Noreen Cummins, maid of honor, and Miss Maureen Hector and Miss Eileen Zeagman, bridesmaids were gowned alike in printed organza, the maid of honor in shell pink and the bridesmaids in heaven blue. They wore matching off-the-face picture hats and carried fans of white gladioli. Mr. Edward Hughes, Belleville, was groomsman for his brother and the ushers were Mr. Fergus Walsh and Mr. Robert Heslin.

A reception was held at the bride's home, Mrs. Cummins in platinum blue sheer with burgundy touches and corsage of gladioli, and Mrs. Hughes in fern green crepe with matching accessories and corsage of gardenias, receiving the guests. Later the bride and groom left on a wedding trip to Lake Rosseau, the bride travelling in a navy printed ensemble with matching accessories.

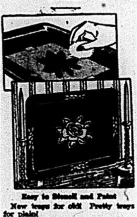
Tray Decorated From Many Patterns



Easy to Stencil and Paint

New trays for old! Pretty trays for plain!

With patterns, you can easily paint lovely floral designs on ordinary tin trays, boxes or whatnot.

For a gleaming black tray with gold and silver flowers on it, first apply a coat of flat paint and then enamel.

To apply your design, you may first trace each flower-and-leaf pattern on brown paper and cut a stencil of it.

For the large centre flower, trace just its outline and cut that out. Then cut another stencil of just the parts you'll paint silver.

Shellac one side of each brown paper stencil, let it dry, and shellac the other side. Then, using a pounce—a ball of cotton wrapped in muslin—apply the gold enamel to the tray through your first stencil. When it's dry, apply the silver through the second stencil.

Our set, "Floral Patterns for Decorating," has actual-size patterns for the large and small floral designs. Includes instructions for tracing, stencilling and painting; detailed directions for different color schemes. Also tells how to make a plywood tray.

Send 15c in coins for your set, 'Floral Patterns for Decorating", to The Ontario Intelligencer, Home Service, Address. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of set.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Wedding Day Announced, Fiance Doesn't Answer Letters

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My wedding date has been announced. My friends have given me three showers; my wedding dress and trousseau are ready—but I can't get any word from the man I expect to marry. I know his Army post, his identification number, and that he's well, but he just won't answer letters.

I know from one of his buddies—a relative of mine—that he's got in some sort of girl trouble. While I can never care for him and would never live with him as his wife, still, to save my face, I want to go through a marriage ceremony on the appointed date.

I've thought of suicide; I've thought of disappearing. What shall I do?

Just Mary

Please don't think, dear Mary, you're the only girl left in such a predicament. Abraham Lincoln actually did not appear on the first day set for his marriage to Mary Todd. Perhaps it might have been better if he hadn't appeared on the second date, at which time he married her.

It would be foolish, feeling as you do, to go through a marriage ceremony with your fiance. Put a brave face on things and say he could not get off on the date mentioned. The Recording Angel will forgive this fib. Then, if you have any friends or relatives you can visit at a distance, just go along and have a good time.

It would be worse for all parties to marry a man with whom you never intend to live as his wife. Other girls have survived this experience. Don't take it too hard; these are war times.

He Did Not Visit Her

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Four years ago I started dating a boy, off and on, after having met him at a dance. We saw each other for six months and then he left and we corresponded and saw each other occasionally for a couple of years. For another year I heard nothing from him, and all of a sudden he wrote again, asking if he could see me.

Three months later he gave me an engagement ring, and soon after that joined the Army. He is now stationed about fifty miles from my home.

Through a newspaper clipping, which he doesn't know I saw, I learned that he and another soldier were invited to a home and entertained as overnight guests. I heard that he has recently made an automobile trip. He tells me he can't get off.

This sounds funny to me. Do you think I ought to ask him about this, and what would you advise me to do?

Extremely Worried

This young man seems to be one of the on-again, off again kind. With the distractions of Army life, and everyone trying to make things pleasant for a good-looking young soldier, perhaps he's just taking another one of these little vacations. Here's hoping you feel at liberty to amuse yourself in the same way.

Don't judge him too harshly.

Write Personal Notes To Acknowledge Messages Of Sympathy

I would like to have a heart-to-heart talk today with the bereaved readers on whose lives, because of the war, deep sorrow has fallen. A son, a husband, a brother, a friend has gone forth valiantly to war, and the tragic news has been received that he is "missing in action", or has been taken prisoner, or, the grim finality, that he has given his life for his country.

So closely are our hearts knit together in human understanding, that immediately relatives and friends send messages of deep sympathy, or warm-hearted understanding of what sorrow follows the news, how bereft, even though highly courageous, is the heart that is left with its dear and proud memories. Kind messages, these, that yearn to say something of solace, something to ease the spirit.

Should these messages of sympathy be acknowledged? If so, how? The following letter is one of the many that have come to me lately, each with a similar appealing and human problem:

Dear Mrs. Beeckman: Because of this cruel war, you will no doubt have many letters asking the question I am going to ask you, and I am appealing to you to please help me, as well as others, as to the kind and proper thing to do.

Some weeks ago I received word that my son was missing in action, and have recently received word that he has lost his life.

I have already received many letters of encouragement and also of sympathy.

Do you think it would be proper for me to have some kind of card printed, and on the card write a message of thanks to these kind people? I'd greatly appreciate your advice.

E. R.

I would like to step across the threshold of this and other sad hearts with every reverence, wishing, of course, to add no further burden of care or trouble. Nevertheless, I do most sincerely believe that if these kind messages are acknowledged with brief personal notes of appreciation, the writer of the notes will find a solacing reward in sending kind words for kind words sent.

A few words, a very few words from heart to heart, fulfill the "sweet obligation of friendship".

No one would expect a prompt reply. No one would expect a long letter. And no one who had sent a warm personal message would be satisfied with a printed acknowledgment. . . that would be too impersonal.

A personal sentence or two is all that is necessary . . . written on a visiting-card, or on the inside page of "Informals", or on notepaper. "Thank you for your kind sympathy" is easy to write, enough, and properly appreciative.? Or, "Thank you for your kind and understanding message. It was a great comfort to me". Or, "Your warm-hearted words touched me deeply, and gave me courage. Thank you, more than I can say". Or, "Your loving words were a helping hand to me. Thank you, dear Mary". Or, "My heart is sad, very sad. . . but I am proud. I need and treasure such friendship as yours, and I know too how deeply John treasured your friendship".

If writing these few words is too much of a burden for a mother or a wife, a member of the family or a close family friend would feel honored to be asked to do so. He or she might write, for example, "Mother has asked me to tell you how deeply she appreciated your kind message of sympathy. Your understanding words touched her deeply."

Kind words of sympathy and kind words of appreciation of sympathy tenderly unite our thoughts.

Even the Well-Fed Can Be "Starved"

Almost every one who has seen prize livestock in the show ring has had the thought, "What a fine race of people we would be physically if we were all given the proper feeding and care that these animals get". That is only too true. For, although we have abundant food, many of us all too often have poor health and "half health", and this true in both children and adults who are not getting the kind of food they need.

In the opinion of Dr. Julian D. Boyd of Iowa City, this poor nutrition develops because persons have the idea that if they eat regularly and take all the food they want they are well fed.

However, to carry on properly the body must have the materials which provide for growth and repair. It needs other materials for the proper operation of the body machinery, and sufficient fuel in the form of food must be furnished.

Proteins, needed for the growth and repair of the muscles and the body organs, are obtained from such foods as meat, milk and eggs. Lime and phosphorus are needed for building bones and teeth. Iron is necessary for the formation of blood. Without enough iodine, the thyroid gland does not function as it should. And then there is a long list of vitamins which are needed, each of which has a separate action in the body.

Taking in a great deal of iron will not make up for a lack of proteins, nor will using an excessive amount of vitamin D counterbalance a deficient intake o lime. In other words, each food part is needed and each must be taken in an adequate amount. Several foods are excellent sources of various food parts essential in the diet. If these foods are used in suitable amounts daily they tend to protect us from what has been called "hidden hunger". This term means deficiencies in the diet which do not make themselves easily visible.

The foods which protect us against "hidden hunger" are known as protective foods and among these are meat, milk, eggs, vegetables, fruit, whole-grain cereals and fish oils. On the other hand, foods which have little protective value, such as highly milled cereals, sweets and most fats, do not help overcome "hidden hunger". It is generally believed that half of the diet should be made up of foods of the protective group. When this is done the remainder may be chosen from sugars, cereals, starches and fats. In many diets too few protective foods are eaten because they have been crowded out by the less valuable ones. The failure to eat protective foods explains the occurrence of malnutrition in people who are not underweight and who can get all the food they need, but who just do not know or have not realized what foods they ought to eat.

Every person must realize the importance of getting the proper diet for, unless enough of the right foods are eaten regularly, malnutrition and 'hidden hunger' may quickly develop, reducing efficiency and interfering with good health and happiness.

Carmel

Carmel—On Saturday night, July 18, friends and neighbors of Carmel gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Brintnell's to do honor to their son, Joe, who is on service for his King and Country. Joe is stationed at Barriefield.

After a social chat together order was called by Mr. Seldon Homan, after a few remarks from the chairman. God Save The King was sung which led the numbers for community singing. Mr. Jack McCabe read an appropriate address and Mr. Harold Howes presented Joe with a wrist watch. Joe thanked all very graciously after which "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" was sung.

The ladies served refreshments after a social time was spent. All left wishing Joe the best of luck. Mrs. Oslin and sister of Belleville, were among the guests at the party.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Rodgers and Mr. and Mrs. Bill Bell of Toronto, spent the tea hour on Wednesday last with Mrs. W. Simmons and Mrs. W. Wootton and family.

Loud Clothes In Bad Taste

Alexis Smith shows excellent taste in clothes

By HELEN FOLLETT

HOW CAN one account for the way some women get themselves up? And with the campaign for good looks going on year after year! The shops are full of charming attire of good lines and appealing colors. It isn't the duds or the dowdies who make the worst mistakes; it is the woman who is overdressed.

For instance: we saw one lately who came down the boulevard, evidently aware of the fact that she was making a sartorial show of herself.. She held her head high and walked proudly.

She was a blonde through the privileges of the peroxide bottle. She was no longer forty. Maybe she was no longer fifty. Her face carried heavy lines, looked hard and brittle, was heavily rouged and lipsticked. The midsection of her body carried so much adipose tissue she looked as if she wore panniers. She couldn't help that perhaps, but there was no reason why she should wear a purple frock, a purple hat trimmed with red flowers, and red shoes!

She belongs to the class of women who make themselves conspicuous. They want to be noticed. That's why they look that way. No wellbred woman dresses up like a carnival.

One of the most valuable qualities a beauty-seeker can have is good taste. So blessed, she will never make a sartorial error. Place before her ten dresses, and she will intuitively select the one with the most appealing colors and graceful lines. She knows what she can wear, what is flattering, what modes she must avoid.

It is her ambition to be correctly and becomingly dressed. She realizes that that ambition cannot be realized by using blaring make-up, wearing startling colors. She is old-fashioned enough to desire to look like a lady.

Drugs By Mouth and By Injection

Perhaps you wonder why a physician uses injections of drugs under the skin, into a muscle, or into vein, instead of giving it by mouth. Perhaps you are one who thinks that the physician gives the injections because it means that the patient must go to the physician's office instead of taking the pill or liquid by mouth at home.

Think for a minute and you'll remember that in a heart attack a gall bladder attack, or an asthmatic attack, the physician injects the necessary drugs instead of giving them by mouth because he wants immediate action to save life or give prompt relief from pain.

There are many drugs that can be taken by mouth, in fact most drugs are taken by mouth but larger quantities must be taken, and the relief is not as prompt or effective.

What are the advantages of the injection of drugs? First, the drug gets immediately into the blood stream instead of having to go through the digestive system, where much of its strength is lost before it is absorbed into the blood. The dose by mouth is always double or more the dose used in injections. In fact, some drugs cannot be absorbed into the blood by way of the digestive organs and is thrown out in the wastes from the intestine.

Some idea of the greater amount of a drug needed to be effective is seen by the great amount of liver needed when taken by mouth and taken every day, as compared to one dose of the injected liver concentrate which lasts some patients for weeks.

The second advantage of injected drugs is that they do not disturb digestion in many whose digestive apparatus cannot handle the drug taken by mouth without causing symptoms.

The third advantage is that the patient always "takes his medicine" regularly, whereas at home he may and often does forget it and so loses much of the effect of the medicine.

There is also the important point that the patient is under close supervision and any change in his condition is at once noted.

As most illnesses are not of a dangerous nature, pills, capsules, and liquids will continue to be taken by mouth more generally than will medicines by injection. However, should your physician advise the injection of drugs instead of by mouth, it would be well to remember the advantages of the injection method as mentioned above.

Foxboro

Foxboro,—The August meeting of the Women's Missionary Society was held in the church on Thursday afternoon with a small attendance. Owing to the absence of the President, the First Vice, Mrs. Hodgen was in charge and after announcing the theme "The Bible the word of God", a short prayer was offered and a hymn sung as a prayer. Scriptural texts were read as outlined in The Missionary Monthly and business discussed in reference to packing the bale.

The Treasurer, Mrs. J. Palmer, reported $101 raised so far this year.

Two verses of another hymn were sung, and after prayer a reading entitled "If we only understood" was given by the leader. The suggested program leaflet was then used "The Bible in the World Today" and these readings showed the help for good The Bible has been to the W.M.S. Soldiers, children, China, Russia, Germany and other parts of the world.

Mrs. Harold Stewart, Mrs. Walter Scott and Mrs. S. C. Gay assisted with these leaflets.

After singing again, the meeting closed with The Lord's Prayer and the Mispah benediction.

ROBIN PAYS FOR CRUMBS

Paducah, Ky., Aug. 10 —(AP)— E. N. Smith, tourist camp operator, found crumbs on the lawn almost as good as bread on the water. He had been feeding crumbs to a certain robin daily, he reported, and one day the robin showed up at Smith's back door with a dollar bill in its beak, dropped the bill and fluttered off again.

An Egg Goes to England

(By Richard L. Strout)

By RICHARD L. STROUT

This is the story of an egg and of the extraordinary things that befell it. It is also the romantic story of a brand new culinary development having to do with winning the war, with probable sequels in the peace afterward. But of that, more later.

The cackle of a hen is lifted up in a Wisconsin barnyard telling all the world in excited and exultant notes that a brand new egg has entered the world. Shortly after the farmer's daughter, Elizabeth May, garners in the egg. It is just the last one needed to round out the final dozen that Uncle Charles is taking to market.

Now you might suppose that there is no connection between that egg and winning the war, but you are mistaken. A peculiar thing happens to that egg. It goes to an egg-drying plant. An egg-drying plant is just what its name implies. Up to 1925 practically all the dried eggs used in the United States came from a few large egg-drying centres in China. Now a Chinese egg, it seems, is smaller than an American egg and more are required for the process we are considering. But we needn't go into that just at the minute.

Anyway, there are 80 drying plants now operating throughout the United States with an annual capacity after drying of 285,000,000 pounds. That is 142,500 egg-tons, which is a lot of eggs. This is what happens to the egg Elizabeth May gathered so blythely in the farmyard a few hours ago.

In the Drying Plant

It is broken, strained, and emulsified, and then it joins a lot of other eggs. A thin film of liquid egg travels on an endless belt which traverses a warm chamber through which filtered air, heated to about 140 degrees, circulates. When it comes out again its own mother wouldn't know it. All the moisture has been evaporated off. Elizabeth May's egg joins the other eggs, and since it is a lend-lease egg it starts for England. By the end of this year purchases of such eggs will probably total 200,000,000 pounds.

Our original egg is now in a 5-ounce package with 11 others ready for their journey. One small package like this has the nutritive equivalent of a dozen eggs. After a while the dried eggs reach England. There was a little doubt, right at first, whether the British public could be educated to use dried eggs, but the proper officials saw to it that they were served as scrambled eggs in exclusive London hotels and restaurants, and now they are increasingly used. They can be used, it is said, in cakes, flour and noodles, and also for scrambling and for making omelets.

And that is what is happening to eggs from all over America this year. Total all-out production of 1942 is expected to be 300,000,000 pounds of dried eggs, meaning that somebody must break up 10,000,000,000 eggs. That is quite an omelet.

The eggs are only part of the story. To grow somewhat more sedate and statistical, the fact is that there is a dangerous submarine menace off our shores and ships and cargo space is at a premium. The experts say that most of what we eat is water anyway. Eggs and meats are three-fourths water. Some vegetables contain 90 per cent. water or more. Now there is, of course, plenty of water in England already. So why not take the water out of the export foods in the United States and then mix it again after the concentrate arrives.

Many Foods Dehydrated

That is, in fact, exactly what is being done. The story of war growth of the dehydrated food industry is little short of miraculous. More and more is being done to make these foods appetising. All sorts of things are being dehydrated, from fresh vegetables, which squeeze down from 10 pounds to one pound after the moisture comes out, to milk, where 11 pounds of the original fluid make one pound of dried skim milk. Meat is being dried, too.

Up to the end of May about 2,000,000 pounds of dehydrated vegetables had been purchased for lend-lease, and the only immediate limit is production facilities. Another big purchaser is the United States Army. Put in practical terms, one food ship can do the work of nine when the food is dehydrated. Plans to dehydrate all sorts of new foods are under way, and postwar plans may make this industry a rival of canned goods.

The food as it arrives in England is chock-full of vitamins, minerals and such like, it is declared. Take a crate of carrots, for example. It weighs about 198 pounds. They are reduced to 17 pounds of dehydrate which fill two five-gallon cans. A bit of solid carbon dioxide is dropped into the cans, to give an inert atmosphere, and then the lids are sealed on with shellac.

Vegetable soup is made by spraying cooked and pulped vegetables on hot revolving drums, and then scraping off the dried product, which peels like paper and crumbles into flakes.

Dehydrated apples make fine pie-filling, it is stated. Then again, 25 cases of oranges make a small case of powdered concentrate to which corn sugar is added. With the addition of water at the other end, the 1,200,000 gallons of such concentrate thus far shipped on lend-lease orders will be reconstituted to about 9,600,000 gallons of orange juice.—Christian Science Monitor.

"EAGLE SQUADRON"

Ernest M. Schoedsack, veteran motion picture maker, spent six months in England photographing manoeuvres of the Royal Air Force's Eagle Squadron to provide authentic backgrounds and detail for Walter Wanger's new Universal production, "Eagle Squadron", currently showing at the McCarthy theatre.

The Eagle Squadron, composed of young American fighter pilots, co-operated with the film unit headed by Schoedsack by making group flights and putting their swift Spitfires through intricate and difficult acrobatics as called for by the script of the picture.

Schoedsack obtained more than 13,000 feet of film on authority of the British Ministry of Information, and they were the first movies to reach Hollywood showing how the American Eagles were living and fighting.

The unusual and difficult wartime assignment was given by Producer Wanger to Schoedsack for his memorable work in making "Chang", "Grass", "King Kong", and other pictures.

"Eagle Squadron" was produced with a notable cast that includes Robert Stack, Dianna Barrymore, Jon Hal, Eddie Albert, Nigel Bruce, Evelyn Ankers, Leif Erikson, John Loder and Edgar Barrier.

AT THE BELLE

"Swamp Water"

"Swamp Water", the unusual story of the foreboding and mysterious swampland that shapes the lives and loves and hates of the people about it, will come next to the screen of the Belle Theatre.

Jean Renoir, famous French director who achieved renown with "Grand Illusion", "Madame Bovary" and other hits, directed "Swamp Water" as his first American production. Walter Brennan as Tom Keefer, Walter Huston as Thursday Ragan, Anne Baxter as Julie and Dana Andrews as Ben have the leading roles.

"Swamp Water" is from the pen of Verenn Bell, and is one of the most unusual serials the Saturday Evening Post ever published. It is the story of the people who live in the strange country near the awesome Okefenokee Swamp of Georgia. This is a refuge for the hunted, but few of those who go into the swamp to hide ever get out of it alive. Into this dread wilderness goes Ben Ragan's dog Trouble, and Ben follows his pal into the swamp against his father's wishes.

There he not only finds his dog, but also a hunted criminal, Tom Keefer, who is hiding in the swamp. Tom has been able to live, hunt and trap there. But he will not let Ben leave Okefenokee for fear he will turn him in. Ben convinces Tom of his loyalty, and they form a partnership to hunt and trap.

This arrangement gets Ben into even more difficulties. His father is angry at him for going back into the swamp, his girl friend Mable is angry because of the attention he pays.

New Chan Thriller

Guest of honor at a house party in a weird murder castle, Charlie Chan is called upon to solve his most baffling case in "Castle in the Desert" the new 20th Century-Fox hit announced as the companion feature.

Sidney Toler is again cast as the genial sleuth, while Arleen Whelan, Richard Derr, Douglas Dumbrille and many others are featured in the film.

The Belle Mirror of World Events will also be exhibited.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Always in My Heart"
First Belleville Showing

The Capitol theatre's new attraction, "Always In My Heart," which opened there last night bids fair to go down in screen history, not only as a thoroughly delightful picture of family life, but also as the picture which introduced Gloria Warren to the film public. For fifteen-year-old Miss Warren has a singing voice that is pure gold, and a completely captivating personality.

"Always In My Heart" is a story of family loyalty, and a more heart-gladdening evening of screen entertainment would be hard to find. Kay Francis, Walter Huston head the cast with Gloria Warren, and Frankie Thomas, Patty Hale, Una O'Connor, and Sidney Blackmer are featured. Borrah Minnevitch provides some tuneful interludes.

Huston, as the father, is in jail, and at his insistence, his wife (played by Miss Francis) is divorced from him and his children believe him to be dead. A wealthy man is in love with her and anxious to marry her and take care of her and the children. She can't make up her mind, and seeks Huston's advice. He tells her to accept, and hides from her the fact that he has been pardoned.

He works his way down the coast to the bay town where his family lives. It is his intention just to get a glimpse of his children, then go off. In the town, however, he finds out that his young daughter (Gloria Warren) is not happy over her mother's remarriage. He also hears her sing, and finds that her wonderful natural talents need the guidance that he, with his musical education can give her. He takes a room in town and the two of them get acquainted.

The superb performances by Miss Francis and Walter Huston and the completely charming screen personality of Gloria Warren would be more than enough to put "Always In My Heart" way up in the hit class. However, you can add to that some expert acting on the part of Frankie Thomas, Una O'Connor, Sidney Blackmer, and six-year-old Patty Hale as the cook's eavesdropping little grandchild, a well-written script by Adele Comandini and the sensitive and understanding direction of Jo Graham, all of which have combined to make "Always In My Heart" the picture that will completely win your heart.

The added attraction "U-boat 29" will keep you in suspense and thrill you throughout its showing.

Japan May Strike at Siberia

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Another week, bitter with defeat and retreat for Red armies, closed with heightening prospects that a second-front attack is impending—but it may be launched in the East and by Japan before Russia's Anglo-American Allies are able to strike effectively in the West.

If Japan still without a decisive victory in China, bruised by American air-sea blows and at least checked in the Southwest Pacific, is to move at all against Russia under her Axis commitments the time seems ripe.

Weather conditions for a Siberian assault are right as they will not be again for twelve months. Chungking and London bristle with rumors of Japanese preparations. The German-trained Nipponese conqueror of Singapore and Corregidor now is reported in command in the North. Tokyo has called up all males from 18 to 50 years of age for military service.

Drastic new dim-out measures along the west coast of the United States indicate that Washington expects Japanese diversion forays. They might be designed, like the Japanese toe-holds in the Western Aleutians, to balk or impede American aid to Russia in Siberia.

Chance for U. S. Planes.

If that front is opened, Siberian bases could afford expanding American air power opportunity to strike at Japan itself. That possibility still is the most powerful influence upon Tokyo not to jump on her traditional Russian foe prematurely.

Yet beyond a shadow of a doubt Tokyo has two-way commitments with her European Axis mates concerning Russia. That the Japanese war lords are merely biding their time until Hitler and his Italian and Balkan satellites have fulfilled their part of the conquest bargain goes without saying.

The Axis offensive in Russia has obviously reached a point where Tokyo must be weighing the question of joining the attack on the Soviet. Hitler is so close to having driven Russian armies in the West behind a short line from the Baltic to the Caspian and to seizing the rich Caucasus resources that Berlin pressure upon Tokyo to fulfil Axis commitments must be imperative.

The British-Indian political crisis adds to the arguments for Japanese attack on Russia. Indian troops in Egypt and elsewhere in the Middle East form a substantial and hard-fighting element of British armies. Whether their loyalty and battle zeal would be affected by a non-violent, passive resistance effort to Britain's hand in India, even without the Japanese appeasement aspects, is a grave question.

Skirmishing for Position.

It could account in part for failure of the British army in Egypt yet to turn on the stalled Axis army that has driven its way close to Alexandria. So far, although there is every indication that General Sir Claude Auchinleck has succeeded in bringing up troops and supplies for a major counter-offensive and also retains control of the air, he has been content with skirmishing for position. He may have been awaiting the outcome of the crisis in India due to uncertainties as to its effect on Indian contingents of his armies.

If this argues against Japanese strong-arm methods against India for the moment and in favor of intensive Nipponese political intrigue to foment British-Indian discord, it does not apply as to Japan v. Russia. A smashing Japanese invasion of Siberia might have disturbing psychological aftermaths in India for the United Nations.

Russia is India's most Powerful neighbor. The spectacle of little Japan, once before Russia's conquerors, harrying Red armies in Siberia as Nazi troops and their allies are blasting them in the west, might build up a conception of Axis invincibility in India. British, American and Netherlands defeats in Malaya, the Philippines, Burma and the Netherlands East Indies have helped set the stage for that.

Cubs Beat Reds in 18 Innings When Twelve Pitchers Used To Establish League Record

Reds Come From Behind Three Times to Knot Count Before Cubs Win 10 to 8 in Overtime

TAKES FIVE HOURS

Cardinals Advance by Winning Two, While Marchildon Lost to Yankees

By AUSTIN BEALMEAR
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Most baseball teams will go to great lengths to win their games but few of them have to go as far as Chicago Cubs, who needed 18 innings yesterday to trip Cincinnati Reds in the opener of a doubleheader.

Twelve pitchers, the most ever used in a major league game, paraded to the mound in the extra-inning struggle, longest in the majors this season and the seventh for these two clubs in 13 meetings.

Three times the Cubs figured they had it in the bag, but each time the Reds tied it up. Finally Hiram Bithorn, last of the six Chicago hurlers, blanked the Reds for six straight innings and the Cubs sandwiched the 18th inning blows of Stan Hack and Dom Dallessandro between a walk and an outfield fly for two runs and a 10-8 decision.

The game itself lasted five hours and was interrupted for another hour by weather in the 13th frame. That left only an hour of daylight for the second game, which the Reds won 2-1 in 4 1-2 with Bithorn the starting and losing hurler.

A total of 37 players participated in the first game—three short of the record held by Pittsburgh Pirates and Boston Braves. Some batters appeared at the plate 10 times.

By squaring accounts in the nightcap, the Reds preserved third place in the National League by a lone percentage point over the Giants, who swept a doubleheader from Philadelphia Phils.

Cardinals Advance

Meanwhile, St. Louis Cardinals squeezed past Pittsburgh Pirates, 4-3 and 2-1, to trim Brooklyn's lead to eight lengths. The Dodgers bumped into a postponement at Boston.

Stan Musial handled the clutch hitting for the Red Birds, driving in the winning marker in the nightcap and setting the stage for the tie-breaking tally in the curtain-raiser, each with a double.

At Philadelphia, the Giants tripped the Phils, 3-2, in the first game when Mel Ott laid down a 10th-inning bunt with the bases loaded, but Bill McGee made things easier in the second game, pitching a five-hit shutout as the Giants won 2-0. Buster Maynard clouted a home run and made 10 put outs, two shy of the major league record.

In the American League, New York Yankees increased their lead to a dozen games and Boston Red Sox moved into second place, although neither team lifted a bat.

It all came about when Chicago White Sox clipped Cleveland Indians 11-1 and 3-2, stretching their winning streak to eight games and dropping the Tribe half a game behind the Red Sox. Ted Lyons pitched four-hit ball in the opener for his 10th victory this year and his seventh in a row.

In the Navy Now

Bob Kennedy, who was sworn into the naval air corps between games, won the nightcap by singling the winning run across in the ninth.

Detroit Tigers had the help of 11 St. Louis errors as they downed the Browns, 9-3 and 3-1.

Doubleheaders between the Yanks and Philadelphia Athletics and the Red Sox and Washington Senators were postponed until today.

Connie Mack threw the Athletics' ace, Penetanguishene's Phil Marchildon, at the Yanks Saturday and the Bronx Bombers proceeded to trump him in a hurry. The Yankees included three home runs in their 13-hit attack, winning 8-4. In the only other American League game, St. Louis won 6-4 over Detroit.

In the National League, the Braves whipped the Dodgers 2-0 in a disorderly game in which the umpires twice had to break up promising free-for-alls between the clubs.

Pittsburgh Pirates and St. Louis Cardinals battled 16 innings to a 5-5 tie and Cincinnati and Chicago split a doubleheader, the Reds winning the opener 2-1 and losing the nightcap 3-0.

Mississauga Golf Club, Port Credit, Ont., Aug. 10 — (CP) — There was a little long-faced talk here in the closing hours of the Canadian Open around the possibility that it would be the last for the duration of the war ... it may be so, but the reason will be hard to find .. veterans like Craig Wood are the backbone of golf and as his generation of golfers ranged about 40 years, it isn't likely they'll all be in the services by next year ..... the crowd obviously still goes for the game, with at least 1,500 on hand for the final day.

It's 1914 since a Canadian last won the Canadian Open ... the winner then was Karl Keffer of the Royal Ottawa Club ... if the Canadian Open is cancelled for the duration, that will make Craig Wood United States and Canadian Open champ for the duration.

....He won the U. S. Open last year ... among his other accomplishments, he holds the world record for 72-hole golf scoring at 264 ... he set that mark in the Metropolitan Open in 1940 ... in addition to winning the U. S. Open last year he took the Masters, the Wichita, Kansas, Open and was captain of the United States Ryder Cup team ... one of the big reasons he isn't up with the top money-winners this year is that he didn't tour the winter circuit with the others.

The United States P.G.A. War Relief Fund tour may be quite something ... Fred Corcoran, P.G.A. tournament manager, told snapshots he would have 10 leading professionals and possibly Bing Crosby ... the tour will be back to Toronto and Montreal in September.

Incidentally

It's interesting to hear that the R. C. A. F. is going into amateur hockey in a big way ... now if the army would only tell us what they're going to do with all the hockey players in the R. C. O. C. in Ottawa and Cornwall the picture would be almost clear.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

(By The Associated Press)

Stan Hack, Cubs and Johnny Vander Meer, Reds—Former hit five-for-five in first game and started 18th inning game-winning rally, while latter pitched four-hitter to win 4 1-2-inning nightcap.

Ted Lyons and Bob Kennedy, White Sox—Former pitched four-hit ball in first game and latter drove in winning run of second with ninth inning single.

Mel Ott and Bill McGee, Giants—Former squeezed in winning run in tenth inning of first game and latter pitched five-hit shutout in second for double victory over Phils.

Hal Newhouser and Virgil Trucks Tigers—Pitched double victory over Browns, although former had to have help in late innings.

Stan Musial, Cardinals—His hitting led to double victory over Pirates, paving way for winning run in opener and driving in winning marker in second game.

Battle Is On For Play-Off Position

Only Five Games Separate Second to Sixth Placed Clubs in International League

12 POINTS SEPARATE

Newark, on top, and Rochester, at the bottom, have a strong grasp on their position in the International League but each day brings movements among the six remaining clubs.

Only five games separate second-place Jersey City from the deadlocked Syracuse Chiefs and Buffalo Bisons in sixth.

The scrap for third and fourth, final playoff berths, is tighter than a new shoe with Toronto, Montreal, Baltimore, Buffalo and Syracuse all jammed within 12 percentage points of each other.

Syracuse tightened the battle yesterday by winning a doubleheader from the Orioles, each by a 1-0 score on the final play of the contests behind the pitching of Ewell Blackwell and Nate Andrews.

Blackwell hurled a three-hitter in the opener and Andrews a five-hitter in the nightcap.

Wings Split

The one-two punch of Rochester Red Wings, jolting Erv Dusak and Hooper Triplett gave the Wings a split with Buffalo.

Although getting only two-hits, Rochester won the lidlifter, 2-1. Tom Pullig was the victim. Walking George Fallon and then throwing a home run ball to Triplett in the fourth. Ira Hutchinson went the distance for the Red Birds, gaining his 12th conquest of the season.

Dusak provided the little Cardinals with all their runs in the second game as he powered a three-run homer in the third inning. This wasn't enough as the Bisons won the game, 6-3, on the home run walloping of Fran Heller whose two circuit clouts resulted in four runs. Andy Sierra chalked up his 15th victory of the year as he limited the Birds to five hits.

The scheduled doubleheaders between Jersey City and Newark and Toronto Maple Leafs and the Montreal Royals were postponed.

Alex Kampouris' game-winning single in the 10th inning gave the Royals a 5-4 victory over Newark after trailing most of the way Saturday. In other games, Jersey City defeated Buffalo 4-1 and Baltimore knocked off Toronto 13-12 in nine innings of weird baseball. Ten pitchers saw service. The second game of the scheduled doubleheader was postponed as was the scheduled Rochester-Syracuse encounter.

Mississauga Golf Club, Port Credit, Ont., Aug. 10 (CP)—The jinx that tall, shambling Ralph Guldahl of Santa Fe, Cal., thought he had shaken when he scored a 66 and 69 in the first two rounds of the 72-hole Canadian Open may be back with him today as he prepares for this week's Rochester, N.Y., open golf tournament.

Two years ago Guldahl was considered one of the greatest golfers ever developed on this continent, but at the height of his success he lost his ability. For two years he didn't break 70, which meant his name was not to be found in the upper brackets of golf's leading money-winners.

At the Canadian Open here last Thursday Guldahl shot a 66, and said he felt better about his game than he had since 1940. He got a 69 the next day, when almost all competitors exceeded their first-day scores and that proved to him and most galleryites that Guldahl was in the groove again. But on Saturday, when the final 36 holes of the tournament had been completed, Craig Wood of Mamaroneck, N.Y., was the winner of the $1,000 first prize and the Seagram Golf Cup with Guldahl back in a fifth-place tie with Tony Penna of Dayton, Ohio.

Didn't Have It

Guldahl just didn't have it over the last 36 holes. He had a starting 75 on his morning round Saturday and a 73 in the afternoon to blow his chances of soaring back into the ranks of the golfing great. When the final 36 holes began, he was tied for first place with the big sandy-haired veteran, Wood, but there was no comparison in the golf they shot when the big chips were down.

A sore hip Friday may have started Guldahl on his way into the background. He favored the hip, pulling his putts, although it didn't appear to bother his other shots.

Wood threw a 68 and a 72 at the field on the final day, unfavorable weather conditions not affecting his masterful game. Like Guldahl, he had a 66 in the first round and 69 on the second.

Turnesa Second

In second place behind Wood's 275 was Mike Turnesa of White Plains, N.Y., who couldn't make his putter work on the first two days and was nine strokes behind the leaders when the last day began. He shot a 66 in the third round to equal Ben Hogan's competitive course record here and had a 70 in the fourth round for a total of 279. Clayton Heafner of Durham, N.C., was third with 281, Hogan—who slipped to 74 and 72 on the final day—fourth with 282. Gordon Brydson, Toronto, was 12th among the professionals, 14th counting the leading amateur, Frank Stranahan of Toledo, and the amateur runner-up, Skee Riegal of Miami, Fla. Brydson's 289 made him leading Canadian professional, Nick Wisnock of Burlington, Ont., was leading Canadian amateur with 299.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
Associated Press Sport writer

New York, Aug. 10 —(AP)— To clear the track for the Hambletonian, Roosevelt raceway has called off its Wednesday night harness races and will cancel the Thursday card, too, if the big race up at Goshen is delayed a day . . .Current figures for the world-telegram hole-in-one tournament that starts today show that the 1,000 or so guys entered to take five shots each have almost a chance to make one ace. . .In 10 years the tournament has produced four aces in 30,380 shots, making the odds 7,595 to 1 against doing the trick . . . 80-year-old Amos Alonzo Stagg and 63-year-old Bob Zuppke will sit on the bench together at the all-stars vs Chicago Bears football game at Chicago Aug. 28.

Hit-and-Error

Philadelphia scribes say this actually happened, which probably explains the Phils' position in the National League Standings . . . The other day manager Hans Lobert flashed the hit-and-run signal to one of his players. The batter stepped out of the box, beckoned Lobert over from the coaching line and whispered: "You better try something else, Hans. Even our opponents didn't get that one."

"Unintentional."

Jimmie Cagney, the movie tough guy, will drive Bill Cane's trotter, Millie's mite, an exhibition mile at Goshen tomorrow to boost the sale of war bonds and stamps. . .Lee Savold, who is bidding to become an important heavyweight again, must whip Tony Musto in Washington tonight in order to get that scrap with Tami Mauriello in the fall. . .When Vern Hoschett, catcher for the Hoplin (Mo.) western association club, got a letter from his dad saying, "I'm paying $3.75 a day for farm hands now," Vern quit the club and went right home.

Old Country Football

London, Aug. 10—(CP Cable)—The Scottish football season opened today with the champion Rangers getting off to a good start by beating St. Mirren, 1-0, in the Southern League.

Hibernians, regarded as Rangers' likeliest challengers, defeated Albion Rovers, 3-1, while Celtic played a 2-2 draw with Dumbarton.

Rangers second team followed the senior club's lead with a 2-1 victory over Dundee United in a Northern League opener.

Play in the English Leagues begin Aug. 29.

LOST TO GIANTS

Philadelphia, Aug. 9.—(AP)—Cliff Melton, lanky southpaw who won eleven games for New York Giants before July 4 but has not triumphed since, will be lost to the club for the remainder of the season, Manager Mel Ott said Saturday.

Ott said Melton would go to the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore for the removal of "chips" from his left elbow.

LAYNE DISCHARGED

Hillis Layne has been discharged by the army and hopes to be able to return to the Washington club and play third base. A chronic vein trouble in his left leg made him unfit.

PLAYING MANAGER

Wes Ferrel, Manager of the Lynchburg Club in the Virginia League, plays second part of the time.

Investigation of two deposits of magnesite in the Brazilian State of Bahia, each estimated to contain 40,000,000 tons, has revealed that ore in one is of refractory grade and that in the other suitable for the manufacture of magnesium metal.

LOCAL AIRMEN FINISH SECOND IN TITLE HUNT

No. 5 I.T.S. Lose to St. Thomas in Air Force Softball Finals

BEAT SCHMIDT

Toronto, Aug. 10. (CP)—Led by Lou Lucky, who pitched the three games his team played, the technical training school team from St. Thomas, Ont., took the softball championship of the No. 1 training command, Royal Canadian Air Force, at the Exhibition Grounds here Saturday.

Six teams, all champions of their district, met in the final. In the first game St. Thomas defeated the Camp Borden Champions 11-9 and in the second game the No. 1 "M" Depot, Toronto, smashed through the team from No. 4 Wireless School Guelph, 19-10.

St. Thomas took No. 1 "M" depot, winning their second game 4-3 and in the other half of the semi-final series No. 5 Initial Training School at Belleville laced the pitching of Milt Schmidt, former Boston Bruin hockey star, and defeated the Jarvis nine 11-8.

The final contest found Belleville and St. Thomas paired and the steady pitching of Lucky provided the edge when he struck out the last two men in the ninth inning to win 3-2.

Bell Sparks Flyers

Al Bell, ace fireball hurler with the Belleville No. 5 ITS practically pitched and batted his team into the finals as Bell bested Schmidt, of the Bruins in the semi-finals. Bell hit two circuit blows in the opening game, that was won by Belleville 11 to 8.

In the final game for the provincial softball R.C.A.F. championship the St. Thomas got two aboard in the second inning to be followed by a home run, that gave the "Technical Training" lads three runs. Bell hit a home run to help his cause in this game and Weir raised the hopes of the Belleville Flyers with another hit that went for four bases. Belleville had the tying and winning runs on the base paths in Forman and Parry, but Lou Lucky struck out the last two men in the ninth to end hostilities and win the title. The No. 5 ITS team of Belleville finished second in the No. 1 Training Command, R.C.A.F., softball championships.

Lifer Can't Play Outside Baseball

Salem, Ore., Aug. 10— (AP) — Luke Crosswhite, the Oregon Penitentiary lifer with the smoke ball, was knocked off the professional baseball ladder Saturday before he had a chance to start climbing.

The 30-year-old lifer received the brush-off in quick succession from everyone concerned except the Salem Senators of the Western International League who signed him Thursday as a pitcher.

After W. G. Bramham, commissioner of minor league baseball; Charles A. Sprague, Oregon's Governor, and George Alexander, Warden of the State prison, said their pieces, the Salem Club had nothing to offer.

Bramham ruled that Crosswhite or any other convict could not be signed or played.

The warden withdrew his permission for Big Luke to pitch for Salem in a navy relief game Monday night or any other game.

The Governor said Crosswhite, convicted of slaying a state policeman ten years ago, should "not be exploited as a permanent pitcher for Salem or any other nine."

That left Big Luke right back where he was before Thursday—the star pitcher for the Oregon Pententiary's Prison Greys.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

GERALD BARRIAGE IS ON the hunt for a first baseman for his Army and Navy Vets. It seems the Vets may lose both of their initial sackers in the near future. Doug Bennett is seeking enlistment in the Canadian Navy while Vern Goyer is slated to join the army soon. If both boys are accepted at the same time Coach Kiser is up against the problem of replacing the hole that would be left at the initial corner. Under the O.A.S.A. set-up a civilian team losing a player to the armed services during a campaign may draft another player from a team of the same calibre. The last case of a military replacement of this nature we recall was when the Kingston Combines took Honey Tompkins from Peterborough to go on and win a senior "B" hockey title. However, neither Goyer nor Bennett will be called into the services until after the Vets have concluded their series with the Mountain View Bombers, which continues with the latter being the home team as the series resumes tonight.

THUS FAR THIS SEASON THE Vets and the Bombers have clashed four times, with the Barriage-led locals not losing a single decision. In their two league meetings the Vets won, although they had to play overtime to win at Mountain View. In their first play-off meeting the nines battled ten innings to an 11 to 11 tie, with Connie Harris and Freddie Smith the opposing moundsman. Harris and Smith met in a second play-off game with Connie pitching a three hitter, while Smith was shelled from the hilltop and Johnnie Ray finished as the Vets won 6 to 2. With Johnnie Bawden still on the sidelines with an injured foot Harris will be sent right back at the Bombers for his third consecutive play-off start against Ray Barrett's Bombers. Rumours are rife that Skipper Barrett will start Johnnie Ray against the Vets tonight, despite the fact Kiser and company found little difficulty in solving his slants for two runs in the two inning he laboured against them last week. The Vets should make it two straight tonight and then meet the Flyers.

WHEN CRAIG WOOD, 40-YEAR-old Marmaroneck, N.Y., golfer won the Canadian Open over the well-hazarded Mississauga course Saturday he was only one stroke over the record for the tournament established last year by Sammy Snead. Wood won the Seagram Gold Cup, $1,000 prize money and the Canadian open when he carded a 275 for the 72 holes, Snead carding a 274 score last year. Mike Turnesa was second, while Gordie Brydson, the home pro. was the top-flight Canadian to finish with a 289 card. Wood played steady golf throughout the three-day tournament, while Ben Hogan and Ralph Guldahl fell by the wayside, after Hogan had been an early tourney leader. It was the first time Wood had won the Canadian open, but his consistancy over the tricky Mississauga course proved to all why he was selected to captain the Ryder Cup American golf team of 1942.

REMEMBER WHEN BOBBY Pearce of Hamilton, Ont., sculled his way into the limelight 14 years ago today with an easy victory over Ken Myers of the United States in the Olympic sculling final at Amsterdam? After cleaning up on the world's amateurs, the former Australian ace turned professional in 1933. Pearce, who still holds the pro singles crown, won two Olympic titles and the Diamond Sculls for Canada before turning to the moneyed ranks. He has never been defeated as a professional sculler.

The harness horse lovers are to have their inning at good old Goshen N. Y. this week headed by the seventeenth racing of the rich Hambletonian stake. Ten or twelve 3-year-old trotters are expected to start in the $40,000. trotting derby with the 1941 two-year-old champion trotter, Colby Hanover the favorite at the post. Colby Hanover had a 2-year-old record of 2.04 1-4 and is being groomed by that veteran harness horse expert Fred Egan, who won the Hambletonian in 1940 with Spencer Scott, another great trotter. Another ranking three-year-old to surely start and need attention is Geo. F. Benham's "Cannonball", a trotter that boasts of a formidable two-year-old record. Incidentally it costs an owner of a horse eligible for the Hambletonian exactly $960.00 to keep his nag in good standing to walk up to the starter's stand Wednesday.

THIS AND THAT — Edgar (Hard Luck) Smith of the White Sox pitching staff, may yet get some relief before the ball season ends ... He was listed as 1A by his military draft board recently ... Craig Wood's composite score was four under par for the four 18 rounds of golf over the tricky Mississauga course ... See where Whipper (Belleville's favorite) Watson is gunning for Wild Bill Longson's world heavyweight wrestling title But who ver said there was such a thing as a world heavyweight grappling crown? .... Maybe Phil Lawson, Watson's manager, could be ... See Belleville's Art Scarlett got a hit for Hollinger against Kirkland Lake Saturday .... Joe Gordon says he's getting more power out of his Yankee hits simply because he's swinging a heavier bat these days ... Actually the R. C. A. F. is only going to sponsor senior "A" teams in centres like Toronto, Ottawa, Regina etc. ...:.. Don't worry there isn't the remotest chance of the Hume Arena being the scene of senior "A" hockey, at least not while natural ice is all that's available ... At least so indicated Sqd./Ldr. Lionel Conacher, in charge of all Air Force sports ... Bill Davis, a Scottish lad training here with the R.A.F. competed in the Canadian Open with five borrowed clubs .... Close the disengaged eye.

Gen. Bradley Praises Attitude of Russians

Moscow, Aug. 10 (AP).—Maj.-Gen. Follett Bradley, of the United States Army Air Forces, who is here on a special mission for President Roosevelt, today expressed satisfaction at the progress of his negotiations after four meetings with Soviet military authorities.

Here to expedite the flow of American supplies to Russia, he said "the general attitude (of the Russians)) has been one of sincere friendship and co-operation."

He told newspapermen the negotiations were of "considerable scope" but the exact nature or extent of progress were military secrets.

"My mission has nothing to do with a second front," he declared.

Mother and Son, Separated by War, Meet in Hamilton

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 10 —(CP)— Mother and son, parted from their native England since outbreak of war, met again here yesterday under unusual circumstances.

The mother is Mrs. Amy Reed who came to Canada as a war guest, and her son Harry, 21, who has been with the Merchant Marine since 1936—twice torpedoed and rescued at sea.

His arrival here from Trinidad where he was recovering from wounds suffered in the shelling of his ship brought about the reunion.

U.S. Tank Crews Trained in Egypt Ready for Action

Cairo, Aug. 10 — (AP)—Forward groups of United States army tank crews have virtually completed advanced training in the Egyptian desert and are ready to go into action with General Grant fighting machines.

Other groups are getting additional training in the methods of desert warfare.

RECRUITING DRIVE FOR C.W.A.C. BEGUN

A recruiting drive for the Canadian Women's Army Corps has been inaugurated in this district and an unlimited quota set for the number of recruits, according to Kingston dispatches today.

Women teachers now taking courses at Queen's University will act as information bureaus the publicize the Corps and aid in the drive when they return to their respective schools.

Recruits will be placed immediately following enlistment, according to Corps officials at M.D. No. 3 headquarters.

Potential recruits should get in touch with Captain Anita McBride, staff officer C.W.A.C. Military District Headquarters, Kingston.

SOLDIERS EXPERIENCED IN FARM WORK MAY GET HARVEST LEAVE

According to orders published by the Department of National Defence soldiers in certain classes who are experienced farm workers may be granted leave to help bring in the harvests.

Col. L. P. Sherwood, Ottawa area commandant, said "harvest leave" orders which apply to the Canadian army generally are confined to personnel serving in home war establishments of depots, or the Veterans' Guard of Canada. It does not apply to soldiers who are awaiting dispatch to training centres or units, or awaiting disposal after completing advanced or trade training.

The National Defence orders specify that pay, subsistence allowance or allowances of any kind will not be issuable during harvest time.

Soldiers will not be entitled to medical or dental attention, hospitalization or compensation due to illness, injury or death while on harvest leave, and only men who have experience in farm work are eligible.

Harvest leaves will be limited strictly for the purpose of getting in the harvest and all personnel granted harvest leave may not exceed four weeks' duration. Leave may be cancelled at any time.

REG. HINCHEY ELECTED TO DIRECTORATE OF BANDMASTERS' ASSOC.

E. Reg. Hinchey, well-known bandsman and composer-arranger of this city, was elected to the directorate of the Canadian Bandmasters' Association at the 14th annual convention held in Newmarket, Ontario.

The new president of the association is Captain T. E. Jackson, of Montreal, who succeeds Lieut. Fred Jobson, of Belleville, as head of the Dominion bandsmen.

The association forwarded a telegram to the Defence Minister, the Hon. J. L. Ralston, offering their services free of charge as instructors or advisers in establishing the 52 new bands called for recently by the Canadian Army.

Members also asked the Department of National Defence to take under consideration the question of elevating bandmasters to a rank higher than sergeant.

Vic Morris Lands 20 Pound 'Lunge In Moira River

The big ones that didn't get away continue to be caught in the Moira River between Belleville and Stoco Lake according to local fishermen reporting their weekend successes this morning. Vic Morris, recognized as being tops with his consistency in bringing home 'lunge, snagged a 20 pounder north of Corbyville while another member of his party, Ralph Weese, Front Street confectioner, had the good fortune to catch a 15 pound 'lunge, both beauties being caught within a few minutes of the other.

POLICE BLOTTER

Whether it was the result of the impending inclement weather or not will never be known, but crime was practically at a standstill in Belleville over the weekend when only one arrest was necessary, that being the result of a citizen partaking too freely of "wobble water" and disturbing the tranquility of the Sabbath. After languishing in the confines of the police cell block last night the inebriate was released on Monday with instructions to return and face charges Tuesday.

Youthful Gamblers

Following complaints of disturbances at Memorial Park on Sunday evening police apprehended three youthful gamblers who were engaged in the game of "tossing pennies" for gain, which is against the law for juveniles, especially on the Sabbath. The trio was questioned at the police station by Acting Sergeant Peter Thomson, who sent the lads home with instructions to report to the Acting Chief Constable today for further investigation.

Blood Donor Canvass Adds Over 400 Names To the List at Clinic

The Red Cross Blood Donor Clinic here took their appeal for more donors direct to the people of this city and district on Saturday, and the public responded in a measure far more generous than was at first anticipated.

As a result of the person-to-person canvass, over 400 potential donors from all walks of life added their names to the clinic list.

To the booths located at various points along the main business thoroughfares went the public. To them from white-garbed members of the Red Cross Emergency Corps and the Belleville Contact Club went the appeal. Members of the Belleville Kiwanis Club blue-bereted and efficient stood by rendering every assistance to the lady volunteers as the urgent message went forth.

Clinic officials today expressed their wholehearted appreciation of the fine response to the first street appeal in the clinic's history.

"The response almost amazed us," one stated, "and it was so successful that the booths will be placed on the streets next Saturday night so that those who missed the opportunity to sign as donors on Saturday last, will get the chance to enrol in this important war work."

Chairman Charles Richardson and his Kiwanis committee did a fine job as did the members of the Red Cross Emergency Corps.

AIR CADET SQUADRON TO GET TRY-OUT ON LINK TRAINERS

Members of the Belleville Air Cadet Squadron will get their first experience with the Link Trainers tonight when the unit will visit No. 5 Initial Training School in connection with their syllabus of training.

Under Regimental Sergeant Major Sam Johnson, the young cadets have been undergoing foot drill and other elementary training and tonight sees the first deviation from this phase of the work.

While only a comparatively few cadets are now taking the course as laid down by the Air Cadet League, the squadron ranks will be swelled, it is expected, when vacations are over and school days get under way.

Enthusiasm marks the attitude of the boys and progress thus far has been eminently satisfactory.

DISTRICT ORANGEMEN ATTEND CHURCH SERVICE

Members of the district Loyal Orange Lodges attended divine service at the Emmanuel Church on Sunday. The parade was in commemoration of the relief of Londonderry, one of the basic and historic features behind the origin of the order. Rev. S. R. Foreman of the Emmanuel Church, was the preacher for the service, that saw a large congregation of Orangemen and kindred societies join the regular church congregation in worship.

The annual Orange church parade was under the auspices of the Benjamin L.O.L. No. 274, Belleville, with visiting fraternal members of the Point Anne and Shannonville Lodges being present. The Ladies' Orange Benevolent Association joined the parade at the church for worship.

2 OFFICERS KILLED AS PIECE OF PIPE TOUCHES LIVE WIRE

Camp Debert, N. S., Aug. 10 — (CP) — Lieut. R. H. D. (Bob) Covert, 31-year old son of a former lieutenant-governor of Nova Scotia, and Lieut. Gordon Hutton, 21, Halifax, were killed today when a piece of pipe they were handling came in contact with a high tension wire at this military camp.

Both officers were members of the Princess Louise Fusiliers, a Halifax unit.

Lieut. Covert was a son of Hon. W. H. Covert of Dartmouth, N.S., lieutenant governor from 1931 to 1937.

Lieut. Hutton was a son of a prominent Halifax tobacco merchant.

A third P. L. F. officer, Lieut. W. P. Bayne of Halifax was slightly injured at the same time and is being treated for shock at Debert hospital. Bayne was able to summon assistance soon after the accident, but Covert and Hutton failed to respond to several hours of artificial respiration and other treatment at hospital.

The three were walking towards their quarters when they noticed a pipe lying across the walk. While they were moving it aside it came in contact with the high tension wires.

Spare Tires Stolen From Three Cars

Tires, perhaps one of the most valuable accessories connected with the motor vehicle today, are proverbially worth their weight in gold and whenever "rolling rubber" is stolen naturally the owner becomes rather annoyed.

That's just the position Ivan Scott, proprietor of the Hastings Motors, Front St., found himself in late last week when the spare tires on three motorcars were stolen from his premises. The tires were secured on three automobiles displayed on the company-used car lot and were apparently removed under cover of darkness.

As motor vehicle tires cannot be so readily replaced under Wartime government regulations, Mr. Scott reported the theft of the three motor car tires to police.

2 Cars Damaged At Intersection

Extensive property damage resulted in a two-car collision at the intersection of Bleecker and Victoria Avenues, early Saturday evening when automobiles driven by Ray Ruckstuhl, Carrying Place, and Oliver Duff, 219 Charles Street, met with resounding force.

P. C. Ellis investigated and was informed that Mr. Ruckstuhl had failed to observe the stop street sign as he was proceeding southerly on Bleecker Ave., while Mr. Duff was proceeding westerly on Victoria Ave., and was in collision when he was unable to halt the progress of his car, which police say had the right of way.

Damage amounting to over $400 resulted to the front of Mr. Duff's vehicle which was practically demolished as the result of the crash. A damaged front axle and radiator costing $75.00 was the extent of the damage to the Ruckstuhl car. Charges are pending police intimated today.

A MAN'S WOMAN

by JANE DIXON

CHAPTER 30
THE MIRACLE OF LOVE

Elsa came in while Kay was at the telephone checking the message to cousin Richard Kenyon. Tally Holmes was with Elsa. Kay was silent at the time. They did not notice her, but went on with whatever plot it was they were hatching.

Elsa said, "I know he'll be here. I heard Aunt Ellen tell him not to mind how late it was, she'd wait for him. We can be trying over those new songs in this room so we can't possibly help seeing him drive up. The minute he stops we'll dash out and rush him off his feet. We'll act as though of course we take it for granted he's come to see us. Then you hang on to him Tally. Make him take you home. Ask him, if you have to . . . tell him you're scared to go alone. . . tell him anything. Only hold on."

"He'll get away from me tonight over my prostrate body", Tally promised.

"I can't see why you're so keen about Gary Fowler," Elsa went on. "What if he is the big, strong male type women go for? He's poor as punk. Not a dime except what he earns. A junior engineer, Pin money and hardly that for you darling."

"He won't always be poor," Tally said. "He has a big future. The manager at the mill said so himself. I heard him tell father. Father owns one of the largest blocks of stock in the company. With me behind him, Gary can go any place he wants, straight to the top. Besides, I happen to have gone off the deep end for him. I don't know why any more than you know why you go for Ronnie Farnsworth no matter how crude he is about brushing you off. We might as well admit the truth, pet. We're a couple of spoiled brats who would rather lose their pride than lose their man".

Kay said into the 'phone, "Correct. Thank you". Then she placed the receiver on the hook and turned to face the astounded conspirators. "Good evening, ladies', she said. "I seem to be interrupting a very interesting conversation. I've been here in plain sight all the while. You really should be more careful."

"Kay!' the two chorused, drawing together for mutual protection against the common enemy.

"In person," Kay said. "I know how deliriously happy you are to see me. And please don't allow me to interfere with your pretty plans."

Elsa said, icily, "What are you doing here?"

"Who, me?" Kay laughed mirthlessly. "I live here. I'm that person who thwarts your fondest hopes. If you'll excuse me now —you will excuse me won't you?— You'll be able to bear my leaving you".

Tally was unable to conceal her chagrin. "You would come back", she said. "It was too much to expect you'd clear out . . that you'd stay cleared out. . . for a while at least . . .long enough for—"

"For you to get your man? But Tally haven't you heard? Competition is the life of man-hunting. Nothing makes for an exciting man-hunt like a lively rival". Kay was surprised to find that venom, not irony, flavored her words. For some time she had felt an active dislike for Tally. Now she knew, she came near to hating her.

"You didn't by chance bring Ronnie Farnsworth with you? It would be too cruel, leaving him rattling around in New York, after helping him bum up the town. Poor Ronnie!"

"No. I didn't bring Ron with me. On the contrary, Ron brought me back with him. We came by plane. Stunning flight".

Elsa's face was grey, splotched with red wrath. "You dare show your face here after what you've done, You and Ronnie . . in New York. . .flying around the country alone with a man. . disgracing your family".

"Oh, but we weren't alone". Kays calm was infuriating. "It was a cabin plane. Let me see there were one . . two . . yes there were six other passengers, not counting the pilots and the stewardess. Good night now. Pleasant landings".

Kay awoke with a song in her heart.

She was in love. She loved Gary Fowler. And—marvel of marvels—Gary loved her. She had come home to . . . paradise.

They knew it last night, this miracle of love; the moment they met, on the worn path, in the moonlight. Kay had stepped into the garden to catch again the homely scent—see the tangle of old-fashioned flowers, the pasture beyond the lilacs. Gary drove up in his funny old car with the trick engine. Kay called to him, joyously.

He was out of the car, down the path in quick, long strides. She went straight into his arms.

"Gary!" she said, clinging to him. "Gary!"

His lips were against her hair.

She lifted her lips. "I love you Gary", she said, "now and for always".

The miracle of love had happened as simply as that.

Afterward, for a while in the garden, time stood still while the stars swung like festive lanterns in an ageless sapphire sky.

"You'll marry me?" Gary asked at last. He lifted Kay's face so that the moon would let him read her answer.

"Yes. I'll marry you. I want to be your wife, eternally". The moment was almost unbearably sweet; so drenched with happiness that it was close to pain.

Gary's kiss was reverent.

"My wife", he whispered. "God's in His Heaven!"

For a long time they sat in the garden making plans, dreaming dreams as lovers do.

"Gary," Kay said, wistfully, "would you mind if I went on with my work at National Candy, for a little while, long enough for me to prove to myself that getting on isn't just an accident, that I can take my place in this modern world in which women, often, must do a man's job for the survival of themselves and those dependent upon them? National telephoned me just before you came. They want me to come back at the earliest possible moment. If you're coming to New York —we'd be together Gary".

Gary said, drawing her closer in his arms, "I want you now, tonight, but . . .it's for you to say when. Maybe a bit of a courtship would be a happy prelude to marriage. I'll be at the home plant for some time. You could bring your mother on to New York as soon as this business of the Kenyon house is settled. I'll be there to see the two of you don't get lost in the subway and starve to death trying to find an exit".

"I was thinking. . .Uncle Asa. . Aunt Cora. . . Elsa . ..what will they do? What can they do?"

"Three adults, sound in mind and body? Give them a chance to find out what they can do. They may surprise you. Their kind often does, when it's a case of tread water or drown. Kay, we'll not have a lot of money. We'll have enough for comfort, a few of the luxuries maybe. But out there in the future, over the far horizon, who can tell what will happen?"

Kay said, rubbing her nose against a tweed shoulder, "We don't need a lot of money. We're rich. We have love; we have tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow. And while we're 'cotin' as Susie in the Sweet Shop says, we can be building up a small bulwark against a rainy day".

"Look here, young lady," Gary tipped Kay's face up into the moonlight", I'm the bulwark-builder for this family. No 'we' about it. And there'll be no rainy days in the Fowler family. I consulted the weather man and he says, 'Continued fair and warmer'."

THE END

Little Benny's Note Book

We were listening to music on the radio, and it stopped and the announcer said, I know you will al be glad at this time to hear a few words from Mr. Stanley D. Donnly, one of our most prominent attornies and the vice president of the League of Patriots. I take great pleasure in introducing Mr. Donnly, he said.

Speak up, Stan, pop said, and Mr. Donnly said on the radio, I know you have all been doing your patirotic utmost tords defraying the expesnes of this most expensive of all wars, but I urge you to do more than your utmost. In fact the time is unfortunately near when you will not only be asked but obliged to make sacrifices of which you now have only the faintest inkling. You smokers, for example. I dont need to ask you which is the more important, rolling a shell casing or rolling a cigar, and the time may come, more quickly than any of you realize, when one cigar a day, or even one cigar a week, may have to satisfly your lust for tobacco he said.

Yee gods, why the rush? pop said. Sufficient unto the day is the nicotine thereof. An announcement like that is enough to start all the cigar hoarders in the country in motion. I probably wont be able to find a Queen Billie cigar in any shop in town tomorrow, he said.

Anr he quick turned the radio to another station, being some man saying, The time is near, ladies, when one new dress a year is almost more than you may expect, and speaking of expecting, please dont expect to find any buttons on it, and if you smugly think you will be satisfied with hooks and eyes, please dont expect to find any hooks and eyes either.

Oh keep quiet, ma said. I'm doing without enough things now without listening to ghost stories, she said.

And she quick turned off the radio, and pop said, If I had some tear gas we could all enjoy a good cry, but what 5th collumist is going to sell us any tear gas?

And he got in back of the sporting page and ma started to do the bridge problem.

Some Winnipeg Stores Charged With Illegal Selling of Tea, Coffee

Winnipeg, Aug. 8 (CP).—George R. Cormack, regional foods officer, is investigating charges that a number of Winnipeg grocers continued last Sunday and Monday to sell unlimited quantities of tea and coffee after the radio announcement Sunday that these would be rationed, "effective immediately".

The charge was made in a statement yesterday by H. Moore, secretary of Food Distributors of Manitoba, Inc., a retail merchants' association. Mr. Moore said the stores had "flagrantly violated" the regulations of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, and that a number of the grocers had sold out their entire stocks of tea and coffee.

He said he had urged a proclamation be issued prohibiting these grocers from replenishing stocks until a thorough investigation has been made, in a telegram sent yesterday to J. G. Taggart, Food Administrator of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board.

(In Ottawa, M. W. Mackenzie, chief of the rationing division of the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, said appropriate action would be taken by the board if the charges are substantiated. Board officials in Ottawa, however, did not confirm receipt of a telegram from Mr. Moore.)

British Troops Assist Police To Suppress Mobs

28 Dead Over 200 Injured in Strife—Disorders Spread More Widely

FEAR COMMUNAL RIOTING

By PRESTON GROVER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Bombay, Aug. 11 (AP).—British troops, some armed with machine-guns, came to the aid of police today as thirteen more persons were killed and thirty injured in ten instances in which gunfire was used to break up Bombay mobs participating in Mohandas K. Gandhi's civil disobedience campaign.

The toll of casualties since outbreaks began Sunday thus was brought to 28 dead and more than 200 injured, with disorders and mill stoppages spreading wider over India and indications that dreaded communal rioting between Hindus and Moslems might break out.

The Bombay government announced that troops had participated in the firing on crowds on one or two occasions. Police marched in formation through the various disturbed sections.

Stores Being Closed Up.

From Bombay on the west coast to Calcutta on the east coast came reports of demonstrations, hartals (the closing of stores) and goondaism (rowdyism) as the call for a total shutdown of trade spread to Mohandas K. Gandhi's turbulent followers with a promise from their leaders of victory in two months in what they called their 'final struggle' against British rule.

Operation to Remove Key Proves Successful

Philadelphia, Aug. 11 (AP).—Sitting up in bed with her dolls, four-year-old Sharon Bell agreed with daddy today it was too bad he came all the way from Vancouver, B.C., only to miss her operation by two hours.

Last night Dr. C. L. Jackson of Temple University Hospital's bronchoscopic clinic removed from Sharon's throat a tiny metal key—the kind used to open tin cans. Doctors have promised that Sharon can head home again in about a week.

Sharon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Bell, swallowed a key used to open a peanut can Aug. 3 and after three operations failed to remove the obstruction the child made the 2,500-mile trip here by plane and train.

Sharon and her aunt, Mrs. Eileen Murchison, arrived in Toronto Saturday morning—there was no room in the plane for the anxious father. From Toronto they flew to New York and the remainder of the trip was made by train, arriving at the hospital Saturday night.

The father obtained plane accommodation Sunday and he arrived in Toronto the same night. He left by plane yesterday and arrived in Philadelphia two hours after the operation.

Many P. E. I. Schools Do Not Open Today For Lack of Teachers

Charlottetown, Aug. 11—(CP)—It's school opening day in rural Prince Edward Island today, but the doors remain locked on many of the little one-roomed school houses because there aren't enough teachers to go around.

Hundreds of students are getting an extension of their summer holidays because of the teaching shortage. Educationists last night had no complete picture of the number of schools still lacking teachers, but unofficial estimates ran to considerable more than 40.

R.A.F. FLIER KILLED NEAR CALGARY

Calgary, Aug. 11 — (CP) — A Royal Air Force flier from the No. 37 Service Flying Training School was killed yesterday when his plane crashed near Lanzdon, 15 miles southeast of Calgary.

1 Killed, 3 Hurt In Explosion

OTTAWA, Aug. 11 — (CP) — One man was killed and three slightly injured early today when a small explosion occurred in a "blocking press" of the smokeless powder operation at a southwestern Quebec explosives plant, the Munitions and Supply Department announced today.

Alexander Belisle, 27, married, of Valleyfield, Que., died 20 minutes after being admitted to hospital. Names of the other three hurt in the blast were not made public but it was known they left hospital after treatment.

About $3,000 damage was done—principally to the blocking press. The damage will be repaired within a few hours.

Stephan, Losing Some Of His Bravado, Says He's in an Awful Mess

Milan, Mich., Aug. 11 (AP)—Max Stephan, 50-year-old German-born American traitor, sentenced to hang Nov. 13, has lost his bravado, and yesterday told his Attorney:-

"I'm in a hell of a mess."

"I never said," the rotund Stephan declared, "that I'd bet all the tea in China, or anything else, that I wouldn't hang."

Stephan had shouted after his sentence that "Germany will not let me hang."

His Attorney, Verne C. Amberson, came to the Federal correctional institution here, where the execution will be held, to consider an appeal from the sentence imposed by Federal Judge Arthur J Tuttle. No decision was reached at the first meeting.

Stephan was convicted of traitorously aiding Lieut. Peter Krug, Nazi flier, who had escaped from a war prisoners' camp at Bowmanville, Ont. Krug was captured in San Antonio, Tex.

Davoud Gets Chance At Snooping Raiders

London, Aug. 11 (CP).—Renewed Nazi air activity over Britain has given Wing Cmdr. Paul Y. Davoud of Kingston, Ont., leader of a Canadian Beaufighter squadron of night fighters, a chance to train his cannon on snooping raiders after a long spell of idleness.

He claimed one aircraft probably destroyed and another damaged. The C.O.'s observer, an R.A.F. pilot officer, saw pieces flying off the wing tips of the Heinkel 111 after his skipper had given the raider a burst. The Heinkel was last seen diving at 390 miles an hour into a cloud at 1,000 feet. Later, a DR217 was sighted at 14,000 feet and Davoud chased it in a screaming dive down to 2,500 feet. Hits were observed on the port wing and fuselage.

ALLIED BOMBERS WIDEN ASSAULTS ON SOLOMONS

Land Invasion Appears Centred in Tulagi And Guadalcanal Islands

U .S. CRUISER SUNK

By MURLIN SPENCER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Aug. 11 —(AP)— Allied forces thrown into the air, land and seaborne invasion of the Solomon Islands are under strong Japanese counter attack but "we are holding our own," Prime Minister John Curtin announced today.

The prime minister's brief statement was the first word from an official source in Australia on the main operations in the Solomons. Communiques issued by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Southwest Pacific Headquarters have dealt only with air support given the invasion thrust directed by Vice-Admiral Robert Ghormley, commander of Allied naval forces in the South Pacific area.

Supplies of Highest Value

An Australian government spokesman announced, meanwhile, that shipments of supplies of "highest possible value" that would "revolutionize offensive operations in the north" were landed recently in Australia.

"Supplies constantly are coming in," said the spokesman, who gave much credit to the negotiations recently conducted in Washington by H. V. Evatt, Australian attorney general and minister of external affairs.

"In three or four months Australia already has had results of Evatt's visit in the arrival of all kinds, such as army equipment, war materials and tanks," the spokesman said.

Widening of Assaults on Japs

Washington, Aug. 11 —(AP)— Widening assaults by Allied bombers under Gen. Douglas MacArthur's command today were reported covering the Allied naval-marine invasions of the Solomon Islands in a battle that may mark the offensive turning point in the war of the Pacific.

From Allied headquarters in Australia came word that bombers had taken off in the fourth day of the battle to smash at Japanese

German Losses On Leningrad Front Due to Soviet Fliers

Moscow, Aug. 11 (AP).—Leningrad front headquarters reported today that in one year on that front Soviet fliers had destroyed 2,190 German planes, 1,750 tanks, 1,000 cannon and 4,500 trucks, and that German manpower losses equalled eight divisions.

NAZIS' LATEST PLANE CAPTURED

This is the latest Nazi single-seat fighter plane, the Focke Wulf 190. It was brought down in England after an engagement with fighter planes of the R.A.F. over the channel. An armed patrol where the plane came down rushed up and overpowered the pilot before he could make good his efforts to ignite the plane. It is shown with the R.A.F. roundels painted on its sides and wings as it was tested by an R.A.F. expert. The Focke Wulf has a speed of 326 miles per hour, carrying four 20-mm cannon and two 7.29-mm machine-guns. The Germans did not want this plane to fall into the hands of the British and the Focke Wulf was used sparingly in raids over the channel.

Farm Helper Burned To Death, Sidney Homestead Destroyed

Thos. Parson, 38, Victim, When John Connor Residence in Oak Hills Takes Fire

SEARCH FOR BODY

One man lost his life and one of the finest old homesteads in Sidney township was burned to the ground at an early hour this morning, when fire of an unknown origin completely destroyed the home of Mr. John Connor, Oak Hills. Mr. Connor's hired man, Thomas Parson, aged 38, lost his life in the blaze when he failed to emerge from his room after being aroused by members of the family after the fire was discovered.

Miss Dorothy Connor, VON nurse in Belleville, who was holidaying at her father's home, was first to discover the fire when she aroused at approximately two o'clock to find the homestead a mass of flames. She immediately aroused the other members of the family who carried the crippled mother from the burning home.

Parson Answered Alarm

Mr. Connor, after calling Belleville "central" to give the alarm to neighbors over the telephone, fought the flames in the upstairs with pails of water, but already the fire was between the stairway and the room occupied by Mr. Parson, the Connor's hired man. Mr. Parson answered as Mr. Connor called to him and it was thought he was getting out of bed to escape from the flames, but he failed to make his appearance outside the burning building and it is thought he lost his life in the fire.

Provincial police and the coroner this morning visited the scene of the fire, but the embers of the razed homestead were still too hot to search for the body of the missing man.

Fire Confined to Residence

Neighbors of the Connor family and summer campers at Oak Lake quickly answered the alarm as telephone operators from Belleville spread the news of the fire. Fortunately the wind was blowing the fire away from other nearby farm buildings and only the residence fell to the flames. Practically all the furniture in the lower part of the dwelling was carried to safety but upstairs household effects were lost.

The Connor home was one of the finest in Sidney township and was the homestead of the late Dr. Emma Connor, who for many years practised medicine in this city. Two of Mr. Connor's daughters, Miss Grace and Miss Dorothy Connor, were holidaying at the homestead and were present at the time of the fire. Mr. and Mrs. Connor, with Mr. Parson, and the household help, Miss Emma Mumby, were other occupants of the house at the time of the fire.

Neighbor Cut by Glass

Mr. Harold Detlor, one of the neighbors who assisted in fighting the flames and in carrying household furniture to safety, was severely cut by flying glass during the height of the fire and had to be taken to Belleville General Hospital where he is under the care of Dr. G. H. Stobie. He will be confined to the hospital for several days.

140,000 DRAFTEES NOW IN ARMY SINCE 1ST CALL-UP

Total Exceeds by 15,000 The Number Conscripted in First Great War

50,000 ARE VOLUNTEERS

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Aug. 11 — (CP) — Two years after Canada took the first step in compulsory military service for the Second Great War, upwards of 140,000 men have been delivered to and accepted by the army, it was learned today at National War Services Department.

This total exceeds by 15,000 or more the total number conscripted in the First Great War — and it does not include the figures for August and September, the two heaviest months for call-ups since the drafting of men began a few months after the fall of France.

The Department of National Defence requisitioned 25,000 men for August and 20,000 for September. Returns for August are not complete and it is not yet known to what extent calls issued fall short of or exceed the objective of 25,000 fit men.

The total of more than 140,000 is arrived at with returns for July partially complete. The total up to the end of June was 135,880. The July requisition was 15,000 men but a final count has not yet been made of the number delivered on that requisition.

Those liable to call under present regulations are single men and childless widowers aged 20 to 40.

Though men called up compulsorily are not required to serve outside Canada, officials report that between 35 and 40 per cent of those who enter the army on call volunteer for service anywhere in the world.

Gen. La Fleche Director

Administration of the compulsory system is under the direction of Maj.-Gen. L. R. LaFleche, associate deputy minister of National War Services, who says the system has worked smoothly and the men have been obtained without disturbances or clashes.

One of the problems of call-up officials is to keep pace with the men who enlist voluntarily before they are required to report for service. They have to call a larger number of men than they otherwise would, in the first instance, to allow for those who have enlisted of their own account since registration and who fail to report their enlistment to registration officials.

They also have to estimate and allow for the number who will enlist voluntarily as soon as they receive their call-up notice and before the time set for them to report.

Officials estimate that since compulsory service started some 50,000 men called up have enlisted voluntarily before responding in response to their call but after receiving notice.

By so doing they have the satisfaction of saying they entered over the branch of the service in the service as volunteers and they also have somewhat more choice which they will serve.

Russian Press Appeals to Forces To Save Russia

Nazi Cut Gap Thru Russian Defence At Armavir and Reds Withdraw

FIGHTING AT MAIKOP

By EDDIE GILMORE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Aug. 11 (AP).—The official mouthpieces of the Red Army, the Communist Party and the Soviet government appealed to the fighting forces today to save Russia, acknowledging in the plainest words the gravity of the position as axis armies ground through the smoking Maikop oilfields and the scorched wheatlands near Krasknodar.

"The fate of our country is being decided in the violent battles on the Don and the Kuban," declared Red Star, organ of the Red Army.

It quoted the Russian 18th century general who told his troops: "We are surrounded by mountains. . . . To retreat is shame. . . . We cannot expect help from anybody. . . . We stand on the edge of the abyss."

"Danger Has Increased."

Izvestia, the government newspaper, asserted "the danger hanging over our country has increased" and said "the enemy, despite tremendous losses, continues to rush into the depths of the nation. In the name of the freedom and independence of the fatherland, of your people and your children, halt and repulse the enemy".

Pravda, the Communist organ, urged: "By iron firmness, bar every way to the German hordes". The newspaper said "the enemy drives deeper into the country. Disregarding losses, the Hitlerite Fascists summon all their forces to occupy new, important districts."

The German drive into the Caucasus placed the Red fleet's Black Sea naval stations at Novorossisk and Tuapse in grave danger.

Separate German columns were within 60 miles of the two seaports as the Nazi invaders spread out in the northern foothills of the Caucasian mountains and pressed the Russian defenders back toward the Black Sea coast south of the Kuban River.

(A German spokesman asserted last night that Novorossisk had been attacked by dive bombers, the German radio claimed.)

Germans Force New Gap

Pouring a seemingly-endless supply of tanks and troops into the struggle, the Germans forced a new gap in the Russian defences at Armavir, about 110 miles east of Krasnodar, and the Red Army withdrew to new positions, today's mid-day communique said.

As the successful German lunge into the Caucasus multiplied the difficulties of the Red Army, United States Ambassador Admiral William H. Standley declared last night "I have not found the slightest indication that the Russians have any idea of quitting."

700 MILLION LBS. BACON AND HAM NEEDED BY BRITAIN

Ten Million Hogs Required From Canada Under Proposed New Order

CROPS HELP IN FEEDING

Ottawa, Aug. 11 (CP)—Britain is in the market for 700,000,000 pounds of Canadian ham and bacon—a quantity so vast that it will require the boosting of Canada's hog gradings to the all-out production figure of 10,000,000.

Those, say agriculture department officials, are Britain's requirements under a new bacon agreement being negotiated to replace the existing contract which expires next October and under which Canada is supplying 600,000,000 pounds of bacon. In Britain, bacon means either ham or bacon.

100 Million Pounds Boost

The new agreement would boost by 100,000,000 pounds the quantity Canada would have to supply and would place heavy strain upon the Canadian hog industry, which already has outdone itself in increasing hog production since the outbreak of war.

In 1938, gradings totalled 3,245,- ceinving notice. 515. A year later they were 3,706,000 and in 1940 the figure had jumped to 6,216,000. The hope this year is that marketings will reach 7,000,000 hogs.

M-3 Tanks Show They Can 'Take it'

Detroit, Aug. 11 — (AP) — Workers in the Detroit (Chrysler) tank arsenal heard today how a German 88 millimetre anti-tank gun had to hit an American-built M-3 army tank 12 times before it was stopped.

Maj.-Gen. Levin H. Campbell, Jr., Chief of Ordnance, Services of Supply, related the incident in presenting to the plant and workers the joint army-navy "E" award "for high achievement in the production of war equipment."

He told also how another M-3 was hit by fifty 50-millimetre, armor-piercing, high explosive shells and was not put out of action.

Chrysler recently switched from the M-3 to the newer, more powerful M-4, all-welded tank and this, Gen. Campbell said, is at the front. The M-4's, he said, have heavier armor and are faster than the M13.

"Though the enemy may capture the first M-4 to appear on the battlefield (and he hasn't," the Ordnance Chief continued, "it will take him a year to duplicate the tank, or even make corresponding improvements in his new models on the production lines.

"By that time, we'll have an altogether new one out!"

Crews of Rescue Tug Service Lead Venturesome Life Saving Vessels

By FOSTER BARCLAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

A British Port, Aug. 11 (CP).—In this big harbor crammed with warships and big merchant vessels the "little fellows" don't rate a second glance.

But in the Atlantic, the North Sea and the Channel some of these "little fellows"—the rescue tug service of the Royal Navy—have earned an envious reputation.

In any type of weather crews of these scrawny but powerful boats are always ready to pull on their oilskins and rush to vessels in distress, many of them through enemy action, 50, 60 and sometimes 1,000 miles away on the ocean. How many tons of valuable shipping they have saved is a secret.

"The service has rescued at least 1,000,000 tons," said a veteran seaman, waving a fist at a tug chugging noisily into port with a 10,000-ton merchant vessel in tow. "And that little one has done more than her bit. Saved more than 100,000 tons since war started, she has."

As the sailor spoke Skipper Tom Gibbons of the Royal Navy manoeuvred the big vessel to a dock where the connecting hawsers were quickly thrown off and the tug chugged to another jetty.

Later the big, raw-boned skipper explained some of the adventures the tugs endure to bring crippled merchant ships into port. Sometimes the wrecks have been abandoned and waterlogged after two or three days' wallowing in the ocean, he said .

"It's no fun handling small boats in mid-Atlantic with a limited crew," he said. "We don't lower a boat if we can help it. We try to get alongside and somebody makes a jump from the bows.

"We are never quite sure if the merchantman is sinking, so we don't waste time, but make our lines fast and start off for home."

Strange sights meet these little ocean-going vessels. They have often arrived at their destination to find that all that remained was a half ship floating. But they still try to bring them home.

Tension Increases in Conquered Nations as Nazis Take More Hostages

By The Canadian Press

Second-front talk increased in Europe's conquered nations today as Nazi firing-squads took nearly 100 more lives and the Germans clamped down with ruthless new measures to prevent an uprising in the event of an Allied invasion of Europe.

Ninety-three Frenchmen were executed in Paris and at least six Czechs in old Czecho-Slovakia, the latter on charges of "high treason and favoring the enemy."

Roundabout reports from Vichy said pro-German Premier Pierre Laval of France had called up police and troop reinforcements to protect the hated Vichy regime against a rumored coup d'etat.

Simultaneously, the Netherlands news agency Aneta quoted Swiss reports that the Germans had seized 200 more hostages to be "held responsible with their lives for the conduct of the Netherlands people in the event of a British invasion of Holland."

Dispatches from Berne, Switzerland, said the Germans had threatened reprisals against every man, woman and child in occupied France as an aftermath of new anti-Nazi outbreaks which sent the 93 more Frenchmen to their deaths before German firing squads.

Underground reports from Belgium and Holland told of new preparations by the Germans against a possible Allied invasion.

One report said a high Nazi officer in Belgium had been authorized to apply the torch to everything in sight if the Germans were forced to retreat before Allied armies.

A BBC broadcast said the Germans were staging large-scale "invasion exercises" in Norway, climaxed by a big parade of Nazi soldiers through Bergen, on the Norwegian West coast, the chief centre of opposition to the Germans and the Quisling government.

In Belgium, German authorities were reported to have arrested 20 more hostages in reprisal for recent explosions in the Liege district.

Fighters, Bombers Raid Hankow, Meet No A-A Fire, No Air Opposition

Chungking, Aug. 11 — (AP) — Fighter-escorted bombers in a low-altitude attacks on Hankow and vicinity bombed newly-constructed warehouses and other objectives yesterday, Lt.-Gen. Joseph Stilwell's headquarters announced today.

Hankow, Japan's greatest inland base in China, is on the Yangtze River and has been a frequent target of American bombers

The war bulletin said there was no anti-aircraft fire and no air opposition

"Incendiary as well as high-explosive bombs were dropped," it said. "A number of hits were [illegible]ored in the town and on newly-constructed warehouses. At least two large fires were started."

The Hankow raid followed one Sunday by American Airmen on Haiphong, French Indo-China port where a Chinese army spokesman said today. Japanese reinforcements for Thailand and Burma landed around July 27. These enemy forces and others which arrived at the same time at Saigon, farther down the Indo-China coast, possibly will be used in an attack on India or Yunnan province in Southern China, this informant said.

Japanese troops were reported also massing in [illegible] anese warships again active off the southeast coast, indicating a possible new invasion of Fukien province, it was stated.

1 Killed, 3 Hurt In Explosion

OTTAWA, Aug. 11 — (CP) — One man was killed and three slightly injured early today when a small explosion occurred in a "blocking press" of the smokeless powder operation at a southwestern Quebec explosives plant, the Munitions and Supply Department announced today.

Alexander Belisle, 27, married, of Valleyfield, Que., died 20 minutes after being admitted to hospital. Names of the other three hurt in the blast were not made public but it was known they left hospital after treatment.

About $3,000 damage was done - principally to the blocking press. The damage will be repaired within a few hours.

Stephan, Losing Some Of His Bravado, Says He's in an Awful Mess

Milan, Mich., Aug. 11 (AP)—Max Stephan, 50-year-old German-born American traitor, sentenced to hang Nov. 13, has lost his bravado, and yesterday told his Attorney:-

"I'm in a hell of a mess."

"I never said," the rotund Stephan declared, "that I'd bet all the tea in China, or anything else, that I wouldn't hang."

Stephan had shouted after his sentence that "Germany will not let me hang."

His Attorney, Verne C. Amberson, came to the Federal correctional institution here, where the execution will be held, to consider an appeal from the sentence imposed by Federal Judge Arthur J Tuttle. No decision was reached at the first meeting.

Stephan was convicted of traitorously aiding Lieut. Peter Krug, Nazi flier, who had escaped from a war prisoners' camp at Bowmanville, Ont. Krug was captured in San Antonio, Tex.

Davoud Gets Chance At Snooping Raiders

London, Aug. 11 (CP).—Renewed Nazi air activity over Britain has given Wing Cmdr. Paul Y. Davoud of Kingston, Ont., leader of a Canadian Beaufighter squadron of night fighters, a chance to train his cannon on snooping raiders after a long spell of idleness. .

He claimed one aircraft probably destroyed and another damaged. The C.O.'s observer, an R.A.F. pilot officer, saw pieces flying off the wing tips of the Heinkel 111 after his skipper had given the raider a burst. The Heinkel was last seen diving at 390 miles an hour into a cloud at 1,000 feet. Later, a DR217 was sighted at 14,000 feet and Davoud chased it in a screaming dive down to 2,500 feet. Hits were observed on the port wing and fuselage.

Crews of Rescue Tug Service Lead Venturesome Life Saving Vessels

By FOSTER BARCLAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

A British Port, Aug. 11 (CP).—In this big harbor crammed with warships and big merchant vessels the "little fellows" don't rate a second glance.

But in the Atlantic, the North Sea and the Channel some of these "little fellows"—the rescue tug service of the Royal Navy—have earned an envious reputation.

In any type of weather crews of these scrawny but powerful boats are always ready to pull on their oilskins and rush to vessels in distress, many of them through enemy action, 50, 60 and sometimes 1,000 miles away on the ocean. How many tons of valuable shipping they have saved is a secret.

"The service has rescued at least 1,000,000 tons," said a veteran seaman, waving a fist at a tug chugging noisily into port with a 10,000-ton merchant vessel in tow. "And that little one has done more than her bit. Saved more than 100,000 tons since war started, she has."

As the sailor spoke Skipper Tom Gibbons of the Royal Navy manoeuvred the big vessel to a dock where the connecting hawsers were quickly thrown off and the tug chugged to another jetty.

Later the big, raw-boned skipper explained some of the adventures the tugs endure to bring crippled merchant ships into port. Sometimes the wrecks have been abandoned and waterlogged after two or three days' wallowing in the ocean, he said .

"It's no fun handling small boats in mid-Atlantic with a limited crew," he said. "We don't lower a boat if we can help it. We try to get alongside and somebody makes a jump from the bows.

"We are never quite sure if the merchantman is sinking, so we don't waste time, but make our lines fast and start off for home."

Strange sights meet these little ocean-going vessels. They have often arrived at their destination to find that all that remained was a half ship floating. But they still try to bring them home.

ALLIED BOMBERS WIDEN ASSAULTS ON SOLOMONS

Land Invasion Appears Centred in Tulagi And Guadalcanal Islands

By MURLIN SPENCER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Allied Headquarters, Australia, Aug. 11 —(AP)— Allied forces thrown into the air, land and seaborne invasion of the Solomon Islands are under strong Japanese counter attack but "we are holding our own," Prime Minister John Curtin announced today.

The prime minister's brief statement was the first word from an official source in Australia on the main operations in the Solomons. Communiques issued by Gen. Douglas MacArthur's Southwest Pacific Headquarters have dealt only with air support given the invasion thrust directed by Vice-Admiral Robert Ghormley, commander of Allied naval forces in the South Pacific area.

Supplies of Highest Value

An Australian government spokesman announced, meanwhile, that shipments of supplies of "highest possible value" that would "revolutionize offensive operations in the north" were landed recently in Australia.

"Supplies constantly are coming in," said the spokesman, who gave much credit to the negotiations recently conducted in Washington by H. V. Evatt, Australian attorney general and minister of external affairs.

"In three or four months Australia already has had results of Evatt's visit in the arrival of all kinds, such as army equipment, war materials and tanks," the spokesman said.

Widening of Assaults on Japs

Washington, Aug. 11 —(AP)—Widening assaults by Allied bombers under Gen. Douglas MacArthur's command today were reported covering the Allied naval-marine invasions of the Solomon Islands in a battle that may mark the offensive turning point in the war of the Pacific.

From Allied headquarters in Australia came word that bombers had taken off in the fourth day of the battle to smash at Japanese

German Losses On Leningrad Front Due to Soviet Fliers

Moscow, Aug. 11 (AP).—Leningrad front headquarters reported today that in one year on that front Soviet fliers had destroyed 2,190 German planes, 1,750 tanks, 1,000 cannon and 4,500 trucks, and that German manpower losses equalled eight divisions.

NAZIS' LATEST PLANE CAPTURED

This is the latest Nazi single-seat fighter plane, the Focke Wulf 190. It was brought down in England after an engagement with fighter planes of the R.A.F. over the channel. An armed patrol where the plane came down rushed up and overpowered the pilot before he could make good his efforts to ignite the plane. It is shown with the R.A.F. roundels painted on its sides and wings as it was tested by an R.A.F. expert. The Focke Wulf has a speed of 326 miles per hour, carrying four 20-mm cannon and two 7.29-mm machine-guns. The Germans did not want this plane to fall into the hands of the British and the Focke Wulf was used sparingly in raids over the channel.

Farm Helper Burned To Death, Sidney Homestead Destroyed

Thos. Parson, 38, Victim, When John Connor Residence in Oak Hills Takes Fire

SEARCH FOR BODY

One man lost his life and one of the finest old homesteads in Sidney township was burned to the ground at an early hour this morning when fire of an unknown origin completely destroyed the home of Mr. John Connor, Oak Hills. Mr. Connor's hired man, Thomas Parson, aged 38, lost his life in the blaze when he failed to emerge from his room after being aroused by members of the family after the fire was discovered.

Miss Dorothy Connor, VON nurse in Belleville, who was holidaying at her father's home, was first to discover the fire when she aroused at approximately two o'clock to find the homestead a mass of flames. She immediately aroused the other members of the family who carried the crippled mother from the burning home.

Parson Answered Alarm

Mr. Connor, after calling Belleville "central" to give the alarm to neighbors over the telephone, fought the flames in the upstairs with pails of water, but already the fire was between the stairway and the room occupied by Mr. Parson, the Connor's hired man. Mr. Parson answered as Mr. Connor called to him and it was thought he was getting out of bed to escape from the flames, but he failed to make his appearance outside the burning building and it is thought he lost his life in the fire.

Provincial police and the coroner this morning visited the scene of the fire, but the embers of the razed homestead were still too hot to search for the body of the missing man.

Fire Confined to Residence

Neighbors of the Connor family and summer campers at Oak Lake quickly answered the alarm as telephone operators from Belleville spread the news of the fire. Fortunately the wind was blowing the fire away from other nearby farm buildings and only the residence fell to the flames. Practically all the furniture in the lower part of the dwelling was carried to safety but upstairs household effects were lost.

The Connor home was one of the finest in Sidney township and was the homestead of the late Dr. Emma Connor, who for many years practised medicine in this city. Two of Mr. Connor's daughters, Miss Grace and Miss Dorothy Connor, were holidaying at the homestead and were present at the time of the fire. Mr. and Mrs. Connor, with Mr. Parson, and the household help, Miss Emma Mumby, were other occupants of the house at the time of the fire.

Neighbor Cut by Glass

Mr. Harold Detlor, one of the neighbors who assisted in fighting the flames and in carrying household furniture to safety, was severely cut by flying glass during the height of the fire and had to be taken to Belleville General Hospital where he is under the care of Dr. G. H. Stobie. He will be confined to the hospital for several days.

Tension Increases in Conquered Nations as Nazis Take More Hostages

By The Canadian Press

Second-front talk increased in Europe's conquered nations today as Nazi firing-squads took nearly 100 more lives and the Germans clamped down with ruthless new measures to prevent an uprising in the event of an Allied invasion of Europe.

Ninety-three Frenchmen were executed in Paris and at least six Czechs in old Czecho-Slovakia, the latter on charges of "high treason and favoring the enemy."

Roundabout reports from Vichy said pro-German Premier Pierre Laval of France had called up police and troop reinforcements to protect the hated Vichy regime against a rumored coup d'etat.

Simultaneously, the Netherlands news agency Aneta quoted Swiss reports that the Germans had seized 200 more hostages to be "held responsible with their lives for the conduct of the Netherlands people in the event of a British invasion of Holland."

Dispatches from Berne, Switzerland, said the Germans had threatened reprisals against every man, woman and child in occupied France as an aftermath of new anti-Nazi outbreaks which sent the 93 more Frenchmen to their deaths before German firing squads.

Underground reports from Belgium and Holland told of new preparations by the Germans against a possible Allied invasion.

One report said a high Nazi officer in Belgium had been authorized to apply the torch to everything in sight if the Germans were forced to retreat before Allied armies.

A BBC broadcast said the Germans were staging large-scale "invasion exercises" in Norway, climaxed by a big parade of Nazi soldiers through Bergen, on the Norwegian West coast, the chief centre of opposition to the Germans and the Quisling government.

In Belgium, German authorities were reported to have arrested 20 more hostages in reprisal for recent explosions in the Liege district.

140,000 DRAFTEES NOW IN ARMY SINCE 1ST CALL-UP

Total Exceeds by 15,000 The Number Conscripted in First Great War

50,000 ARE VOLUNTEERS

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, Aug. 11 — (CP) — Two years after Canada took the first step in compulsory military service for the Second Great War, upwards of 140,000 men have been delivered to and accepted by the army, it was learned today at National War Services Department.

This total exceeds by 15,000 or more the total number conscripted in the First Great War — and it does not include the figures for August and September, the two heaviest months for call-ups since the drafting of men began a few months after the fall of France.

The Department of National Defence requisitioned 25,000 men for August and 20,000 for September. Returns for August are not complete and it is not yet known to what extent calls issued fall short of or exceed the objective of 25,000 fit men.

The total of more than 140,000 is arrived at with returns for July partially complete. The total up to the end of June was 135,880. The July requisition was 15,000 men but a final count has not yet been made of the number delivered on that requisition.

Those liable to call under present regulations are single men and childless widowers aged 20 to 40.

Though men called up compulsorily are not required to serve outside Canada, officials report that between 35 and 40 per cent of those who enter the army on call volunteer for service anywhere in the world.

Gen. La Fleche Director

Administration of the compulsory system is under the direction of Maj.-Gen. L. R. LaFleche, associate deputy minister of National War Services, who says the system has worked smoothly and the men have been obtained without disturbances or clashes.

One of the problems of call-up officials is to keep pace with the men who enlist voluntarily before they are required to report for service. They have to call a larger number of men than they otherwise would, in the first instance, to allow for those who have enlisted of their own account since registration and who fail to report their enlistment to registration officials.

They also have to estimate and allow for the number who will enlist voluntarily as soon as they receive their call-up notice and before the time set for them to report.

Officials estimate that since compulsory service started some 50,000 men called up have enlisted voluntarily before responding in response to their call but after receiving notice.

By so doing they have the satisfaction of saying they entered over the branch of the service in the service as volunteers and they also have somewhat more choice which they will serve.

Russian Press Appeals to Forces To Save Russia

Nazi Cut Gap Thru Russian Defence At Armavir and Reds Withdraw

FIGHTING AT MAIKOP

By EDDIE GILMORE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, Aug. 11 (AP).—The official mouthpieces of the Red Army, the Communist Party and the Soviet government appealed to the fighting forces today to save Russia, acknowledging in the plainest words the gravity of the position as axis armies ground through the smoking Maikop oilfields and the scorched wheatlands near Krasknodar.

"The fate of our country is being decided in the violent battles on the Don and the Kuban," declared Red Star, organ of the Red Army.

It quoted the Russian 18th century general who told his troops: "We are surrounded by mountains. . . . To retreat is shame. . . . We cannot expect help from anybody. . . . We stand on the edge of the abyss."

"Danger Has Increased."

Izvestia, the government newspaper, asserted "the danger hanging over our country has increased" and said "the enemy, despite tremendous losses, continues to rush into the depths of the nation. In the name of the freedom and independence of the fatherland, of your people and your children, halt and repulse the enemy".

Pravda, the Communist organ, urged: "By iron firmness, bar every way to the German hordes". The newspaper said "the enemy drives deeper into the country. Disregarding losses, the Hitlerite Fascists summon all their forces to occupy new, important districts."

The German drive into the Caucasus placed the Red fleet's Black Sea naval stations at Novorossisk and Tuapse in grave danger.

Separate German columns were within 60 miles of the two seaports as the Nazi invaders spread out in the northern foothills of the Caucasian mountains and pressed the Russian defenders back toward the Black Sea coast south of the Kuban River.

(A German spokesman asserted last night that Novorossisk had been attacked by dive bombers, the German radio claimed.)

Germans Force New Gap

Pouring a seemingly-endless supply of tanks and troops into the struggle, the Germans forced a new gap in the Russian defences at Armavir, about 110 miles east of Krasnodar, and the Red Army withdrew to new positions, today's mid-day communique said.

As the successful German lunge into the Caucasus multiplied the difficulties of the Red Army, United States Ambassador Admiral William H. Standley declared last night "I have not found the slightest indication that the Russians have any idea of quitting."

700 MILLION LBS. BACON AND HAM NEEDED BY BRITAIN

Ten Million Hogs Required From Canada Under Proposed New Order

CROPS HELP IN FEEDING

Ottawa, Aug. 11 (CP)—Britain is in the market for 700,000,000 pounds of Canadian ham and bacon—a quantity so vast that it will require the boosting of Canada's hog gradings to the all-out production figure of 10,000,000.

Those, say agriculture department officials, are Britain's requirements under a new bacon agreement being negotiated to replace the existing contract which expires next October and under which Canada is supplying 600,000,000 pounds of bacon. In Britain, bacon means either ham or bacon.

100 Million Pounds Boost

The new agreement would boost by 100,000,000 pounds the quantity Canada would have to supply and would place heavy strain upon the Canadian hog industry, which already has outdone itself in increasing hog production since the outbreak of war.

In 1938, gradings totalled 3,245,- ceinving notice. 515. A year later they were 3,706,000 and in 1940 the figure had jumped to 6,216,000. The hope this year is that marketings will reach 7,000,000 hogs.

M-3 Tanks Show They Can 'Take it'

Detroit, Aug. 11 — (AP) — Workers in the Detroit (Chrysler) tank arsenal heard today how a German 88 millimetre anti-tank gun had to hit an American-built M-3 army tank 12 times before it was stopped.

Maj.-Gen. Levin H. Campbell, Jr., Chief of Ordnance, Services of Supply, related the incident in presenting to the plant and workers the joint army-navy "E" award "for high achievement in the production of war equipment."

He told also how another M-3 was hit by fifty 50-millimetre, armor-piercing, high explosive shells and was not put out of action.

Chrysler recently switched from the M-3 to the newer, more powerful M-4, all-welded tank and this, Gen. Campbell said, is at the front. The M-4's, he said, have heavier armor and are faster than the M13.

"Though the enemy may capture the first M-4 to appear on the battlefield (and he hasn't," the Ordnance Chief continued, "it will take him a year to duplicate the tank, or even make corresponding improvements in his new models on the production lines.

"By that time, we'll have an altogether new one out!"

Fighters, Bombers Raid Hankow, Meet No A-A Fire, No Air Opposition

Chungking, Aug. 11 — (AP) — Fighter-escorted bombers in a low-altitude attacks on Hankow and vicinity bombed newly-constructed warehouses and other objectives yesterday, Lt.-Gen. Joseph Stilwell's headquarters announced today.

Hankow, Japan's greatest inland base in China, is on the Yangtze River and has been a frequent target of American bombers.

The war bulletin said there was no anti-aircraft fire and no air opposition.

"Incendiary as well as high-explosive bombs were dropped," it said. "A number of hits were ored in the town and on newly-constructed warehouses. At least two large fires were started."

The Hankow raid followed one Sunday by American Airmen on Haiphong, French Indo-China port where a Chinese army spokesman said today, Japanese reinforcements for Thailand and Burma landed around July 27. These enemy forces and others which arrived at the same time at Saigon, farther down the Indo-China coast, possibly will be used in an attack on India or Yunnan province in Southern China, this informant said.

Japanese troops were reported also massing in [illegible] anese warships again active off the southeast coast, indicating a possible new invasion of Fukien province, it was stated.

NO WORD RECEIVED OF COURT DECISION

No word has been received as yet by the City Council or the Belleville Public Utilities Commission of a decision of the Supreme Court of Ontario regarding the injunction issued by the city last May restraining the Commission from erecting a million - gallon water reservoir or using water utilities surplus funds for such a purpose.

Mr. Justice Greene, who heard counsel arguments on the request for an injunction on last June 1st, reserved judgment at the conclusion of the hearing.

ABANDON OPERATIONS TO SALVAGE CARRIER

Salvage operations on the coal carrier, the Henry C. Daryaw, Kingston freighter which struck a reef in the St. Lawrence River last autumn, were abandoned on Saturday afternoon when the vessel rolled over and sank in about 120 feet of water.

Efforts to refloat the Henry C. Daryaw, the only collier which formerly made regular trips to the Belleville harbor, had been proceeding for several weeks with the salvage company endeavoring to roll the vessel into another position, hoping that she could be raised. Without warning she gave a sudden plunge and sank, snapping cables being used in the turning process.

The Daryaw had been leased by her Kingston owners to the Canadian Government for the winter and spring months and while proceeding to the eastern coast struck a reef west of Brockville and sank.

TUES. MARKET PRICES MOSTLY UNCHANGED

Number 1 peaches were quoted at from 75 cents to 85 cents on the market this morning, with Shiro plums bringing up to $1 per six-quart basket. Tomatoes sold at $1.25 for 11-quart and 65 cents for six-quart baskets. Green corn brought 35 cents the dozen and potatoes 50 cents the peck. Seasonal apples sold generally at 50 cents the peck.

THREE SMALL BOYS RAISE $3.14 FOR R. C.

Red Cross officials here today commended the early business ability of three teen-aged boys of the city, who in their first public venture netted $3.14 which was promptly turned over to the Red Cross for its war purposes.

Gathering 40c of their own hard-earned money, Peter Harris, 9; Leo Marcus, 9, and Stanley Safe, 7, erected an impromptu stand on the East Hill, bought paper cups and announced themselves as open to the public with the sale of lemonade.

The weather was warm. Business was good. And the three young business men did a land-office trade until supplies ran out. The "take" was counted and amounted to the above-mentioned sum.

SIDNEY BOY INJURED WHILE AT WORK

GIRL ESCAPES INJURY WHEN HIT BY CAR

When five-year-old Eleen Terry, of 78-Gordon Street, stepped off the Front Street curb in front of a motor vehicle driven by F. A. Scott, Trent Road, the petite lass was knocked to the pavement without sustaining serious injury on Monday afternoon. Mr. Scott was making a lefthand turn off Bridge Street to proceed northerly on Front Street when the little girl walked off the sidewalk directly in front of the moving vehicle. Mr. Scott stopped the car and picked the little girl up driving her directly to the police station, where examination revealed she had not sustained any serious injuries. Mr. Scott then drove the little girl home, after reporting the incident to Acting Sergeant Evans.

$3 in Pennies Collected in Box Taken by Thief

Look after the pennies and the dollars will look after themselves—is an old and accepted proverb.

However, Joseph Copeland, of No. 1 Doyle's Terrace on Pinnacle St., doesn't think there is anything practical in the saying and maybe he's slightly justified for his feelings.

It seems Mr. Copeland has been saving odd and spare pennies and placing them in a tin box left in the family kitchen cupboard. Mr. Copeland is of the opinion he had saved well over three hundred pennies, of all sizes and vintage.

Yes, you guessed it—some sneak thief stealthily entered the Copeland home and stole the tin box containing all the pennies, Mr. Copeland complained to police yesterday.

Business Offices Pilfered During The Weekends

As a warning to office building tenants here, police today revealed that an organised band of robbers have of late been breaking and entering such premises throughout the country and stealing what petty cash is available. Last week end eight business offices in Peterborough, six of which were insurance company offices, were entered and ransacked, while on the weekend previous business establishments in Guelph were robbed in a similar manner.

Only petty cash is taken, but the organized gang apparently utilize the quiet weekend period in which to perpetrate their break-ins. Generally speaking there is little activity in and around office buildings over the weekends and at both Peterborough and Guelph the robberies were not discovered until occupants returned for business on Monday morning. Acting Chief Harman stated in warning to local office heads today.

BRITISH TROOPS

Police said the slightest spark might touch off rioting between the sub-continent's opposing religious groups, Hindus and Moslems.

Two days of rioting already had brought the death toll in Bombay alone to fifteen—all Indians shot attacking police or attempting to destroy suburban railroad stations or grain warehouses.

Bonfires of Clothing.

There were new demonstrations this morning in the Dadar, Parel and Matunga sections of the city. Bonfires were started in the streets and fed with hats, neckties and other articles of European clothing snatched from passersby.

Police opened fire twice when mobs set fire to a wooden police guard post and attempted to halt traffic.

As the day wore on police fired several times more, increasing the toll of casualties. Two were killed several injured during the morning.

In many places the mere presence of troops prevented outbreaks. A regiment marched into Ahmedabad where students and mill workers had seemed on the verge of disorder.

Troops marched ceaselessly through the streets of Bombay. Machine-guns were mounted covering a beach where a meeting of Indians had been scheduled. An armored car stood guard at one intersection. Two score soldiers, veterans of the Burma fight, stood with fixed bayonets at another corner.

A crowd at Parel burned park benches. Some persons were injured when police fired to break up the mob.

Stores closed at Karachi, and in a Calcutta heavy-industry district the operators of bullock carts quit work.

Students quit colleges in such university towns as Bombay, Nagpur and Bangalore.

Police, wary against the possibility of Hindu-Moslem riots, said the slightest incident might set off this sort of strife.

"On a previous occasion a Moslem beggar kicked a dog; a Hindu policeman kicked the beggar, and it started an 18-day communal riot in which many were killed," said a Bombay police official.

"Again, a Hindu teacher whipped a Moslem child. Thirty days of nasty rioting followed.

"Three months of rioting with many deaths came after a Moslem storekeeper refused to sell a certain piece of goods to a Hindu."

He pointed out that Hindu students already had thrown rocks at Moslem shops in Bombay.

In Lucknow Moslem shops remained open while Hindu stores practised "hartal".

No One Below Colonel In British Army To Wear Peaked Cap

London, Aug. 11 — (CP) — The British Army Council has ruled that caps with peaks must not be worn by officers under the rank of Colonel. Field service caps, berets of tank and air-borne regiments and Tam O'Shanters of Scots regiments are the regulation headpieces.

Ottawa — (CP) — Defence Department sources said last night there was no immediate indication that the Canadian army would bar the wearing of peaked caps by officers below the rank of Colonel, as has been done by the British Army Council, although that type of headgear is being replaced by the popular wedge cap.

Canadian Army regulations call for the issuance of peaked caps to only those of the rank of Colonel or higher, but all other officers are permitted to wear them. Generally, however, the junior officers prefer the wedge cap.

P. O. George Pepper of Belleville Shoots Down Nazi Night Raider

London, Aug. 11 —(CP Cable)—A night-raiding excursion by a Heinkel 111 was turned into a one-way passage by PO. George Pepper of Belleville, Ont., who shot the bomber down off the southeast coast of England last weekend, it was announced today.

Pepper, a former speedway driver worked his Beaufighter into close range and gave the Heinkel a short burst of cannon and machine-gun fire which was followed by explosions and fire in the fuselage of the German plane. The port engine then burst into flames.

"Large pieces flew off the plane and one of the crew bailed out," the 27-year-old night fighter said. "I gave the Heinkel another short burst. It was followed by more explosions and two more bursts did the trick. It went down vertically with a bright red glow from the burning plane lighting up the clouds."

Belleville Rotary Club Decides To Sponsor Air Cadet Squadron

Members of the Belleville Rotary Club ratified the decision of the directorate to assume the sponsorship of the Belleville Air Cadet Squadron at the weekly luncheon Monday.

The decision to take over the finances of the newly-formed squadron from the Board of Junior Directors of the Y. M. C. A. here came after a brief discussion.

The clubmen, following a motion of Rotarian Jamieson Bone will finance a squadron of fifty cadets each year for the next two years, and will be assisted by the members of the Junior "Y" board and the committee at present administrating the affairs of the newly formed unit. It will be known as the Belleville Rotary Air Cadet Squadron.

The squadron was formed some time ago by the Junior Y men but administration duties after the unit became organized would not permit of the additional task of raising funds for the maintenance of the cadets.

The present air cadet committee will be augmented by a special committee of Rotarians and the acting principal of the Belleville Collegiate Institute.

A feature of the luncheon meeting was the showing of an interesting motion picture film depicting life at the Rotary-sponsored Boys' Camp at Moira Lake. The film, photographed and shown by Mr. S. Alec Gordon, well-known local musician, and a leader at the camp, depicted the various activities of the boys during the ordinary day at the camp. Various forms of athletics, canoe trips, hikes, and all the interesting things that go to make up the life of a boy at camp were clearly shown. It was the first opportunity many Rotarians had of viewing their project at the camp.

Mr. Gordon later showed some beautiful motion picture shots of floral life "near my own backdoor". The film was shown in color and many beautiful floral effects were depicted. He was introduced by Rotarian Harry Moorman and club thanks extended by Rotarian Bill Morrison. President Lloyd Hicks was in the chair.

The Kiwanis Club of Belleville Inc., and the Red Cross Blood Donor Clinic, take this opportunity of thanking the nurses, ladies of the Contact Club, Belleville Fire Department, Ontario Intelligencer, all employers who made it possible for their employees to volunteer in a body and all others who helped make the campaign last week for blood donors so successful. Special credit is due to every individual who volunteered as a donor

WE THANK YOU,

Belleville Kiwanis Club Inc.

CHINESE SPURRED TO NEW FAITH BY U. S. BOMBERS

China's War Effort is Now in Top Gear—Thousands Toil in Factories

GUERILLAS' COURAGE

Morris J. Harris, former Associated Press Chief of Bureau in Shanghai, and J. D. White, Associated Press Correspondent homeward-bound from Peiping, are among the repatriates on the Swedish liner Gripsholm which arrived at Rio De Janeiro, Brazil, for a 48-hour stop Monday. In the following story they tell of China's fighting against the Japanese.

By MORRIS J. HARRIS and J. D. WHITE

Rio De Janeiro, Aug. 11—(AP)—United States bombers have gone to China and spurred her to a new faith in the sixth year of a war she has fought alone until now, and still fights with unwavering sacrifice and devotion.

Even Japan's Chinese puppets have begun to waver. They have told American missionary doctors in the over-run areas how they and the forces under them now are holding on, playing at co-operation with the enemy — because non-co-operation means death for themselves and all the Chinese around them — until the day comes to strike.

War Factories in China

China's war effort is in top gear. Behind the lines, far from smoke of countless daily battles, millions of Chinese — men, women and children — toil in thousands of small factories.

China's war factories, bombed by the Japanese almost without opposition for five years, are scattered and camouflaged in hundreds of mud-walled villages.

At the front, huge armies continue to play their old game of wait-and-pounce, a wily scheme which has kept the invader at bay despite his wealth of armament.

The Chinese pay heavily in men because the Japanese know the game now and blast at the inexhaustible manpower which flows against them. But China's millions keep coming.

Guerillas Harass Enemy.

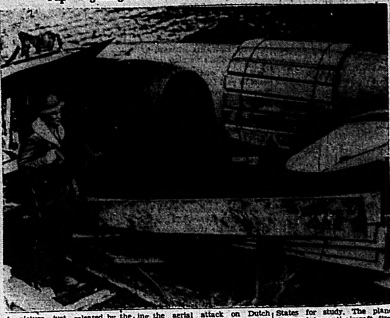
More millions of Communist and other guerilla forces harass the invaders' communications, ambush his transports, massacre outlying garrisons and sabotage his political and economic schemes in the dominated regions.

Even poorer armed than the regulars, the guerillas show a morale and courage which flames more passionately today than ever.

Last spring and summer, the Japanese sent division after division against the Communists in North China in what was announced as the final anti-guerilla mop-up. The Japanese announced, as usual, that the guerillas were annihilated. The next night the hit-and-run fighters of China captured six walled county seats where they just had been "expunged."

Like the regulars, the guerillas wait for the day when the Japanese are on the run. The only possible prediction is that they will take a terrible vengeance. The invader may not even be allowed to retreat.

Jap Fighting Plane Downed In Aleutian Attack



A picture just released by the U.S. Marine Corps in Washington showing the wreckage of a Japanese fighting plane shot down during the aerial attack on Dutch Harbor in early June. The wreckage is shown being guarded just before being shipped to the United States for study. The plane was damaged by anti-aircraft fire and pancaked down on a marsh.

RUSSIAN PRESS

He said he had formed the idea from talking to Russian officials that the current battles were not decisive and that explained the Russian withdrawal to the west. The Red army, he said, would remain intact.

Russian Lines

It was his understanding, the Ambassador said, that the Russians had three lines — the present one, the Volga and the Urals — "and the Germans have not yet reached the Volga."

Fierce fighting at Krasnodar and Maikop was reported in the Soviet midnight communique. Krasnodar is 60 miles northeast of Novorossisk and Maikop is 60 miles northeast of Tuapse. Novorossisk and Tuapse are afforded some natural protection by the Caucasian foothills.

Fierce Cossack cavalry units harried the Germans in the Krasnodar area, working in close co-operation with tank groups and the Red air force. Rumanian cavalry and a battalion of German infantry were routed, the midnight communique said, and 11 German tanks and other motorized equipment were destroyed. However, superior numbers forced the Russians back in another sector.

The rich fields of the Kuban River valley were smoky, charred patches as the fearful struggle swayed back and forth, Russian dispatches said. There were still no authentic reports as to the fate of the rich Maikop oil fields 60 miles to the southeast of Krasnodar, but dispatches spoke of violent explosions and great smoke clouds in the battle area there.

First Mention of Fighting in Maikop Area

In its first mention of fighting in the Maikop region, the Soviet communique said the Germans had launched several attacks there and "succeeded in gaining some ground." Five hundred Germans were killed in the fighting. The Maikop fields produce seven per cent of Russia's oil.

Far to the north of the flaming Caucasus battlefields, the Red army fought grimly and with more success to keep the Germans from Stalingrad and the Volga. Near Kletskaya, 75 miles northwest of Stalingrad, 2,800 Germans were reported killed in one sector. Southwest of the city, near Kotelnikovski, the fighting was described as "very tense." One Red army unit was reported to have killed more than 900 Germans.

Germans Repulsed on Upper Don

In the Voronezh sector of the Upper Don, where the Russians have been most aggressive recently, German attacks were reported repelled with heavy losses. The communique said an enemy transport was sunk in the Black Sea and another in the Barents Sea.

South of Voronezh, the mid-day communique said, the Germans have made repeated efforts to occupy a number of points, but all attacks have been repulsed with heavy losses for the enemy.

A German break-through south of Kletskaya was opposed stubbornly by one Soviet unit which killed some 300 Germans, the communique said. The newspaper Pravda reported the Germans were sending in more reserves in an effort to smash to Stalingrad. Northeast of Kotelnikovski, one tank battle continued for 40 hours, Izvestia said.

Initiative With Reds in Kletskaya Region

Red Star said the initiative was generally with the Red army in the Kletskaya region, but the Germans did not cease their efforts to break through to the Don.

Soviet cavalry was reported blocking the German efforts to outflank the Russians here. Dispatches told how 36 of 60 tanks sent against the Russian lines were wrecked in a barrage of anti-tank fire. Thirty German planes were shot down over the Kletskaya battlefields in one day, it was reported.

Red Star told in a dispatch how the Germans in greatly-superior numbers stormed a battery on the Sea of Azov and forced the sailors manning the battery to retire after they had inflicted heavy losses on the attackers. The specific location of the battery was not given.

ALLIED BOMBERS

positions on the island fringes of the main theatre of operations.

A principal target was the strong enemy base at Rabaul, a New Britain port northwest of the Solomons, where an army spokesman said 13 and possibly 19 Japanese planes had been destroyed in the last three days.

3 Japanese Ships Struck

Allied bombers wheeling out over the waters northwest of Australia struck three Japanese ships off Netherlands Timor, including a large destroyer, while others roared again toward the Solomon battle area to the northeast of the mainland.

In a raid by army airmen last night over Rabaul, an Allied communique said, large fires visible for 50 miles were started and a Japanese bomber was destroyed.

Off Timor, Allied bombers scored two hits on a Japanese merchant vessel, probably sinking it, and set a cargo ship on fire with three hits in addition to damaging the destroyer badly.

Land Fighting

The land fighting, reported by the United States Navy late yesterday to be "still in progress," appeared to be centred on Tulagi and Guadalcanal Islands, in the southeastern Solomon group which lies 900 miles northeast of Australia.

Other ground actions were under way in New Guinea, west of the Solomons where the Allies pushed back the Japanese in the Kokoda area, 60 miles east of Allied-held Port Moresby.

The Japanese are known to have concentrated heavy forces in the southeastern Solomons, and despite an initial surprise by the Allied landing forces Admiral Ernest J. King, Commander-in-Chief of the United States fleet, reported the enemy had "counter-attacked with rapidity and vigor."

The landing, presumably carried out in armored launches under cover of a heavy barrage by supporting warships, was not accomplished without loss.

Admiral King's Report

"It appears," said Admiral King's account, "that we have had at least one cruiser sunk and two cruisers, two destroyers and one transport damaged."

At the same time he reported "a large number of enemy planes" destroyed and surface units put out of action.

There was no indication of the loss of life.

Australian units as well as the United States southwest Pacific flotilla based on New Zealand took part in the assault on the Solomons which in enemy hands constitute an invasion threat against the "down under" continent.

With the attacking forces using all available communications to coordinate their operations by land, sea and air, the navy professed early today to have no further information for the public on the progress of the fight.

The assault was under the direct charge of Vice-Admiral Robert Ghormley, 58, naval commander in the South Pacific, and under the general control of Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, 57, Commander-in-Chief of the United States Pacific fleet.

DRIPPING FAUCET CLAIMS BABY'S LIFE

Philadelphia, Aug. 11—(AP)— A dripping faucet took the life of an infant yesterday. Mrs. Anna MacComber, 36, said she left the youngest of her 11 children, 15-months-old Catherine, in a bathtub for less than 30 minutes, but the drain had become stopped and enough water dripped from the faucet to drown the child.

Montreal, Aug. 11—(CP)— Thieves who entered the grounds of the Deaf and Dumb Institute here jacked up an automobile, the property of the institution, and stole five wheels and tires, including the spare.

700 MILLION

The need for stepping production up to the 10,000,000-mark would come at a time when the Canadian bacon board, headed by J. G. Taggart, already is making every effort to complete shipment of existing contracts. And it may necessitate an increase in the price to farmers, who now get 19.9 cents a pound under the present United Kingdom contract.

Confident Farmers Can Do It

But agriculture officials are confident that Canadian farmers can do it. They point out that crops used as feed to fatten hogs are reported to be good all across the Dominion. With plenty of feed Canadian farmers should be able to produce hogs during the next 12 months at a rate even greater than this year.

The demand for Canadian ham and bacon comes not only from the United Kingdom. The United States has asked Canada to supply Alaska with bacon, in a move to conserve shipping space, while Newfoundland has also put in a bid for more of the Canadian product.

Another increase in British demand comes in a request that Canada supply British warships when they dock at Canadian ports.

All this foreign demand has cut to half the amount available for Canada's home consumption with packers permitted to turn into the domestic market only 35,000 hogs a week.

BRITISH TROOPS

By PRESTON GROVER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Bombay, Aug. 11 (AP)— The call for a shutdown of trade spread today to Mohandas K. Gandhi's followers with a promise from their leaders of victory in two months for what they called India's "final struggle" to win independence.

This summons for a "hartal"—the closing of all business—headed an inflammatory list of instructions issued despite Gandhi's incarceration in one of the Aga Khan's palaces.

Nevertheless, some British authorities are optimistic that firmness will quell the movement and smother the outbreaks which have caused 16 deaths and injuries to 169 persons in street brawls in the Bombay area since Sunday.

The first hysterical, shouting crowds of the weekend, when the All-India Congress Committee made Gandhi general of its "do-or-die" drive for immediate independence and Britain countered by arresting him and his high command, had begun to dwindle.

There was no sign of a general abatement, however, as soldiers and armed police stood guard in five Indian centres and some official opinion was less hopeful that strong-handed methods would quiet the Indian zealots.

Traffic was snarled for hours by buses with tires deflated; some telegraph wires were cut; stones still flew and the mounds of debris and shattered glass piled up in the streets here.

Student demonstrators also had drawn fire at Poona, where the 72-year-old Gandhi and his chiefs are held, and at Lucknow. Strikes threatened in the big mill centre of Ahmedabad and violence broke out also in New Delhi.

Still, the ominous possibility of communal riots, bloodiest of all and hardest to suppress, harried British authorities. In one such flare-up, Hindus stoned Moslem shops in Bombay yesterday.

Despite Gandhi's isolation, without radio, newspapers or contact with friends, his voice reached the outside in the "Instructions to the People of India."

Besides the "hartal", they called for the resignation of all civil employees, mass leadership of youths taking the places of the jailed leaders, India-wide refusal to pay land taxes.

As symbolic measures to "administer a powerful stimulant to the struggle," they called for spinning, "so dear to Gandhi," and the making of salt, the basis of the 1930 civil disobedience movement in protest against the government salt monopoly.

In his beautiful prison, hung with costly Persian rugs and French chandeliers, the wizened leader meanwhile was said to be drinking goat's milk and eating dates and peaches sent specially from Bombay.

Advise Ducking for Cover

London, Aug. 11—(CP)— Civilians have been advised to duck for cover during air raids now that Britain's new secret anti-aircraft guns are being brought into action. Shells from the new guns splinter more widely and in larger pieces than shells used in the old guns.

Shelburne, Ont., Aug. 11—(CP) —Mrs. George Saunders of Drayton did not find a bottle of milk on her doorstep the other morning. She found a milk bottle, containing a garter snake. The mystery is still unsolved.

Newsman Says Japs Made Clumsy Attempts to Misrepresent Russia

(Editor's Note: Joseph Dynan was a member of The Associated Press staff in Tokyo. Although interned after Dec. 7, he was allowed some freedom for necessary trips outside. He has arrived at Rio De Janeiro. This is what he has to say of Russian-Japanese relations.)

By JOSEPH DYNAN
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Rio De Janeiro, Brazil, Aug. 11—(AP)—Although our contacts were restricted after the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor Dec. 7 we were able to learn that current relations between Russia and Japan may be a tremendous factor in the course of the war.

Japanese close to the foreign office indicated to us that negotiations were going on, although as told to us the discussions seemed more in the nature of blackmail.

These sources let it be understood that either last April or May the Japanese informed the Russians it would be "wise" to safeguard the Japanese-Russian neutrality pact of 1941 by giving Japan control of the Kamchatka Peninsula, the northern half of Sakhalin Island with its oil and coal deposits, and the Maritime Province which leads down to Vladivostok.

These things may have been told to us to weaken our morale by making us think our Russian ally in behind-the-scenes deals was about to barter away bases from which the Japanese fear they may be raided some day.

At any rate, the Japanese were represented as blandly asserting that such Russian co-operation with Japan would preserve peace in the Northern Pacific and thwart alleged plans of the United States and Britain to attack from Russian territory.

The Russians also were said to have been assured this would protect her from being dragged into a far eastern war.

Our informants said that after proposals and counter-proposals, the Russians virtually agreed to give away Kamchatka and the northern half of Sakhalin, but flatly refused to give up Vladivostok and insisted that the territories ceded should not change hands until after the war.

When we left Japan late in June the best available information was that the negotiations were in deadlock.

Although the Japanese press printed practically nothing about Japanese-Russian relations, Americans imprisoned at Sugamo prison were told by guards that they were being called for active military duty in Manchukuo in the late summer.

Ready to Strike Huns by Air

United States Army Air Force is ready to begin attacks against Germany" within the immediate future." So said the head of the American Army Air Force in Britain, who remarks that the American and British air forces have worked in such full co-operation that the Americans are really proceeding ahead of actual schedule.

The Nazis were stunned by the recent huge raids which the Royal Air Force staged against the large and important city centres of Germany. Now impends the time when full operations in accordance with the plans reached between the two air forces will begin.

The world awaits this blow of "the co-ordinated British-American Air Force.

Speaking of preparation and production President Roosevelt said on Sunday that the task has but begun and that the co-ordinated effort of the forces and the people in industry will bring the victory for which the democracies strive in confidence and with a resolution which will leave no stone unturned to achieve that consummation which is so desired. This means an immense amount of labor on the part of all but the United Nations are resolute. It is their freedom and the future of the world that are at stake and they will back up their will with all their power.

Bringing the great air forces of Britain and America to the stage they have now reached has been an achievement.

A Commando Plane

Much attention has been focussed on invention in this war and on the part that science has played in revolutionizing the are of warfare. New developments in weapons have been sensational, to say the least. Latest news is quantity production of a military transport which can carry "jeeps" and troops with its wing span of 108 feet at a great rate of speed to battle the enemy behind the lines much as guerilla fighters do.

It is claimed that thirty-five of these transports could carry all the material which was borne by 7,700 trucks over the Burma road in a month's time.

Truly this new ship of the air being produced in the United States is one of the marvels of production and application of science and invention to the need of the hour.

Opposed Mussolini's Tyranny

Guglielmo Ferroro, one of the great modern historians has passed away. He is known for two reasons, his eminence as a student of manners and economic conditions "with a psychological and moral interest" and also for his unyielding opposition to Mussolini. The Italian dictator knew that Ferrero saw through his shallowness, falseness and his spirit of tyranny and aggression and so Il Duce denounced the historian as "an anti-Italian, anti-Roman,anti-Fascist, anti-everything alive and strong in this Italy."

Ferrero was an exile. This is a typical condition for the great thinkers of the Aris countries, Italy and Germany. These men who could not be robbed of their will for freedom defied the powers of tyranny at Berlin and Rome and many of them have enriched other lands with their presence. Italy and Germany unfortunately did not have enough men of this heroic mould to sway these peoples and keep them from Hitler's and Mussolini's clutches. Ferrero predicted the tragic course Italy was taking and time has shown how true a prophet he was. Dictatorship went on, the Ferreros and Einsteins were forced to flee and the German and Italian tyrannies rushed forward pell-mell to plunge the world into war. But these men who have suffered from tyranny have found asylum in democratic lands and have foreseen the coming day when tyranny and aggression will be crushed. In the meantime they honor the lands that have offered them a refuge.

He is most free from danger, who even when safe, is on his guard.—Publius Syrus.

He's a little dog with a stubby tail, and a moth-eaten coat of tan,
And his legs are of the wobbly sort, I doubt if he ever ran;
And he howls at night, while in broad daylight he sleeps like a blooming log,
And he likes the feed of a gutter breed,
    he's a most irregular dog.

I call him "Bum," and in total sum, he's all that his name implies,
For he's just a tramp, with a highway stamp, that culture cannot disguise
And his friends, I've found in the streets abound, be they urchins or dogs or men,
Yet he sticks to me, with a fiendish glee;
    it is tricky beyond ken.

So my good old pal, my irregular dog, my stub-tailed loyal friend,
Has become a part of my very heart, to be cherished till life-time's end,
And on judgment day, if take the way
    where the righteous only stay,
If my dog is barred by the Heavenly guard, we'll both of us have to pray.
